IDEA, s. [Gr.] in Metaphysics, the generic name of those spiritual truths, which can be apprehended by the exercise of the reason alone, and cannot be reduced to the forms of the understanding, except under the appearance of two contradictory propositions, or terms,—as when the mode of God's being is described by Cowley as an Everlasting Now. By Descartes, Locke, and the English and Scottish metaphysicians since Locke, this word has been misemployed to denote a mental representation of any kind; whence has followed the total misunderstanding of all writers, early and late, who have used the term correctly, and, in too many instances, a neglect or denial of the truths which were thus deprived of a distinctive appellation. In the Sciences, that which contemplated as existing objectively, or externally to the mind, is named a law, when contemplated as existing in a subject, or mind, is an idea. Lord Bacon calls the natural laws, the ideas of the divine mind.

IDEAL, a. relating to ideas. In the Fine Arts, and sometimes used as a substantive, it signifies the perfect mental type of any subject.

IDEALISM, s. in Philosophy, a system which is based upon ideas; or, as opposed to materialism, a system which regards the reality of outward things as dependent, for us, on the reality of our inward impressions respecting them.

IDEALLY, ad. according to ideas; according to the ideal.

IDEALOGY, IDEALOGIST, s. [idea and logos, Gr.] the names of the French materialist philosophy and philosophers. See CONDILLAC, &c.

IDENITIC, IDENITICAL, a. [identique, Fr.] the same; implying the same thing.

IDENITITY, s. [identité, Fr.] sameness; that by which a thing is itself, or by which it is distinguished from any other.

IDES, s. [idas, Lat.] in the Roman Calendar, a term used to distinguish the 13th of every month, excepting in March, May, July, and October, in which it is the 15th, because in those months it was six days before the nones, but in the others only four.

IDIOCRASY, IDIOSYNCRASY, s. [idios, sun, and krasis, Gr.] peculiarity of constitution.

IDIOCRITICAL, IDIOSYNCRITICAL, a. peculiar to constitution.

IDIOCY, s. [idiotes, Gr.] a defect of understanding. Both idioey and lunacy excuse from the guilt of crimes.

IDIOM, s. [idios, Gr.] a manner of speaking, or phrase, peculiar to any particular language.

IDIOMATIC, IDIOMATICAL, a. peculiar to a language.

IDIOPATHY, s. [idios and pathos, Gr.] in Physic, is a disorder of the body, not arising from any preceding disease.

IDIOT, s. [idiotes, Gr.] one who has not the right use of his understanding.

IDIOTISM, s. [idiotisme, Fr.] folly; weakness of understanding.

IDLE, a. [idel, Sax.] lazy; averse to labour, or unemployed, applied to persons. Useless; vain; ineffectual; worthless, applied to things. Trifling, or of no importance, applied to narratives or discourses.

To IDLE, v. n. to pass time in laziness, or without employment.

IDLENESS, s. aversion to labour; want of employment.

IDLER, s. a person who passes his time in idleness, or without employment.

IDLY, ad. lazily; in a foolish or trifling manner; without care, attention, or profit; without effect; in vain.

IDOL, s. [eidolon, Gr.] an image worshipped as a god; a counterfeit image or resemblance; hence the word doll, for a jointed image played with by children. A person loved or respected to adoration. "The people's idol," Denh.

IDOLATER, s. [eidolon and latreu, Gr.] one who pays Divine worship to images, or transfers the homage due to the Creator unto a creature.

To IDOLATRIZE, v. a. to honour idols with Divine worship. IDOLATROUS, a. tending to idolatry, or transferring the honour and worship due to God unto other things.

IDOLATRY, s. [idolatrie, Fr.] the worship of images; the act of making any image to represent the Deity; an inordinate love or respect for any person or creature.

IDOLIST, s. a worshipper of images or false gods; a poetical word. "Idolists and atheists," Milton.

To IDOLIZE, v. a. to love or reverence any thing or person to an excess approaching to adoration.

IDONEOUS, a. [idoneus, Lat.] fit, proper, suitable, convenient.

IDUMEA, in Ancient Geography, the name of that part of Arabia lying between Palestine and the E. arm of the Red Sea. Its boundaries, as might be expected, are not very well defined; and in popular language it was often very much extended in its application. Mention is frequently made of it in the Old Testament, for its inhabitants were near of kin to the Jews, being descendants of Esau, who was called Edom, whence Idumæa. It is now completely desolate, having no inhabitants, except, occasionally, wandering Arabs; and its chief city, Petra, being a total ruin.

IDYL, s. [eidyllion, Gr.] a class of poems, descriptive of natural appearances, and other subjects that give scope for the brief and animated utterance of the poet's feelings.

I. E. an abbreviation for id est, Lat. that is; that is to say.

JEALOUS, (jéalous) a. [jalous, Fr.] suspicious of not being equally beloved by one whom one loves; suspicious of the sincerity of a married person's affections; fond; envious; or prosecuting with a kind of rivalry; full of suspicion.

JEALOUSLY, (jéalousy) ad. in such a manner as to betray suspicion of the sincerity of a lover or married person; cautiously, vigilantly, or zealously.

JEALOUSY, (jéalousy) s. [jalousie, Fr.] a state of mind wherein one imagines himself not equally or sincerely beloved; a suspicious fear.

JEDBURGH, Roxburghshire, Scotland. It is situated almost in the centre of the county, on the banks of the Jed, and near its confluence with the Teviot. It is the seat of the law courts for the county. It is 45 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 5116.

JEDDO, or YEDDO, the capital of Japan, in the island of Nippon, where the Dairo, or nominal emperor, resides. It is 9 miles long, and 6 in breadth, and the houses are built with earth, and boarded on the outside, to prevent the rain from destroying the walls. In every street is an iron gate, which is shut up in the night, and a kind of custom-house or magazine, to put merchandise in. The royal palace is in the middle of the town, and is defended by walls, ditches, towers, and bastions. Jeddo is well fortified, and is seated in a plain, at the bottom of an extensive gulf or bay; and the river which crosses it is divided into several canals. Pop. about 1,000,000. Lat. 36. 30. N. Long. 140. E.

To JEEER, v. n. to scoff; to mock; to rally; to treat with ridicule.

JEEER, s. an expression wherein a person is ridiculed and rendered angry; a displeasing jest or scoff.

JEEERET, s. one who mocks or scoffs a person; one who treats another with ridicule and displeasing jests.

JEEERINGLY, ad. in a scornful or contemptuous manner; with a sly and offensive jest.

JEFFERSON, THOMAS, the third president of the United States of North America, was a lawyer of Virginia, and drew up the famous Declaration of Independence. He held various posts of distinction in his native State, and as ambassador from the Union to France, England, and other countries of Europe; and was afterwards chosen president. He died on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, on July 4th, in 1826, aged 83 years.

JEFFREYS, GEORGE, LORD, generally known as Judge Jeffreys. He was one of the most brutal of all who have signalized themselves by such conduct, at the bar and on the bench, and rose high in the favour of James II. by his fiery zeal in promoting the favourite schemes of that monarch. He was rewarded for the ferocity with which he crushed all who were suspected of regarding the attempt of the Duke of Monmouth with favour, by being made lord chancellor; but on the abdication of James, he received another reward, being taken as he was escaping in disguise, and committed to the Tower, where he died in 1689, aged about 70 years.

JEHOVAH, s. [from the future tense of the verb harah, Heb.] the name by which God caused himself to be specially called, when he bestowed on the Israelites their national privileges, and became their King. The Jewish scribes and doctors, pretending that it was not lawful to utter this name, have in all cases so copied it that has the vowel sounds of the word signifying master, or of that signifying deity generally.

JEJUNATION, s. fasting; abstaining from eating.

JEJU'NE, a. [jejunus, Lat.] wanting, empty, or void; pure, void of mixture, elemental. Dry, unaffecting, or void of the ornaments of rhetoric, applied to style.

JEJUNESS, s. penury, poverty, or want of spirit, applied to bodies. Digness, or wanting matter and embellishments to engage the attention and please the mind, applied to style or literary compositions.

JELLY, a. See GULLY, which is the old spelling.
JENA, a town of Saxo-Weimar, Germany. It stands on the Saale, just where it is joined by the Leutra, in the midst of the mountains called Thüringwald. It is celebrated for its university, which has enjoyed the teaching of some of the most celebrated scholars of modern Germany. It has a noble library, and other scientific apparatus, for medical as well as the general students. Its population is above 6000. Lat. 50. 55. N. Long. 11. 38. E.

JENNER, DR. EDWARD, the celebrated discoverer of vaccination. In the introduction of this most valuable remedy, he had to contend with opposition sufficient to have deterred most men. All the profession arrayed itself against him. But he persevered; and when the value was generally admitted, and honours and rewards began to be conferred on him, attempts were made to show that he did not deserve to be regarded as the discoverer. His name has always been ranked amongst the foremost of the benefactors of mankind, in all civilized nations. He did little else, save detect and describe the habits of the cuckoo in respect of rearing its young; and died in 1823, aged 74 years.

JENNET. See GENNET.

JENYNS, SOAME, a literary gentleman, whose writings being chiefly on polemics and politics, attracted considerable attention in his time, and have retained it by their entertaining and lively character. Their real value is not great; and his work on the Internal Evidence of the Christian Religion, contains one of the most perverse paradoxes that ever was argued on as a proof of revelation. He died in 1787, aged 84 years.

To JEOPARD, (pron. jipard), in this and other words from the same original) v. a. to hazard or expose to danger.

JEOPARDOUS, a. exposed to hazard or danger.

JEOPARDY, s. hazard, or a state wherein a person is exposed to extreme danger.

JERBOA, s. in Zoology, a genus of animals whose hind legs are much longer than their fore ones, bearing some resemblance to the kangaroo.

JEREMI'AH, one of the most eminent of the Hebrew prophets, who exercised his ministry in the kingdom of Judah, during the reigns immediately preceding the captivity, and during the successive events which led to it. He was, as such a preacher might expect, imprisoned, and generally detested. One of the purest patriots that ever was, he earnestly exhorted his countrymen to stand firm by Judea, till they should be compelled to leave it, but a great party of them took refuge in Egypt, and compelled the prophet to accompany them; in that country he perished by the hands of his fellow countrymen, for denouncing their idolatries, according to the general tradition. The book of Scripture called by his name, contains a very ill-arranged collection of his prophecies, which are lamentations over the sinfulness of Judah, and exhortations and threatenings respecting her sin; predictions of the judgments of God against the nation, and especially of the captivity; promises for such as believed, which looked far beyond such judgments and events for their full accomplishment; and, along with these, exhortations relating to matters of the moment, and other predictions relating to the most powerful nations surrounding Judea. The poetry of Jeremiah appears, from its themes chiefly, to be inferior to that of Isaiah. In the expression of the pathetic emotions he is unrivalled. Few books of the Old Testament abound with lessons so suitable to the present day.

JER-FALCON, s. in Ornithology, a species of hawk, formerly much used in the lordly amusement of hawking. It is a very beautiful and powerful bird.

JER'icho, an ancient town of Palestine, the second in importance in Judea, celebrated formerly for the great number of palm-trees growing near it, and therefore called the City of Palm Trees. At present it is almost uninhabited.

To JERK, v. a. [gerrecken, Sax.] to strike with a quick and violent blow.

JERK, s. a blow given with a kind of a spring and forcible quickness; a sudden spring; a quick jolt that shocks or starts.

JERKIN, s. [cyrtelick, Sax.] a jacket, short coat, or close waistcoat.

JEROME, ST. one of the most learned of the ecclesiastical writers, called Fathers of the Church. He had travelled largely, and at length settled at Bethlehem, where the greater part of his works were written. His greatest labour was the translation of the Scriptures into Latin, which version is the celebrated Vulgate, the standard text of the Romish Church. For this, the bad use of which rested not on him to determine, and for his Commentaries, succeeding ages, as well as his own, had cause for gratitude. His controversial scurrilities have unhappily been preserved, to mingle with his fairer fame a lamentable stain. He died in 422, aged about 80 years.

JEROME OF PRAGUE, one of the first Bohemian reformers and martyrs. He was a good scholar, and had studied at the most celebrated universities of his day. He early embraced the doctrines of Wicliffe, and as the foremost follower of John Huss, took part in his labours and sufferings. When he heard that Huss was imprisoned at Constance, he hastened to his aid, and was himself imprisoned. There, on Huss being burnt, he signed a renunciation, which he soon after courageously repudiated, and was burnt himself, in 1416.

JERSEY, an island in the English Channel, 12 miles from the coast of Normandy in France, and 25 from the coast of France, subject to the English. It is about 30 miles in circumference, and difficult of access, on account of the rocks and sands, and the forts erected for its defence. It is well watered with rivulets, and is pretty well stocked with fruit trees. The pastures are good, and the island is noted for its milk kine. They have a noted manufactory for woollen stockings and caps. The fisheries are also of some importance. The trade is very considerable for its extent and population, owing to its practical freedom. It contains 12 parishes, and retains its ancient laws and customs, as the rest of the Channel islands do. The governor is appointed by England. Its chief town is St. Helier. Pop. 47,544.

JERSEY, s. [from the place of its manufacture,] a fine kind of woollen yarn.

JERVIS, ADMIRAL JOHN, EARL ST. VINCENT, a distinguished naval commander during the war at the end of the last century. He was in several great engagements, and obtained great praise for his courage and skill; but his great achievement was the defeat of the Spaniards, with a far more numerous fleet, off Cape St. Vincent. He died in 1823, aged 88 years.

JERU'SALEM, anciently Salem and Jebus; among the Greeks and Latins it was known by the name of Solyma, and Hierosolyma, the capital of Judea or Palestine, in Asia. It was a very famous city while the Jews inhabited that country; and in its most flourishing state it consisted of four parts, each being enclosed within its own walls. 1. The old city, which stood on Mount Zion, where King David built a palace. 2. The lower city, styled also the Daughter of Zion, as being built after it; where King Solomon's palace stood, also Herod's theatre and amphitheatre, the latter capable of containing 80,000 persons.

3. The new city, mostly inhabited by tradesmen and numbers of merchants; and 4. Mount Moriah, where Solomon's magnificent temple stood. But it was totally destroyed by the Romans under Titus. It stands on a high rock, with steep ascents upon every side, except to the N. It is almost surrounded with valleys encompassed with mountains, so that it seems to stand in the middle of an amphitheatre. It is now about 3 miles in circumference, and includes Mount Calvary, and much that was formerly without the walls. The most important buildings are, the mosque of Omar, on the site of the temple; the church of the Holy Sepulchre, professedly erected over the tomb in which the body of Jesus was laid; and the convents of the various religious orders of the Roman and Greek Churches. The city and its environs abound with spots pointed out to visitors as hallowed by having been the scenes of the most affecting events of the Sacred History, but very few of them can be authenticated, the modern city being so totally dissimilar in extent and boundary to the ancient one. It is called El-Khaddes, or the holy city, by the Arabs, and is regarded with superstitious and fanatical veneration by Mohammedans, Jews, and many denominations of professed Christians. Its population is under 20,000. Jerusalem is 112 miles from Damascus, and 45 from the Mediterranean Sea. Lat. 31. 55. N. Long. 35. 25. E.

JERU'SALEM-ARTICHOKE, s. In Horticulture, a kind of vegetable not now so common as it used to be, allied to the sunflower, and deriving its name from a corruption of girasole, applied to those flowers which always turn towards the sun.

JESS, s. [jeete, Fr. getto, Ital.] short straps of leather tied about the legs of a hawk, with which she is held on the fist.

JESSAMINE, s. See JASMINE.

JESSO, an island of the empire of Japan, lying next to the Kurile Islands. It is above 200 miles long, and about 100 in breadth, and is of a very irregular shape. It has not been explored, owing to the jealousy of the government; but it is known to be mountainous on the W. side, and to be in general fertile and well cultivated. It is also called Matsam. There are some towns of considerable size on it. All else is unknown.

JEST, v. [jestador, Lat.] to make a person merry by pleasant and witty turns in expression, and odd or comical motions of the body; to speak a thing one knows to be false purely to divert another.

JEST, s. any thing meant only to divert a person, or raise laughter; a witty or pointed turn of words, which diverts or raises laughter; game; not earnest.

JESTER, s. one given to witty turns in expression, to sarcasm, to odd and comical pranks; a buffoon, or one formerly kept by great persons to divert them by his witty turns or odd pranks.

JESUITS, or THE SOCIETY OF JESUS, a famous religious order in the Romish Church, founded by Ignatius Loyola, in the year 1538. Beside the vows of chastity, poverty, and obedience, common to all the religious societies of the Roman Church, this order is vowed to incessant aggression on those who are not within the pale of the Church; and to the use of any means by which it can advance the interests of the great mother. In zeal for education none have equalled the Jesuits, but their every step led to most slavish devotion to Rome. In missionary zeal the Jesuits are unequalled, but every acquisition was for Rome. In short, by every laudable plan, and by every detestable scheme, conceivable by man, this society has laboured to counteract the schism begun by Luther, and to restore the spiritual supremacy to the pontiff of the Eternal City. Their vitality surpasses belief. Discountenanced, persecuted, suppressed, by power after power, they yet exist, and conduct plans of most gigantic extent, and plots of most minute ramifications, with their one object in view, just as if no power had ever suspected their existence. The affairs of the order are controlled by a general, who is bound to complete subjection to the pope; their numbers cannot be calculated, from the secrecy they are constrained to adopt from the opposition of various governments of Europe. See IGNATIUS LOYOLA.

JESUITS-BARK, s. in Medicine, a name formerly given to Peruvian bark, or Cinchona, from its having been first introduced into Europe by the Jesuit missionaries to S. America.

JESUITICAL, (jesuitikal) a. belonging to the Jesuits; after the manner of the Jesuits; equivocal; deceitful.

JESUS, [Gr. from Joshua, Heb.] the proper name of our Lord and Saviour, equivalent in its meaning to Helper or Deliverer; given him by Divine direction, as indicating his office amongst men. See CHRIST.

JESUS, THE SON OF SIRACH, compiler of one of the apocryphal books of the Old Testament, called Ecclesiasticus, in about the 3rd century B.C.

JESUS COLLEGE, the name of colleges at Cambridge and Oxford; the former founded in the 15th century, the latter in the 16th. Neither of them are very wealthy, or very distinguished.

JET, s. [pagat, Sax.] a variety of fossilized wood, of a fine deep black colour, brittle, but easily worked, and therefore used for ornaments, such as beads, crosses, &c. It is often found on the sea beach of the E. counties of England; and it occurs inland in Germany.

To JET, v. n. [jetter, Fr.] to shoot forward, or stand beyond the other parts; to jut out. Figuratively, to intrude; to stint.

JET, JET D'EAU, (jet d'eau) s. [Fr.] a fountain, or contrivance which spouts water in the air.

JETTY, a. made of, or as black as, jet.

JEWELL, s. [jeveelen, Belg.] in its primary sense, any ornament of great value, generally applied to such as were set with precious stones; a gem or precious stone. Figuratively, applied to persons, to convey an idea of great esteem and affection towards them. Jewel Office, an office belonging to the crown, has the charge of weighing and fashioning the king's plate, and delivering it out by warrant from the lord chamberlain.

JEW'ELL JOHN, an eminent prelate of the English Church in the 16th century. He was obliged to leave England to escape the persecution of Queen Mary, but was made bishop of Salisbury by Elizabeth. His great work was written in Latin, and soon obtained a European fame; it is entitled An Apology for the Church of England. He died in 1571, aged 50 years.

JEW'ELLED, part. in Watchmaking, applied to those watches, the axles of whose wheels revolve on small pieces of diamond inserted in the frame; which does not wear as metal does; and thus renders the works more regular and durable.

JEWELLER, s. one who deals in precious stones.

JEWS, the common name of the present descendants of Abraham, derived from that of Judah, the eldest son of Jacob. Their history in its more important parts is contained in the Old Testament; and general history continues it, after they became implicated in the affairs of other nations, till the destruction of their chief city and their overthrow as a nation by Titus. Since that event they have been wanderers in the world; for the most part grievously persecuted and oppressed; rarely admitted, even to this hour in some nations, to the commonest rights; yet ever preserving their distinct character, and aspect, and language, and religious or superstitious hope of a coming Messiah. From the careful study of the Old Testament it may be conjectured, that, besides that of preserving generally the knowledge and worship of the true God in the world, the object of the establishment of the Jewish nation, was to teach the claims that God had to be regarded as the Author of the social principles in men's hearts, that lead to the formation of nations, and to be acknowledged by such a universal submission to his will, as would make every government, in fact, a theocracy. The providential preservation of the Jews amongst the nations with all their peculiarities, so distinct from all other people, seems to imply that this lesson has yet to be learned. And the investigation of the principles of the Old Testament dispensation, (as it is termed by divines), both in the Law and Prophets, leads us to the same conclusion.

JEWS-EARS, s. in Botany, a fungus, formed like a flat and variously hollowed cup. It generally grows on the lower parts of the trunks of decaying elder trees; and is used vulgarly as a cure for sore throats.

JEWS-STONE, s. the common name of the spines of a large species of echinus, or sea-urchin, found in a fossil state in the oolites and the chalk.

JEWS-HARP, s. [joue, Fr. and harp.] a kind of musical instrument, consisting of a bent spring made of steel, so set in a frame that it can be held against the teeth, and being struck by the finger, produces tones by the modification of the breath. Eulenstein is the only one who ever made its music agreeable to any beside school-boys.

IF, conj. [gif, Sax.] granting or allowing a thing upon condition, or supposition. Followed by another sentence that includes opposition, or implies whether or no; provided; or upon condition.

IGNATIUS, one of the earliest writers of the Christian church, commonly called the apostolical Fathers. He was pastor of the church at Antioch, and suffered martyrdom in one of the persecutions by Trajan, being thrown to the lions. Some of the letters extant in his name are confessedly forgeries, and the others are much interpolated.

IGNATIUS LOYOLA, the celebrated founder of the order of Jesuits, was a Spanish noble by birth, who being severely wounded at the defence of Pampeluna, was led to devote himself to piety and the church, in place of the profligacy and sin he had pursued. After long preparation, and many trials, he succeeded in gathering together a few companions as the germ of a society, the constitution of which was to differ from that of all other religious orders; which, after much delay, was confirmed by Pope Paul III. Ignatius was of course the first general of the order. He was a sincere enthusiast, and believed the plan of the society which he set up, and which has done so great a work, of such a character in the world, was inspired by God. He died in 1556, aged 65 years.

IGNEOUS, a. [ignis, Lat.] fiery; containing, emitting, or having the nature of fire.

IGNIPOTENT, a. [ignis and potens, Lat.] presiding over fire, or powerful by means of fire.

IGNIS FATUUS, s. [Lat. foolish fire,] a common meteor seen in meadows, and moist places, in dark nights, caused by exhalations of some kind of hydrogen gas, which, being kindled in the air, emit a phosphorescent light; called by the common people, Will with the ship, or Jack with the lantern.

To IGNITE, v. a. to set on fire.

IGNITIBLE, a. capable of being set on fire.

IGNITION, s. [Fr.] the act of kindling or setting on fire. In Chemistry, that state of any body, resulting from the application of heat, which we usually call red-hot.

IGNIVOMOUS, a. [ignis and vomo, Lat.] vomiting or casting out fire.

IGNOBILE, a. [in and nobilis, Lat.] mean, or not belonging to the nobility, applied to birth. Worthless, base, or not deserving honour, applied to persons or things.

IGNOBLY, ad. in a disgraceful, mean, base, or reproachful manner.

IGNOMINIOUS, a. [ignominieus, Fr. ignominiosus, Lat.] disgraceful, dishonourable, reproachful.

IGNOMINIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to cause loss of fame; reproachfully.

IGNOMINY, s. [ignominia, Lat.] loss of fame or honour; disgrace, shame, or reproach.

IGNORAMUS, s. [Lat.] in Law, a word used by a grand inquest, and written on the back of a bill, when they consider the evidence defective, or not able to make good the charge it contains. Figuratively, a person who knows nothing.

IGNORANCE, s. [Fr.] want of knowledge or instruction; unskillfulness. In Law, it is a want of knowledge of the laws, which will not excuse a person from suffering the penalty inflicted on the breach of them; for every one, to his peril, is presumed to know the laws of the land. Infants, that is, persons who are not yet of age, and all persons styled non compos mentis, as madmen and idiots, are allowed to be ignorant.

IGNORANT, a. [ignoro, Lat.] unlearned; illiterate; without knowledge; or without having an idea of some particular; unacquainted with.

IGNORANTLY, ad. without knowledge, learning, or design. To IGNORE, v. a. [in and nosco, Lat.] not to know, or have an idea of, a thing.

IGNOSCIBLE, a. [ignosco, Lat.] pardonable, capable of pardon. IGUANA, a. in Zoology, a large species of lizard, very frequent in the West Indies.

IGUANODON, s. [iguana, Span. and odon, Gr.] in Paleontology, a gigantic species of reptile, found in the Wealden formation, greatly resembling in its teeth, feet, &c. &c., the iguana of the W. Indies.

J. H. S. three letters which are frequently used in church ornaments, which signify Jesus Hominum Salvator, Jesus the Saviour of men, or else are derived from the Greek letters of the name Jesus.

JIB, s. in nautical affairs, the foremost sail of a sailing vessel, being a large stay-sail extended from the outer end of the bowsprit, prolonged by the jib-boom toward the fore-top-mast head.

JIG, s. [gyga, Ital.] a light, careless, quick dance or tune.

To JIG, v. a. to dance a quick and light dance called a jig.

JIL, in composition with words beginning with l, stands for in. JILT, s. [jilia, Isl.] a woman who gives up a lover from mere caprice.

To JILT, v. a. to give up a lover capriciously.

To JINGLE, v. n. [formed from the sound,] to clink, or make a noise like money, or other sounding metal, flung on a stone or other hard body. In Poetry or style, applied to the sound formed by several words or syllables which end in the same letters.

JINGLE, s. the sound made by money or other metal flung against a hard body. The sound made by words in the same letters and syllables, applied to style.

JLCHESTER, Somersetshire. It consists of four streets, with one church, and other places of worship. It is a town of great antiquity, and once had sixteen churches. The county jail is kept here, but the assizes are held alternately at Bridgewater, Wells, and Taunton. It is seated on the river Ivel, and is 123 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1068.

JLE, s. See ATSL.

JLEUM, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the third and last of the small intestines, is situated near the ossa ilei, whence its name. Its length is various, and it is in a very singular manner inserted into the left side of the colon.

JLEX, s. [Lat.] in Botany, a species of oak found in Spain, Italy, &c. Also, the common holly.

JLFRACOMBE, Devonshire. It has a convenient, safe harbour, formed by a good pier, projecting into the Bristol Channel. The high tides here allow large vessels to enter its basin. This port employs a number of brigs and sloops, chiefly in carrying ore from Cornwall, coal from Wales, and corn to Bristol. A number of fishing skiffs belong to this place, which, with those of Minehead, fish on a bank of the coast during the summer, and carry a number of soles, turbot, &c. to the Bristol market. It is 181 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3679.

JLIAC, a. [iliacus, Lat.] affecting the ileum. The iliac passion, in Medicine, is a species of colic of a very severe character, seated in the ileum.

JLIAD, s. [from Ilium, the ancient name of Troy,] the most ancient epic poem in the world, relating some of the events immediately preceding the taking of Troy by the Greeks. It is universally ascribed to Homer. See HOMER.

JLK, ad. [Scot.] eke; also; each. Of that ilk, is the description of a person who resides at a place bearing his own name.

JLL, a. [contracted from evil,] inconsistent with our duty; contrary to good. Sick or disordered, applied to the body. SYNON. Ill is used with the most propriety when the health is not much impaired; sick is applicable only when the body is greatly diseased. Ill too is most proper when in pain only; sick, when diseased: thus we say, he is ill of the gout; but sick of a fever.

JLL, s. an action contrary to our duty; wickedness; a misfortune.

JLL, ad. not well or rightly; not able. Ill, in composition, whether substantive or adverb, implies defect, or something bad and improper, either in quality or condition.

JLLACERABLE, a. [in and lacerare, Lat.] not to be torn.

JLLACHRYMABLE, (illachrymable), a. [in and lachryma, Lat.] not capable of weeping.

JLLA PSE, s. [illabor, Lat.] the gradual or gentle entrance of one thing into another; a sudden attack, or accident.

JLLAQUATION, s. [laqueo, Lat.] the act of catching or insinuating; a snare or artifice made use of to entrap or catch.

JLLATION, s. [illatio, Lat.] an inference or conclusion drawn from premises.

JLLATIVE, a. [illativus, Lat.] used to imply an inference or conclusion.

JLLAUDABLE, a. [in and laudo, Lat.] unworthy of praise.

JLLAUDABLY, ad. in a manner not deserving praise.

JLLE-ET-VILAINE, a department of France, lying on the English Channel, and bounded by the départements Côtes du Nord, Morbihan, Loire Inférieure, Mayenne, and Manche. It is about 60 miles in length, by 50 in breadth. The surface is hilly, and the coast rocky, except at the E. extremity, by St. Michel's Bay, where it is sandy. The rivers whence it is named are the chief of this department, in which are also the Cher, the Meu, the Oust, &c. The mineral productions are lead, iron, slate, and the more durable kinds of building-stone. Not much of the area is cultivated, but some grain, fruits, &c., are grown, and the cattle and sheep are numerous and profitable in trade. Its chief town is Rennes. Pop. about 600,000.

ILLE/GAL, a. [in and legalis, Lat.] contrary to law.

ILLEGA/LITY, s. the quality of being unlawful, or contrary to law.

ILLE/GALLY, ad. in a manner contrary to law.

ILLE/GIBLE, a. [in and lego, Lat.] that cannot be read.

ILLEGTIMACY, s. the state of bastardy.

ILLEGTIMATE, a. [in and legitimus, Lat.] unlawfully begotten; or not begotten in wedlock.

To ILLEGITIMATE, v. n. in law, to prove a person a bastard.

ILLEGITIMATELY, ad. not begotten in wedlock.

ILLEGITIMATION, s. the state of bastardy.

ILLEVABLE, a. [lever, Fr.] what cannot be levied or exacted.

ILLEA/VOURED, a. ugly, or deformed.

ILLIBERAL, a. [in and liberalis, Lat.] wanting generosity or gentility.

ILLIBERALITY, s. meanness of mind; want of munificence.

ILLIBERALLY, ad. in a mean, niggardly, or disingenuous manner.

ILLICIT, a. [in and licet, Lat.] unlawful, or contrary to any law.

ILLIMITABLE, a. [in and limes, Lat.] not to be bounded or limited.

ILLIMITABLY, ad. in such a manner as to be capable of no bounds.

ILLIMITED, a. unbounded; without bounds, limits, or restraint.

ILLINOIS, one of the United States of N. America, lying on Lake Michigan, and bounded by the States named Indiana, Kentucky, and Missouri, and by the Wisconsin and Iowa territories. It is 350 miles long, by 180 broad, and is divided into 97 counties. The surface is generally level, being hilly and broken only in the N. and the S. parts. The greater part of it is occupied with forests and prairies. The principal rivers are the Mississippi, the Illinois, (whence the State is named,) the Rock River, the Wabash, &c.; and the Peoria Lake, in the course of the Illinois, its largest sheet of water. The soil is evidently fertile almost every where; and where it is cultivated, grain of various kinds, flax, hemp, tobacco, &c. are abundantly produced. Beside the timber, the natural produce,—lead, galena, iron, and coal, with salt, form the staple of its trade. The chief place is Springfield: Chicago on Lake Michigan, and Alton on the Mississippi, are its principal seats of commerce. There are 4 colleges, but they are yet in their infancy; and 9 banks, in a tolerably flourishing condition. Pop. 470,183, of which number 3508 were coloured people, who are not admitted to the rights of citizenship. This is one of the free States.

ILLITERATE, a. [in and littera, Lat.] without having received any improvements by learning or instruction; unlearned.

ILLITERATENESS, s. the state of having never received any improvements from learning.

ILLESS, s. any thing which is productive of inconvenience, or destructive of our happiness, applied to things natural, moral, and religious. Sickness or disorder, applied to health.

ILLNATURE, s. a disposition to do ill turns, and to thwart the happiness of another, attended with satisfaction on the sight of any mischief which befalls another, and insensibility of kindness received.

ILLNATURED, a. habitually unkind, malicious, or mischievous.

ILLNATUREDLY, ad. in a peevish, froward, mischievous manner.

To ILLU/DE, v. a. [illudo, Lat.] to mock; to play upon; to jeer.

To ILLU/ME, v. a. [illuminer, Fr.] to supply with light; to brighten or adorn.

To ILLU/MINATE, v. a. [illuminer, Fr.] to enlighten or supply with light. Figuratively, to supply the mind with a power of understanding any difficulty; also, to adorn a book with paintings, &c., on the margins of the pages and the capital letters, &c.

ILLUMINATION, s. [illumination, Lat.] the act of supplying with light; the cause of light; brightness; splendour; light communicated to the mind by inspiration.

ILLUMINATIVE, a. [illuminativus, Fr.] having the power to communicate light.

ILLUMINATOR, s. [Lat.] one who gives light; one who explains a difficult passage in an author.

ILLUMINATRY, s. a kind of ornament anciently much practised for works of devotion and elegant literature.

To ILLU/ME, v. a. [illuminer, Fr.] to enlighten or make light; to supply with lights. Figuratively, to adorn.

ILLU/SION, s. [illusio, Lat.] a false show of appearance; error occasioned by a false appearance.

ILLU/SIVE, a. [illusor, Lat.] deceiving by false show.

ILLU/SORY, a. fraudulent; with an intention to deceive; deceitful.

To ILLU/STRATE, v. a. [illustro, Lat.] to brighten with light or honour. Figuratively, to explain or clear up a difficulty in an author.

ILLUSTRATION, s. [Fr.] the act of rendering a difficult passage easy to be understood; an exposition or explanation.

ILLUSTRATIVE, a. having the quality of clearing up a difficult or obscure passage in an author.

ILLUSTRATIVELY, ad. by way of explanation.

ILLU/STRIOUS, a. [illustris, Lat.] noble, eminent for titles, dignity, birth, or excellence.

ILLU/STRIOUSLY, ad. in a conspicuous, noble, or eminent manner.

ILLU/STRIOUSNESS, s. eminence of rank, birth, dignity, or good qualities.

ILLYRIA, a kingdom of Europe, lying on the Adriatic, and bounded by Syria, Austria, the Tyrol, Italy, and Croatia; belonging to Austria. It is very mountainous, being crossed by three distinct chains connected with the Alps; the greatest height attained by any point of which being nearly 11,000 feet. These mountains abound in caverns, some of which are of great beauty. The Drave and the Save are its largest rivers; and there are some fine lakes, which are much admired for the exquisite scenery of their environs. The natural wealth of the kingdom is very great, the metallic productions being iron, lead, copper, quicksilver, silver; with coal, building-stone, marbles, &c. &c. It also yields grain and fruits, cattle and sheep, abundance of timber, game, and wild beasts, and it has very valuable fisheries. Klagenfurth and Trieste are the principal places. Population, about 1,250,000.

ILMINSTER, Somersetshire. It has a considerable manufactory of narrow cloths, and is situated on the river Ille, in a valley among hills. It is 137 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3227.

IM, a contraction used in discourse for I am.

IMAGE, s. [Fr.] the appearance of any object; a representation of outward objects by the mind; a representation of any thing expressed in painting, sculpture, &c., most commonly applied to statues; a copy, or likeness; a lively description of any thing in discourse; a picture drawn in the fancy; a false god, or a statue made to represent, and be worshipped as, a god.

To IMAGE, v. a. to form a representation, likeness, or picture of a thing in the mind.

IMAGERY, s. statues or pictures. Figuratively, resemblance. Creations of the imagination, which have no originals out of the mind.

IMAGINABLE, a. [Fr.] that can be imagined.

IMAGINARY, a. [imaginaire, Fr.] existing only in the imagination or fancy, opposed to real.

IMAGINATION, s. [imago, Lat.] in Mental Philosophy, the faculty by which the mind gives unity to all that it contemplates; and also supplies by the laws of association, thoughts and pictures out of the stores of the mind for its contemplation and use. Popularly, the power of representing things absent; a conception, image, or picture of any thing in the mind; contrivance; a scheme.

To IMAGINE, v. a. [imagine, Fr.] to exercise the imagination; to fancy; to conceive. Figuratively, to contrive or plot.

IMAGINER, s. one who exercises his imagination.

IMBECILE, a. [imbecilis, Lat.] wanting strength, applied both to body and mind.

IMBECLITY, s. [imbecillitas, Fr.] frailty or weakness of mind or body.

To IMBIBE, v. a. [in and bibo, Lat.] to drink or draw in; to emit into the mind; to drench or soak.

IMBIBER, s. that which drinks in, sucks up, or absorbs.

IMBIBITION, s. [Fr.] the act of drinking or sucking up moisture.

To IMBITTER, v. a. to make bitter; to deprive of happiness or pleasure.

To IMBODY, v. a. to cover with, or thicken to, a body; to bring together into one mass or company; to enclose. Figuratively, to give expression by any means to one's thoughts.

To IMBOLDEN, v. a. to raise to confidence; to encourage; to make bold.

To IMBOSOM, (imbosom) v. a. to hold on the bosom; to wrap in that part of a garment which covers the bosom. Figuratively, to love with a warm affection and friendship.

To IMBOW, (imbó) v. a. to arch; to make in the form of an arch.

To IMBOWER, (the oe is here pron. as in now.) v. a. to cover with a bower; to cover with branches of trees.

IMBOWMENT, s. an arch; a vault.

IMBRICATED, a. [imbréz, Lat.] in Botany, applied to the scales covering any part of a plant, when they are lapped over each other like a close tiling.

IMBRICATION, s. a hollow indenture, like that of a gutter-tile.

To IMBROWN, v. a. to make brown or dark.

To IMBRUE, v. a. to steep, soak, or wet much and long.

To IMBRUTE, v. a. to make like a brute, in quality or shape; to become brutish.

To IMBUCE, v. a. [imbuo, Lat.] to tincture very deeply; to imbibe; to dye or impregnate with any liquor.

IMITABILITY, s. [imitor, Lat.] the quality of being imitable.

IMITABLE, a. worthy of being resembled or imitated; possible to be imitated or copied.

To IMITATE, v. a. to copy; to endeavour to resemble; to counterfeit.

IMITATION, s. the act of doing any thing with a view of making it like something else.

IMITATIVE, a. inclined to imitate; copied from, or resembling.

IMITATOR, s. [Lat.] one who copies from, and endeavours to resemble, another.

IMMACULATE, a. [in and macula, Lat.] without spot, stain, or crime; pure or clear.

To IMMANACLE, v. a. to put in manacles; to fetter, or confine.

IMMANE, a. [immanis, Lat.] vast; prodigiously great.

IMMANENT, a. [Fr.] internal; or situated within the mind.

IMMANITY, s. [immanis, Lat.] barbarity; cruelty.

IMMARCESCIBLE, a. [in and marcesco, Lat.] unfading.

To IMMASK, v. a. to put in a mask; to cover; to disguise.

IMMATERIAL, a. [immaterial, Fr.] spiritual; distinct from, and not consisting of, matter; of no importance or weight.

IMMATERIALITY, s. incorporeity; distinctness from body or matter.

IMMATERIALLY, ad. in a manner not depending on matter.

IMMATERIALIZED, a. freed from or void of matter.

IMMATERIALLY, s. distinctness or freedom from matter.

IMMATERIATE, a. [in and materia, Lat.] not consisting of matter.

IMMATURE, a. [in and maturus, Lat.] not ripe; not perfect; too early, or before the natural time.

IMMATURELY, ad. too soon; before ripe, complete, or existent.

IMMATURENESS, IMMATURITY, s. unripeness.

IMMEASURABILITY, s. [in and meo, Lat.] want of power to pass or make itself a passage, applied to fluids.

IMMEASURABLE, (immeasurable) a. not to be measured; not to be conceived.

IMMEASURABLY, (immeasurably) ad. beyond all comprehension or conception.

IMMECHANICAL, (immekhnikal) a. not according to the laws of mechanics.

IMME/CIACY, s. the quality of acting without the intervention of any other means.

IMME/DATE, a. [immédiat, Fr.] in such a state with respect to something else, as to have nothing between; without any thing intervening; not acting by second causes. Instant, or present, applied to time.

IMME/DATELY, ad. without the intervention of any other cause or event; instantly; without delay.

IMME/DATELESS, s. presence, applied to time. The state or quality of being without any second or intervening cause.

IMME/DICABLE, a. [in and medicabilis, Lat.] not to be healed or cured.

IMME/MORABLE, a. [in and memorabilis, Lat.] not worth remembering.

IMMEMORIAL, a. [Fr. from in and memoria, Lat.] not within the memory of any person living; so ancient as not to be easily traced with any degree of certainty. In a legal sense, a thing is said to be of time immemorial, that was before the reign of King Edward II.

IMME/NE, a. [Fr.] unbounded; not to be comprehended; infinite.

IMMEN/ENSITY, s. [immensité, Fr.] unbounded or incomprehensible greatness.

IMMEN/URABILITY, s. impossibility of being measured.

IMMEN/URABLE, a. [in and mensura, Lat.] impossible to be measured; infinite.

To IMMER/GE, v. a. [in and mergo, Lat.] to plunge or put under water.

IMMER/SE, a. buried; covered; sunk deep.

To IMMER/SE, v. a. to put under water; to sink deep, or cover; to plunge, sink, or keep depressed.

IMMER/SION, s. the act of plunging any thing in water, or any other fluid; the state of sinking or being sunk in fluid below its surface. The state of being overwhelmed, applied to the mind. In Astronomy, it is applied to a satellite when it begins to enter into the shadow of its primary; to a star or planet, when it first disappears behind the disk of the moon.

IMMETHO/DICAL, a. without method.

IMMETHO/DICALLY, ad. in an irregular manner.

IMMINENT, a. [in and minuo, Lat.] having over one's head; threatening; near; applied always to something ill.

To IMMI/NGLE, v. a. to mingle, mix, or unite. Seldom used.

IMMIN/UTION, s. [imminuo, Lat.] diminution, decrease, lessening.

IMMISCIBILITY, s. incapacity of being mingled.

IMMI/SCIBLE, a. not capable of being mixed.

IMMI/SSION, s. [in and mitto, Lat.] the act of sending in, opposed to emission.

To IMMIT, v. a. to send in.

To IMMI/X, v. a. to mix together; to join or unite.

IMMI/XABLE, a. not to be mixed together.

IMMOBILITY, s. [in and mobilis, Lat.] a quality of body, whereby it is rendered incapable of moving; a state of rest.

IMMODERATE, a. [in and moderatus, Lat.] excessive; exceeding due bounds.

IMMODERATELY, ad. in an excessive degree or manner.

IMMODERATION, s. [Fr.] want of keeping to a due mean; excess.

IMMO/DEST, a. [immodeste, Fr.] unchaste, or inconsistent with modesty; obscene.

IMMO/DESTY, s. [immodestie, Fr.] want of modesty, or of regard to chastity and decency.

To IMMO/LATE, v. a. [immolo, from mola, Lat.] to sacrifice, or kill in sacrifice.

IMMOLATION, s. [Fr.] the act of sacrificing or killing, as an offering to God; the thing offered in sacrifice.

IMMORAL, a. inconsistent with, or contrary to, the principles of morality; bad or unjust.

IMMORALITY, s. an action inconsistent with our duty towards men; want of virtue.

IMMORTAL, a. [in and mortalis, Lat.] not capable of dying; living for ever; never ending; perpetual.

IMMORTALITY, s. a state which has no end; an exemption from death; an exemption from oblivion.

To IMMO/RTALIZE, v. a. [immortaliser, Fr.] to make immortal; to perpetuate, or make the fame of a person endless.—v. s. to become immortal.

IMMORTALLY, ad. without death; without ceasing or ending.

IMMOVABLE, a. not to be forced from or taken out of its place; not to be shaken or affected.

IMMOVABLY, a. in a state not to be shaken or affected.

IMMUNITY, s. [immunité, Fr.] discharge from any duty or obligation.

To IMMURE, v. a. [emmurere, old Fr. in and murus, Lat.] to enclose within a wall; to imprison; to confine.

IMMURE, s. a wall; enclosure.

IMMUTABILITY, s. [immutabilité, Fr. in and mudo, Lat.] freedom from change or alteration.

IMMUTABLE, a. not subject to change or alter.

IMMUTABLY, ad. without altering or changing; in a manner not subject to change or alter.

IMP, s. [imp, Brit.] an inferior devil; an emissary of the devil. Also a son; the offspring; progeny.

To IMP, v. a. [impio, Brit.] to lengthen by the addition of something else.

To IMPACT, v. a. [in and pango, Lat.] to drive or force the particles of a body closer together.

IMPACT, s. in Mechanics, the collision occurring on the meeting of two bodies, one or both of which are in motion.

To IMPAIR, v. a. [empire, Fr.] to lessen in degree, quality, quantity, or worth; to diminish; to injure; to make worse.—v. n. to be lessened or worn out. "Flesh may impair;—but reason can repair," Spenser.

IMPAIRMENT, s. a decay; injury; decay of strength.

To IMPALE, v. a. in Heraldry, is to conjoin two coats of arms pale-wise. See ENPALE.

IMPALEABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be felt, or perceived by the touch.

IMPAANNELING, s. in Law, signifies the writing down or entering into a parchment, list, or schedule, the names of a jury, summoned by the sheriff to appear for such public services as juries are employed in.

To IMPARADISE, v. a. [imparadisare, Ital.] to render as happy as the state of paradise is supposed to be.

IMPARITY, s. [impar, Lat.] disproportion; the excess of two things compared together; oddness.

To IMPARK, v. a. to separate from a common; to make a park of; to enclose with a park.

IMPARLANCE, s. in Law, is a petition in court, for a day to consider or advise what answer the defendant shall make to the plaintiff's action, and is the continuance of the cause till another day, or a longer time given by the court.

To IMPART, v. a. [impartio, from partio, Lat.] to grant, give, or communicate a part.

IMPARTIAL, (imparshiat) a. [Fr.] just; without any bias or undue influence.

IMPARTIALITY, (imparshidility) s. [impartialité, Fr.] the act of distributing justice without any bias or undue influence; strict justice.

IMPARTIALLY, (imparshially) ad. in a manner free from any bias.

IMPARTIBLE, a. [Fr.] that may be communicated or bestowed in part; without parts.

IMPASSABLE, a. not to be passed; impervious.

IMPASSIBILITY, s. [impassibilité, Fr.] the quality or privilege of not being subject to external injury or sufferings.

IMPASSIBLE, a. [Fr.] incapable of suffering injury or pain.

IMPASSIBLENESS, s. impassibility; exemption from pain.

IMPASSIONED, (impassioned) a. seized, or inflamed, with passion.

IMPATIENCE, (impasshience) s. [Fr.] inability of suffering pain or delay without complaint.

IMPATIENT, (impasshient) a. [in and patiens, Lat.] not able to endure or bear delay, pain, or any other inconvenience, without complaint; vehemently agitated by passion; eager.

IMPATIENTLY, (impasshiently) ad. with great intemperance, application, or ardour; with great eagerness or longing desire.

To IMPAWN, v. a. to give a person as an hostage, or a thing as pledge and security, for the performance of certain conditions.

To IMPACH, (pronounced in this word and its derivatives impeech), v. a. [empecher, Fr.] to hinder. In Law, to accuse a person of being guilty of a crime.

IMPEACHABLE, a. worthy of being found fault with; accusable.

IMPEACHER, s. an accuser, one who brings an accusation against another.

IMPEACHMENT, IMPACH, s. [empechement, Fr.] a hindrance or obstacle; a public accusation or charge of being guilty of some crime.

To IMPEACH, (impair) v. a. to adorn with pearls, or something resembling pearls.

IMPECCABILITY, s. [impeccabilité, Fr.] exemption from sin; exemption from failure.

IMPECCABLE, a. [Fr.] sinless; exempt from the possibility of sinning.

To IMPEDE, v. a. [impedio, Lat.] to hinder; to stop.

IMPEDEMENT, s. [in and pes, Lat.] a hindrance, obstacle, or motive, which renders the performance of a thing difficult or impossible. SYNOM. There seems to be a gradation in the words impediment, obstacle, and obstruction. The impediment stays; the obstacle resists; the obstruction puts an entire stop to. We say, remove the impediment; surmount the obstacle; take away the obstruction. Even small impediments sometimes prove such obstacles as obstruct our best endeavours.

To IMPEL, v. a. [impello, Lat.] to drive on; to make a thing move; to act upon with force.

IMPELLENT, s. a power which acts upon any thing with force.

To IMPEND, v. n. [in and pendeo, Lat.] to hang over, threaten, or be near; generally applied to some evil.

IMPENDENCE, s. the state of hanging over, or being near.

IMPENDEMENT, a. suspended or hanging over; very near.

IMPEENETRABILITY, s. [impeenetrabilité, Fr.] the quality of not being pierceable. Hardness, or a state not susceptible of tender affections, applied to the mind. In Natural Philosophy, one of the qualities of matter, which means that two bodies cannot occupy the same space at the same time.

IMPEENETRABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be pierced or entered by any outward force; not admitting to enter. Not to be known or discovered, applied to things and persons. Not to be moved or affected, applied to the mind.

IMPEENETRABLY, ad. with so much hardness as not to give entrance to any thing driven by external force. Not to be removed by instruction, applied to defects of the understanding. "Impeenetrably dull," Pope.

IMPENITENCE, IMPENITENCY, s. [Fr.] a state of mind wherein a person continues in sin, without any sorrow, or sense of Divine love or mercy.

IMPENITENT, a. [Fr.] not grieving or repenting of sin.

IMPENITENTLY, ad. without repentance, or showing any sorrow for sin.

IMPEENOUS, a. [in and penna, Lat.] without wings.

IMPERATE, a. [impero, Lat.] done with consciousness, or the direction of the will. "Imperate acts," Hale.

IMPERATIVE, a. [imperativus, Fr. from impero, Lat.] commanding, or expressing command. In Grammar, that mode of the verb used in expressing commands or entreaties, which thoughts are conveyed by the aid of the verb let, when the speaker includes himself in the command.

IMPERATIVELY, ad. in a commanding style; authoritatively.

IMPERATOR, s. [Lat.] in Roman Antiquity, a title of honour conferred on victorious generals by their armies, and afterwards confirmed by the senate. See EMPEROR.

IMPERCEPTIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be seen or perceived either by the mind, eye, or other senses; very small or minute.

IMPERCEPTIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be perceived either by the mind or senses.

IMPERFECT, a. [in and perfectus, Lat.] not quite finished; not complete; wanting something; defective; frail.

IMPERFECTION, s. [Fr.] a defect, failure, or fault, whether natural or moral.

IMPERFECTLY, ad. not fully or completely; with defects or failure.

IMPERFORABLE, a. [in and perforo, Lat.] not to be bored through.

IMPERFORATE, a. not pierced or bored through; without a hole or cavity running through.

IMPERIAL, a. [Fr. impérial, Lat.] possessed of the state of an emperor or empress; higher than royal, though sometimes used for it. Imperial paper, is a large kind of fine writing paper.

Imperial chamber, was a sovereign court for the affairs of the states of Germany. Imperial cities, were those which owned no other head but the emperor. Imperial diet, was an assembly or convention of all the states of the empire.

IMPERIALIST, s. a person who is subject to an emperor; a partisan siding with an emperor.

IMPERIOUS, a. [imperialus, Lat.] commanding in a haughty, insolent manner; overbearing; powerful; proud.

IMPERIOUSLY, ad. with pride of authority; in an insolent manner.

IMPERIOUSNESS, s. the exercise of authority; a haughty, rigid, and insolent stretch of power and command.

IMPERISHABLE, a. [imperissable, Fr.] not to be destroyed by force, or impaired by time.

IMPERSONAL, a. [Fr. in and persona, Lat.] in Grammar, used only in the third person singular, or not having all the persons, applied to verbs. The English impersonal is expressed by it or one, before the verb; as, It thundered, One told me.

IMPERSONALLY, ad. in Grammar, after the manner of a verb which is not used in all the persons.

IMPERTINENCE, IMPERTINENCY, s. [Fr.] that which has no relation to the matter in hand; folly, or rambling thought; troublesome, arising from not talking to the purpose, or from intrusion; a trifle.

IMPERTINENT, a. [Fr.] having no relation to the matter in hand; of no weight; troublesome, by inquiring into things which do not concern a person; foolish; trifling. SYNON. Impertinent means meddling with and intruding into what no way concerns us. Impudent implies having no shame, or wanting modesty. Saucy means insolent and abusive.

IMPERTINENT, s. a person who is troublesome by inquiring into, or meddling with, things that do not concern him.

IMPERTINENTLY, ad. without relating to the matter in hand; in a troublesome manner, by inquiring into things that do not concern one.

IMPERTRANSIBILITY, s. [in and pertransio, Lat.] impossibility to be passed through.

IMPERVIOUS, a. [in, per, and via, Lat.] not to be pierced or penetrated; not accessible.

IMPERVIOUSNESS, s. the state or quality of not admitting any passage or entrance.

IMPETRABLE, a. [impetro, Lat.] possible to be obtained.

IMPETRATION, s. [Fr.] the act of obtaining by prayer or entreaty.

IMPETUOSITY, s. [impétuosité, Fr.] excess of strength, force, violence, or rage.

IMPETUOUS, a. [impetus, Lat.] violent; fierce; furious; vehement.

IMPETUOUSLY, ad. in a violent or furious manner.

IMPETUOUSNESS, s. violence; fury.

IMPETUS, s. [Lat.] the force by which a body moves in any direction after being impelled by another; a violent effort.

IMPIETY, s. [impietate, Fr. in and pietas, Lat.] a state of open opposition to God; a want of reverence, and neglect of religion; godlessness; irreligion.

To IMPIGNORATE, v. a. [in and pignus, Lat.] to pawn or pledge.

IMPIGNORATION, s. the act of pawning or putting to pledge.

To IMPINGE, v. n. [in and pango, Lat.] to fall or strike against; to clash with.

To IMPINGUATE, v. a. [pinguis, Lat.] to fatten or make fat.

IMPIOUS, a. [in and pius, Lat.] without devotion; without reverence to God or religion.

IMPIOUSLY, ad. in a profane, wicked manner.

IMPIOUSNESS, s. See IMPIETY.

IMPLACABILITY, s. the quality of not being appeased, or reconciled to a person that has offended us; irreconcilable enmity.

IMPLACABLE, a. [in and placo, Lat.] not to be pacified or reconciled.

IMPLACABLY, ad. with malice or anger; in a manner not to be pacified.

To IMPLANT, v. a. [in and planto, Lat.] to put a plant into the ground. Figuratively, to establish or fix, applied to the mind &c.

IMPLANTATION, s. [Fr.] the act of setting or planting; the act of introducing and fixing in the mind.

IMPLAUSIBLE, a. not likely to seduce or persuade.

IMPLEMENT, s. [implementa, low Lat.] any tool or instrument belonging to mechanics.

IMPLETION, s. [impleo, Lat.] the act of filling, or the state of a thing that is full.

IMPLEX, a. [in and plico, Lat.] complicated; consisting of variety or change; intricate.

To IMPLICATE, v. a. to unfold or involve. Figuratively, to embarrass or entangle by variety.

IMPLICATION, s. the state of a thing, whose parts are kept together by being folded over each other, or entangled; an inference included in an argument, but not expressed.

IMPLICIT, a. [implicitus, Fr.] entangled or complicated with; tacitly comprised or understood, and to be gathered only by inference; resting on another, or taken up on the authority of another, without any examination.

IMPLICITLY, ad. by inference, because included, but not expressed; without examination, or barely on the authority of another.

To IMPLORÉ, v. a. [in and ploro, Lat.] to entreat with prayers; to ask or beg with earnestness and submission.

IMPLORER, s. one that requests or entreats with earnestness.

IMPLUMED, a. [in and pluma, Lat.] without feathers.

IMPLUVIOUS, a. [in and pluvia, Lat.] wet with rain.

To IMPLY, v. a. [in and placo, Lat.] to conclude as a consequence, but not in express terms.

To IMPOISON, (impizon) v. a. [more properly empoison, from empoisonner, Fr.] to kill with poison. Figuratively, to corrupt or seduce.

IMPOLITIC, IMPOLITICAL, a. not using forecast; indiscreet.

IMPOLITICALLY, IMPOLITICLY, ad. without art or discretion; without guarding against the bad consequence of an action; imprudently.

IMPONDEROUS, a. void of perceptible weight.

IMPOROSITY, s. the quality of being without pores or interstices between the parts.

IMPOROUS, a. free from pores or interstices between its parts.

To IMPORT, v. a. [in and porto, Lat.] to bring goods into one country from another, applied to commerce.—c. impers. [importer, Fr.] to imply, mean, or signify; to produce as a consequence.

IMPORT, s. moment, weight, or consequence; tendency. Imports, in Commerce, are goods brought from another country.

IMPORTABLE, s. that may by law be brought from abroad.

IMPORTANCE, s. [Fr.] the meaning or signification of a word; consequence, value, or moment; a matter, subject, or affair.

IMPORTANT, a. [Fr.] of great weight, moment, or consequence.

IMPORTATION, s. the act or practice of importing or bringing goods into one kingdom from another; opposed to exportation.

IMPORTER, s. one that brings in from abroad.

IMPORTLESS, a. of no moment or consequence.

IMPORTUNATE, a. [importunus, Lat.] requesting with great earnestness and frequency. Figuratively, not to be repulsed or denied.

IMPORTUNATELY, ad. with incessant and earnest request.

IMPORTUNATENESS, s. incessant and earnest request, or solicitation.

To IMPORTUNE, v. a. [importuner, Fr. from importunus, Lat.] to request with earnestness and frequency; to tease or wear out with incessant and earnest request.

IMPORTUNELY, ad. with earnestness and frequency; troublesomely; unseasonably, or improperly.

IMPORTUNITY, s. [importunité, Fr.] earnest and incessant entreaty.

To IMPOSE, (the s in this word and its derivatives is pronounced like z—imposé) v. a. [imposer, Fr.] to lay on as a burden; to exact as a punishment; to enjoin as a law or duty; to cheat or deceive. In the universities, to give a task as a punishment for some misdemeanor. Among printers, to put the pages on the stone, and fit on the chase, in order to carry the form to press.

IMPOSEABLE, a. to be enjoined as a law or rule.

IMPOSER, s. one who commands; one who lays any heavy fine or duty on another; one who cheats or tricks.

IMPOSITION, s. [in and pono, Lat.] the act of laying or putting any thing on another; the act of giving or affixing; the commanding any thing as a law or duty; constraint or oppression; a cheat, trick, or imposture. Imposition of hands, is a ceremony employed in the Roman and Anglican Churches in confirmation, ordination, and other rites. It is regarded by many with superstitious reverence, although it is plainly a matter of no moment; being in fact an oriental custom, and used by our Lord and the apostles, just as it was by the Jews generally, as a national peculiarity, and not with any religious meaning.

IMPOSSIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be done, attained, or practised.

IMPOSSIBILITY, s. [impossibilitas, Fr.] the state of being impracticable, or beyond any one's power to do; that which cannot be done.

IMPOST, (the o pron. long), s. [Fr.] a toll; custom paid for goods or merchandise. Used in the plural, in Architecture, for that part of a pillar, in vaults and arches, on which the weight or stress of the whole building beareth.

IMPOSTHUMATE, v. n. in Medicine, to form an abscess; to gather, or form a cyst or bag, applied to matter.—a. to inflict with an imposthume.

IMPOSTHUMATION, s. in Medicine, the act of forming an abscess, gathering, or cyst; the state in which an imposthume is formed.

IMPOSTHUME, s. in Medicine, a collection of matter in any part of the body.

IMPOSTOR, s. [imposteur, Fr.] one who deceives or cheats by assuming a false character.

IMPOSTURE, s. [impostura, from impono, Lat.] a cheat, committed by giving persons or things a false character or appearance.

IMPOTENCE, IMPOTENCY, s. [in and potens, Lat.] want of power either of body or mind; rage, including the idea of not being able to restrain it.

IMPOTENT, a. not able; not having strength to perform a thing, applied both to the mind and to the body; weak; disabled by nature or disease; without a power to restrain; without virility.

IMPOTENTLY, ad. in such a manner as shows want of power.

IMPOVERISH, v. a. [appauvrir, Fr.] to make poor. To render unfruitful, applied to land.

IMPOVERISHMENT, s. want of riches; mean and low circumstances.

IMPOUND, v. a. to shut up in a pound or pinfold; to confine or enclose in a pound.

To IMPOWER, v. a. See To EMPOWER.

IMPRACITICABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be done or practised; not to be governed or managed.

IMPRACITICABLENESS, s. impossibility of performing or practising.

To IMPRECATE, v. a. [in and precor, Lat.] to pray for evil to befall oneself or others; to curse.

IMPRECATION, s. a curse.

IMPRECATORY, a. containing wishes of evil; or curses.

To IMPREGN, (the g is mute), v. a. [pregnans, Lat.] to make fruitful.

IMPREGNABLE, a. [imprenable, Fr.] not to be stormed or taken, applied to forts. Not to be shaken, moved, or overcome, applied to the mind.

IMPREGNABLY, ad. in such a manner as to defy force or hostility.

To IMPREGNATE, v. a. [pregnans, Lat.] to fill with young, or make fruitful, applied to animals. To saturate, or fill, applied to fluids.

IMPREGNATION, s. the act of making fruitful, applied to animals. The act of filling with any quality; saturation, applied to liquors.

IMPREJUDICATE, a. [in, præ, and judico, Lat.] unprejudiced; not prepossessed; impartial.

To IMPRESS, v. a. [impressum, from in and primo, Lat.] to print or mark by pressure; to force a person to enter either as a sailor or soldier. Figuratively, to fix deep, applied to the mind.

IMPRESS, s. a print or mark made by pressure; an effect; a mark of distinction, character, or stamp; the act of forcing into any service—now commonly press.

IMPRESSIBLE, a. that may be pressed; liable to be forced into the service, or pressed.

IMPRESSSION, s. [impressio, Lat.] a motion which produces some perception, applied to the organs of sense, or the mind. The act of pressing one body upon another; a stamp or mark made by pressure; operation or influence.

IMPRESSMENT, ad. [Lat.] first of all, or in the first place.

To IMPRIINT, v. a. [imprimor, Lat.] to mark any substance by pressure; to stamp words on paper by means of types in printing; to fix in the mind or memory.

To IMPRISON, (the s in this and the next word is pron. like z), v. a. [emprisonner, Fr.] to confine, restrain, or deprive of freedom.

IMPRISONMENT, s. [emprisonnement, Fr.] the act of confining a person in prison; the state of a person or thing under confinement.

IMPROBABILITY, s. want of likelihood; impossibility of being proved.

IMPROBABLE, a. [in and probo, Lat.] unlikely.

IMPROBABLY, ad. in such a manner as cannot be proved.

IMPROBATION, s. [Fr.] the act of disallowing.

IMPROBITY, s. [in and probitas, Lat.] want of honesty.

To IMPROLIFICATE, v. a. to impregnate; to fecundate.

IMPROPER, a. [in and proprius, Lat.] not fit or qualified; not suited to the use it is designed for; not just; not accurate.

IMPROPERLY, ad. not fitly; unseasonably; in an inaccurate manner; inconsistently.

To IMPROPRIATE, v. a. [improprius, Lat.] to convert any thing public to private use; to arrogate, or assume, as belonging to oneself. In Canon Law, to transfer the possession of a church into the hands of a layman.

IMPROPRIATION, s. a parsonage, or ecclesiastical living, the profits of which are in the hands of a layman; in which case it stands distinguished from appropriation, which is where the profits of a benefice are in the hands of a bishop, college, &c., though these terms are now often used promiscuously.

IMPROPRIATOR, s. a layman who has the possession of the lands of the church.

IMPROPRIETY, s. [improprietas, Fr.] any thing which is unfit for the end it is assigned, and unsuitable to the person to whom it is applied; an application of a word in a sense inconsistent with the rules of grammar.

IMPROVABLE, a. capable of being made better, or of advancing from a good to a better state.

IMPROVABLENESS, s. capableness of being made better.

IMPROVABLY, ad. in a manner that admits of being made better.

To IMPROVE, (the o in this word and its derivatives is sounded like oo; as improve, improvement, improver, &c.) v. a. to advance or raise a thing from a bad state to one of greater perfection; to advance in goodness or learning.

IMPROVEMENT, s. the advancement or progress of any thing from a good to a better state; advancement in learning.

IMPROVER, s. one who advances in learning and goodness, or makes either himself or any thing else better; that which makes any thing better.

IMPROVIDENCE, s. want of caution or forethought.

IMPROVIDENT, a. [in and providens, Lat.] without any foresight or caution, with respect to any future circumstance; without any regard to preparation for any future calamity.

IMPROVIDENTLY, ad. without care or caution.

IMPROVISATION, s. [improvisatore, Ital.] the habit or act of composing verse extempore, on a subject furnished by another person, after the manner of the professional poets of Italy.

IMPROVISION, s. want of forethought or preparation to prevent or support any future calamity.

IMPRUDENCE, s. [in and prudens, Lat.] the want of judgment, caution, or a proper regard for our interest, and the consequences of our actions.

IMPRUDENT, a. [Fr.] injudicious; indiscreet.

IMPUDENCE, IMPUDENCY, s. [Fr. in and puet, Lat.] want of modesty; the quality of doing amiss, without any regard to the opinion of others, or any sense of the nature of the crime.

IMPUDENT, a. not affected with shame for having done amiss; persisting in a fault with boasting; wanting modesty.

IMPUDENTLY, ad. in a shameless manner; without modesty.

To IMPU'GN, (the g in this word and its derivatives is mute,) v. a. [in and pugno, Lat.] to attack; to oppose or contradict an assertion.

IMPU'GNER, s. one who attacks or opposes an opinion.

IMPU'SSANCE, s. [Fr.] feebleness, or want of strength.

IMPULSE, s. [impello, Lat.] the shock or force given and communicated by one body acting upon another; an influence, idea, or motive acting upon the mind; an attack of an enemy.

IMPULSION, s. [Fr.] the action of a body in motion on another body. Influence, applied to the mind.

IMPULSIVE, a. [impulsif, Fr.] having the power of moving and acting upon.

IMPUNITY, s. [impunité, Fr. in and punio, Lat.] freedom or exemption from punishment.

IMPU'RE, a. [in and purus, Lat.] not having that sanctity, virtue, or modesty, required by the laws of religion, or by the dictates of nature. Foul, muddy, or drossy, applied to liquors.

IMPURELY, ad. with immudesty or unchastity. With foulness, applied to liquors.

IMPU'RENESS, IMPU'RITY, s. [in and purus, Lat.] want of that regard to decency, chasteness, virtue, or holiness, which our duty requires; an act of unchastity. Foulness, applied to liquors.

To IMPU'RPLE, v. a. [empourprer, Fr.] to make of a purple colour.

IMPUTABLE, a. that may be laid to a person's charge; accusable; liable to be accused with a fault.

IMPUTABLENESS, s. the quality of being imputed.

IMPUTATION, s. [imputatione, Fr.] the act of charging with ill; censure, reproach, or accusation.

IMPUTATIVE, a. that may impute.

To IMPUTE, v. a. [in and pudo, Lat.] to charge with; to accuse, or attribute; to reckon, as belonging to or done by a person, though performed by another.

IMPUTER, s. he that charges a person with having done a thing; he who attributes the merits or actions of a person to another.

IMPUTRIBLE, a. [in and putreo, Lat.] not able to putrefy; incorruptible.

IN, prep. [in, Lat.] applied to place, signifies where a thing is; applied to time, the period then existent, or the state then present. Sometimes it denotes power. "Is not in man," Hubb. Tale. By, or for the sake of, used in solemn entreaties. "In the names of all the gods," Shak. For, applied to cause. "To fight in thy defence," Shak. In that, because. In as much, implies, seeing that, or because.

IN, ad. within some place, opposite to without. Placed in some particular state. After come or go, it denotes entrance. Close, or home, applied to fencing.

IN, in Composition, has a negative or a privative sense, as, invariable, that which cannot be tilted. Before the liquids l, m, r, the n is changed to l, m, or r; and before b and p, it is changed into m.

INA, one of the Bretwaldas, or supreme kings of the Anglo-Saxon kingdoms in England. His laws are the authentic memorial of his wisdom. The records of his battles, and of the bequests and privileges he made to monasteries, are of less consequence to history. He died in 728, having held the kingdom of Wessex for 39 years.

INABILITY, s. want of power sufficient for the performance of any particular act or design.

INACCESSIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be reached; not to be come near or approached.

INACCURACY, s. want of exactness.

INACCURATE, a. wanting accuracy or exactness.

INACTI'ON, s. [Fr.] cessation from, or forbearance of, action or labour.

INACTIVE, a. idle; lazy; sluggish.

INACTIVELY, ad. in a lazy, sluggish manner.

INACTIVITY, s. a state wherein a person ceases from labour or action; idleness; rest.

INADEQUATE, a. [in, ad, and æquus, Lat.] not equal to the purpose; defective.

INADEQUATELY, ad. defectively; imperfectly; incompletely.

INADVERTENCE, INADVERTENCY, s. [Fr.] want of care, attention, or deliberation; an act, or the effect, of negligence or inattention.

INADVERTENT, a. without care or attention; negligent.

INADVERTENTLY, ad. in a careless or negligent manner; without attention or deliberation.

INALIENABLE, a. that cannot be transferred or made over to another.

INALIMENTAL, a. affording no nourishment.

INAMISSIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be lost.

INAMORATO, s. a rapturous lover.

INANE, a. [inania, Lat.] void of matter.

INANIMATE, INANIMATED, a. [in and anima, Lat.] void of life; not actuated by a soul.

INANTION, s. [Fr.] emptiness; applied to the vessels of an animal, when wanting their usual fullness.

INANITY, s. [inania, Lat.] emptiness; space void of matter.

INAPPETENCY, s. [in and appetentia, Lat.] in Medicine, want of stomach or appetite.

INAPPLICABLE, a. not proper for a particular use; not having any relation to a subject or discourse.

INAPPLICATION, s. [Fr.] want of industry in business or study; want of attention.

INARABLE, a. [in and aro, Lat.] not fit to be tilled or ploughed.

To INAR'CH, v. a. in Gardening, to graft by approach, or to ingraft one tree with another that stands near it.

INARTICULATE, a. [inarticulé, Fr.] not uttered with such distinctness that the different syllables may be perceived, as in human speech.

INARTICULATELY, ad. in a confused manner; so as the distinct syllables cannot be perceived in the utterance.

INARTICULATENESS, s. confusion of sounds; want of distinctness in pronouncing.

INARTIFICIAL, (inartificial) a. contrary to, or inconsistent with, the rules of art.

INARTIFICIALLY, (inartificially) ad. without art; in a manner contrary to the rules of art.

INATTENTION, s. [Fr.] want of attention; negligence.

INATTENTIVE, a. without regarding or considering a thing heard; neglecting or disregarding any thing that is spoken to us, or in our sight.

INAUDIBLE, a. not to be heard; without sound.

To INAUGURATE, v. a. [in and augur, Lat.] to invest in a solemn manner with any high honour, particularly that of an emperor or king; to begin with good omens; to commence or begin.

INAUGURATION, s. the act of investing a person with the title or honour of a king or emperor.

INAURATION, s. [in and aurum, Lat.] the act of gilding or covering with gold.

INAUSPICIOUS, (inauspicious) a. ill-omened; unlucky; unfortunate.

INBEING, s. existing within a thing; inherence.

INBORN, a. born within; innated; implanted by nature.

INBREATHED, (inbreathed) a. breathed within. Figuratively, inspired, or infused by inspiration.

INBRED, a. produced, hatched, or generated within.

INCA, Y'NCA, a name given by the natives of Peru to their kings, and the princes of the blood.

To INCA'GE, v. a. to confine in a cage; to coop up or confine within any narrow space.

INCALES'CE, INCALESCENCY, s. [incresco, Lat.] warmth; increasing heat.

INCANTATION, s. [incanto, Lat.] charms or enchantment.

INCANTATORY, a. dealing in, or performing by, enchantment or magic.

To INCA'NTON, v. a. to unite to a canton or separate community.

INCAPABILITY, INCAPABLENESS, s. natural inability or feebleness; a legal disqualification.

INCAPABLE, a. [Fr.] wanting power to apprehend, learn, or understand, applied to the mind. Not able to receive or perform; rendered unfit; disqualified by law; not subject or liable to. "Incapable of falsehood."

INCAPACIOUS, a. narrow; of small extent.

TO INCAPACITATE, v. a. to render unable or unfit to perform any thing.

INCAPACITY, s. [incapacité, Fr.] want of power of mind or body; wanting any necessary qualification, or the power of apprehending, learning, or understanding.

TO INCARCERATE, v. a. [in and carcer, Lat.] to imprison; to confine a person in durance.

INCARCERATION, s. the act of confining in prison; the state of imprisonment.

TO INCARN, v. a. [in and caro, Lat.] in Surgery, to cover with flesh; to cause flesh to grow.—v. n. to breed flesh.

TO INCARNADINE, v. a. [incarnadino, Ital.] to dye of a pale red or flesh colour. Seldom used.

TO INCARNATE, v. a. to clothe or embody with flesh.

INCARNATE, a. clothed with or embodied in flesh.

INCARNATION, s. [Fr.] the act of assuming a body. In Surgery, the state of breeding flesh, applied to wounds.

INCARNATIVE, s. [incarnatif, Fr.] in Medicine, that which produces or generates flesh.

TO INCASE, v. a. to cover, enclose, or wrap as in a case.

INCAUTIOUS, [incautious] a. careless, or heedless.

INCAUTIOUSLY, [incautiously] ad. without suspecting deceit; unwarily; heedlessly.

INCENDIARY, s. [incendo, Lat. incendiarius, Fr.] one who maliciously and willfully sets towns and houses on fire. Figuratively, one who inflames factions; one who causes commotions in a state, or promotes quarrels between private persons.

INCENSE, s. [incenso, Lat.] a perfume offered up in sacrifice.

TO INCENSE, v. a. to perfume with incense.

TO INCENSE, v. a. to kindle or provoke the anger of a person.

INCENSEMENT, s. rage or anger occasioned by some offence.

INCENSION, [incension] s. the act of kindling; or the state of being on fire.

INCENSOR, s. [Lat.] one who kindles anger, or inflames the passions.

INCENSORY, s. the vessel in which incense or perfumes are burnt.

INCENTIVE, s. [incentivum, Lat.] that which kindles, inflames, or provokes anger; a motive, encouragement, or spur to action.

INCENTIVE, a. acting as a spur, motive, or encouragement.

INCEPTION, s. [incipio, Lat.] beginning. "The inception of putrefaction," Bacon.

INCEPTIVE, a. that implies beginning.

INCEPTOR, s. [Lat.] a beginner; one who learns his rudiments.

INCERTITUDE, s. [Fr. in and certus, Lat.] want of certainty.

INCESSANT, a. [in and cesso, Lat.] continually; without intermission.

INCESSANTLY, ad. without ceasing; continually; without intermission.

INCEST, s. [inceste, Fr.] the crime of criminal and unnatural commerce with a person within the degree forbidden by the law. This formerly extended to the seventh, but seems now confined to the third.

INCESTUOUS, s. [incestueux, Fr.] guilty of incest, or the knowledge of a person within the degrees forbidden by the law.

INCESTUOUSLY, ad. in an incestuous manner.

INCH, s. [ince, Sax.] a measure supposed equal to three barley-corns laid end to end; the twelfth part of a foot; a proverbial expression for a small quantity; a critical or nice point of time. "We watched you at an inch," Shak.

TO INCH, v. a. to drive out, or force in, by inches. Figuratively, to give niggardly.

INCHBALD, MRS. ELIZABETH, a novelist and play-writer of the end of the last century. She commenced life as an actress; and after her retirement from the stage, supported herself by her writings. Beside plays, written in the style of Kotzebue, and novels, which yet are read, she edited collections of British drama. She died in 1821, aged 68 years.

INCHOLM, and INCHKEITH, two small islands in the Frith of Forth, near the coast of Fife, but within the county of Edinburgh. Here are the fine ruins of a once celebrated monastery, founded, in 1123, by Alexander I., and of a chapel dedicated to St. Marnock.

INCHMEAL, s. a piece an inch long.

TO INCHOATE, v. a. [inchoo, Lat.] to begin; to commence.

INCHOATION, [inchoation] s. a beginning.

INCHOATIVE, [inchoative] a. noting beginning.

TO INCIDE, v. a. [incido, Lat.] to cut, applied in Medicine to acids or salts.

INCIDENCE, INCIDENCY, s. [Fr.] the direction with which one body strikes or falls upon another.

INCIDENT, a. [incido, Lat.] happening without expectation or being foreseen; falling in beside the main design; happening or liable to befall.

INCIDENT, s. something that happens beside the main design; a casualty, or unexpected and unforeseen event. SYNON. Incident is most applicable to casualties in private life; event, to government and states.

INCIDENTAL, a. happening without being foreseen, expected, or intended; casual.

INCIDENTALLY, ad. occasionally; beside the main design; by the way; by the by.

TO INCINERATE, v. a. [cinis, Lat.] to burn to ashes.

INCINERATION, s. [Fr.] the act of burning any thing to ashes.

INCIRCUMSCRIPTION, s. want of caution.

INCISED, [inciso, Lat.] cut, or made by cutting; as, "an incised wound."

INCISION, s. a cut or wound made by a sharp instrument, generally applied to those made by a surgeon.

INCISIVE, a. [incisif, Fr.] having the quality of cutting or separating.

INCISOR, s. [Lat.] a cutter. In Anatomy, applied to one of the teeth in the forepart of the mouth.

INCISORY, a. [incisorie, Fr.] having the power of cutting or dividing.

INCISURE, s. in Surgery, a cut, aperture, or wound made with a sharp instrument.

INCITATION, s. [incito, from cio, Lat.] an incentive; an impulse; a motive which spurs a person to action.

TO INCITE, v. a. to stir up; to push forward in a design; to urge on; to animate or encourage.

INCITEMENT, s. a motive which urges a person to action.

INCFVIL, a. [Fr.] wanting the elegance of breeding; not behaving with kindness. See UNCFVIL.

INCFVILITY, [ineivilité, Fr.] want of complaisance; rudeness.

INCLEMENCY, s. [inclemence, Fr. in and clementia, Lat.] want of mercy; cruelty, or harshness of treatment.

INCLEMENT, a. not exercising mercy or clemency; cruel; void of tenderness. Figuratively, severe, or prodigiously cold, applied to seasons or climates.

INCLINABLE, a. [inclino, Lat.] having a propensity; willing; having a tendency, or liable.

INCLINATION, s. tendency towards any point, or the mutual tendency which two or more bodies have to one another; natural aptness or fitness; disposition or propensity of the mind to any particular action. In Navigation, the tendency or direction of the needle or compass to the E. or W. In Astronomy, the inclination of a planet, is the angle that the plane of its orbit makes with the plane of the ecliptic. In Magnetism, the tendency of the needle of the mariner's compass towards the earth, called the dip.

INCLINATORY, a. having the quality of tending to a particular point.

INCLINATORILY, ad. obliquely; with a greater tendency to one side than another; with some deviation from N. or S.

TO INCLINE, v. n. [inclino, Lat.] to lean; to bend; to tend towards any part. Figuratively, to be favourably disposed to.—

v. a. to give a tendency or direction to any place or state; to turn towards any thing, as desirous or attentive; to bend; to incurvate.

INCLINED PLANE, s. in Mechanics, one of the mechanical powers by which bodies can be raised to a height, by the application of much less force than would be required to lift them sheerly to it. The force being so much the less as the length of the plane is increased in proportion to the height to be reached.

To INCLIP, v. a. to grasp; to enclose; to surround. "What-e'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips," Shak.
To INCLOISTER, v. a. to shut up or confine in a cloister or monastery.

To INCLOSE, v. a. See TO ENCLOSE.

INCLOSURE, s. [in and claudo, Lat.] in Law, the appropriation by individuals, according to statute, of lands formerly common.

To INCLOUD, v. a. to darken with clouds; to make dark;
to obscure.

To INCLUDE, v. a. [in and claudo, Lat.] to enclose, or shut in.
Figuratively, to imply; to comprehend, or contain.

INCLUSIVE, a. [inclusi, Fr.] enclosed; contained; comprehended in any sum or number.

INCLUSIVELY, ad. comprehending or reckoning the thing mentioned.

INCOEXISTENCE, s. [in, con, and existo, Lat.] the quality of not existing together.

INCOGNITO, ad. [contracted from incognito, Ital.] in a private manner; in such a manner as shows that a person would not be known.

INCOGITANCY, s. [incogitantia, low Lat.] want of thought, or want of thinking on the nature and consequence of our actions.

INCOGITATIVE, a. wanting the power of thinking.

INCOGNITO, ad. See INCOGNITO.

INCOHERENCE, INCOHERENCY, s. want of being connected together, or of dependence on each other; inconsistency; want of cohesion.

INCOHERENT, a. not following as a consequence; inconsistent; without cohesion.

INCOHERENTLY, ad. inconsistently; inconsequentially.

INCOMBUSTIBILITY, s. the quality of not being consumed by fire. A burnt body becomes combustible when it has received so much oxygen that it can admit no more.

INCOMBUSTIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be consumed by fire.

INCOMBUSTIBLENESS, s. the quality of not being wasted or consumed by fire.

INCOME, s. that which an estate or post produces yearly;
the produce of any thing. Income Tax, in Law, a tax paid in a certain proportion to an income from a trade, profession, &c.

INCOMMENSURABILITY, s. the state of one thing compared to another, when they cannot both be measured by any common measure, however small.

INCOMMENSURABLE, a. [in, con, and mensura, Lat.] in Mathematics, not to be reduced to, or measured by, any common measure.

INCOMMENSURATE, a. not admitting a common measure; bearing no proportion to each other.

To INCOMMULATE, INCOMMUTE, v. a. [in and commodus, Lat.] to make inconvenient; to be inconvenient to, vexatious, or troublesome.

INCOMMODOUS, a. inconvenient; vexatious, or troublesome.

INCOMMODOUSLY, ad. inconveniently; not suited to use or necessity; not at ease.

INCOMMODOUSNESS, s. inconvenience.

INCOMMUNITY, s. [incommunité, Fr.] an inconvenience; trouble.

INCOMMUNICABILITY, s. the quality of not being imparted to another.

INCOMMUNICABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be imparted, or made the common right and property of another; not to be expressed or explained by words.

INCOMMUNICABLY, ad. in a manner not to be imparted, or to become the common quality or right of another; in such a manner as cannot be expressed or explained.

INCOMMUNICATING, part. having no commerce or intercourse with another.

INCOMMUNICATIVE, a. reserved.

INCOMPACT, INCOMPACTED, a. porous; loose, or not having its parts closely and strongly joined together.

INCOMPARABLE, a. [Fr.] so excellent as not to have any thing like it; excellent beyond all competition.

INCOMPARABLY, ad. beyond comparison or competition; excellently.

INCOMPASSIONATE, (incompassionate) a. void of pity or tenderness; not touched or affected with the miseries of another.

INCOMPATIBILITY, s. [in and competo, Lat.] the quality which renders a thing not possible to exist, or to be reconciled, with another; inconsistency with another.

INCOMPATIBLE, a. [Fr.] impossible to subsist with something else; inconsistent with something else; irreconcilable.

INCOMPATIBLY, ad. inconsistently.

INCOMPETENCY, s. [incompétence, Fr.] inability. In Law, a want of a proper qualification.

INCOMPETENT, a. not sufficient, or not proportionate to an undertaking. In Civil Law, not having a right or qualification for the performance of a thing.

INCOMPETENTLY, ad. unsuitably; in such a manner as not to be proportionate to.

INCOMPLETE, a. not perfect or finished.

INCOMPLETENESS, s. imperfection; the state of a thing which is not finished.

INCOMPLIANCE, s. obstinacy or untractableness of temper; want or refusal of compliance.

INCOMPOSED, (incomposed) a. disturbed or disordered.

INCOMPOSITIBILITY, s. the quality of not being joined or existing together with something else; inconsistency with something.

IMPOSSIBLE, a. not possible at one and the same time, or in one and the same subject.

IMPREHENSIBILITY, s. [imcomprehensibilité, Fr. in and comprehendo, Lat.] the quality of not being perfectly or adequately comprehended by the mind, though it may be conceived imperfectly.

IMPREHENSIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be fully or perfectly understood or comprehended.

IMPREHENSIBLENESS, s. the quality of not being comprehended.

IMPREHENSIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be conceived.

IMPRESSIBILITY, s. impossibility of being pressed or squeezed into a less space.

IMPRESSIBLE, a. [Fr.] not capable of being pressed or squeezed together into a narrower compass.

INCEALABLE, (insecealable) a. not to be hid, or kept secret.

INCEIVABLE, (inseceivable) a. [Fr. in and concepio, Lat.] not to be conceived or apprehended by the mind; that of which we can form no notion or idea.

INCEIVABLY, (insecevably) ad. in a manner beyond the apprehension of the mind.

INCEIPTIBLE, a. not to be conceived or comprehended by the mind.

INCONCLUSIVE, a. [in and concludo, Lat.] not conclusive; not inferring a consequence.

INCONCLUSIVE, a. not forcing any assent to the mind, or containing any forcible evidence.

INCONCLUSIVELY, ad. without any such evidence as determines the understanding.

INCONCLUSIVENESS, s. want of strength of reasoning sufficient to prove a thing, or gain the assent of the mind.

INCONCOCT, INCONCOCTED, a. [in and concoquo, Lat.] in Surgery, not ripened or digested.

INCONCOCTION, s. in Medicine, the state of being crude, indigested, or unripe.

INCONCURRING, a. not concurring.

INCONDITE, a. [in and conditus, Lat.] irregular; rude; unpolished.

INCONDITIONAL, (incondishional) a. without restriction, limitation, or condition.

INCONDITIONATE, a. not limited; not restrained by any condition; absolute.

INCONFORMITY, s. incommpliance with the practice of others.

INCONGRUENCE, s. want of fitness or suitability.

INCONGRUITY, s. [incongruité, Fr. in and congruus, Lat.] unsuitableness of one thing to another; inconsistency; impropriety; absurdity.

INCONGRUOUS, a. [incongru, Fr.] unsuitable; inconsistent; absurd.

INCONGRUOUSLY, ad. improperly; inconsistently; absurdly.

INCONSCIONABLE, (ininkshonable) a. void of the sense of good and evil; without any remorse of conscience.

INCONSEQUENT, a. [in and consequens, Lat.] without a just conclusion; without a regular inference.

INCONSIDERABLE, a. unworthy of notice; insignificant; of no importance.

INCONSIDERABLENESS, s. want of merit, worth, or significance; want of importance.

INCONSIDERATE, a. [in and considero, Lat.] without regarding the nature or consequences of our actions; careless; rash.

INCONSIDERATELY, ad. in a negligent, thoughtless, or careless manner.

INCONSIDERATENESS, s. want of thought; want of regard to the consequences of our actions.

INCONSIDERATION, s. want of thought; rashness.

INCONSISTENCE, INCONSISTENCY, s. such an opposition between propositions, that one implies the denial of the other; such contrariety of qualities, that both cannot subsist together; incongruity; unsteadiness; changeableness.

INCONSISTENT, a. not to be reconciled with; absurd. So contrary, that one implies the denial or destruction of the other, applied either to propositions or qualities.

INCONSISTENTLY, ad. absurdly; unreasonably; with self-contradiction.

INCONSISTING, part. not consistent or compatible with.

INCONSOULABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be comforted.

INCONSONANCY, s. disagreement with itself; not agreeing in sound.

INCONSPICUOUS, a. not to be seen; not worth notice.

INCONSTANCY, s. [in and constans, Lat.] unsteadiness; a disposition of mind continually changing.

INCONSTANT, a. not firm in resolution; not steady in affection; varying in disposition, temper, or conduct; often changing.

INCONSUMABLE, a. not to be wasted.

INCONSUMPTIBLE, a. [in and consumo, Lat.] not utterly to be destroyed or wasted by fire or other means.

INCONTABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be disputed; admitting no debate.

INCONTASTABLY, ad. in so certain a manner, as not to admit of doubt or dispute.

INCONTINGUOUS, a. not touching; not near.

INCONTINENCE, INCONTINENCY, s. [in and contineo, Lat.] not abstaining from unlawful desires; lust.

INCONTINENT, a. unchaste, or not restraining unlawful desires.

INCONTINENTLY, ad. unchastely; without delay; immediately.

INCONTROVERTIBLE, a. so plain or certain as to admit of no dispute.

INCONTROVERTIBLY, ad. in a manner so plain or evident as to admit of no dispute.

INCONVENIENCE, INCONVENIENCY, s. [inconvenient, Fr.] unfitness, or unsuitableness; anything which causes uneasiness, or proves a hindrance or obstacle.

INCONVENIENT, a. [Fr.] disadvantageous; unfit; unreasonable.

INCONVENIENTLY, ad. in a manner not fit and suitable; unreasonable.

INCONVERSABLE, a. reserved; not inclined to conversation; not affable.

INCONVERTIBLE, a. not to be altered or changed.

INCONVINCEABLE, a. not capable of being convinced, or forced to assent to the truth of a proposition, &c.

INCONVINCEBLY, ad. incapable of being convinced.

INCORPORAL, a. immaterial; distinct from matter; distinct from body.

INCORPORALITY, s. [incorporalité, Fr.] not consisting of body or matter.

TO INCORPORATE, v. a. [incorporer, Fr.] to mingle different ingredients together; to join together inseparably; to form into a company, society, or body politic; to unite or associate.—v. n. to unite with something else, followed by with, and sometimes into.

INCORPORATE, a. not consisting of matter or body; immaterial. United together by charter, applied to societies or communities.

INCORPORATION, s. [Fr.] the union of different ingredients; the formation of a body politic, or the uniting several persons together by charter, adoption, union, or association.

INCORPORAL, a. [in and corpus, Lat.] not consisting of matter or body; spiritual.

INCORPORALLY, ad. without body.

INCORPOREITY, s. the quality of being void of, or distinct from, body or matter.

INCORRECT, a. not accurate or nicely finished; imperfect; faulty.

INCORRECTLY, ad. in a faulty or imperfect manner.

INCORRECTNESS, s. the quality of having faults that are not amended; want of exactness.

INCORRIGIBLE, a. [Fr.] bad beyond the power of being made better by correction; erroneous or faulty beyond hope of instruction or amendment.

INCORRIGIBLENESS, s. the quality of being obstinately bad; hopeless depravity.

INCORRIGIBLY, ad. bad to such a degree as to leave no hopes of amendment.

INCORRUPT, INCORRUPTED, a. [in and corrumpo, Lat.] free from any foulness or sin; of pure and honest manners; of integrity above the power of a bribe.

INCORRUPTIBILITY, s. [incorruptibilité, Fr.] the quality of not being liable to decay or corruption.

INCORRUPTIBLE, (sometimes accented on the second syllable,) a. [Fr.] not capable of decay or corruption.

INCORRUPTION, s. [Fr.] a state free from corruption or decay; a state of integrity beyond the temptation of bribes.

INCORRUPTNESS, s. inviolable purity; unshaken integrity; unalterable honesty; freedom from decay, degeneration, or corruption.

TO INCRASSATE, v. a. [in and crassus, Lat.] to make thick, applied to liquors.

INCRASSATION, s. the act of making thick; the state of growing thick, applied to fluids.

INCRASSATIVE, a. that which has the power or quality of making thick, applied to fluids.

TO INCREASE, (*in*crease) v. n. [increasco, from cresco, Lat.] to grow more in number, or greater in bulk.—v. a. to make more or greater.

INCREASE, (*in*crease) s. the state of growing greater, applied to bulk; any thing which is added to the original stock; gain; produce. SYNON. Things increase by addition of the same kind; they grow by nourishment: thus corn grows; the harvest increases. The word grow signifies only the augmentation, independent of that which occasions it. The word increase gives us to understand, that the augmentation is caused by a fresh quantity which casually joins it.

INCREASE, (*in*crease) s. that which adds to the number or bulk of things.

INCREASED, a. not created.

INCREDBILITY, s. [incrédibilité, Fr.] the quality of surpassing, or not being worthy of, belief.

INCREDBLE, a. [in and credo, Lat.] surpassing belief; not worthy of belief.

INCREDBLY, ad. in a manner not to be believed.

INCREDULITY, INCREDULOUSNESS, s. [incrédulité, Fr.] the quality of not believing, notwithstanding sufficient proofs to demand assent.

INCREDULOUS, a. [in and credo, Lat.] not believing, notwithstanding arguments sufficient to demand assent.

INCREMENT, s. [incrementum, from increasco, Lat.] the act of growing greater; the cause of growth; produce.

TO INCRUST, INCRUSTED, v. a. [incrasto, from in and crusta, Lat.] to cover with a hard substance or crust; to cover over with an additional coat of marble, &c.

INCRUSTED, a. See INCRUST.

INCRUSTATION, s. the act of covering a wall, or column, with a lining or coating of marble, pottery, or stucco-work.

INCRUSTED, part. in Architecture, applied to walls or columns covered with several pieces or slips of some precious marble or stone.

TO INCUBATE, v. n. [in and cubo, Lat.] to sit upon eggs.

INCUBATION, s. the act of sitting upon eggs to hatch them.

INCUBUS, s. [Lat.] See NIGHT-MAIL.

TO INCULCATE, v. a. [in and culco, Lat.] to impress on the mind by frequent admonitions; to enforce by constant and incessant repetitions.

INCULCATION, s. the act of impressing by frequent admonitions.

INCULPABLE, a. [in and culpa, Lat.] not to be found fault with; free from guilt.

INCULPABLY, ad. in a manner free from guilt.

INCULT, a. [in and colo, Lat.] uncultivated.

INCUMBENCY, s. the act of lying upon something; the state of keeping, or being resident on, a benefice.

INCUMBENT, a. [in and cumbo, Lat.] resting or lying upon; imposed or required as a duty.

INCUMBENT, s. in Law, one who is in present possession of an ecclesiastical benefice.

To INCUMBER, v. a. [incumber, Fr.] to perplex, embarrass, or hinder, by any impediment.

To INCUR, v. a. [in and curro, Lat.] to become liable to punishment or blame.

INCURABILITY, s. [incurabilité, Fr.] impossibility of being cured.

INCURABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be removed or cured by any medicine.

INCURABLENESS, s. the state or quality of not admitting any cure.

INCURABLY, ad. without remedy.

INCURIOS, a. not considering a thing with attention enough to discover its latent beauties; having no desire of seeing or knowing any thing new or strange.

INCURSION, s. attack or assault; an inroad or invasion of a country not amounting to a conquest.

To INCURVATE, v. a. [incurvo, from curvus, Lat.] to bend, or make crooked.

INCURVATION, s. the act of bending or making crooked.

INCURVITY, s. crookedness, or the state of bending inwards.

INDAGATION, s. [indago, Lat.] a search in order to discover something unknown; the act of tracing.

INDAGATOR, s. [Lat.] one who endeavours to find out a thing by tracing it to its origin.

To INDART, v. a. to dart in; to strike in.

To INDEBT, (b is mute both in this word and its derivatives), v. a. to charge with a debt; to put under an obligation by conferring a favour.

INDEBTED, part. under obligation for some favour received; having received money or goods for which a person is obliged to pay, or give an equivalent.

INDECENCY, s. [indecence, Fr.] any thing unbecoming the person who commits it; an action unbecoming chastity or good manners.

INDECENT, a. [Fr.] unbecoming a person's rank or character.

INDECLINABLE, a. [in and declino, Lat.] in Grammar, not capable of expressing any modification in meaning by inflexion.

INDECOROUS, a. [in and decorus, Lat.] not becoming.

INDECORUM, s. [Lat.] an action unbecoming the rank or character of a person.

INDEED, ad. really; in truth; without doubt; above common rate; this is to be granted that.

INDEFATIGABLE, a. [in and defatigo, Lat.] not exhausted or wearied by continual labour; labouring as if never tired.

INDEFATIGABLY, ad. in such a manner as if never tired by labour.

INDEFEASIBLE, INDEFESIBLE, (indefezible) a. not to be cut off, defeated, or made void; irrevocable.

INEFFECTIBILITY, s. the quality of not being subject to decay, defect, or failure.

INEFFECTIBLE, a. [in and deficio, Lat.] not liable to decay, defect, or failure.

INEFFESIBLE, a. that cannot be defended or maintained.

INDEFINITE, a. [in and definio, Lat.] not determined, settled, limited, or restrained. In Geometry, applied to a line whose extremities are not stated in the proposition.

INDEFINITELY, ad. in an undetermined and loose manner.

INDEFINITUDE, s. a quantity or number not limited by our understanding, but yet finite.

INDELIBERATE, INDELIBERATED, a. [indelibéré, Fr.] not premeditated; not done with or after due consideration.

INDELIBERATENESS, s. want of consideration; rashness; suddenness.

INDELIBLE, a. [in and deleo, Lat.] not to be effaced or blotted out; not to be annulled or abrogated.

INDELICACY, s. want of delicacy; want of elegance, or a rigorous observance of decency.

INDELICATE, a. wanting decency.

INDEMNIFICATION, s. security against any loss or penalty; reimbursement or repayment of loss or penalty.

To INDEMNIFY, v. a. to secure against loss or penalty.

INDEMNITY, s. [indemnité, Fr.] security; or an exemption from punishment.

To INDENT, v. a. [in and dens, Lat.] to form any thing in inequalities like a row of teeth; to act in and out like waves.—v. n. to contract or bargain.

INDENT, s. an inequality; a dent of a waving surface, like that of an indentine.

INDENTATION, s. an indenture or waving in any figure.

INDENTURE, s. in Law, a covenant, so called because the counterparts are indented or cut in and out, or in a waving manner over each other.

INDEPENDENCE, INDEPENDENCY, s. [Fr.] freedom; a state in which a person or thing is not controlled by, or any ways in the power of, another. In Ecclesiastical History, that form of church government, &c. which is maintained by the Independents. The Declaration of Independence was a manifesto signed on the 4th July, 1776, by the first congress in N. America, containing the reasons for the rejection of the supremacy of England.

INDEPENDENT, a. [independens, Lat.] not depending; not controlled.

INDEPENDENTLY, ad. without reference to, or connexion with, other things.

INDEPENDENTS, in Ecclesiastical History, a denomination of professed Christians, who maintain the entire independence of any one church or society of Christians of all others, and of all other authority in matters religious and ecclesiastical. The first name by which this denomination was generally known, was taken from the English founder, Robert Brown. They are generally called Congregationalists now.

INDESTRUCTIBLE, a. impossible to be destroyed.

INDESTRUCTIBILITY, s. the impossibility of being destroyed. In Natural Philosophy, a property of matter, implying that though the order and arrangement of the atoms of any body may be changed, or the elements separated and recombined in any way, no single particle can be annihilated.

INDETERMINABLE, a. not to be fixed; not to be defined or settled.

INDETERMINATE, a. [indéterminé, Fr.] unfixed; not restrained or limited to any particular time, circumstance, or meaning. In Mathematics, applied to problems which can be solved in various ways.

INDETERMINATELY, ad. in a loose, vague, uncertain, or unsettled manner.

INDETERMINATION, s. want of resolution or determination; a state of uncertainty.

INDETERMINED, a. not fixed or restrained to any particular time, circumstance, or meaning.

INDEVOTION, s. [Fr.] want of ardour or zeal in religious worship.

INDEVOUT, a. [indévot, Fr.] not religious; not zealous in the performance of religious duties.

INDEX, s. [Lat.] a discoverer or pointer out; the table containing the contents of a book, with the pages where they may be found; a little stile, or hand, which points to the hour on the globe or a clock; a hand cut out or painted on a post to direct travellers the way to any place. In Printing, the figure of a hand with the finger pointing, used to denote some remarkable passage in an author. In Arithmetic, a figure which shows the number of places of an absolute number of a logarithm, and of what nature it is. In Anatomy, the forefinger.

INDEXTERITY, s. want of readiness or handiness in performing a thing.

INDIA, the general name for that extensive region of Asia, lying on the Indian Ocean, S. of Tataria, and reaching from Persia to China, which is divided into India within, and India without, or beyond, the Ganges;—but more properly now confined to that country of Asia, known also as Hindustan, which occupies the enormous promontory washed by the Arabian Sea, and the Bay of Bengal; and reaching inland to the gigantic Himalach Mountains, is bounded by Beloochistan, Afghanistan, Tatory, the Chinese Empire, and Burnah. It is almost 2000 miles in extreme length, and 1500 miles in its extreme breadth. The great chains of mountains are, the Himmaleh Mountains, which are the loftiest in the world, reaching nearly 30,000 feet in elevation; the Aravalli Mountains, and the Vindhyan range; the Eastern and Western Ghauts, and the continuation of the Western Ghauts to Cape Comorin: the height of these lesser chains is inconsiderable in itself, but most of them rise from table land considerably above the level of the sea. Between these ranges of heights, and between them and the sea, in some parts, are wide plains. The great rivers are, the Ganges, with its countless tributaries, &c.; the Indus, with its tributaries, the Nerbudda, the Mahanuddy, the Godavary, the Kistna, &c. The natural productions, and the capabilities of the soil, of so vast a region, are too numerous and variously distributed to be specifically described here, and they will be found under the names of the different provinces, presidencies, &c. into which it is divided. The inhabitants, though divided into many nations, &c., and often subjugated by the harder and more warlike people of Tatory, just as has been the lot of other inhabitants of the enervating regions of S. Asia, are almost all traceable to one stock, and that is plainly connected with that branch of the human family, known amongst physiologists as the Caucasian variety. Moreover, the ancient sacred and parent language of the greater part of Hindustan, the Sanscrit, is most remarkably connected with the European languages, with the Teutonic dialects in its roots, and with Greek both in its roots and inflexions of verbs and nouns. The dialects derived from the Sanscrit are very numerous, and of them the Hindustanee is most widely spread. Beside these, the Tamil and the Telinga languages, with some others closely allied to them, seem to have sprung from another source, or to have passed through a different channel. The science of Hindustan at some remote period reached its culminating point, and has been cultivated as a dead letter by the learned classes, without any material addition, ever since. In social state and religion, India greatly resembles ancient Egypt, the whole people being divided into castes, and the priestly caste being supreme; the gods being numerous, and the worship degrading and cruel; megalomania being a prominent dogma, and the bull being a special object of veneration;—but in India the religious system is more fully developed. The religious architecture of Egypt and India exhibit most marked resemblances. The sacred books called the Vedas, and the Institutes of Menu, which are in part moral and in part juridical, contain much that is excellent, and much that is puerile too. Some of the coincidences between the history of some of their numerous gods, and the sacred history of the Bible, are most wonderful. The habits of the great mass of the people are indolent and gentle; and thus they have easily become the prey of foreign invaders. But some tribes are sufficiently warlike, and have remained unsubdued to this day. Want of good faith prevails throughout the whole population. Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay are the greatest cities in the British possessions; Delhi, Benares, Lucknow, Patna, Aurrangabad, Hyderabad, the chief cities not seats of European trade. British India consists of Bengal, Chittagong, Bahar, Assam, Goodwana, Delhi, Ajmeer, Orissa, the Circars, the Carnatic, Cochin, the island of Ceylon, Mysore, Canara, Concan, Khandeish, &c., divided into the three presidencies of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay. The French have Pondicherry, and a few isolated places on the coast, with Chandernagore, near Calcutta. Portugal possesses Goa and Diu. Denmark has a few small settlements. The greater part of the unappropriated territory is either subject to Great Britain, or in intimate and dependent alliance with it. The Purjaub, Nepal, Bootan, and Scindia, are the chief independent states. The total population of India is reckoned to be 120,000,000.

[INDIAN, a. [from India,] belonging to India.—s. a person born in the Indies.

INDIAN CORN, s. See MAIZE.

INDIAN INK, s. in water-colour Painting, &c., a black paint made of vegetable charcoal, finely ground with gum, &c. It is of a brown-black hue, and therefore is not so useful for some purposes as the pigment made of animal charcoal. In China and India, a similar pigment is used for common writing.

INDIAN RED, s. a species of ochre; a very fine purple earth, of firm compact texture, and great weight.

INDIAN RUBBER, s. See CAOUTCHOUC.

INDIAN TERRITORY, called also WESTERN TERRITORY, a tract of country lying W. of the settled portion of the United States, which has been set apart by the general government for the permanent residence of those Indian tribes which have been removed from various States of the Union. It is about 600 miles in length, and 450 in breadth; and is bounded by the Platte river, the desert country extending to the Rocky Mountains, the Red river, and the States of Missouri and Arkansas. It is a fertile tract, and the prairies are particularly rich. About 70,000 different tribes dwell here, excluding the wild tribes, who originally occupied that part of the country. The numbers of the chief tribes settled here are about 350,000.

INDIANA, one of the United States of N. America, lying on Lake Michigan, and bounded by the states named Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, and Illinois. It is 260 miles in length, and 140 in breadth; and is divided into 87 counties. There are a few hills of no great height; but the general surface of this State is an unbroken level. The Ohio, the Wabash, the White River, the White Water, &c. are the largest rivers. Iron, coal, and saline springs, are its chief mineral products. The timber of the wide-spread forests is very valuable. The land cleared and cultivated is exceedingly fertile, and yields grain and fruits of all kinds. The prairies afford excellent pasture grounds. Its manufactures are not extensive. There are four colleges rising into importance; and but one bank. Indianapolis is the seat of government; and New Albany the place of the greatest extent and importance. Pop. 685,866, of which 7165 are coloured persons, who are admitted to the suffrage in this State, which is not a slave State.

INDIANAPOLIS, capital of Indiana, United States. It stands on the White River, over which is a bridge. It is laid out with great regularity; and in the centre of the town is a circular street, surrounding an elevation on which the government buildings and offices stand. The State-house is built on the model of the Parthenon of Athens. There are some factories here; but the trade is not much, as the river is navigable only at high water. Pop. 2692.

INDIANS, the name usually given by Europeans and European settlers in N. America, to the Red men, who were the aborigines of the country. They differ exceedingly both from the tribes living in immediate neighbourhood of Hudson's Bay, Baffin's Bay, the N. Ocean, and Bhering's Straits; and from the tribes occupying Central America, who were exterminated by the Spaniards. And both these and the Red men seem to have been vastly inferior to a race whose remains are found scattered most numerously through the W. and central parts of N. America. The colour of these red tribes is characteristic; as are the general forms of their heads; the manner in which the hair and beard grow, or are wanting; and their languages, which, though differing from each other considerably, are all marked by the power of agglutination of words, in order to express complex and remote notions, just as the Chinese do in their written language. The form of government was the simplest possible, being a sort of hereditary patriarchal government most usually. In religion, although they seemed to have some impressions of the spirituality of God, they had a kind of fetishism also, and held the pretended priests, or medicine men, in great veneration. Their habits were exceedingly crafty and ferocious; and their bodily powers and senses cultivated by careful training, to the degree in which they are usually possessed by animals alone. Their frequent hostilities were conducted as is usual amongst petty barbarous tribes; and any who happened to be captured by the victors, were most cruelly tortured, and bore their tortures with the most stoical or stupid fortitude. From the time of the first settlement of Europeans in America, a process of extermination has been carried on against them. Being compelled to retire before the European method and weapons of war, they put into exercise all their cunning, and all their savageness; but it was a vain and idle contest. Attempts have been made by earnest individuals and others, to civilize and Christianize them, but European cupidity, and vice, and disease, and superior craft and power, have counteracted such well-meant efforts, and gradually sunk the Red men lower than the state of savage life, and has tricked them out of their possessions, or driven them away by violence, or swept away and exterminated large and numerous tribes. The principal tribes now existing are settled in the Indian Territory; and consist of the Chickasaws, the Choctaws, the Creeks, the Seminoles, the Chickasaws, the Osages, the Shawnees, the Delawares, the Ojibwas, the Sioux, the Blackfeet, &c. &c., in number about 350,000.

INDICANT, a. [indico, Lat.] showing, discovering, or pointing out. In Physic, pointing out a remedy.

To INDICATE, v. a. [indico, Lat.] to show; to point out.

INDICATION, s. a mark, token, sign, or symptom of something which is hidden, or not plain of itself; a discovery or information of something that was not known. In Medicine, a symptom discovering or directing what is to be done to cure a distemper.

INDICATIVE, a. showing, discovering, or pointing out. In Grammar, the mode of a verb which is used to signify a simple declaration, or judgment, in accessory as well as in principal sentences.

INDICATIVELY, ad. in such a manner as shows, declares, discovers, or betokens.

To INDICT, (indite) v. a. to charge a person with a crime, by a written accusation, before a judge.

INDICTION, s. [indictio, Fr.] a declaration or proclamation. In Chronology, the indictions were a revolution of 15 years, which were separately reckoned as, indiction 1, indiction 2, &c. up to 15, when they recommence with 1. By the best authorities the year 313, A. D., is fixed on as the first indiction. There were 4 different kinds of indiction, that of Constantinople, the Imperial and the Pontifical indictions, and that used by the Parlement of Paris. It seems to have originated in the periods for paying certain tribute or taxes.

INDICTMENT, (indictment) s. a bill, or an accusation for an offence, exhibited unto jurors; a bill, or declaration, made in form of law for the benefit of the commonwealth.

INDIES, EAST. See INDIA.

INDIES, WEST, the general name given to the various groups and chains of islands occupying and enclosing the wide gulf between N. and S. America. They are called the Antilles by the French; and, by our own geographers, the smaller islands are known as the Bahamas, the Virgin Islands, the Windward, and the Leeward Islands. Hayti is independent; Cuba and some small islands lying close to its shores, with Porto Rico, belong to Spain; Guadalupe and Martinique belong to France; Santa Cruz and St. Thomas to Denmark; a few small islands near the coast of Venezuela, with St. Martin, Gustavia, Saba, and St. Eustatius, to Holland; and almost all the rest to England, Jamaica and Trinidad being its largest islands. See under the respective names.

INDIFFERENCE, INDIFFERENCY, s. [in and differo, Lat.] freedom from bias or influence; impartiality, or freedom from prejudice; want of affection; unconcernedness.

INDIFFERENT, a. not determined on either side; unconcerned or regardless; not having such a difference as to oblige us to determine on either side; neither commanded nor forbidden; neither good nor bad; passable; tolerable.

INDIFFERENTLY, ad. without distinction, or inclining more to one than another; without wish, aversion, or emotion; not well; tolerably; passably.

INDIGENCE, INDIGENCY, s. [indigeo, Lat.] want of the comforts of life; poverty.

INDIGENOUS, a. [indu and geno, Lat.] native; originally produced or born in a country.

INDIGENT, a. [indigeo, Lat.] in want of the comforts of life, or of money to procure them; void; empty; wanting.

INDIGEST, INDIGESTED, a. [in and digero, Lat.] not separated in any order; not formed or brought to maturity; not well considered or methodized; not concocted, or altered so as to be fit for nourishment.

INDIGESTIBLE, a. not to be altered in the stomach, or made fit for nourishment, applied to food. Not to be methodized, reduced to order, or added to the improvements of the mind, applied to ideas or sentiments.

INDIGESTION, s. [Fr.] in Medicine, a disorder in the stomach, whereby it is rendered incapable of altering the food it contains, so as to make it fit for nourishment; called also dyspepsia.

INDIGETES, s. [Lat.] a name which the ancient pagans gave to some of their gods.

INDIGATION, s. [digilus, Lat.] the act of pointing out or showing, as by the finger.

INDIGNANT, a. [in and dignus, Lat.] inflamed at once with anger and disdain.

INDIGNATION, s. anger joined with contempt, abhorrence, disdain, and aversion.

INDIGNITY, s. a reproachful or disgraceful action, wherein the rank or character of a person is disregarded, and receives a very great injury.

INDIGO, s. in Dyeing and Commerce, a rich dark blue colour, produced by a plant cultivated very extensively in all tropical countries that have been settled by Europeans. The plant is called in the East ani, and is of the pea kind; it yields the colouring matter either by a fermentative process, or else on being subjected to the action of boiling water. It forms a large item in the commerce of England, and is used in printing calicoes chiefly.

INDIRECT, a. [in and directus, Lat.] not straight or in a right line. Figuratively, round about, or not coming immediately to the point; not fair, honest, or open.

INDIRECTION, s. a round-about manner of coming to a point; dishonest practice; a secret or oblique artifice or intention to deceive.

INDIRECTLY, ad. without coming at once to the point in hand; in an artful, oblique, or round-about manner; unfairly; not in an honest manner; not rightly.

INDIRECTNESS, s. obliqueness; the quality of not being in a straight line; unfairness.

INDISCERNIBLE, a. not to be perceived by the eye or mind.

INDISCERNIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be perceived.

INDISCERNIBILITY, s. the quality of not being capable of having its parts separated, or of being destroyed by dissolution.

INDISCERNIBLE, a. not capable of having its parts separated from each other.

INDISCREET, a. [indiscret, Fr.] injudicious; imprudent; rash; inconsiderate.

INDISCREETLY, ad. without making a proper choice; without judgment or consideration; rashly.

INDISCRETION, s. [Fr.] weakness of conduct; imprudence; inconsideration, or want of judgment.

INDISCRIMINATE, a. [in and discrimen, Lat.] not carrying any mark of difference, without making any difference or distinction.

INDISCRIMINATELY, ad. without difference or distinction.

INDISPENSABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be forborne or excused; necessary.

INDISPENSABLENESS, s. the state of a thing which cannot be excused, omitted, or forborne; necessity.

INDISPENSABLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be excused by any authority; not to be forborne; absolutely necessary.

To INDISPOSE, (the s in this word and its derivatives is pron. like z, v. a. [indisposeo, Fr.] to make unfit, with for; to makeaverse, with to; to disorder or make unfit by disease. To affect with a slight disorder, applied to health. To make unfavourable, with to and disorder.

INDISPOSEDNESS, s. a state of unfitness, or want of inclination; a state of health lessened by a slight disorder.

INDISPOSITION, s. [Fr.] a tendency to sickness, or a slight disorder; want of inclination; aversion or dislike.

INDISPUTABLE, (sometimes accented, together with its derivatives, on the second syllable,) a. so evident as to admit no dispute or controversy.

INDISPUTABLENESS, s. the state of being so evident as not to admit of dispute; certainty.

INDISPUTABLY, ad. in a manner so evident as not to admit of dispute; without opposition.

INDISSOLVABLE, a. not capable of having its parts separated from each other. Not to be broken; binding for ever, applied to bonds or contracts.

INDISSOLUBILITY, s. [indissolubilité, Fr.] the state of the particles of a body which cohere so closely as not to be separated.

INDISSOLUBLE, a. [in and dissolveo, Lat.] not to be separated; strongly cohering; binding; obliging; firm; stable; not subject to change or alteration.

INDISSOLUBLENES, s. the quality of resisting a separation of its parts.

INDISSOLUBLY, ad. in a manner resisting all separation; never ceasing to oblige.

INDISTINCT, a. [in and distinguo, Lat.] not marked, or different, so as to be separated or discerned; confused; not discerning exactly.

INDISTINCTION, s. want of distinguishing or perceiving the difference between things; confusion or uncertainty.

INDISTINCTLY, ad. confusedly; not to be perceived plainly.

INDISTINCTNESS, s. confusion; uncertainty; obscurity.

INDISTURBANCE, s. calmness; freedom from any violent emotion; great tranquillity.

To INDITE, v. a. See TO INDICT.

INDIVIDUAL, a. [individuel, Fr.] separate from others of the same species; single; not to be divided.

INDIVIDUAL, s. a single person.

INDIVIDUALITY, s. separate or distinct existence.

INDIVIDUALLY, ad. without any distinction or difference; numerically; not separably.

To INDIVIDUATE, v. a. [in and divido, Lat.] to distinguish from others of the same species; to make single; to communicate to several in a distinct or separate manner.

INDIVIDUATION, s. that which makes an individual; separate existence.

INDIVIDUITY, s. the state of being an individual; the state of being what one was before; separate existence.

INDIVISIBILITY, INDIVISIBleness, (the s in these and the two following words is pronounced like z), s. the state which can admit of no more division.

INDIVISIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be broken into more parts; not to be separated into smaller parts; incapable of being divided.

INDIVISIBLES, s. in Geometry, those indefinitely small elements or particles into which bodies may be ultimately resolved.

INDIVISIBLY, ad. so as it cannot be divided.

INDOCIBLE, a. not to be taught; not capable of receiving instruction.

INDOCILE, a. [in and doceo, Lat.] not receiving any benefit from, or regarding, instruction.

INDOCILITY, s. [indocilité, Fr.] the quality of disregarding or refusing instruction.

To INDOCTRINATE, v. a. [endoctriner, old Fr.] to instruct; to teach.

INDOCTRINATION, s. instruction; information.

INDOLENCE, INDOLENCE, s. [indolentia, Lat.] laziness, or a state wherein a person continues inactive, without any regard or attention to any thing he sees around him.

INDOLENT, a. [Fr.] inactive or lazy; without any regard to what passes around one.

INDOLENTLY, ad. inactively, and without regard to any thing around one.

To INDORSE, v. a. See TO ENDORSE.

To INDOW, (the ow is pronounced as in now), v. a. [in and dower, Fr.] to give a portion to. Figuratively, to enrich with gifts, either of fortune or nature. See TO ENDOW.

INDRAUGHT, (indraft), s. an opening in the land into which the sea flows; an inlet or passage inwards.

INDRE, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Indre, Loire et Cher, Sarthe, Maine et Loire, and Loire et Cher. It is above 50 miles in each direction; and is generally slightly undulating or level in its surface. The river whence it is named is its chief stream; but beside it, it is watered by numerous rivers and tributaries of rivers of less importance. Corn, wine, hemp, timber, cattle, and sheep, are its chief products and exports. It has also some mineral wealth, iron in particular. There are also found all kinds of stone for building, statuary, &c. &c. Châteauroux is its capital. Pop. about 300,000.

INDRE ET LOIRE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Indre, Loire et Cher, Sarthe, Maine et Loire, and Vienne. It is about 70 miles long, and 55 broad, and it is very level. The Loire, the Cher, the Indre, &c. &c. are its rivers. Lime and some building stones, &c. are its only natural treasures. Agriculture is pursued with energy and success. All kinds of grain, vegetables, fruits, &c. abound. Wine, silk, &c. are also greatly attended to. It has some manufactures of value and importance in the larger towns. Tours is its principal place. Pop. about 325,000.

To INDRENCHE, v. a. to soak; to drown.

INDRI, s. in Zoology, an animal of the lemur tribe, which inhabits Madagascar.

INDUBIOUS, a. without doubting or suspecting; certain; positive.

INDUBITABLE, a. [in and dubito, Lat.] so certain or evident as to admit of no doubt or suspicion of its truth.

INDUBITABLY, ad. in a manner so evident and certain as to admit of no doubt.

INDUBITATE.

To INDUCE, v. a. [in and duco, Lat.] to persuade; to prevail on.

To offer by way of induction, or by way of consequence drawn from several particulars, applied to reasoning. To inculcate or enforce by argument; to produce as an argument or instance; to bring into view; to introduce.

INDUCEMENT, s. a motive which allures or persuades to any thing.

INDUCER, a. a persuader; one that influences.

To INDUCT, v. a. to put into actual possession of a benefice.

INDUCTION, s. in Logic, a kind of argument, by which, from particular phenomena, general laws are established; the method of discovering propositions of the greatest extent and generality, in opposition to deduction, which is the evolution of special propositions from those of a greater extent. It also signifies, in Natural Philosophy, both the process of collecting and combining facts, for the discovery of a law, and the discovery itself so made and certified. In Law, the act of giving possession of a benefice to an incumbent.

INDUCTIVE, a. contributing, leading, or persuasive; capable of inferring or including. Inductive philosophy, the method of inquiry by which alone true sciences can be formed. It was first eulogized and vindicated, in contrast with all other methods, by Lord Bacon in his Novum Organon. But it is the process, which all who have studied phenomena with any native earnestness, have adopted. It has been neglected only by artificial students. The chief feature of this method is not the collection of facts, but the principle on which they are collected; and not the mere combination of them, but the combining of them in such a way, as that one general fact should be pointed to by all. The scientific inquiry which Lord Bacon taught, was "the forethoughtful question," of which he said, that it was "half of the knowledge sought."

To INDUE, v. a. [induo, Lat.] to invest; to communicate or give a quality to.

To INDULGE, v. a. [indulgeo, Lat.] to gratify or grant the desires of another as a favour; to favour or foster; to give indulgence.

INDULGENCE, INDULGENCY, s. [Fr.] compliance with or granting the desires and requests of others through fondness; forbearance, or connivance at faults; a favour granted. In the Romish Church, the remission of punishment due to a sin, granted by the church, and supposed to save the sinner from purgatory.

INDULGENT, a. [indulgeo, Lat.] kind; gentle; complying with the requests, or gratifying the desires, of another, through fondness; mild, or favourable.

INDULGENTLY, ad. with kind compliance, and fond gratification; without severity or censure.

INDULT, INDULTO, s. [Ital. and Fr.] a special favour or privilege granted either to a community, or private person, by the pope's bull, by which they are licensed to do or obtain something contrary to the common laws.

To INDULATE, v. n. [indulero, from durus, Lat.] to grow hard. —v. a. to make hard; to harden the mind.

INDURATION, s. the state of growing hard; the act of making hard; hardness of heart.

INDUS, a great river of Hindustan, called by the natives Sinde or Sindeh. It is formed of about ten principal streams, which take their rise in the great mountain chains of N. India and Persia. It flows, after a course of about 1500 miles, into the Indian Ocean near the Gulf of Cutch. It is a fine, deep, and navigable river, for vessels of any burden; the different branches are also most of them navigable to a great extent; its mouth, however, is so choked up with sand, that no ship can enter it.

Moulton, Attuck, Tatta, and Hyderabad, are great cities by which it passes.

INDUSTRIOUS, a. [industrius, Lat.] active and constant in manual labour, business, or study.

INDUSTRIOUSLY, ad. with constant and intense application of mind, or exercise of body; with great care, diligence, and assiduity.

INDUSTRY, s. [industria, Lat.] diligence; constant application of the mind, or exercise of the body.

TO INEBRIATE, v. a. [inebria, from ebrius, Lat.] to make a person drunk with strong liquors.—v. n. to grow drunk; to be intoxicated. Figuratively, to intoxicate with praise, grandeur, or success.

INEBRIATION, s. drunkenness; intoxication.

INEFFABILITY, s. the quality of being beyond the power of language.

INEFFABLE, a. [in and effor, Lat.] not to be spoken, uttered, or expressed.

INEFFABLY, ad. in such a manner, or in so high a degree, as not to be expressed by words.

INEFFECTIVE, a. [ineffectif, Fr.] that can produce no effect.

INEFFECTUAL, a. not to have power sufficient to produce its proper effect; weak; without power, or operating in vain.

INEFFECTUALLY, ad. to no purpose; without effect.

INEFFECTUALNESS, s. want of power to produce its proper effect.

INEFFICACIOUS, (ineffikashious) a. [in and efficio, Lat.] unable to produce any effect; weak; feeble; acting to no purpose.

INEFFICACY, s. want of power to produce an effect; the quality of operating in vain, or to no purpose.

INELEGANCE, INELEGANCY, s. meanness; want of address.

INELEGANT, a. [in and elegans, Lat.] not nice; mean; detestable.

INELOQUENT, a. [in and eloquens, Lat.] not speaking with ease, volubility, or the flowers of rhetoric; not persuasive.

INEPT, a. [in and aptus, Lat.] unfit, or unsuitable to any end or purpose; useless; trifling; foolish.

INEPTITUDE, s. unfitness, or unsuitableness to any purpose or end.

INEPTLY, ad. in a trifling manner; unsuitably or foolishly.

INEQUALITY, s. [in and equalitas, Lat.] the difference between two or more things compared together; disproportion to any office, state, or purpose; difference of rank or station.

INERRABILITY, s. the quality of not being subject to error.

INERRABLE, a. not subject to error or mistake.

INERRABLENESS, s. the quality of not being liable to err.

INERRABLY, ad. without possibility of erring; infallibly.

INERRINGLY, ad. without error, mistake, or deviation either from truth or right.

INERT, a. [iners, Lat.] dull; motionless; moving with difficulty; sluggish.

INERTIA, s. [Lat.] in Mechanics, a property of matter, whence it happens that if a body is at rest it will continue so for ever, unless some cause, not in itself, sets it in motion; and so, also, if a body is in motion, it will move for ever in the direction in which it is at any moment proceeding, if no external cause divert it, or bring it to a stand.

INERTLY, ad. sluggishly, or dully.

INESCATION, s. [esca, Lat.] the act of baiting.

INESTIMABLE, a. [in and estimatio, Lat.] so valuable as not to be rated; exceeding any price.

INEVITABILITY, s. the quality of not being possible to be avoided.

INEVITABLE, a. [in, e, and vito, Lat.] not to be escaped or avoided.

INEXCUSABLE, (the s in this and the following words is pronounced like z.) a. [in and excuso, Lat.] not to be excused, or not palliated by apology.

INEXCUSABLENESS, s. enormity of crime beyond forgiveness or palliation.

INEXCUSABLY, ad. to a degree of guilt or folly beyond excuse.

INEXHAUSTIBLE, a. that cannot be evaporated, or consumed in vapour.

INEXHAUSTED, a. not emptied; not spent.

INEXHAUSTIBLE, a. not to be emptied or all drawn out; not to be entirely spent.

INEXISTENCE, s. want of being or existence.

INEXISTENT, a. not having being; not to be found in nature.

INEXORABLE, a. [in and exoro, Lat.] not to be moved by entreaty.

INEXPEDIENCE, INEXPEDIENT, s. want of fitness or propriety; unsuitableness to time, place, or circumstance.

INEXPEDIENT, a. improper, unnecessary, or not productive of any advantage.

INEXPERIENCE, s. [Fr.] want of experience, or sufficient knowledge.

INEXPERIENCED, a. not having personally tried or had experience of.

INEXPERT, a. [in and expertus, Lat.] unskilful for want of custom or use.

INEXPIABLE, a. [in and expio, Lat.] not to be atoned or made amends for; not to be pacified or reconciled by atonement.

INEXPIABLY, ad. to a degree beyond atonement.

INEXPLICABLE, a. [Fr.] so difficult as not to be explained.

INEXPLICABLY, ad. in a manner not to be made plain.

INEXPRESSIBLE, a. not to be told, uttered, or conveyed by words.

INEXPRESSIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be uttered or conveyed by words.

INEXPUGNABLE, a. [in and expugno, Lat.] not to be taken by assault, or subdued.

INEXTINGUISHABLE, a. not to be quenched, applied to fire. Not to be satisfied, applied to desires.

INEXTRICABLE, a. [Fr. in and extrico, Lat.] not to be disentangled; not to be explained, or cleared from obscurity.

INEXTRICABLY, ad. in a manner not to be explained; so as not to be disentangled.

To INEYE, v. n. to inoculate, by inserting the bud of one tree into the stock of another.

INFALLIBILITY, INFALLIBLENESS, s. [infallibilit, Fr. in and fallio, Lat.] the quality of not being subject to be deceived or mistaken.

INFALLIBLE, a. [Fr.] incapable of being mistaken or deceived. Certain, or never failing, applied to medicine.

INFALLIBLY, ad. without danger or deceit, or possibility of being mistaken; certainly.

TO INFAME, v. a. [in and fama, Lat.] to defame; to censure publicly for the commission of a crime.

INFAMOUS, a. notorious, or publicly branded with guilt; of a bad character.

INFAMOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to be known to be guilty of a crime or misdemeanour; shamefully; scandalously.

INFAMOUSNESS, INFAMY, s. loss of character by crimes; disgrace; discredit; reproach. In Law, a term which extends to forgery, gross cheats, &c., by which a person is rendered incapable of being a witness or juror, even though he is pardoned for his crimes.

INFANCY, s. [in and fans, Lat.] the first part of life. In Law, the period of minority or pupillage. Figuratively, the beginning or first rise of any thing.

INFANGTHEF, HINGFANGTHEFT, INFANGTHEOF, [in fangen, and theof, Sax.] in Law, a privilege granted to lords of certain manors, to judge any thief taken within their see.

INFANT, s. by naturalists, a child from its birth to its seventh year. In Law, any one who has not completed his 21st year.

INFANT, a. not mature; in a state of initial imperfection.

INFANTA, s. [Span.] a title of honour given to a princess of the royal blood in Spain or Portugal.

INFANTE, s. [Span.] a son of the kings of Spain or Portugal.

INFANTICIDE, [infans and cedo, Lat.] one who kills an infant. This crime has always prevailed to some extent amongst nations in a state of barbarism; and has been tolerated in some nations that had advanced to a high degree of civilization. It is now, in all European countries, owing solely to the change of general feeling produced by the gradual progress of Christian truth, regarded with such horror, that nothing but insanity, or the hope of escaping detection in other crime, is known to lead to it.

INFANTILE, a. [infans, Lat.] belonging to the state of an infant.

INFANTRY, s. [infanterie, Fr.] the foot soldiers of an army.
INFARCTION, s. [in and farcio, Lat.] a stuffing. In Medicine, a constipation.

To INFATUATE, v. a. [infatus, from fatuus, Lat.] to make foolish; to deprive of understanding.

INFATUATION, s. the act of making foolish, or depriving of understanding.

INFEASIBLE, (infezible) a. not to be performed or practised.
 To INFECT, v. a. [infecio, from in and facio, Lat.] to disorder by some noxious qualities; to corrupt with bad insinuations.

INFECTION, s. [infectio, Lat.] in Nosology, the communication of a disease by means of effluvia, or particles, with which the atmosphere in the vicinity of putrefying animal or vegetable substances, or persons already infected, is charged.

INFECTIOUS, (infectious) a. causing distempers by some noxious quality or effluvia.

INFECTIOUSLY, (infectiously) ad. operating by infection.
INFECTIOUSNESS, (infectiousness) s. the quality of communicating distempers by noxious qualities or unwholesome effluvia.

INFECTIVE, a. having the power of causing distempers by noxious qualities or vapours.

INFECUND, a. [in and fecundus, Lat.] unfruitful; barren.

INFECUNDITY, s. barrenness; want of a power to produce its like.

INFELICITY, s. [in and felicitas, Lat.] a state destitute of all the comforts and pleasures to render life agreeable; unhappy.

To INFERR, v. a. [in and fero, Lat.] in its primary sense, to bring on. In Logic, to conclude a proposition to be true, from one already so established.

INFERENCE, s. [Fr.] in Logic, a conclusion drawn from previous arguments or propositions.

INFERRIBLE, a. deducible from propositions which went before.

INFERRIOR, a. lower in place, station, condition of life, value, or excellency; subordinate. Inferior, in Astronomy, is applied to those planets whose orbits are included by that of our earth, as are those of Mercury and Venus. Inferior conjunction of a planet, is that which takes place when the body is between us and the sun, and in the same sign, degree, &c. of the zodiac. Such conjunctions can only happen to those planets that are nearer to the sun than our earth is.

INFERRIOR, s. [Lat.] one in a lower rank or station than another.

INFERRORITY, s. [inferioritè, Fr.] a lower state of dignity, worth, or excellency.

INFERNAL, a. [Fr.] belonging to hell.

INFERTILE, a. [Fr.] not producing or yielding any fruit; unfruitful; barren.

INFERTILITY, s. [infertilitè, Fr.] unfruitfulness; barrenness; want of power to produce.

To INFEST, v. a. [infesto, from in and festus, Lat.] to harass, trouble, or plague.

INFESTIVITY, s. want of cheerfulness.

INFEDUATION, s. [feudum, low Lat.] in Law, the act of putting a person into possession of a fee or estate.

INFIDEL, s. [in and fidelis, Lat.] one who rejects or will not assent to the truth of revelation, or the great principles of religion.

INFIDELITY, s. want of faith or reliance in Providence; disbelief of Christianity. Treachery, or violation of one's fidelity.

INFINITE, a. [in and finis, Lat.] having no bounds or limits. Perfect, so as to admit of no defect or addition, applied to Divine attributes. Infinitely or very large, used in common discourse.

INFINITELY, ad. without limits or bounds.

INFINITENESS, s. the quality of admitting no bounds or limits.

INFINITE-SIMAL, a. that is infinitely divided. In Mathematics, relating to inconceivably small quantities of any kind. In Homœopathic Medicine, an inconceivably small dose.

INFINITIVE, a. in Grammar, that mode of a verb, which expresses its meaning in a substantive or adjective form, and not as an assertion.

INFINITUDE, s. any thing which has no bounds or limits; an inconceivable number.

INFINITY, s. boundlessness; endlessness; completeness in itself; the quality of being incapable of addition.

INFIRM, a. [in and firmus, Lat.] deprived of natural strength by age or sickness. Irresolute, applied to the mind. Not fit to support; not solid.

INFIRMARY, s. [infirmierie, Fr.] a place where lodging and board are provided for sick and wounded persons.

INFIRMITY, s. [infirmittè, Fr.] weakness of sex, age, temper, mind, or body.

INFIRMNESS, s. want of strength, applied to argument, understanding, or body.

To INFIX, v. a. [in and figo, Lat.] to drive or fasten in.

To INFLAME, v. a. [inflammo, from flamma, Lat.] to kindle or set bodies on fire. Figuratively, to excite or kindle desire; to magnify a person's faults. To provoke, or irritate, applied to the passions.—v. n. to grow hot, angry, and painful, by obstructed matter.

INFLAMMER, s. the thing or person that causes a painful sensation of heat in any part of the body; one that promotes quarrels, or sets friends at variance.

INFLAMMABILITY, s. the quality of catching fire. The quality of causing a painful sensation of heat, applied to obstructed matter in animal bodies. The quality of exciting the desires, or warming the passions, applied to the mind.

INFLAMMABLE, a. [Fr.] easy to be set on fire; capable of exciting the passions, or irritating the humours in an animal body.

INFLAMMABLENESS, s. the quality of easily catching fire; the quality of being easily excited or provoked.

INFLAMMATION, s. [inflammatio, Lat.] the act of setting on flame; the state of being in flame. In Surgery, that state of any organ, or part of the body, which to the eye appears enlarged and red, and is to the patient extremely hot and painful; a sort of partial but violent fever. The act of exciting any passion, desire, or fervour, in the mind.

INFLAMMATORY, a. having the power of causing an inflammation, applied to the fluids of the body. Having a tendency to alienate the minds of subjects, or cause an insurrection in a state.

To INFLATE, v. a. [in and flo, Lat.] to swell with wind; to fill or puff with breath. Figuratively, to swell or puff up with pride.

INFLATION, s. the state of being swelled with wind.

To INFLECT, v. a. [inflecto, from flecto, Lat.] to bend from a straight line. To change or vary. In Grammar, to vary or alter the form of a word; to decline.

INFLECTION, s. the act of bending; the act of turning or changing the direction of motion. A modulation or change from high to low, applied to the voice. The variation or change of the form of a word, applied to grammar.

INFLECTIVE, a. having the power of bending.

INFLEXIBILITY, INFLEXIBLENESS, (inflexibilitè, Fr.) stiffness, or the quality of resisting any attempt; a temper or disposition of mind not to be altered by prayers, entreaties, promises, or threatenings.

INFLEXIBLE, a. [in and flexibilis, Lat.] not to be bent or made crooked; not to be changed or altered; not to be prevailed on.

INFLEXIBLY, ad. without any cessation or remission; without being prevailed on to change or alter.

To INFLICT, v. a. [infligo, Lat.] to punish, or impose on as a punishment.

INFLECTER, s. he that punishes.

INFLECTION, s. the act of using punishments; the punishment imposed.

INFLECTIVE, a. [Fr.] executed, or imposed on as a punishment.

INFLORESCENCE, s. [in and floreo, Lat.] in Botany, the arrangement of the buds of a plant; as, the spike, the raceme, the umbel, &c. See those words.

INFLUENCE, s. [Fr.] any power which acts on the mind, and biases or directs it.

To INFLUENCE, v. a. to act upon so as to impel, direct, or modify; to operate on the mind, so as to bias or direct it to any particular end or action.

INFLUENT, a. [influens, from influo, Lat.] exerting influence or impulsive power.

INFLUENTIAL, a. exerting influence or power.

INFLUENZA, s. [Ital.] in Physic, a kind of epidemical and violent cold, lasting for various lengths of time, and succeeded by great weakness; frequently fatal to aged persons and infants.

INFLUX, s. [influxus, Lat.] the act of flowing into any thing. Infusion, applied to knowledge.

To INFOOLD, v. a. to wrap; to surround with the arms folded over each other; to embrace.

To INFOILATE, v. a. [in and folium, Lat.] to cover with leaves.

To INFORM, v. a. [informa, from forma, Lat.] to animate; to actuate with a soul or vital power; to instruct; to supply with new knowledge. In Law, to bring a charge or accusation against a person, used with against, and is generally applied to the discoveries made by an accomplice.—v. n. to give intelligence, or to discover a crime.

INFORMAL, a. in Law, out of form, not in due form.

INFORMANT, s. [Fr.] one who discovers or gives intelligence of a crime, or other matter; one who offers or exhibits an accusation.

INFORMATION, s. intelligence or instruction; the act of communicating something unknown before. In Law, it is nearly the same in the crown office as what in our other courts is called a declaration. It is sometimes brought by the king, or his attorney-general, or the clerk of the crown office; and at other times by a private person, who informs or sues, as well for the king as himself, upon the breach of some popular statute, in which a penalty is given to the party who will sue for it.

INFORMER, s. one who gives intelligence, or communicates new knowledge to the mind; one who discovers the crimes or offences of another before a magistrate.

INFORMIDABLE, a. [in and formido, Lat.] not to be feared or dreaded.

INFORMITY, s. [in and forma, Lat.] want of shape or form. INFORMOUS, a. shapeless; of no regular form.

INFORTUNATE, a. [in and fortuna, Lat.] See UNFORTUNATE.

INFRACTION, s. [in and frango, Lat.] the act of breaking or violating.

INFRAINGIBLE, a. not to be broken.

INFREQUENCY, s. [in and frequentia, Lat.] uncommonness; rarity, applied to things which seldom happen, or are seldom heard, seen, or done.

INFREQUENT, a. rare, seldom happening.

To INFRINGE, v. a. [infringo, from frango, Lat.] to violate or break, applied to laws or contracts. To destroy or hinder.

INFRINGEMENT, s. the act of violating or breaking laws or treaties.

INFRINGER, s. he that acts contrary to any law or treaty.

INFUNDIBULIFORM, a. [infundibulum and forma, Lat.] of the shape of a funnel.

INFURIATE, a. [furio, Lat.] enraged; raging.

INFUSCATION, s. [infusco, Lat.] the act of darkening or blackening.

To INFUSE, (infuse) v. a. [in and fundo, Lat.] to pour in. Figuratively, to instil; to inspire; to animate; to influence, applied to the mind. In Medicine, to steep or soak in any liquor with a gentle heat.

INFUSIBLE, (infusible) a. that may be instilled, communicated, or inspired, applied to the mind. Incapable of being melted or dissolved, applied to bodies.

INFUSION, s. the act of pouring in; the act of instilling or inspiring. In Physic, the act of steeping ingredients in any liquor with a moderate warmth; also the liquor made by steeping ingredients.

INFUSIVE, a. having the power of animating or influencing.

INFUSORIA, s. [Lat.] See ANIMALCULE.

INGATESTONE, Essex. It consists of one street, and is 23 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 856.

INGATHERING, s. the act of getting in a harvest.

INGE, (inge, Sax.) in the names of places, signifies a meadow.

To INGENUATE, v. a. [in and gemitio, Lat.] to double the same thing over again; to repeat.

To INGENER, v. a. See To ENGENDER.

INGENDERER, s. he that begets.

INGENERATE, INGENERATED, a. [in and genero, Lat.] born or bred with or within a person.

INGENIOUS, a. [ingenium, Lat.] having sense to invent or execute in a skillful manner.

INGENUOUSLY, ad. in a manner that discovers great invention, skill, and art.

INGENUOUSNESS, s. strength of imagination to invent, and dexterity to execute.

INGENITE, a. [in and geno, Lat.] born with one; implanted, or innate.

INGENUITY, s. [ingénuité, Fr.] acuteness of mind in invention, and skill or art in executing.

INGENUOUS, a. [ingenuus, Lat.] having candour, openness, or sincerity of mind; free from dissimulation.

INGENUOUSLY, ad. in an open, fair, candid, and undissembled manner.

INGENUOUSNESS, s. candour; freedom from dissimulation.

To INGEST, v. a. [in and gero, Lat.] to cast or include in the stomach.

INGESTION, s. the act of casting or including in the stomach.

INGLOARIOUS, a. [in and gloria, Lat.] without honour, fame, or glory.

INGLOARIOUSLY, ad. not reputably; dishonourably; in a mean manner.

INGOT, s. [lingot, Fr.] a mass of metal, generally applied to gold and silver.

To INGRAFF, v. a. to propagate trees by grafting; to plant the sprig of one tree in the stock of another. To fix deep or settle, applied to the mind.

INGRAFTMENT, s. the act of inserting the sprig of one tree into the stock of another; the sprig ingrafted.

INGRATE, INGRATEFUL, a. [in and gratus, Lat.] not acknowledging favours received, or returning thanks for them. Unpleasant or disagreeable, applied to any thing which affects the senses.

To INGRATULATE, (ingratiulate) v. a. [in and gratia, Lat.] to greet into a person's favour.

INGRATITUDE, s. [Fr.] the vice of being insensible to favours received, and sometimes applied to the retribution or returning evil for good.

INGREDIENT, s. [ingredior, Lat.] that which makes up a composition; generally applied to simples in Medicine.

INGRESS, s. entrance; the act or liberty of going into a place.

In Astronomy, applied to one of the inferior planets when entering upon the sun's disk; to the sun, when he enters into any sign of the ecliptic.

INGRESSION, s. the act of entering.

To INGRESS, v. a. See To ENGRESS.

INGUINAL, a. [Fr. inguen, Lat.] belonging to or situated in the groin.

To INGULE, INGULEPH, v. a. to swallow up in a deep cavity; to cast into a gulf or abyss.

INGULPHUS, an abbot of Croyland, about the time of William I., who is said to have been secretary to that king, when he was Duke of Normandy; and to have gone on pilgrimage to Palestine before he became a religious. A History of Croyland Abbey, which contains many particulars of English history, is ascribed to Ingulphus; but it is not regarded as genuine now.

INGURIGATION, s. the act of swallowing rapaciously.

INHABILE, a. [Fr.] unskilful; unready; unfit; unqualified.

To INHABIT, v. a. [in and habito, Lat.] to dwell in; to possess as an inhabitant.

INHABITABLE, a. capable of affording or fit for habitation.

INHABITANT, s. one who dwells or resides for a time in a place.

INHABITATION, s. a house or dwelling-place; the act of dwelling in a place; the state of being inhabited.

INHABITER, s. one who dwells in a place.

To INHALE, v. a. [in and halo, Lat.] to draw in with the air or one's breath.

INHARMONIOUS, a. not harmonious, musical, or of an agreeable sound.

To INHERE, v. n. [in and hæreo, Lat.] to exist in something else.

INHERENT, a. existing inseparably in something; innate, or inborn.

To INHERIT, v. a. [enheriter, Fr.] to possess by right of succession from another. Figuratively, to gain possession; to possess or enjoy.

INHERITABLE, a. transmissible by inheritance; obtainable by succession.

INHERITANCE, s. any thing which a person possesses or succeeds to as to the next of blood, or heir; possession or enjoyment. The possession of what belonged to a parent, or other relation, after their death.

INHERITOR, s. an heir, or one who succeeds to what another enjoyed after his death.

INHERITRESS, INHERITRIX, s. a woman who succeeds to the possessions of a relation after his death.

TO INHERSE, v. a. to enclose in a funeral monument.

INHESION, s. [in and hæres, Lat.] the existing in something.

TO INHIBIT, v. a. [in and habeo, Lat.] to restrain, hinder, repress, or check, applied to power. To forbid, applied to laws.

INHIBITION, s. [inhibeo, Lat.] a prohibition. In Commerce, an embargo. In Law, a writ from a superior to an inferior court, forbidding the judge to proceed in the cause depending before him.

TO INHOLD, v. a. to contain in itself.

INHOSPITABLE, a. affording no entertainment or kindness to strangers.

INHOSPITABLENESS, INHOSPITALITY, s. want of courtesy, kindness, or civility to strangers.

INHOSPITABLY, ad. in a manner not kind to strangers.

INHUMAN, a. [in and humanus, Lat.] wanting the kind, benevolent, and social affections, which adorn and support our species; savage; cruel; without compassion.

INHUMANITY, s. [inhumanité, Fr.] want of the kind, benevolent, compassionate, and social affections; cruelty; barbarity.

INHUMANLY, ad. in a manner inconsistent with kindness, compassion, charity, or other social affections.

TO INHUMATE, INHUME, v. a. [in and humus, Lat.] to inter, to bury, or put under the ground.

TO INJECT, v. a. [in and jacio, Lat.] to throw or dart in; to cast or throw up. In Medicine, to force any fluid, or other substance, into the vessels of the body.

INJECTION, s. the act of casting or throwing in. In Medicine, any liquors made to be thrown into the body by a syringe or other instrument. In Anatomy, the act of filling the vessels of a body with wax, or other substance, to show their shapes and ramifications.

INYMICAL, a. (sometimes pronounced as if accented on the third syllable,) unfriendly; unkind; hostile.

INIMITABILITY, s. the quality of not being to be imitated.

INIMITABLE, a. [in and imito, Lat.] above or beyond imitation; impossible to be copied.

INIMITABLY, ad. in a manner not to be imitated.

TO INJOIN, v. a. [injungo, Lat.] to command or enforce by superior authority.

INQUITOUS, a. inconsistent with justice or honesty; wicked.

INQUITY, s. [iniquitas, from in and æquitas, Lat.] opposition to, or breach of, the laws of justice and honesty. Sin, applied to the Divine laws.

INITIAL, (inshial) a. [initium, Lat.] placed at the beginning, applied to letters. Beginning or incipient; not complete or perfect; introductory to.

TO INITIATE, (inshiate) v. a. [inco, Lat.] to enter; to instruct in the first principles of an art; to place in a new state; to put into a new society.

INITIATE, (inshiate) a. strange, new, or not practised.

INITIATION, (inshidshon) s. the act of entering a person into any art or state.

INJUDICABLE, a. [in and judicio, Lat.] not cognizable by a judge.

INJUDICIAL, (injudshial) a. not according to the forms or practice of the law.

INJUDICIOUS, (injudshious) a. without judgment.

INJUDICIOUSLY, (injudshiously) ad. in a manner that discovers weakness or want of judgment.

INJUNCTION, s. [injungo, Lat.] the command or order of a superior. In Law, it is a writ founded upon an order in Chancery, either to give the plaintiff possession, or to stay proceedings in another court.

TO INJURE, v. a. [in and jus, Lat.] to hurt a person unjustly; to wrong, or deprive a person of his right; to annoy or disturb with any inconvenience.

INJURIOUS, a. unjust, or depriving a person of his right; guilty of wrong. Figuratively, causing mischief; reproachful, including the idea of not being deserved; containing scandal.

INJURIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to appear unjust; wrongfully.

INJURIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being mischievous, or committing an injury.

INJURY, s. a violation of the rights of another. Figuratively, detriment or mischief arising from want of judgment; damage; scandalous expressions.

INJUSTICE, s. any act done against the laws or the dictates of honesty.

INK, s. [encre, Fr.] a coloured fluid used for writing on paper or parchment. Printers' ink, is a kind of black, or other coloured pigment, mixed with drying oil, and used in printing.

TO INK, v. a. to black or daub with ink.

INKHORN, s. any vessel containing ink.

INKLE, s. a kind of narrow fillet or tape.

INKLING, s. [inkallen, Belg.] a hint; whisper; intimation.

INKMAKER, s. he who makes ink.

INKY, a. blotted or covered with ink; black as ink.

INLAND, a. lying up a country at a distance from the sea.

INLAND, s. the midland or inward parts of a country.

INLANDER, s. a person who lives in a country at a distance from the sea.

TO INLAPIDATE, v. a. [in and lapto, Lat.] to burn to stone. — v. n. to grow or become stony.

TO INLAWE, v. a. to clear of outlawry or attainder.

TO INLAY, v. a. to diversify with substances or woods of different colours, which are let in and glued within the ground of a thing; to adorn with various colours, representing inlaid work.

INLET, s. a passage; a place whereby a thing may find entrance.

INLY, a. in the mind; within the breast; secret.

INLY, ad. internally; within; in the bosom or heart.

INMATE, s. in Law, a lodger, or person admitted to dwell for money in a person's house, passing in and out by the same door.

INMOST, a. [superlative of in,] farthest within, or remotest from the surface.

INN, s. [Sax.] a house where travellers are supplied with lodging, &c. for themselves, and stabling, &c. for their horses. Inns of Court, the colleges for students in common law.

INN, a river of Germany, which rises in the country of the Grisons, Switzerland, runs through Tyrol and Bavaria, (passing by Inspruck, Ratenburg, Kuffstein, Branau, and other towns,) and falls into the Danube near Passaw. Also a river of the archduchy of Austria, which runs into the Danube near Efferding.

TO INN, v. a. to house or put under cover, applied to husbandry. — v. n. to put up or lodge at an inn.

INNATE, INNATED, a. [in and nascor, Lat.] inborn; born within; implanted. Innate ideas, or better, connatural ideas, in Metaphysics, a mode of representing ideas, which, owing to the prevalent incorrect use of the word, originated considerable confusion and controversy, which has not yet wholly ceased. See IDEA.

INNATENESS, s. the quality of being born in a person, and making a part of his nature.

INNAVIGABLE, a. [in and navigabilis, Lat.] not to be sailed upon; not to be passed in a ship.

INNER, a. [the comparative degree of in: the superlative is inmost, or innermost,] applied to the mind, internal. Applied to situation, more from the surface than the thing compared.

INNERMOST, a. [superlative of in, which has likewise inmost,] at the greatest distance from the surface or beginning.

INNHOLDER, s. a person who keeps an inn.

INNING, s. the state of a person at a game, who goes in or plays first. In Law, used in the plural, for lands recovered from the sea.

INNKEEPER, s. one who keeps a public-house, where travellers may meet with provision and lodging.

INNOCENCE, INNOCENCY, s. [Fr. innocentia, Lat.] a state of mind which has not been tainted by the commission of any crime; purity from any injurious action; harmlessness.

INNOCENT, a. [in and noceo, Lat.] harmless; free from mischief, or any particular guilt.

INNOCENT, s. one who is free from guilt or harm. Figuratively, an idiot, or one who is foolish.

INNOCENT, the name assumed by 13 pontiffs of Rome, the second of whom was opposed by an antipope, Anacletus, and on his death by another styled Victor IV., and by the teaching of Arnaldo da Brescia, and the violence of his partisans; and died in 1143: and the third, was that pope who attained the greatest power in England ever enjoyed by the head of the Roman Church. He was animated by the same resolution that fired Hildebrand, (see GREGORY VII.), but he was far more successful: he maintained his right to nominate the emperor of Germany; he preached a crusade, which, though it did not save the Holy Sepulchre, gained for him the supremacy over the Greek Church; he laid both France and England under interdicts, when the monarchs refused to obey him; and obtained a most mean and disgraceful submission from John: he also excited the martial fanaticism of Europe against the peaceful inhabitants of the valleys of Piedmont, whose purer faith was most hateful heresy in his eyes; and he died in 1216, having held the chair of St. Peter for 18 years. There was an anti-pope set up unsuccessfully against Alexander III., who assumed the title of Innocent III., in 1178.

INNOCENTLY, ad. without intending any harm or mischief; without guilt; with simplicity, arising from weakness of understanding.

INNOCENTS' DAY, in the Ecclesiastical Calendar, the name of a feast celebrated on the 28th day of December, in commemoration of the infants murdered by Herod.

INNOCUOUS, a. harmless in its effects.

INNOCUOUSLY, ad. without any mischievous effects.

INNOCUOUSNESS, s. harmlessness.

To INNOVATE, v. a. [innovo, from novus, Lat.] to bring in something new not known before; to alter by introducing something new.

INNOVATION, s. [Fr.] change arising from the introduction of something unknown or not practised before.

INNOVATOR, s. [innovator, Fr.] one that introduces new customs or opinions; one that makes alterations by introducing novelties.

INNOXIOUS, a. [in and noxius, Lat.] free from mischievous effects; free from guilt.

INNOXIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to intend or do no harm.

INNOXIOUSNESS, s. the quality of operating without producing any mischievous effects.

INNUENDO, s. [innuo, Lat.] an indirect hint, or charge of a crime.

INNUMERABLE, a. [in and numerus, Lat.] so numerous as not to be counted or reckoned.

INNUMERABLY, ad. without number.

INNUMEROUS, a. too many to be counted.

To INOCULATE, v. a. [inoculo, from in and oculus, Lat.] in Botany, to propagate any plant by inserting its bud in another stock; to yield a bud to another stock. In Physic, to communicate the small-pox or cow-pox, by infusing the virus of the disease taken from one person into the veins of another.

INOCULATION, s. the act of including or inserting the bud of one tree in an incision made in the bark of another, by which means it is made to bear the same fruit as the tree from which the bud is taken. In Medicine, the practice of communicating the small-pox or cow-pox, by means of infusing the matter of a ripened pustule into the veins of a person who has not had that distemper.

INOCULATOR, s. one who propagates trees, or communicates the small-pox or cow-pox by inoculation.

INODORATE, a. [in and odor, Lat.] having no scent.

INODOROUS, a. wanting scent; not causing any sensation in the organs of smelling.

INOFFENSIVE, a. giving no provocation or offence; giving no pain or terror.

INOFFENSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to give no offence or provocation.

INOFFENSIVENESS, s. the quality of giving no provocation.

INOFFICIOUS, (inofficious) a. not striving to serve or accommodate another.

INOPPORTUNE, a. [in and opportunitus, Lat.] unseasonable; inconvenient.

INORDINACY, s. want of regularity and order.

INORDINATE, a. [in and ordinatus, Lat.] not under proper rules, restraint, or regulation.

INORDINATELY, ad. in a manner subject to no order, restraint, or regulation; irregularly.

INORDINATENESS, s. want of being subject to rules or restraint.

INORDINATION, s. want of being reduced to order or restrained by rules.

INORGANICAL, a. without fit organs or instrumental parts. To INOSCULATE, v. n. [in and oscular, Lat.] to join by being inserted in each other.

INOSCUATION, s. the act of joining by having its extremities inserted in each other.

INQUEST, s. [inquisitio, from inquirere, Lat.] a judicial inquiry or examination; search, or study. In Law, any formal examination or inquiry. Coroner's inquest, an inquiry by a jury into the cause of any death that is of suspicious appearance.

INQUIETUDE, s. [in and quiet, Lat.] a state of disturbance or anxiety, applied to the mind; want of tranquillity; an action whereby the tranquillity of the mind is disturbed.

To INQUINATE, v. a. [inquinare, Lat.] to pollute; to corrupt.

INQUINATION, s. corruption; pollution.

INQUIRABLE, a. that may be inquired or examined into.

To INQUIRE, v. n. [inquirere, from quero, Lat.] to ask questions for information; to make search, or exert curiosity.

INQUIRER, s. a person who examines, or searches after something unknown; one who asks questions by way of examination, or in order to be informed.

INQUIRY, s. the act of searching by questions after something unknown; examination.

INQUISITION, (inquisitio) s. judicial inquiry. Figuratively, discussion, or search after something unknown, applied to the mind. In Law, a manner of proceeding in criminal causes by way of question or examination. Holy Office of the Inquisition, a spiritual court in Roman Catholic countries for the trial of heretics and spiritual offenders. It was set up in the 12th century, and its proceedings have caused its name to be a terror and an execution amongst men. Its inquiry is conducted by torture, and its power unlimited, no account ever being asked or given. Its victims were put to death by fire, after having, by a formality, been handed over to the secular power for that purpose. Its influence is much lessened now, and it may be hoped that it will soon be destroyed.

INQUISITIVE, (inquisitive) a. inquiring in order to find out something unknown; busy in searching or prying into things; endeavouring to make discoveries.

INQUISITIVELY, (inquisitively) ad. in a manner which discovers a great desire and intense application to make discoveries.

INQUISITIVENESS, (inquisitiveness) s. the quality of prying into things unknown, or the secrets of others.

INQUISITOR, (inquisitor) s. [Lat.] one who examines judiciously, or searches into the truth of a fact or opinion; an officer belonging to the Popish Inquisition.

To INRAIL, v. a. to enclose with rails.

INROAD, (invrode) s. a sudden or short invasion or attack upon a country.

INSAURABLE, a. [in and sanabilis, Lat.] incurable; irremediable.

INSAURABLE, a. [insanus, Lat.] mad; making mad.

INSANITY, s. madness; lunacy; derangement of the intellect. It assumes very various forms, and springs from different causes; but is marked under all its phases by one characteristic, the preternatural activity or predominance of some one passion, faculty, or effort of attention; by which the equilibrium of the powers, and their proper subordination, is overturned. It is one of the most affecting maladies man is subject to; and it is a gratifying consideration, that recent attempts at a philosophical and humane treatment of such miserable persons, have been signally successful in restoring them to their right mind.

INSATIABLE, (insatiabile) a. [in and satio, Lat.] so greedily or covetous as not to be satisfied.

INSATIABLENESS, (insatiableness) s. the quality of not being satisfied or appeased.

INSATIABLY, ad. with greediness not to be appeased.

INSATIATE, (insatiare) a. so greedy as not to be satisfied.

INSATURABLE, a. [in and saturō, Lat.] not to be filled or glutted.

To INSCRIBE, v. a. [in and scribo, Lat.] to write on any thing, generally applied to something engraved on a monument, or written on the outside of something. To make any thing with letters; to dedicate to a person without a formal address. To draw a figure within another, applied to mathematics.

INSCRIPTION, s. any sentence written on the outside of something or engraved on a monument or stone; a title; the act of inscribing or dedicating a book to a person without a formal address.

INSCRUTABLE, a. [in and scrutor, Lat.] not to be discovered or traced by inquiry or study.

To INSCULP, v. a. [in and sculpo, Lat.] to engrave or cut.

INSCULPTURE, s. any thing engraved.

To INSEAM, (inseem) v. a. to leave a mark in the skin after a wound is cured.

INSECT, s. [in and seco, Lat.] in Natural History, a class of animals, without vertebrae; having a semi-crustaceous covering, to which the muscles are attached; and with two pairs of wings, (developed or rudimentary,) six legs, a ganglionic nervous system; the body, in appearance, divided into very distinct parts; and proceeding from the egg to the perfect insect by two series of transformations. Figuratively, any thing small or contemptible.

INSECTATOR, s. [insector, Lat.] one that persecutes or harasses with pursuit.

INSECTILE, a. resembling or having the nature of insects.

INSECURE, a. not safe, or not protected from danger or loss.

INSECURITY, s. the state of being exposed to danger or loss; want of grounds for confidence.

INSEMINATION, s. [in and semino, Lat.] the act of scattering seed on ground.

INSENSATE, a. [insensato, Ital.] without thought or sensibility of present or approaching danger.

INSENSIBILITY, s. [insensibilit  , Fr.] want of a power to perceive; dullness of perception, applied either to the mind or body.

INSENSIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be discovered by the senses or mind; not affected or moved by an object belonging either to the body or mind.

INSENSIBLENESS, s. want of sensation.

INSENSIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be perceived.

INSEPARABILITY, INSEPARABLENESS, s. the quality of being such as cannot be separated or divided.

INSEPARABLE, a. [in and separo, Lat.] not to be divided; united so as not to be parted or separated.

INSEPARABLY, ad. in a manner not to be divided, parted, or separated.

To INSERT, v. a. [insero, Lat.] to place in or among other things.

INSERTION, s. the act of placing in or amongst other things; the thing placed among others.

To INSHRINE, v. a. often written enshrine, to enclose in a shrine or valuable case.

INSIDE, s. the inner part, opposed to the surface or outward part.

INSIDIATOR, s. [Lat.] one who lies in wait.

INSIDIOUS, a. [insid  , Lat.] treacherous; with an intention to insnare.

INSIDIOUSLY, ad. in a sly or treacherous manner; with an intention to insnare.

INSIGHT, (insit) s. [insicht, Belg.] knowledge of the inward parts of any thing; thorough skill in, or acquaintance with, any thing.

INSIGNIFICANCE, INSIGNIFICANCY, s. [Fr.] want of meaning, applied to words. Want of importance, applied to things.

INSIGNIFICANT, a. wanting meaning; conveying no ideas, applied to words. Wanting weight, importance, or a power of producing an effect, applied to persons and things.

INSIGNIFICANTLY, ad. without meaning, applied to language. Without importance or effect, applied to persons or things.

INSINCERE, a. [in and sincerus, Lat.] not what a person appears; not hearty; not sound; corrupted.

INSINCERITY, s. want of truth or fidelity; the vice of making great professions of friendship, without observing them.

To INSURE, v. a. to give strength; to confirm. Not in use.

INSINUANT, a. [Fr.] having the power to gain or creep into the favour of others.

To INSINUATE, v. a. [insinuo, Lat.] to make a passage for, or introduce any thing gently. Figuratively, to gain upon the affections of another imperceptibly, and by gentle means. To instil or infuse gently and imperceptibly, applied to opinions and notions.—v. n. to wheedle; to steal into imperceptibly; to be conveyed insensibly. SYNON. We insinuate by cunning address; we suggest by credit and artifice. Insinuate implies something delicate; suggest, frequently something scandalous.

INSINUATION, s. the quality of pleasing or stealing into the affections; a hint, or oblique censure.

INSINUATIVE, a. having the power to steal on the affections.

INSINUATOR, s. [Lat.] one who drops a hint to a person's prejudice.

INSIPID, a. [in and sapio, Lat.] having no taste, or not able to affect the organ of tasting; without spirit, or the qualifications necessary to please and divert the mind. SYNON. That which is insipid does not affect the taste in the least; that which is flat does not pierce it. The flat displeases; and the insipid tires.

INSIPIDITY, INSIPIDNESS, s. [insipidit  , Fr.] want of the power of affecting the taste; want of life and spirit.

INSPIRY, ad. in a dull manner; in such a manner as not to affect or cause any sensation in the organ of taste.

INSPIRENCE, s. [in and sapientia, Lat.] folly; want of understanding.

To INSIST, v. n. [in and sisto, Lat.] to rest or stand upon; to remain resolute, or persist in a request or demand; to dwell upon in a discourse.

INSISTENT, a. resting upon any thing.

INSISTENCY, s. [in and sist  , Lat.] exemption from thirst.

INSITION, s. [insero, Lat.] the act of inserting or ingrafting one branch into another.

To INSNARE, v. a. to catch in a trap or snare; to inveigle, or bring into any danger or inconvenience by allurements; to entangle in dangers and perplexities.

INSNARER, s. one who catches any thing in a snare; one that inveigles or brings a person into perplexity by artifice.

INSCOENABLE, (inscuable) a. [in and socio, Lat.] averse to conversation; not fit for a companion; not fit to be united or joined together.

INSOBRIETY, s. drunkenness; want of sobriety.

To INSOLATE, v. a. [insolo, from sol, Lat.] to dry in the sun.

INSOLATION, s. [Fr.] exposition to the sun.

INSOLENCE, INSOLENCY, s. [insolens, Lat.] pride exerted in treating others in a disdainful and contemptuous manner.

INSOLENT, a. behaving with an uncommon degree of pride, disdain, and contempt.

INSOLENTLY, ad. in a proud manner, attended with contempt, disdain, or a total disregard of a person's superior.

INSOLVABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be cleared up or explained, applied to difficulties in writing. That which cannot be paid, applied to debts.

INSOLUBLE, a. [in and solv  , Lat.] not to be cleared up, explained, or rendered intelligible, applied to difficulties in writing. Not to be dissolved by any fluid. Not to be separated, applied to substances.

INSOLVENCY, s. the quality of not being able to pay, applied to debts.

INSOLVENT, a. [in and solv  , Lat.] not able to pay.

INSOMUCH, conj. so that; to such a degree that.

To INSPECT, v. a. [in and specio, Lat.] to look into by way of examination or superintendence.

INSPECTION, s. the act of examining with strictness; a narrow, close, and critical survey.

INSPECTOR, s. [Lat.] one who examines or looks into things, in order to discover either faults or beauties; a person who superintends any performance or undertaking.

To INSPIRE, (ins  re) v. a. to place in an orb or sphere.

INSPIRABLE, a. that may be drawn in with the breath; that may be infused by the Deity.

INSPIRATION, s. in Medicine, the act of drawing in the breath; the act of breathing into any thing. In Theology, that spiritual teaching vouchsafed to all believers by God; also, and especially, that teaching by which the sacred virtues were guided in recording their knowledge of Divine truth. There has been much useless controversy respecting the amount of influence exerted in the composition of the Scriptures; but it is generally perceived now that the theory of a plenary or verbal inspiration cannot be maintained, and that in the case of some books no theory hitherto advanced is applicable at all. It ought to be remarked that the Jews, whose superstitious reverence for their sacred writings is unequalled, never asserted respecting them such a claim to entire inspiration as is commonly asserted amongst Christians.

TO INSPIRE, v. n. [in and spiro, Lat.] in Medicine, to draw in the breath.—v. a. to breathe into; to animate; to encourage. In Theology, to instruct in Divine truth; to teach spiritually and as God only can teach men.

INSPIRER, s. he that communicates ideas to the mind; he that animates or encourages.

TO INSPISSATE, v. a. [inspissare, from spissus, Lat.] to make any fluid thick.

INSPINATION, s. the act of making any liquid thick.

INSPRUCK, the capital of the Tyrol, Austria. It is not large within the walls, but has extensive suburbs, in which are some considerable palaces, churches, and convents. It is seated in a pleasant valley, on the river Inn, and has a flourishing university, and some manufactures. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 47. 10. N. Long. 11. 27. E.

INSTABILITY, s. [in and stabilis, Lat.] inconstancy; fickleness; mutability, or a state subject to continual alterations and decays.

INSTABLE, a. inconstant; changing. See UNSTABLE.

TO INSTALL, (install) v. a. [installare, Fr.] to advance to any rank or office.

INSTALLATION, (installation) s. the introduction or establishment of any one into a position or station of eminence and dignity; being chiefly applied to the induction of clerical dignitaries to the seats set apart for them in their cathedrals, and to the ceremony of introducing a knight of the Garter to his place in St. George's Chapel at Windsor.

INSTALLMENT, (instalment) s. a sum of money paid in part of the full sum owing.

INSTANCE, INSTANCY, s. [Fr.] an earnest or ardent and importunate request or solicitation; a motive or pressing argument; an example used to illustrate and enforce any doctrine; the state of a thing; occasion; opportunity; act.

TO INSTANCE, v. n. to produce as an example; to confirm or illustrate an argument.

INSTANT, a. [instans, from in and sto, Lat.] earnestly pressing; immediate; without delay, or any time intervening; quick.

INSTANT, s. such a part of duration wherein we perceive no succession; the present moment. In Commerce, the present month.

INSTANTANEOUS, a. [instantaneus, low Lat.] done in an instant, or without any perceptible succession; with the utmost speed.

INSTANTANEOUSLY, ad. in an instant; in an indivisible point of time.

INSTANTLY, ad. [instantaneus, Lat.] immediately; without any perceptible delay or intervention of time; with urgent and pressing importunity.

TO INSTATE, v. a. to place in a certain rank or condition.

INSTAURATION, s. [instaurare, Lat.] the act of restoring to a former state.

INSTEAD, (instead) prep. in the room or place; equal to.

TO INSTEEP, v. a. to soak in any liquid or moisture; to lay under water.

INSTEP, s. the upper part of the foot, where it joins to the leg.

TO INSTIGATE, v. a. [instigare, Lat.] to urge on or provoke to the commission of a crime.

INSTIGATION, s. [Fr.] the act of inciting, provoking, or impelling to the commission of something evil.

INSTIGATOR, s. [instigateur, Fr.] one who incites a person to commit a crime.

TO INSTIL, v. a. [instillare, from stilla, Lat.] to pour in by drops; to infuse or insinuate any opinion or idea imperceptibly into the mind.

INSTILLATION, s. [instillatio, Lat.] the act of pouring by drops; the act of infusing or communicating slowly; that which is instilled or communicated.

INSTINCT, s. [instinctus, Lat.] in Psychology, that mental faculty which adapts means to ends, blindly or spontaneously, without the exercise of any reasoning or reflection; and which cannot be improved in its operation by experience. It is seen most conspicuously in the proceedings of animals, being almost the only kind of intellectual power they possess; leading them to the discharge of their various functions, &c., as Cuvier said, like a dream.

INSTINCTED, a. impressed as an animating power or instinct.

INSTINCTIVE, a. INSTINCTIVELY, ad. by instinct.

TO INSTITUTE, v. n. [instituo, from statuo, Lat.] to fix, settle, appoint, or enact, applied to laws or orders. To instruct, or form by instruction.

INSTITUTE, s. an established custom or law; a precept, maxim, or principle; an association for scientific purposes.

INSTITUTION, s. the establishing a law or custom; an establishment; a positive law. In the Canon and Common Law, it signifies the investing a clerk with the spiritualities of a rectory, &c. by the bishop. This makes him a complete parson as to spirituality, but not as to temporality, which depends on Induction, & which see.

INSTITUTIONARY, a. containing the elements, or first principles, of any science or doctrine.

INSTITUTIST, s. a writer of institutes or explanation of laws, or of the maxims and first principles on which any system of laws or science is founded.

INSTITUTOR, s. one who establishes any custom or doctrine; one who instructs a person in the elements or first principles of any science or doctrine.

TO INSTOP, v. a. to close up or stop.

TO INSTRUCT, v. a. [instruo, from struo, Lat.] to teach or communicate knowledge to another. In Law, to model or form by previous discourse.

INSTRUCTOR, s. one who communicates knowledge, or teaches.

INSTRUCTION, s. the art of teaching or imparting knowledge; any precept conveying knowledge; a precept or direction from a superior.

INSTRUCTIVE, a. [instructivus, Fr.] conveying knowledge.

INSTRUMENT, s. [instruo, Lat.] a tool used in executing any work; any thing made to produce a certain result, or for a particular use, as musical or astronomical instruments. In Law, a writing containing any contract or order. The agent or means by which any thing is done.

INSTRUMENTAL, a. [Fr.] conducive as a means to some end. Instrumental music, is that produced by an instrument, and opposed to vocal.

INSTRUMENTALITY, s. the action or agency of a thing as a means; the quality of acting in subordination.

INSTRUMENTALLY, ad. in the nature of an instrument; as a means.

INSTRUMENTALNESS, s. the quality of conducing to advance or promote an end.

INSUFFERABLE, a. beyond the strength or patience of a person to bear; not to be borne or allowed.

INSUFFERABLY, ad. to a degree beyond the possibility of being endured with patience.

INSUFFICIENCY, INSUFFICIENCY, (insufficiency) s. [Fr.] want of power, strength, or value, proportionable to any end.

INSUFFICIENT, (insufficient) a. not proportionate to any end, use, or purpose; wanting abilities; unfit.

INSUFFICIENTLY, (insufficiently) ad. in such a manner as to want either ability, qualification, or skill.

INSUFFLATION, s. [in and sufflo, Lat.] the act of breathing upon.

INSULAR, INSULARLY, a. [insula, Lat.] belonging to an island.

INSULATED, a. in Building, applied to any column or edifice which stands by itself.

INSULSE, a. [in and sal, Lat.] dull; insipid; heavy.

INSULT, s. [in and salio, Lat.] the act of leaping upon any thing; an assault; an act of bumptiousness and contemptuous outrage. Synon. Affront is an indignity offered in public. Insult implies an attack made with insolence. Both affronts and insults may be given without words; but abuse results chiefly from scurrilous language.

TO INSULT, v. a. to treat with haughtiness, contempt, and outrage. In War, to assault or attack a post with open force.

INSULTER, s. one who treats another with disdainful or contemptuous haughtiness.

INSULTINGLY, ad. contemptuously; disdainfully.

INSUPERABILITY, s. the quality of being invincible.

INSUPERABLE, a. [in and super, Lat.] not to be overcome by labour, or surmounted by study.

INSUPERABLENESS, s. impossibility of being overcome or surmounted.

INSUPERABLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be overcome.

INSUPPORTABLE, a. [Fr.] beyond the strength of a person to bear, applied either to the body or mind.

INSUPPORTABLENESS, s. the state of being beyond a person's power to support or bear.

INSUPPORTABLY, ad. to such a degree as not to be endured or borne.

INSURANCE, s. [assurance, Fr.] security given by a society, to compensate, according to a certain valuation, loss by fire, storm, or other casualty, on houses and other buildings, ships, crops, &c. &c. Life Insurance is security given for the payment of a certain sum at death, to the heirs, &c. of one who pays annually a certain fixed premium. The system of insurance is now so greatly improved, and so widely adopted, that it is a precaution of the most common prudence to insure one's life; the various plans proposed having been considered, and that adopted which is best suited to the circumstances and age of the insurer.

TO INSURE, v. a. [assure, Fr.] to pay to a society formed for such a purpose, a regular sum in order to secure the advantage of compensation for loss by fire, &c. &c.; or to secure for one's heirs, &c. the payment of a certain sum on one's own death.

INSURMOUNTABLE, a. [insurmountable, Fr.] not to be overcome.

INSURMOUNTABLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be overcome.

INSURRECTION, s. [in and surgo, Lat.] a seditious rising or tumult formed in opposition to government.

INSURRECTION, s. [in and surro, Lat.] the act of whispering into something.

INTACTIBLE, a. [in and tango, Lat.] not perceptible to the touch.

INTAGLIO, s. [Ital.] any thing having figures engraved on it, particularly applied to precious stones, that have the heads of great men engraved on them.

INTANGIBLE, a. that cannot be touched.

INTASTABLE, a. not to be tasted; insipid.

INTEGER, s. [Lat.] the whole of any thing. In Arithmetic, a whole number, opposed to a fraction.

INTEGRAL, a. [integral, Fr.] whole, or comprising all its constituent parts; without defect; complete; without injury. Belonging to, or consisting of, whole numbers, applied to arithmetic. Integral Calculus, in the higher Mathematics, that process which is exactly the reverse of the Differential Calculus; having for its object the discovery of the whole of any quantity, &c. by means of series of quantities, continually approximating to it in their sum, and which can be made to differ from it by a sum less than any conceivable quantity.

INTEGRAL, s. a whole consisting of distinct parts, each of which may subsist apart.

INTEGRANT PARTS, s. in Philosophy, the similar parts of a body, or parts of the same nature with the whole.

INTEGRITY, s. [integritas, from integer, Lat.] purity of mind; freedom from any undue bias or principles of dishonesty; entireness.

INTEGUMENT, s. [in and tego, Lat.] any thing which covers or envelops another.

INTELLECT, [intelligo, Lat.] the understanding.

INTELLECTION, s. the act of understanding.

INTELLECTIVE, a. [intellectif, Fr.] having the power of understanding.

INTELLECTUAL, a. [intellectual, Fr.] relating to, or performed by, the understanding; having the power of understanding; proposed as the object of the understanding.

INTELLIGENCE, INTELLIGENCE, s. [intelligo, Lat.] a commerce or reciprocal communication of things distant or secret; the understanding; unobdied mind.

INTELLIGENCER, s. one who sends or conveys news of what is done in distant and secret parts.

INTELLIGENT, a. having the power of understanding; knowing or understanding; giving information, or communicating.

INTELLIGENTIAL, [intelligential] a. consisting of mind free from body; exercising or proceeding from exerting the understanding.

INTELLIGIBLE, a. conceivable by the understanding; that may be understood.

INTELLIGIBLENESS, s. the quality of being possible to be understood.

INTELLIGIBLY, ad. in such a manner as to be understood.

INTEMPERANCE, INTEMPERANCY, s. [in and tempero, Lat.] want of governing the sensual appetites; excess in eating or drinking.

INTEMPERATE, a. not governed or restrained within the bounds of moderation; eating, drinking, or doing any thing to excess.

INTEMPERATELY, ad. beyond the bounds of temperance; excessively.

INTEMPERATENESS, s. want of moderation; unseasonableness, applied to weather.

INTEMPERATURE, s. excess of some quality.

INTEENABLE, a. [in and teneo, Lat.] indefensible.

TO INTEND, v. a. [intendo, from tendo, Lat.] to stretch out; to add force to, or to heighten quality; to mean; to design or propose to do a thing.

INTENDANT, s. [Fr.] an officer of the higher class, who oversees any particular branch of public business.

INTENDMENT, s. [entendement, Fr.] intention, design, or meaning. Intendment of crimes is, in case of treason, where the intention is proved by circumstances, and punishable in the same manner as if put in execution: so if a person enter a house in the night-time, with an intent to commit burglary, it is felony; also an assault, with an intent to commit a robbery on the highway, is made felony, and punished with transportation.

INTENSE, a. [intensus, Lat.] strained, heightened, or increased to a high degree, applied to qualities. Vehement, or forcible, applied to words. Kept on the stretch; anxiously attentive, applied to the mind.

INTENSELY, ad. to a very great degree.

INTENSENESS, s. the state of being increased to a high degree; force; the state of a thing upon the stretch.

INTENSION, s. [intensio, Lat.] the act of heightening the degree of any quality, or of forcing or straining any thing, opposed to making lax, or loosening.

INTENSIVE, a. stretched, increased, or heightened with respect to itself.

INTENSIVELY, ad. to a great degree.

INTENT, a. [intentus, Lat.] with the mind strongly applied to any object, used with on or upon.

INTENT, s. meaning, applied to words; a design, purpose, or view formed in the mind.

INTENTION, s. [intentio, Lat.] an act of the mind whereby it voluntarily and earnestly fixes its view on any thought, considers it on every side, and will not be called off by other thoughts; eagerness of desire; closeness of attention; deep thought; vehemence or ardour of mind; design, purpose, or end.

INTENTIONAL, a. [intentionel, Fr.] done by fixed design; designed.

INTENTIONALLY, ad. by design or fixed choice.

INTENTIVE, a. applied so as not to be diverted by other objects.

INTENTIVELY, ad. with close and strict application.

INTENTLY, ad. with close attention.

INTENTNESS, s. the state of being applied so as not to be diverted or called off by other objects.

TO INTER, v. a. [inter, Fr.] to put under ground or bury.

INTERCALAR, INTERCALARY, a. [intercalo, from inter and calo, Lat.] inserted in the calendar, in order to preserve the equation of time; thus the 29th of February, inserted in the almanack every leap-year, is called an intercalary day.

TO INTERCALATE, v. a. [intercalo, Fr.] to insert an additional day into the calendar.

INTERCALATION, s. the insertion of days in the calendar, in order to make up of some defect in our reckonings of time.

To INTERCEDE, v. n. [inter and cedo, Lat.] to pass or come between; to mediate, or endeavour to reconcile two parties that are at variance.

INTERCEDER, s. a mediator; or one who endeavours to reconcile two parties at variance.

To INTERCEPT, v. a. [interceptio, from inter and capio, Lat.] to stop any person or thing in their way or in motion, before they can reach the place intended; to prevent from being reached.

INTERCEPTION, s. the act of stopping any thing in its course, and hindering it from reaching the place it otherwise would; stoppage, or obstruction.

INTERCESSION, s. [inter and cedo, Lat.] the act of endeavouring to reconcile two parties at variance; interposition or mediation in behalf of another.

INTERCESSOR, s. [Lat.] a mediator; one who interposes and pleads in behalf of another; one who endeavours to reconcile two parties at variance.

To INTERCHAIN, v. a. to chain or link together. Figuratively, to unite indissolubly.

To INTERCHANGE, v. a. to put in the place of another; to change, or give for something received of another; to succeed to alternately, or by turns.

INTERCHANGE, s. commerce, traffic, or mutual change of commodities between two persons; alternate succession.

INTERCHANGEABLE, a. given and taken mutually; following each other in alternate succession.

INTERCHANGEABLY, ad. alternately; mutually.

INTERCHANGEMENT, s. the act of giving and receiving.

INTERCIPIENT, s. [intercipiens, from inter and capio, Lat.] something that intercepts, obstructs, or causes a stoppage, applied to medicines.

INTERCISION, s. [inter and cedo, Lat.] interruption.

To INTERCLUDE, v. n. [inter and cludo, Lat.] to shut from a place, or hinder from performing by something intercepting or intervening; to intercept.

INTERCLUSION, s. the act of intercepting or obstructing.

INTERCOLUMNIATION, s. [inter and columna, Lat.] the space between two pillars.

INTERCOMMUNITY, s. a mutual communication or community; a mutual freedom or exercise of religion; adoption of religious rites between two or more states.

INTERCOSTAL, a. [inter and costa, Lat.] placed and situated between the ribs.

INTERCOURSE, (interkōrse) s. [entrecoûrs, Fr.] commerce or mutual exchange. Communication, applied to places or persons.

INTERCURRENCE, s. passage between.

INTERCURRENT, a. [inter and curreo, Lat.] running between.

To INTERDICT, v. a. [interdictio, from inter and dicto, Lat.] to forbid, applied to laws, or the command of a superior. In Canon Law, to forbid from enjoying communion with the church.

INTERDICT, s. in the Roman Church, a particular kind of censure inflicted on a whole nation, province, or town, for some acts of disobedience or insubordination to ecclesiastical authority, committed either by the people, or by those in power, by which the services and rites of the church were wholly, or in part, forbidden to be performed. England was laid under an interdict by Innocent III. in the reign of John. Individuals were sometimes placed under an interdict. There was also an interdict which was a kind of ecclesiastical outlawry; being forbidden to receive persons guilty of certain offences, or to give them fire or water.

INTERDICTION, s. a law or decree which forbids any thing.

INTERDICTIONARY, a. containing a prohibition or forbiddance.

To INTEREST, v. a. [interessar, Fr.] to concern; to affect; to give a share in; to gain the affection, or be very closely connected with a person's interest or welfare.

INTEREST, s. [intérêt, Fr.] concern, advantage, or influence over others; share or part in any undertaking; a regard to private or personal advantage or profit; a sum paid for the use of money; a surplus of advantage or profit. See USURY. Simple Interest is when the interest is always kept distinct from the principal: Compound Interest, when the interest is added at certain periods to the principal, and interest allowed on the increased amount. The highest rate of interest allowed by law is 5 per cent. per annum.

To INTERFERE, v. n. [inter and ferio, Lat.] to interpose, intermeddle, or become a sharer in; to clash or oppose.

INTERFLUENT, a. [inter and fluo, Lat.] flowing between.

INTERFUGIENT, a. shining between.

INTERFUSED, a. [inter and fundo, Lat.] poured or scattered between.

INTERJACENCY, s. [inter and jaceo, Lat.] the act or state of lying between two objects.

INTERJACENT, a. lying between.

INTERJECTION, s. [inter and jaceo, Lat.] in Grammar, a word which expresses some sudden emotion of the mind; as, oh! alas!

INTERIM, s. [Lat.] the mean time; an interval; any time coming between two periods or actions expressed.

To INTERJOIN, v. a. to join mutually; to intermarry.

INTERIOR, a. [Lat.] internal; inmost.

INTERKNOWLEDGE, (interknowledge) s. mutual knowledge.

To INTERLACE, v. a. [entrelasser, Fr.] to intermix; to weave, plait, or mix one thing with another.

INTERLAPSE, s. [inter and labor, Lat.] the flow of time between any two events.

To INTERLARD, v. a. [entrelarder, Fr.] in Cookery, to mix meat with bacon, or fat with lean. To interpose, or insert between, or diversify by mixture.

To INTERLEAVE, v. a. to bind up with blank paper between each of the leaves.

To INTERLINE, v. a. to write between the lines of a book or manuscript.

INTERLINEATION, s. the act of writing any thing between the lines of a printed book or manuscript.

To INTERLINK, v. a. to connect chains one with another. Figuratively, to join together like the links of a chain, which mutually connect each other.

INTERLOCUTION, s. [inter and loquor, Lat.] dialogue, or the act of speaking by turns.

INTERLOCUTOR, s. [Lat.] the person introduced as discoursing in a dialogue; one that talks with another.

INTERLOCUTORY, a. consisting of a dialogue, or conversation carried on by two or more persons. In Law, an order that does not decide the cause, but only some matter incident thereto, which happens between the beginning and end of a cause; as when, in Chancery or Exchequer, the plaintiff obtains an order for injunction until the hearing of a cause; which order, not being final, is called interlocutory.

To INTERLOPE, v. n. [inter and loopen, Belg.] to run between parties, and intercept the advantage that one would gain from the other. In Commerce, to intercept the trade of a company; to traffic without licence; to forestal.

INTERLOPER, s. one who without licence intercepts the trade of a company that has an exclusive charter; one who runs into business to which he has no right.

INTERLUCENT, a. [inter and luco, Lat.] shining between.

INTERLUDE, s. [inter and ludo, Lat.] something played or performed between the acts of a tragedy or comedy; a farce.

INTERLUENCY, s. [inter and luco, Lat.] the state of water which runs between any two places; the interposition of water.

INTERLUNAR, INTERLUNARY, a. [inter and luna, Lat.] belonging to the time when the moon is about to change, and become invisible.

INTERMARRIAGE, s. the act of marriage between two families.

To INTERMARRY, v. n. to marry persons out of one family with some of another.

To INTERMEDDLE, v. n. to concern oneself officiously with affairs that one has no business with.

INTERMEDDLER, s. one that officiously thrusts himself into business which he has no right or call to.

INTERMEDIAL, a. [inter and medius, Lat.] intervening; lying between.

INTERMEDiate, a. intervening; interposed; placed in the middle between two extremities.

INTERMEDiateLY, ad. by way of intervention or interposition.

INTERMENT, s. [enterment, Fr.] burial; the act of burial, or putting a corpse in the ground.

INTERMIGRATION, s. [inter and migro, Lat.] the act of two or more removing from one place to another, so that each of them occupies the place which the other quitted. Seldom used.

INTERMINABLE, a. [in and terminus, Lat.] admitting no boundary or limit.

INTERMINATE, a. unbounded; unlimited.

INTERMINATION, s. a threat or denouncing of punishment against crimes.

To INTERMINGLE, v. a. to mix; to mingle; to put some things among others.

INTERMISSION, s. [inter and mitto, Lat.] a pause, stop, or cessation for a time; the space between any two events; delay; a cessation of pain or sorrow.

INTERMISSIVE, a. affecting by fits, or with pauses between.

To INTERMIT, v. a. to forbear any thing for a time; to interrupt.—v. n. to grow mild between the fits or paroxysms, applied to fevers.

INTERMITTENT, a. coming only by fits, or after some interval.

To INTERMIX, v. a. to mingle, mix, or put some things between others.

INTERMIXTURE, s. a mass formed by mixing several things.

INTERMUNDANE, a. [inter and mundus, Lat.] existing or situate between worlds, or the several bodies which compose the solar system.

INTERMURAL, a. [inter and murus, Lat.] lying between walls.

INTERNAL, INTERNAL, a. [internus, Lat.] within; in the mind; inward.

INTERNALLY, ad. inwardly; mentally; in the mind, spirit, or understanding.

INTERNECINE, a. [inter and neq, Lat.] endeavouring mutual destruction.

INTERPELLATION, s. [interpello, Lat.] in Law, a summons or call upon.

To INTERPOLATE, v. a. [interpolo, Lat.] to foist a thing into a place, by forgery, to which it does not belong.

INTERPOLATION, s. something added to the original, applied to manuscripts or books.

INTERPLATOR, s. [Lat.] a person who inserts or foists forced passages into an original.

INTERPOSAL, s. the act of intervening between persons; interposition; intervention.

To INTERPOSE, (the s. in this word and its derivatives is pronounced like z), v. a. [inter and pono, Lat.] to thrust in between two persons, as an obstruction, interruption, or inconvenience; to come between, or rescue from any danger.

INTERPOSER, s. one that comes between others; a mediator.

INTERPOSITION, s. the act of intervening in order to prevent or promote a design; mediation; intervention; or the state of being placed between two.

To INTERPRET, v. a. [interpretor, Lat.] to explain any difficulty in writing; to translate; to decipher; to give a solution; to expound.

INTERPRETABLE, a. capable of being translated, deciphered, or explained.

INTERPRETATION, s. the act of explaining the meaning of a foreigner in our own language; the sense given by a translator.

INTERPRETATIVE, a. collected by interpretation.

INTERPRETATIVELY, ad. as may be collected by way of explanation.

INTERPRETER, s. [interpretes, Lat.] an explainer; a translator.

INTERPUNCTION, s. [inter and pungo, Lat.] the act of placing points or points between words.

INTERREGNUM, s. [Lat.] the time in which a throne is vacant, between the death of one prince and the accession of another. In hereditary government, like that of Great Britain, there is no interregnum.

To INTERROGATE, v. a. [interrogo, Lat.] to examine by asking questions; to ask questions. SYNON. To interrogate, implies authority; to inquire, curiosity; to ask, something civil and respectful.

INTERROGATION, s. a question. In Grammar, a point used after a question, and is marked thus (?).

INTERROGATIVE, a. [interrogativus, Fr.] denoting a question; expressed in the form of a question.

INTERROGATIVE, s. in Grammar, a pronoun used in asking questions, as who? what?

INTERROGATIVELY, ad. in the form of a question.

INTERROGATOR, s. one who asks, or examines by asking, questions.

INTERROGATORY, s. a question; an inquiry.

INTERROGATORY, a. containing or expressing a question.

To INTERRUPT, v. a. [interrumpo, from inter and rumpo, Lat.] to hinder the process, motion, or direction of any thing, by breaking in upon it; to hinder a person from finishing his sentence by speaking to him in the middle of it; to divide or separate by rupture.

INTERRUPTEDLY, ad. not without stoppages.

INTERRUPTER, s. one who makes a person break off in the middle of his discourse by speaking to him.

INTERRUPTION, s. [inter and rumpo, Lat.] breach, or separation between the parts by breaking; interposition. Figuratively, intervention; hindrance; or the act of stopping any thing in motion.

INTERSCAPULAR, a. [inter and scapula, Lat.] in Anatomy, placed between the shoulders.

To INTERSCRIBE, v. a. [inter and scribo, Lat.] to write between.

INTERSECTANT, a. [inter and seco, Lat.] dividing any thing into parts.

To INTERSECT, v. a. to cut or cross; to divide each other mutually.—v. n. to meet each other mutually.

INTERSECTION, s. the point where lines cross each other.

To INTERSECT, v. a. [inter and seco, Lat.] to put in or introduce between other things.

INTERSEPTION, s. a thing inserted between others.

To INTERSPERSE, v. a. [inter and spargo, Lat.] to scatter among other things.

INTERSPERSION, s. the act of scattering among other things.

INTERSTELLAR, a. [inter and stella, Lat.] intervening or situated between the stars.

INTERSTICE, s. [inter and sto, Lat.] the space between two things, or the time between two events.

INTERSTITIAL, (interstitialis) a. containing interstices.

INTERTEXTURE, s. [inter and texo, Lat.] the act of mingling or weaving one thing with another.

To INTERTWINE, INTERTWIST, v. a. to unite or join by twisting one in another.

INTERVAL, s. [intervallum, Lat.] space or distance void of matter; time between two events; remission of a distemper. In Music, the difference between two sounds in acuteness or gravity, or the imaginary space bounded by two sounds differing in acuteness or gravity. Simple intervals are the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, and octave; and those between any two notes holding any of these places in the scale. Compound intervals are such as are greater than the octave. Other intervals, designated major and minor, superfluous, redundant, diminished, &c., are also noted in the enharmonic scale.

To INTERVENE, v. n. [inter and venio, Lat.] to come between.

INTERVENIENT, a. coming between.

INTERVENTION, s. the state of acting between persons; the interposition of means; the state of being interposed.

INTERVIEW, (interducere, sometimes accented on the first syllable), s. [entreueue, Fr.] mutual sight, generally applied to some formal and appointed meeting or conference.

To INTERVOLVE, v. a. [inter and volvo, Lat.] to roll between; to involve one within another.

To INTERWEAVE, (intervecere) v. a. preter. interweave, past part. interwoven, or interweave; to mix one thing with another in weaving; to intermingle.

INTESTABLE, a. [in and testor, Lat.] in Law, not qualified to make a will.

INTESTACY, s. in Law, the condition of one who dies without a sufficient will, or without one at all.

INTESTATE, a. in Law, dying without a will.

INTESTINAL, a. [Fr.] belonging to the intestines.

INTESTRAL, a. [intus, Lat.] internal; inward; contained in the body. Figuratively, domestic; relating to the internal condition of a state.

INTESTINE, s. a bowel. Seldom used in the singular number. The intestines, in Anatomy, are distinguished as the large and the small; the latter being those in which the conversion of the materials digested by the stomach into assimilable material, and the first and largest separation of the assimilable from the unassimilable materials takes place; and the former, those by which the unassimilable part is thoroughly separated from the other and rejected from the system finally.

To INTHRAL, (intraill) v. a. to enslave; to bring under difficulties.

INTHRALMENT, (intraillment) s. a state of slavery.

INTHRONE, v. a. to place on a throne; to make a king of.

INTIMACY, s. a state of familiarity or friendship, wherein one person has always free access to another, and is favoured with his sentiments without reserve. SYNON. A slight knowledge of any one constitutes acquaintance. To be familiar requires an acquaintance of some standing. Intimacy supposes such an acquaintance as is supported by friendship.

INTIMATE, a. [intus, Lat.] inmost; internal; inward; near; close; not kept at a distance; familiar; conversing with, or united to, another, without reserve or restraint.

INTIMATE, s. a friend who has free access, and is entrusted with the thoughts of another without reserve.

To INTIMATE, v. a. [intimo, low Lat.] to hint; to point indirectly and obscurely.

INTIMATELY, ad. closely; or without any intermixture of parts; with confidence; nearly, internally, or inseparably. Void of reserve, applied to friendship.

INTIMATION, s. [Fr.] a hint; an obscure or indirect declaration or direction.

To INTIMIDATE, v. a. [intimido, from timidus, Lat.] to affect with fear; to deprive of encouragement.

INTIRE, a. [entier, Fr.] whole; unbroken or undiminished; without any adulteration. See ENTIRE.

INTO, prep. denotes entrance, penetration beyond the surface, motion beyond the outward parts; and is the opposite to out of.

INTOLERABLE, a. [in and tolero, Lat.] not to be borne or endured.

INTOLERABLENESS, s. the quality of a thing which is not to be endured.

INTOLERABLY, ad. to a degree too great for our strength or patience to endure.

INTOLERANT, a. [Fr.] not enduring, or not able to endure. Figuratively, in religious affairs, bigoted; given to persecution.

To INTOMB, (intoom) v. a. to bury; to enclose in a monument.

To INTO/NATE, v. a. [intono, from tono, Lat.] to thunder.

INTONATION, s. [Fr.] the act of thundering. In Music, the act of sounding the notes in the scale with the voice, or any other given order of musical tones. Intonation may be either true or false, too high or too low, too sharp or too flat; and then this word intonation, with an epithet, must be understood concerning the manner of performing the notes.

To INTO/NE, v. n. [intonner, Fr.] to make a slow protracted noise.

To INTO/RT, v. a. [intorqueo, from torqueo, Lat.] to twist, wreath, or wring.

To INTO/XICATE, v. a. [in and toxicum, Lat.] to make drunk with strong liquors. Figuratively, to inebriate with vice or flattery.

INTOXICATION, s. the act or state of making or being drunk.

INTRAC/TABLE, a. [in and tractabilis, Lat.] obstinate, or not to be governed; furious.

INTRAC/TABLENESS, s. obstinacy not to be subject to rule; furiousness not to be tamed.

INTRAC/TABLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be governed or tamed.

INTRANQUILLITY, s. a state of restlessness.

INTRAN/SIVE, a. in Grammar, a verb which does not require an object to complete its signification; as run, walk, play, fall.

INTRANSMUTABLE, a. unchangeable to any other substance or metal.

To INTRE/ASURE, (intrezure) v. a. to lay up as in a treasury.

To INTRE/NCH, v. a. [in and trencher, Fr.] to invade or encroach upon what belongs to another; to mark with hollows like trenches. In War, to fortify with a ditch or trench.

INTRE/NCHANT, a. not to be separated by cutting, but immediately closing again.

INTRE/NCHEMENT, s. a trench or work, which defends a post from the attacks of an enemy.

INTRE/PID, a. [in and trepidus, Lat.] not affected with fear at the prospect of danger.

INTREPIDITY, s. [intrepidité, Fr.] a disposition of mind unaffected with fear at the prospect of danger. SYNON. Resolution either banishes fear or surmounts it, and is staunch on all occasions. Courage is impatient to attack, undertakes boldly, and is not lessened by difficulty. Valour acts with vigour, gives no way to resistance, but pursues an enterprise in spite of opposition. Bravery knows no fear; it runs nobly into danger, and prefers honour to life itself. Intrepidity encounters the greatest points with the utmost coolness, and dares even present death.

INTREPIDLY, ad. in such a manner as to be unaffected with fear at the prospect of danger.

INTRICACY, s. the state of a thing much entangled; perplexity arising from a complication of facts.

INTRICATE, a. [intrico, low Lat.] entangled; perplexed; obscure or difficult.

INTRICATELY, ad. in such a manner as to perplex.

INTRICATENESS, s. the quality of being so perplexed and complicated as not to be easily explained.

INTRIGUE, (intreque) s. [Fr.] a plot or amour carried on with secrecy and artifice.

To INTRIGUE, (intreque) v. n. to form plots; to carry on an amour by stratagems and artifices.

INTRIGUER, (intrequeur, the g pronounced hard,) s. one who forms plots, carries on private amours with women, or busies himself in secret transactions.

INTRIGUINGLY, (intrequeusement, the g pronounced hard,) ad. with artifice or secret plotting.

INTRINSIC, a. [intrinsecus, Lat.] inward; real; true in its own nature.

INTRINSICALLY, ad. internally; really; in his own nature.

INTRINSICATE, a. perplexed; entangled.

To INTRO/DUCE, v. a. [intro and duco, Lat.] to conduct; to give entrance to; to usher into a place, or to a person; to bring any thing into practice or notice.

INTRO/DUCER, s. one who conducts or ushers into a place, or to a person; one who brings any thing into use, practice, or notice.

INTRO/DUCTION, s. the act of ushering or conducting into a place, or to a person; the state of being ushered; the act of bringing any thing new into notice or practice; a discourse prefixed to a book, containing something necessary to give a true idea of the manner in which the subject is treated of, &c.

INTRO/DUCTIVE, a. [introductif, Fr.] serving as a preparative, or a means to something else.

INTRO/DUCTORY, a. previous; in order to prepare, or serving as a means to something further.

INTROGRESSION, s. [intro and gradior, Lat.] entrance; the act of entering or going in.

INTROIT, s. [introitus, Lat.] in the Romish Church, the beginning of the mass or public devotions.

INTROMISSION, s. [intro and mitto, Lat.] the act of sending; the act of giving entrance or admission.

To INTROMIT, v. a. to send, let, or admit in; to allow to enter.

To INTROSPECT, v. a. [intro and specio, Lat.] to look into, or take a view of the inside.

INTROSPECTION, s. a view of the inside. An internal view of its power or state, applied to the mind.

INTROVE/NIENT, a. [intro and venio, Lat.] entering or coming in.

To INTRU/DE, v. n. [in and trudo, Lat.] to come in without invitation or permission; to thrust oneself rudely into company or business; to undertake a thing without being permitted called to it, or qualified for it.

INTRUDER, s. one who forces himself into company or affairs without permission, qualification, or being welcome.

INTRUSION, s. the act of forcing any person or thing into any place or state; encroachment upon any person or state; entrance without invitation or welcome.

TO INTRUST, v. n. to treat with confidence; to charge with any secret commission, or any thing of value.

INTUITION, s. [in and tuor, Lat.] the sight of any thing. In Psychology, that spontaneous act of the understanding, by which any presentation of the senses becomes a representation to the mind by being subjected to the forms of the understanding. It is also used in popular language, and in writers who follow Locke and Reid, for the faculty of discovering truths, &c. immediately, without the exercise of reflection or reasoning.

INTUITIVE, a. seeing, or actual sight, opposed to belief.

INTUITIVELY, ad. [intuitivum, Fr.] by intuition, or immediate vision of the mind.

INTUME/SCENCE, INTUM/SCENCY, s. [intumesco, Lat.] a swelling; a tumour; the act or state of swelling or rising above its usual height.

INTURG/SCENCE, s. [turgesco, Lat.] swelling; the act or state of swelling.

TO INTWINE, v. a. to twist or wreath together like twine; to twist round.

TO INVAD/DE, v. a. [in and vado, Lat.] to enter into a country in a warlike manner; to attack; to assail or assault; to seize on like an enemy. "To invade another's right."

INVADER, s. one who enters into the possessions or dominions of another, and attacks them as an enemy; one who assaults or attacks; one who encroaches or intrudes.

INVALESCENCE, s. [in and valesco, Lat.] want of health.

INVA/ID, a. [in and validus, Lat.] weak, applied to bodily strength. Of no force or cogency, applied to argument.—s. (pronounced invalid), soldiers that are worn out with age, or, by the casualties of war, rendered unfit for further service in the field.

TO INVA/LIDATE, v. a. to weaken; to deprive of force or efficacy.

INVA/ID/DE, s. [Fr.] one disabled by sickness or hurts.

INVA/ID/ITY, a. [invaliditas, Fr.] want of force or cogency, applied generally to arguments.

INVA/LUABLE, a. of so great a value as to be above conception or estimation.

INVA/RABLE, a. [Fr.] not changing; without varying.

INVARIABleness, s. the quality of being always the same; constant, or without change.

INVARIABLY, ad. without changing; unchangeably; constantly.

INVASION, s. [invado, Lat.] the entrance or attack of an enemy on the possessions or dominions of another; an encroachment or unlawful attack on the rights of another.

INVASIVE, a. entering like an enemy on the bounds of another; encroaching on the rights of another.

INVECTIVE, s. [invecho, Lat.] a reproachful, censorious, or scandalous expression, whether in writing or in speech.

INVECTIVE, a. containing a censure, scandal, satire, or reproachful expressions.

INVECTIVELY, ad. in a satirical, abusive, or scandalous manner.

TO INVE/IGH, (invoy) v. a. [in and eho, Lat.] to utter censure or reproach; to speak bitterly against.

INVE/IGHER, (invoyer) s. a vehement railer.

TO INVE/IGLE, (inveigle) v. a. [invegiare, Ital.] to persuade, allure, or seduce to something bad or hurtful.

INVE/IGLER, (inveigler) s. a seducer, deceiver, or allurer to ill.

TO INVE/LOPE, v. a. See TO ENVELOPE.

TO INVE/NT, v. n. [inventor, Fr.] to discover, find out, or produce something unknown or not made before; to forge, or contrive contrary to truth; to create by the fertility of the imagination. SYNOM. We invent new things by the force of imagination. We find out things that are hidden or unknown, by examination or study. The one denotes the fruitfulness, the other the penetration, of the mind.

INVENTER, s. [inventeur, Fr.] one who discovers or produces something new or not known before; a person who forges or asserts a falsehood.

INVENTION, s. [inventio, Lat.] the act of finding or producing something new; the discovery of something hidden; the subtlety of the mind, or that exertion of the imagination, whereby we create things that either have no existence in nature, or are entirely new or unknown; a discovery; the thing invented; a forgery or fiction.

INVENTIVE, a. [inventif, Fr.] quick at contrivance; ready at expedients.

INVENTOR, s. [Lat.] a finder out or maker of something new; a framer or contriver of something ill.

INVENTORIALY, ad. in the manner of an inventory.

INVENTORY, (sometimes accented on the first syllable.) s. [inventorium, Lat.] an account or catalogue of movables; a list or catalogue of goods.

INVENTRESS, s. [inventrice, Fr.] a female who finds out or produces any thing new.

INVERA/RY, Argyleshire, Scotland. Here are manufactures of linen and woollen, as also considerable works for smelting iron by means of charcoal. It is seated on the N. W. side of Loch Fyne, near which is a castle, the seat of the Duke of Argyle. It is 75 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1233.

INVERKE/THING, Fifehire, Scotland. It is situated in a bay of the Frith of Forth; and before the entrance of the harbour there is a large and safe bay, which affords excellent shelter for ships in all winds. Here are two commodious quays, for the landing and receiving of goods. It is 18 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2530.

INVERNESS, Invernesshire, Scotland. It is the capital of the county, and is pleasantly situated on the S. bank of the river Ness, and overlooking the Frith of Murray. It has a safe and convenient harbour, and a good deal of shipping. Over the river Ness is a handsome bridge, of seven arches. The salmon fishery in this river is very considerable. A little to the W. of this town is the remarkable vitrified fort, called Craig Phadrick; the stones, composing its walls, appear to have been partly melted by fire. It is 150 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 15,418.

INVERNESS, a county of Scotland, reaching from the W. sea to Moray Firth, and bounded by the counties of Ross, Nairne, Murray, Aberdeen, Perth, and Argyle. Its extent in breadth is about 45 miles, and in length 75. The northern part is very mountainous and barren. This county has several considerable lakes; being divided, in a manner, into two equal parts, by Loch Ness, Loch Oich, Loch Lochy, and Loch Eil; all which are united by a canal, so as to form a communication between the two seas. The southern part of the shire is also very mountainous, and is supposed to be the most elevated ground in Scotland. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are, in general, fertile; and the high grounds feed many sheep and black cattle, the rearing and selling of which is the chief trade of the inhabitants. Limestone, iron ore, and some traces of different minerals, have been found in this county, with beautiful rock crystals of various tints; but no mines have been worked hitherto with much success. The principal river is the Spey; but there are many others of inferior note, as the Ness, Fyres, Glass, Lochy, &c. Some of the largest islands of the Hebrides belong to this county. Inverness is its capital. Pop. 97,799. It sends two members to parliament; one in conjunction with Ross-shire.

INVERSE, a. [inverso, Lat.] inverted; reciprocal; opposed to direct.

INVERSION, s. change of order or time, so that the first is last or last is first. In Grammar, the arrangement of the words of a sentence in the reverse of the usual order.

TO INVERT, v. a. to change the natural order of things or words; to turn upside down, or place in a method or order contrary to that which was before; to place the first last.

INVERTEDLY, ad. in an unnatural order; in such a manner that the first is placed last, or the last first.

TO INVE/ST, v. a. [in and vestio, Lat.] to clothe or dress; when followed by two nouns, it hath with or in before the thing. To place in possession of a rank or office; to adorn; to grace. To enclose or surround a place, so as to intercept all succours, applied to sieges.

INVESTMENT, a. covering; clothing.

INVESTIGABLE, a. to be searched out or traced by the mind.

TO INVE/STIGATE, v. a. [investigo, from vestigium, Lat.] to search out; to trace or find out by reason.

INVESTIGATION, s. the act of the mind by which unknown truths are traced out and discovered; an accurate examination.

INVESTITURE, s. [Fr.] the act and ceremony of conferring a right or possession of any manor, office, or benefice.

INVESTMENT, s. dress; clothes; habit.

INVERTERACY, s. [vetus, Lat.] long continuance of any thing bad. Figuratively, obstinacy confirmed by time. In Physic, long continuance of any disease.

INVERTERATE, a. old; long established; grown obstinate by long continuance.

TO INVERTERATE, v. a. to harden, or make obstinate by long practice or continuance.

INVERTERATENESS, INVERTERATION, s. the act of hardening or confirming by long practice and continuance.

INVIDIOUS, a. [invidia, Lat.] envious; malignant. Figuratively, likely to promote or incur hatred.

INVIDIOUSLY, ad. in an envious and malignant manner; in a manner likely to provoke hatred.

INVIDIOUSNESS, s. the quality of provoking envy or hatred.

TO INVIGORATE, v. a. to make strong; to inspire with vigour, life, and spirit.

INVIGORATION, s. the act of invigorating; the state of being invigorated.

INVINCIBLE, a. [in and vinco, Lat.] not to be conquered or subdued; not to be informed, or removed by instruction.

INVINCIBLENESS, s. the quality of not being conquerable.

INVINCIBLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be conquered or surmounted.

INVIOABLE, a. [in and viol, Lat.] not to be profaned, applied to things sacred. Not to be injured. Not to be broken, applied to laws or secrets.

INVIOABLY, ad. without breach or failure.

INVIOULATE, a. unhurt, or without suffering from violence. Unprofaned, applied to holy things. Unbroken, applied to laws or obligations.

INVIOUS, a. [in and vis, Lat.] not passable; not common or trodden.

TO INVISCATE, v. a. [invisco, from viscus, Lat.] to lime; to daub with any glutinous or sticking substance.

INVISIBILITY, (the s. is pronounced like z in this and the two following words), s. [invisibilité, Fr.] the state of not being seen, or not being perceptible.

INVISIBLE, a. [in and video, Lat.] not to be seen.

INVISIBLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be seen.

INVITATION, s. [invito, Lat.] the act of calling or summoning; the act of desiring a person's company.

TO INVITE, v. a. to bid or request a person to come to one's house, or make one of a party; to allure.

INVITINGLY, ad. in such a manner as allures.

INUCTION, s. [in and unguo, Lat.] the act of smearing or anointing with any fat or oily substance.

INDUNDATION, s. [inundo, Lat.] the act of flowing; a flood. Figuratively, a confluence or multitude of any kind.

TO INVOCATE, v. a. [in and voco, Lat.] to call upon in prayer; to address for assistance.

INVOCATION, s. the act of calling upon in prayer; the form used in addressing any being for assistance.

INVOICE, s. [envoyer, Fr.] a catalogue of the freight of a ship, or of the articles shipped on board, and consigned to some person in a foreign country.

TO INVOKE, v. a. [in and voco, Lat.] to call upon, address, or pray to any superior being for aid.

TO INVOLVE, v. a. [in and velo, Lat.] to inwrap, or cover with any thing which surrounds; to intrust or join; to take in or comprise; to catch or subject to; to blend or mingle together confusedly. SYNON. Persons are involved in actions or affairs when they are far immersed in them. Affairs or actions are complicated with each other by their mixture and mutual dependence.

INVOLUNTARILY, ad. not by choice; against one's will; necessarily.

INVOLUNTARY, a. [involuntaire, Fr.] not having the power of choice; necessitated; not chosen or done willingly.

INVOLUTION, s. [in and volo, Lat.] the act of wrapping in a thing. Figuratively, the state of being mixed, complicated, or intricate; that which is wrapped round any thing. In Mathematics, the process of raising any quantity to any power of the root that may be required, by repeated multiplication or any shorter process:—the reverse of Evolution.

TO INURE, v. a. [in and uro, Lat.] to habituate; to accustom; to make ready, willing, and able, by practice and custom; it generally implies hardship or labour.

INUREMENT, s. practice; habit acquired by long practice; use.

TO INURN, v. a. to put into an urn; to bury; to put into a tomb.

INUSTION, s. [in and uro, Lat.] the act of burning, or of burning in.

INUTILE, a. [in and utilis, Lat.] useless; unprofitable.

INUTILITY, s. want of use or profit.

INVULNERABLE, a. [in and vulnus, Lat.] not to be wounded or hurt.

TO INWALL, (inwaill) v. a. to enclose with a wall.

INWARD, a. placed at a distance from the surface or outward part.

INWARD, s. any thing within; generally applied to the bowels, and used always in the plural number.

INWARDLY, ad. internally; in the mind or heart; privately; in a concave form, applied to a body bent, and opposed to any convexity or protuberance outwardly.

INWARDNESS, s. intinacy; familiarity.

TO INWEAVE, (inweave) v. a. pret. inwove, or inweaved; past part. inwove, or inwoven; to mix any thing in weaving; to intertwine or mingle.

TO INWRAP, (the w is mute,) v. a. to wrap or cover by holding a thing over. Figuratively, to perplex, or puzzle with difficulty; to transport with joy.

INWROUGHT, (inwrot) a. wrought into the substance of a thing.

TO INWREATH, (inwreth) v. a. to surround as with a wreath.

JOAN, the name of a female who is said to have occupied the chair of St. Peter, after Leo IV., in the 9th century, and not to have been discovered till she gave birth to a child, on occasion of a public procession in Rome. But the story, though in circulation very shortly after the alleged date, is not supported by any contemporary authority, and is now generally disbelieved.

JOAN OF ARC. See ARC, JOAN OF.

JOB, the name of a man of Idumea, who is the subject of one of the Books of the Old Testament, a dramatic poem, exhibiting the meaning of calamity to the man that fears God. The structure of the Book is extremely simple; after a prose introduction, (which exhibits traces of a later origin than the subsequent part,) detailing his afflictions, and the occasion of them, a conversation ensues in which three friends of Job, who have visited him for condolence, endeavour to convict him of sinful conduct on the ground of the sorrows he has experienced, whilst Job passionately defends his cherished and trusted uprightness, and completely silences them: a young man is now introduced, who develops another and loftier view of Job's calamities; and lastly, Jehovah addresses Job, repeating in more magnificent imagery the representation of the preceding speaker: in reply, Job at once acknowledges his sinfulness, and implores pardon from God; and in a brief prose conclusion, (which resembles the introduction,) the return of prosperity to the afflicted patriarch is recorded. The poetry of this Book is remarkably fine and graphic, and at the same time free from all the meeties and weaknesses characterizing a very refined age or social state. The date of it is unknown, but it seems to be the earliest of the books of the Old Testament, and so the first written book in the world. The author, and the reality of the character whose history is recorded, are also questions incapable of decision.

JOB, s. a small, trifling, or casual piece of work; a low, mean, mercenary, and lucrative employment; a sudden stab with a sharp-pointed instrument.

TO JOB, v. a. to strike suddenly with a sharp-pointed instrument; to perform small pieces of work.—v. n. to deal in the funds, or in buying and selling stocks for others.

JO'BBER, s. one who buys and sells stocks for others; one who does chance-work.

JO'BBERNOWL, s. [jobbe, Flem. and knot, Sax.] a loggerhead or blockhead.

JOCKEY, s. a person who rides a horse at a race; one who deals in horses. Figuratively, a cheat or bite.

To JOCKEY, v. a. to juggle in riding. Figuratively, to cheat, or trick.

JOCOSE, a. [jocus, Lat.] merry; given to jest.

JOCOSELY, ad. in a merry, waggish, or jesting manner.

JOCOSENESS, s. the quality of being disposed to merriment or jesting.

JOCULAR, a. used in jest, jesting.

JOCULARITY, s. a disposition to jesting; merriment.

JOCUND, a. [jucundus, Lat.] merry; gay; lively; full of mirth.

JOCUNDLY, ad. in a merry manner.

JODINE, s. [jodes, Gr.] in Chemistry, an elementary substance, which at common temperatures is a soft, friable, opaque solid, of a bluish-black colour, and metallic lustre, but is easily dispersed in a rich violet-coloured vapour. It occurs most copiously in sea-weed or kelp. It seems to be a natural specific against gottre, but it is an irritant poison.

JOEL, one of the prophets sent to the kingdom of Judah, in about the same time as Hosea and Amos prophesied. His denunciations and predictions are recorded in the book of the Old Testament that bears his name, and are of the kind common to the Hebrew prophets. His style is finely poetical, but also, whether owing to our defective knowledge of the events and circumstances alluded to, or to the condition of the text, very obscure in parts.

To JOG, v. a. [schocken, Belg.] to push, or shake by a sudden push; to give notice or excite a person's attention by a push.—v. n. to move on by jolts, like those felt in trotting.

JOG, s. a push or slight shake; a sudden interruption, by a push or shake; a hint given by a push.

JOGGER, s. one who pushes another lightly; one who moves dully and heavily.

To JOGGLE, v. n. to shake, or to make a thing shake.

JOHANNISBERG, s. a very fine kind of hock, which takes its name from the place where the vineyards are in which it is produced, in the duchy of Nassau.

JOHN, surnamed THE BAPTIST, was born of a priestly family, when his parents were very old, shortly before the year assigned to the birth of our Lord. He lived a life of great austerity, and proclaimed publicly the rapidly approaching reign of Heaven, and the consequent duty of repentance, that men might be prepared for its coming. His distinguished and remarkable birth, his imposing and prophetic mien, his terrible words, and the general agitation amongst the Jewish people respecting the coming of the long-expected Messiah, drew crowds to hear him in the remote parts he frequented, and won him many converts, whom he baptized, as was customary amongst the Jews. Our Lord himself sought him out, and appeared first in his office when baptized by his herald and forerunner. John was, because of his courageous reproof of Herod Antipas, imprisoned, and, through the schemes of Herodias, his incestuous wife, beheaded in prison.

JOHN, the beloved disciple, and apostle of our Lord, writer of one of the Gospels and three letters contained in the New Testament, was son of a fisherman who lived near the Sea of Genesaret, and followed the same calling with his brother James. He followed Jesus in consequence of a summons addressed to him and his brother as they were busied in their craft, and shared with him and Peter several marks of greatest confidence. John seems to have been most particularly distinguished by the regard of our Lord, during his life, during the most mournful scenes of his death, and after his resurrection. Little is certainly known of him subsequently, save that he stood in some relation to the church at Ephesus, endured persecution, and finally died, naturally, at a very advanced age, the only one of the apostles who was not martyred. Of the numerous tales handed down by tradition respecting him, some are palpably false. The Gospel which bears his name, and which was the last written of the four narratives of the ministry and death of Jesus, and written near the close of John's life, varies very remarkably in some of the circumstances recorded from the others; and in omissions, additions, and the whole tone and colour, still more remarkably; whilst there is withal nothing that is a real inconsistency or contradiction to the other Gospels; the comparison of it with the three Epistles, showing that the whole difference arises from the great difference between John and the narrators of the other histories. As an exhibitor of the deeper and more spiritual characteristics of the gospel of Christ, dwelling on the subjective aspect and spirit of that, whereof Paul developed the form, and others the objective and historic grounds, John has hardly yet been fully appreciated. The Revelation or Apocalypse is also commonly ascribed to him; but as there is some ground for doubt respecting it, and as the authorship does not affect its value, we refer to it under its own name.

JOHN, king of England, son of Henry I. and successor of Richard I. When a mere youth, he was, as the youngest child, greatly beloved by his father, but he joined in the unnatural and cruel rebellion which Queen Eleanor instigated her sons to. During Richard's imprisonment, he plotted to obtain possession of his crown, and attempted to prevent his release. After his accession, his attention was first called to the opposition made to him on the continent by Arthur his nephew, aided by Philip Augustus of France. In the war which ensued John took his nephew prisoner, and had him murdered; but he lost all his possessions in France. His next step was a quarrel with the pope, the haughty and resolute Innocent III., respecting the nomination of the archbishop of Canterbury. This was protracted for a long time; the kingdom was laid under an interdict; the king was excommunicated; the French king prepared to invade England; and in the end John made a most abject submission to the pope, in the person of his legate, relinquishing his crown, and receiving it anew from Pandolph, on his bare knees, having promised a yearly tribute. In the midst of this contest new troubles broke out, rebellions amongst his barons, invasions of the Scotch; the former he kept down for awhile; the latter he effectually stopped. But the revolt of the barons broke out again, and was made more formidable by the war with France, in which though John gained a sea-fight, he was defeated on land at Bovines. A powerful and armed combination was formed, sanctioned by the highest ecclesiastical dignitaries, and entitled the Army of God and the Church; which, after various movements, at last obtained a conference with the king at Runnimead, where John signed Magna Charta. John was however too weak and too wicked to abide by his word; and a fierce civil war broke out, by which the whole kingdom was distracted and ravaged; and the barons, aided by troops from France, had forced the king to the greatest extremities; when he died in 1216, aged 49 years, and having reigned 17. In this reign began the breaking up of the feudal system as established at the Conquest; and a foundation was laid for the elevation of those classes in the state who had up to this time been totally disregarded.

JOHN, the name assumed by 23 popes of Rome; the last of whom was deposed as an antipope, by the Council of Constance; and the 12th occupies the place in the series assigned to the legendary Pope Joan.

JOHN OF GAUNT, son of Edward III., and by title Duke of Lancaster, was one of the most noteworthy men of his age. He was a brave and skilful warrior; a patron of literature; and a fast friend and admirer of Wicliffe, whose person and deeds he strenuously defended. The clergy were his bitter enemies, and roused against him great popular wrath; which however did not abate the duke's earnestness in his enlightened course. His private character was unhappily stained by debauchery, or he had been one of the very noblest men of English story. He died in 1399, aged 50 years. The schism and civil war between the houses of York and Lancaster began with the seizure of the throne by his son, under the title of Henry IV.

JOHN OF SALISBURY, a literary man of the 12th century; the intimate friend and associate of Thomas à Becket; became bishop of Chartres; and revived the taste for the study of the classic languages in the W. of Europe.

JOHN O'GROAT'S HOUSE, the remains of a noted house, reckoned the most northerly dwelling in Scotland, and so called from a family of the name of Groat, who formerly resided here, and to whom the village and ferry, from this place to the Orkneys, belonged. It is situated one mile W. of Duncansby, or Dungsby Head.

JOHNAPPLE, s. a good sharp juicy apple.

JOHN SON, SAMUEL, a Whig writer of the latter part of the 17th century, whose Julian the Apostate was a satire on James II., so severe that he was fined and imprisoned for it; and whose Address to the Army on Hounslow Heath procured him the pillory and a whipping from Newgate to Tyburn Gate, a heavy fine, and degradation from orders in the English Church. At the Revolution he received some marks of favour from William III. He is better known from the notice of him in Dryden's Abolition and Achitophel, where he is called Ben Jochanaan, than by his writings, which are marked with considerable learning, and good sense resembling De Foe's. He died in 1703, aged 54 years.

JOHNSON, DR. SAMUEL, the celebrated lexicographer, critic, and essayist; was well educated, though born in no very flourishing circumstances, at Oxford, and began his career as assistant master at a grammar school at Market Bosworth, in Leicestershire. Afterwards he undertook literary drudgery at Birmingham, and then having gained a little money by a marriage, otherwise most happy, though in appearance most unsuitable, he started a school of his own, which failed, and he went to London, to try his fortune as a man of letters there. Cave, who was the proprietor and master of the Gentleman's Magazine, gave him regular work on that periodical, in which his fabricated Reports of the Parliamentary Debates are his most remarkable productions. Having gained a little notice by an imitation of one of Juvenal's Satires, he proposed to edit Shakespeare, and to compile his English Dictionary; both which works he completed. His old pupil, Garrick, attempted to gain him fame as a dramatist, but it was impossible. He periodically published Essays, The Rambler and The Idler, were his next effusions; and Rasselas, which he wrote to defray the expenses of his mother's funeral. He shortly after this received a pension, and his life as a literary hack was ended. He became famous; was introduced to the king; received his diplomas; and wrote only his Tour in the Hebrides and his Lives of the Poets more. After most complicated diseases and much suffering he died in 1784, aged 75 years. His works are placed high in the list of British classics, although they are to the last degree unattractive, from the high-sounding pomposity of his elaborately constructed and duly poised periods, and the meagreness of the moral maxims they are written to enforce. There is in them so clearly discernible the sterling common sense, and genuine great-heartedness of the writer, readers who begin with great dislike, generally end in loving the rugged but true man for his very foibles, though the foibles themselves never lose their narrowness. His satellite, or rather worshipper, in the latter part of his life was the renowned James Boswell; and he has left us a daguerreotype portrait of the Doctor;—the friend of the most famous men of the time; the oracle in almost every circle he entered; the superstitious bigot in politics and religion; the rude, bullying, special pleader in argument; the utterer of the most annihilating repartees; the loving, infant-hearted man, when not engaged in playing one or another of his many parts on the stage of public life. With all his eccentricities, and all his unamiables, he had that in him which made men love him when he lived; and Boswell and his own books have so faithfully handed down his whole self to posterity, that his name, amongst all who know any thing of literature, is a familiar word, and as cherished as familiar.

To JOIN, v. a. [joindre, Fr.] to add one thing to another; to couple or combine; to unite in concord; to unite; to touch, or be contiguous; to unite with in marriage, or any other league; to associate; to act in concert with.—v. n. to grow to; to adhere; to close; to clasp; to become confederate.

JOINER, s. one who makes utensils by joining different portions of wood together.

JOINEY, s. an art whereby several pieces of wood are so fixed and joined together, that they seem one entire piece.

JOINT, s. [jointure, Fr.] the articulation of the limbs, or union of movable bones in animal bodies; a hinge, or a union of different substances which are let into each other, so as to be capable of moving without breaking or separating; a limb of an animal separated by a butcher from the rest of a carcass; a knot in wood. Out of joint, is applied to a bone that is luxated or slipped from the socket in which it is used to move; and figuratively, disorder, confusion, or disturbance, &c.

JOINT, s. shared among many; united or partaking in the same possession, hence joint heir; combined or acting in concert.

To JOINT, v. a. to unite in a confederacy; to form many parts into one; to form in articulations, or in such a manner as to move without breaking or separating; to cut or divide a carcass at the joints.

JOINTED, a. having joints; full of joints or knots.

JOINTIER, s. in Carpentry, a sort of plane.

JOINTLY, ad. together, opposed to separately. In a state of union or combination, applied to the action of different persons or things.

JOINTRESS, s. [from jointure,] a woman who holds any thing in jointure.

JOINTSTOOL, s. a stool made by joints, or in such a manner that the legs, sides, and top are jointed to each other.

JOINTURE, s. [Fr.] in Law, an estate settled on a wife, to be enjoyed after the death of her husband.

JOINVILLE, JOHN, SIEUR DE, an eminent French historian and statesman of the 13th century. He accompanied Louis IX. on his first crusading expedition; and wrote the Life of St. Louis. He died in 1318, aged 58 years.

JOIST, s. [joindre, Fr.] in Architecture, a piece of timber, framed into the girders, on which the boards of floors are laid.

To JOIST, v. a. to fit in the smaller beams on which the boards of a floor are laid.

JOKE, s. [jocus, Lat.] a jest or witty expression, that causes a smile, or raises a laugh.

To JOKE, v. n. [jocor, Lat.] to jest, or to endeavour merrily to divert by words and actions; to tell a pleasing fiction.

JO'KER, s. a jester; a merry fellow.

JOLE, s. [gueule, Fr.] the face or cheek; seldom used but in the phrase of cheek by jole. The head of a fish.

JO'LIBA, a name of the Quorra, or Niger, the great river of W. Africa.

To JOLL, v. a. [Teut.] to beat the head against any thing.

JO'LLILY, ad. [from jolly,] in a disposition to noisy mirth.

JOLLINESS, JO'LLITY, s. gaiety; elevation of spirit; merriment; noisy mirth.

JOLLY, a. [jovalis, Lat.] gay; merry; cheerful; full of mirth and spirits. Figuratively, plump, like a person in full health.

To JOLT, [jolt] v. n. [onomatopoe.] to shake or shock, as a carriage in a rough road.

JOLT, [jolt] s. a shock given by a carriage travelling in a rough road.

JO'LTHEAD, [jolthead] s. a great head; a blockhead.

JO'PELLI, NICOLO, a celebrated Italian composer, whose operas are highly admired, as are his sacred compositions, consisting of a Requiem, a Miserere, and an Oratorio. He travelled to various places in Italy, and even to Vienna; and died in 1774, aged 60 years.

JO'NA, one of the Hebrides, or W. Isles of Scotland, lying to the W. of Mull called also Icolmkill. It is about 3 miles long and 1 broad, and has a very desolate aspect. Its whole celebrity arises from the maintenance in it, till comparatively late times, of a form of Christian faith, and ritual worship, wholly independent of the Church of Rome, and every other church, from the very earliest ages. The only relics of which church is the ruined cathedral.

JONAH, a Hebrew prophet, whose chief mission was to carry a threatening of Divine judgment against Nineveh, for its wickedness; the history of which mission, chiefly in relation to the prophet's attempt to evade it, and his vexation at the prevention of the execution of the threat by the timely penitence of the inhabitants of the city, composes the short book of the Old Testament known by his name. In order to get rid of some of the difficulties connected with this narrative, some critics have contended that the account is metaphorical, and that the spiritual condition of the Jewish people is represented by it; contending also that Luke reports the simple allusion made to Jonah by our Lord, whilst in Matthew the words are explained in a way to make the sign more conspicuous.

JONES, INIGO, a celebrated English architect of the 17th century, regarded as the reviver of classic taste in that branch of art here. He studied in Italy under the patronage of two English noblemen; and became architect to the king of Denmark, and afterwards to the queen of England. During the civil war it was his lot to share the sufferings of his patrons, being taken, along with Hollar, at the storm of Basing House, by the irresistible Cromwell. He died in 1652, aged about 80 years. Jones's works sustain his fame; what remains of Whitehall, and several other mansions in town and country; except St. Paul's church in Covent Garden, which seems to have remained to warn men from presuming too easily that their genius is universal.

JONES, SIR WILLIAM, a distinguished scholar, poet, and lawyer, of the last century. He studied at Harrow and Oxford; and after travelling on the continent as tutor to the son of a nobleman, and commencing authorship with some works relating to Oriental literature and history, he entered the Temple, and with indefatigable diligence devoted himself to his profession and to his passion with equal success. His prevailing studies were the histories, the languages, the laws, &c. of the East; and he had a glorious opportunity for his ardent mind afforded by the appointment of judge in Bengal. He discharged his duties with great diligence; and opened to England an almost wholly new field of literature. He died in 1794, aged but 48 years. His scholarship lacked the correctness and profundity of the great Orientalists of the present day; but he was a pioneer, and prepared the way, in no small degree, for those who have so far outstripped him. His style is clear and elegant, and his few poems mainly in sentiment, and breathing the true poetic spirit. His private character was most admirable.

JONES, PAUL, (properly, it is said, JOHN PAUL), by birth a Scot, but by choice an Anglo-American, who played a most famous part in the struggle between the colonies and England. He was a lieutenant in the American navy, and with courage and skill unheard of in any other case, planned and executed a half piratical, half regular attack on the coasts of England; sailed up the Forth; captured more than one ship of war; and finally ran the gauntlet of all the forts, fleets, and war-ships lying along the German Ocean and the Channel. He was subsequently in the French and the Russian services; and died in poverty in Paris in 1792, aged 56 years.

IONIA, in Ancient Geography, the ancient name of Achaia, in the Peloponnesus; and the general name of that tract of the sea-coast of Asia Minor, on which the cities founded by the Ionian colonists stood; such as Smyrna, Ephesus, Miletus, &c., with some of the Aegean islands lying near to Asia.

IONIANS, one tribe of the Greek or Hellenic family, whose chief settlements were in Attica, Achaia, and in the colonies of the W. coast of Asia Minor, S. of Æolis. They were the movement part of Greece; and stood always in direct contrast and opposition to the Dorian tribe, which was as distinctly conservative. The Athenians were the best developed of the Ionians; those of Asia Minor acquired a degree of softness and effeminacy, from the climate, and from the proximity of the Persian power. On the headland of Mycale stood a famous temple dedicated to Poseidon, called Panionium; by the worship maintained at which the Asiatic Ionians preserved themselves from splitting into different sections.

IONIAN ISLANDS, a republic of Europe, consisting of the islands of Cephalonia, Cerigo, Corfu, Ithaca, Santa Maura, Paxo, and Zante; lying in the sea around Greece. Descriptions of these islands are given under their respective names. The government is under the sole protection of Great Britain. Corfu is the capital, and the seat of a university. Population, about 225,000.

IONIAN PHILOSOPHY, a name by which that branch of cosmogonical speculation commenced by Thales of Miletus, and cultivated almost wholly by natives of Ionia, is sometimes called.

IONIAN SEA, the ancient classical name of that part of the Mediterranean Sea lying S. of the Adriatic, and between Italy and the Peloponnesus.

IONIC DIALECT, a branch of the Greek language spoken by the Ionians of Asia Minor. It is sometimes divided into the Old Ionic, in which Homer wrote, and the New Ionic, in which Herodotus wrote. But now the latter is generally called Ionic, and the former, as not peculiar to Ionia, the Homeric dialect.

IONIC ORDER, a. in Architecture, a species of column, which, in addition to greater delicacy of proportion than the Doric was characterized by, and the admission of flutings, had a peculiarly elegant scroll for its capital.

JONQUILLE, s. [jonquille, Fr.] in Botany, a common cultivated species of daffodil.

JOHNSON, BENJAMIN, a celebrated English dramatist, of the age of Shakspeare. He studied at Westminster school first, and then was forced to work as a bricklayer for his father-in-law.

But he entered the army and served in Flanders. Returning, he spent a little time at Cambridge, and then turned actor. Being imprisoned for a murder committed in a duel, it seems that his thoughts were turned to the drama; and on his release, encouraged by his great rival, he brought out his first play. He fell into difficulty once again by having labelled the Scots in one of his jointly composed plays, but he escaped. At length he was appointed poet-laureate; and when he died in 1637, aged 64 years, he was buried in Westminster Abbey. Rare Ben Jonson wrote many plays, and stands immeasurably superior to most of his fraternity of authors. He is thoroughly original; an acute observer; rich in thought;—but above all, he possesses consummate dramatic skill, and confounds by his elaborate art: he himself felt that, with much that formed a ground of sympathy, he was a complete contrast to Shakspeare.

JORDAN, a river of Palestine, which rises in the mountain of Antilibanus, and running from N. to S. passes through the Sea of Galilee or Lake of Tiberias, and empties itself into the Dead Sea.

JORULLO, or JURULLO, a volcanic mountain, seated in the centre of the high table-land of Mexico. It is 120 miles from the sea. In the years 1759, 1760, there was a very terrible eruption, and the heated matter ejected from the various craters opened then, and brought up to the surface, retained its heat, seemingly undiminished, for upwards of 20 years. Near it is a very remarkable elevation, about 30 square miles in extent, which, by the same eruption, was raised out of the great plain, to more than 500 feet in height, covered with small conical eminences, which constantly emit smoke. Jorullo is above 5000 feet higher than the sea level.

JOSEPH, the youngest son but one of the patriarch Jacob, and very greatly beloved by him, as the eldest-born of Rachel, his favourite wife. His history was most remarkable. By the malice of his brothers he was sold as a slave to Egypt, where, by skill in interpreting dreams,—which he showed when unjustly imprisoned by his master,—he was raised to a high dignity by Pharaoh. He preserved the land from the horrors of famine, but at the cost of reducing all the population, except the priest-hood, into serfdom; and he located his own family, who had suffered severely from the famine, in the most fertile part of Egypt, and died at the advanced age of 110 years.

JOSEPH, the name of two emperors of Germany, the second of whom, the son of Maria Theresa of Austria, after having maintained for some years the empty title and honour of his imperial dignity, by the name of his mother's army, succeeded her on the throne of Austria, and immediately aspired to the reputation of a reformer. He was such a reformer as a man of no religion and a despot at heart can be. Yet he established toleration,—with a little side persecution of the Catholics,—by which means he roused a revolution in the Low Countries, which not only severed that province from Austria, but also aided, amongst other things, to kindle the great French conflagration. He was also a great patron of education and learning, after a certain way; and he beat back the Turks, and took Belgrade. He died in 1790, having reigned over Austria 10 years, and been emperor for 25.

JOSEPHINE, the first wife of the emperor Napoleon Buonaparte. She was a native of Martinique, and married to the Viscount Beaubarnois: she returned to Martinique to witness the beginning of the servile war there, and escaped from it to witness the protracted horrors of the French Revolution. Her husband was guillotined, and she was imprisoned. Being released by the Thermidorians, she attracted young Buonaparte's notice, and was married to him. She shared all his feelings, and was his confidante. At length, having reached the top round of safety on ambition's ladder, he would ally himself to some old royal family, and divorced Josephine, herself consenting, and regarding it as a sacrifice to France, to marry Maria Louisa. Josephine resided at Malmaison, and died in 1814, aged 51 years.

JOSEPHUS, FLAVIUS, the Jewish historian, was of noble extraction, and carefully trained by his parents. He was early employed in a mission to Rome, and on his return took the command of the army of the Jews. During the wars which overthrew the nation, he commanded, and was taken prisoner; by which circumstance, he was enabled materially to aid his relatives and friends, when Jerusalem fell. He was received into great favour by the emperor Vespasian, and died about 95 A. D.

He wrote the Antiquities of the Jews, which is a history of the people, founded on the Bible narrative, down to the beginning of the last disastrous war; the history of which War of the Jews, he also wrote. He wrote against one Apion, in defence of his narrative. His writings are valuable, but are much lessened in worth by the evident straining after rhetorical effect, and affectation of imitating the Greek historians, who record long speeches, alleged to have been uttered by various parties.

JO SHUA, a very eminent Jewish warrior and legislator, who was one of those who left Egypt, and was employed as a spy to report on the appearance of the Promised Land, when all but himself and his companion reported falsely about it. At the death of Moses, he was appointed leader; and he conducted the Israelites safely over Jordan, led them to the conquest of the country, and settled them in it. He died aged 110 years. The Book called by his name, is a record of that part of the Jewish history which is comprised in his government, is undoubtedly authentic, and full of instruction.

To JOSTLE, v. a. [joust, Fr.] to rush or run against a person.

JOT, s. [from the Greek letter jota,] a point; a tittle; the least quantity that can be assigned.

JOVELLANOS, DON GASPARD MELCHIOR DE, a distinguished modern Spanish writer and statesman, who rose by his merit to be counsellor of state, when he was exiled for proposing a tax on church-dignitaries' property; he was banished again by Godoy, but on his fall was recalled, and regained his rank in the country. He fell at last in a popular tumult, in 1812, aged 68 years. His writings are chiefly poetical, lyric, dramatic, and translations.

JOVIAL, a. [joialis, from Jupiter or Jove,] in Astrology, under the influence of Jupiter. Gay; airy; elated with mirth.

JOVIALY, ad. in a merry, airy, or gay manner.

JOVIALNESS, s. the quality or state of being merry.

JOVIANUS, FLAVIUS CLAUDIUS, one of the late Roman emperors, successor to Julian the Apostate. He re-established Christian profession in the army; and was worsted by the Indian prince Sapor. He died in 363, having reigned but 7 months.

JOURNAL, (journal) s. [Fr.] a diary; an account of a person's daily transactions; a newspaper or review published daily, weekly, or even quarterly, containing the news of the day, or criticisms on books, &c. In Navigation, a book wherein is kept an account of the ship's way at sea, the changes of the wind, and other occurrences.

JOURNALIST, (journalist) s. a writer for the newspapers.

JOURNEY, (the o in this word and its compounds and derivatives is not pronounced, as journey, journeyman, &c.) s. [journee, Fr.] the distance travelled in a day. Figuratively, travel by land, distinguished from that by sea, which is styled a voyage. Passage from one place to another.

To JOURNEY, v. n. to travel or pass from one place to another. JOURNEYMAN, s. [journee, Fr. and man,] a person hired to work by the day; at present extended to signify a person who works under a master.

JOURNEYWORK, s. [journee, Fr. and work,] work performed for hire or wages.

JOUST, (just) s. [joust, Fr.] a name for a tilt or tournament, in which the combatants fought singly.

To JOUST, (just) v. a. [joust, Fr.] to tilt against a single combatant.

IOWA TERRITORY, United States, N. America. It borders on the territory of the Hudson's Bay Company, and is bounded by the territory of Wisconsin, and by the States of Illinois and Missouri. It is about 600 miles long, and about 250 broad, and is divided into 18 counties. The only high land is that which divides the basin of the Missouri from that of the Mississippi. Beside these two rivers, it is watered by the Iowa, the Des Moines river, &c. &c. The margins of the rivers are well wooded, but the greater part of the district is prairie. Where it is cultivated the soil is good, and yields corn, fruits, &c. Iowa is rich in minerals, but they are as yet but imperfectly worked. It has also good limestone and marble. Iowa city is the capital, and Burlington and Du Buque are respectively the chief seats of the trading and mining operations. Pop. 78,819.

JOY, s. [joye, Fr.] a delight of the mind arising from the consideration of a present, or assured approaching possession of a future good; the mirth which arises from success; gladness; pleasure; happiness.

To JOY, v. n. to rejoice; to be glad.—v. a. to congratulate; to affect with joy; to enjoy.

JOYCE, JEREMIAH, a scientific writer and compiler, who aided Dr. Gregory in making his Cyclopædia; wrote the Scientific Dialogues, and several similar works, with a Treatise on Arithmetic, yet employed largely. He was a Unitarian minister, and was included in the prosecution directed against Horne Tooke, Thelwall, and others. He died in 1816, aged 52 years.

JOYTUL, a. full of joy or pleasure on the possession, or certain expectation, of some good.

JOYTULY, ad. with gladness or pleasure, on account of possession, or certain expectation of some future good.

JOYTULNESS, s. the quality of receiving or feeling pleasure on the consideration of some present, or certain expectation of some future good.

JOYLESS, a. without joy; deprived of pleasure; sad.

JOYOUS, a. [joyeux, Fr.] glad; gay; merry; delighted.

IPECACUANA, s. in Materia Medica, a powder formed from the root of a plant found in S. America; much used as an emetic, and as an astrigent.

IPSWICH, Suffolk. It is an ancient but irregularly built town, seated on the river Orwell, forming a sort of half-moon, or crescent, on its bank. Across the river there is a bridge leading to Stoke Hamlet. Here are several public buildings and a custom-house, with a good quay, and docks. Its present commerce depends upon the masting and exportation of corn to London, and timber to the different dockyards. It has a considerable coasting trade, and a small share of foreign commerce, but vessels of great burden are obliged to stop at some distance below the town. It is 69 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Thursday for small meat, Wednesday and Friday for fish, and Saturday for provisions of all kinds. Pop. 24,940.

IRASCIBLE, a. [irascor, Lat.] easily provoked to anger; belonging to the passions of anger.

IRE, s. [Fr. ira, Lat.] hatred arising from considering a thing as capable of affecting, or having affected, us with an injury.

IREFUL, a. angry; raging.

IREFULLY, ad. in a manner which shows great anger.

IRELAND, one of the British islands, lying to the W. of that of Great Britain; from which it is separated by St. George's Channel, or the Irish Sea; whilst the ocean lies on every other side. It is about 287 miles in length, and 155 in breadth. It is divided into four provinces; viz. Ulster on the north, Munster on the south, Leinster on the east, and Connaught on the west; which are subdivided into 32 counties. There are some considerable mountains in Ireland, the chief of which are the Knock Patrick, Slieve Bloemoy, and Curlew hills. Of all its bogs, that called the Bog of Allen is the most considerable. The chief lakes are Lough Lean, Lough Erne, Lough Neagh, and Lough Corrib; and its principal rivers are the Shannon, Boyne, Barrow, Liffey, Nore, and Suir. The mineral productions of this country are copper, lead, iron, and silver, some of them in great quantities and of excellent quality. There are likewise quarries of marble, slate, and freestone, and in various places coal and turf for firing. The air is mild and temperate, but the climate is more humid than in England. In general, it is a fruitful country, well watered with lakes and rivers; and the soil, in most parts, is very good and fertile; but large tracts yet remain undrained and uncultivated; while much that is in cultivation does not produce what it might, for the want of a proper system of farming operation. All kinds of corn and other agricultural produce are yielded in abundance; and its linen manufactures are unequalled. It is exceedingly well situated for foreign trade, and has many secure and commodious bays, creeks, and harbours, especially on the W. coast. Dublin is its capital. Pop. 8,175,124. Ireland has 2 archbishops, and 11 bishops, 4 of whom, including one archbishop, are elected annually to sit in the English House of Lords. It sends also 28 peers (chosen for life) and 105 commoners to parliament. The lord lieutenant and his council are appointed by the king. Ireland is at present one of the most unhappy countries of Europe, and seems to have had heaped on it every ill political and social that can debase and brutify a nation. Its people are characterized by all the excellencies and by all the faults of a thoroughly uncultivated race; generosity and most ardent affection, with highly roused and implacable ferocity in hatred; contented submission to toil and privation, with indolence and indifference to self-improvement that are rarely removed in the course of some generations. Their national poems and songs are full of beauty and pathos, and are highly characteristic of the best features of the race. They are known in all parts of the world by these signs, and by their herculean powers for drudgery, and their broad humour and their bull. In early days this land was one of the chosen seats of learning and piety; the changes that have passed over Europe have not advanced it in either; but have deteriorated that rude cultivation by the admixture of almost every evil that flourishes with the growth of civilization. It has been treated by English legislation ever since it was seized, as a conquered country; the land has been held by parties who cared only for their rents, and who rarely or never visited it; so that rapacious agents and middlemen have plundered the farmers; and the system of subletting has been carried to an extent totally incompatible with either individual or social advantage. Every vestige of national independence has been swept away, and the Union with England has been a mockery and deceit. Martial law, administered by police and regular troops quartered throughout the land, has been the chief means employed in allaying irritation and discontent. And to add a crowning injustice, a branch of the Church of England has maintained itself on the hardly-gained property of the inhabitants, in defiance of an overwhelming numerical majority, and all the prejudices of the people, by the armed hand of the magistrate. The Irish patriots have been usually young men whose zeal was utterly destitute of judgment and knowledge, or crafty political adventurers and quacks. Above all, owing to the poverty (in money) of the country, seasons of scarcity have always been famines in Ireland; and sickly times, visitations of pestilence. Hopes of improvement are to be discovered most dimly, at present, only in the wide adoption of the pledge of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks; and in the introduction of corn instead of potatoes as the staple growth, and staple article of food amongst the people. Political freedom is not to be secured by the adoption of the outward forms of national independence; and political freedom seems to be the essential condition of religious freedom.

IRENÆUS, ST., bishop of Lyons in the 2nd century, a pupil of Polycarp, who wrote several works, all of which are lost except one against heresy, and was martyred in 202, aged about 100 years. Much doubt rests on his age, and the time and manner of his death. His work is not very valuable.

IRETON, HENRY, one of the leaders in the Puritan revolution of the 17th century. He had studied for the bar, but the gown gave place to arms, and he rose to the command of one wing of the army at Naseby. He married one of Cromwell's daughters, and was highly esteemed by him. Ireton accompanied the lord general to Ireland, and afterwards became lord deputy there; where he, unhappily for Ireland, died in 1651, aged 41 years.

IRIDIUM, s. [Iris, Gr.] in Chemistry, a metal of the appearance of platinum, but very brittle, and exceedingly infusible. It is said also to be very slightly affected by acids, and to be the heaviest of all the metals.

IRIS, s. [Lat.] the rainbow. In Botany, the flower-de-luce. In Anatomy, the circle round the pupil of the eye, from whence it receives the appellation of black, blue, &c. according to the colour. In Astronomy, the name of the last discovered of the asteroids. There are now 6 of these fragments known, designated by the names of Juno, Vesta, Ceres, Pallas, Astræa, Iris.

To IRK, v. a. [Teut.] to give pain, or make weary, used only impersonally; as, "It irks me," Shak.

IRKSOME, a. wearisome; affecting with pain or trouble.

IRKSOMELY, ad. in such a manner as-to pain, weary, or trouble.

IRKSOMENESS, s. tediousness; wearisomeness.

IRON, (turn) s. [Sax.] in Chemistry, the most familiar of the metals. It is of a peculiar gray colour, with a strong metallic lustre, which may be much heightened by polishing. It is fibrous in its texture, and it is brittle or ductile according as it cooled suddenly or gradually after having been heated. Its ductility is exceedingly great, and it is capable of being hammered to any required shape, or rolled into bars and sheets, or drawn into fine wire, when properly heated. It is not easily melted, and if very pure requires the highest temperature of a wind furnace. But when melted it is cast in a very great variety of forms, and is employed for some most commonly used, and most highly ornamental, articles. It is highly susceptible of magnetic influence; and, if hardened, may be rendered magnetic in various ways. When it is carburized by a special process it becomes steel. It is easily oxidized, having a strong affinity for oxygen; the orange-coloured rust, and the black scales that flake off heated iron, are oxides of iron. This metal, which is applied so endlessly in the furtherance of the comforts of mankind, and without which it is impossible to attain to civilization, is one of the most easily worked, and the most universally found, of all the metals. And it ought to be specially noticed, that the rock which contains the largest amount of iron ore lies next, in the order of superposition, to the coal-beds, where are found the means of smelting the ore, and to the mountain limestone, which acts as the best flux in the furnaces. Wrought iron is that kind of iron which, after being purified from the earthy parts, has been worked with hammers or rollers into its form, and is very tough and malleable. Cast iron, on the other hand, is that which has been run into moulds, and is exceedingly hard and brittle. Also, commonly, any instrument or utensil made of iron; a chain, shackle, or manacle; and in these senses it has a plural. IRON, a. made of iron; resembling iron in colour. Figuratively, harsh; severe; rigid; indissoluble; unbroken; hard; impenetrable.

To IRON, v. a. to smooth with an iron; to put on shackles or irons.

IRONICAL, a. expressing one thing and meaning another in a sneering manner.

IRONICALLY, ad. by the use of irony.

IRONMONGER, s. one who deals in iron.

IRON-MOULD, s. the spots produced in linen by ink and other fluids which contain iron.

IRONSTONE, s. in Mineralogy, a very compact and heavy kind of brown stone, having the appearance of exceedingly indurated clay, whence iron is extracted by the process of smelting.

IRONWOOD, s. a hard kind of wood, so ponderous as to sink in water.

IRON-WORKS, s. buildings erected for the purpose of smelting, purifying, and manufacturing iron on a large scale.

IRONWORT, s. in Botany, a name of the burnet.

IRONY, a. made of iron; partaking of iron.

IRONY, s. [ironia, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure wherein a person means one thing and expresses another; generally used as a sneer, as in commending a person for qualities which he has not.

IROQUOIS, the name of a tribe of N. American Indians, now nearly extinct, occupying a very scanty tract near the river St. Lawrence. They are also called Mohawks, and were amongst the native tribes who were bribed to take part in the Revolutionary war; by which, and European vices and diseases, they have been thus reduced.

IRRADIANCE, IRRA'DIANCY, s. [irradio, from radius, Lat.] the emission of rays of light on any subject; a sparkling; beams of glittering light emitted or reflected.

To IRRADIANTE, v. a. to brighten. To illumine, applied to the mind. To animate with heat or rays; to adorn with something shining.

IRRADIATION, s. the act of emitting beams of light, or glittering; the state of a thing made to glitter. Illumination, or knowledge, applied to the mind.

IRRATIONAL, (irráshonal) a. [in and ratio, Lat.] void of reason or understanding, void of the powers of reason; absurd, or contrary to reason.

IRRATIONALITY, (irráshonality) s. the quality of being void of reason.

IRRATIONALLY, (irráshonally) ad. in a manner inconsistent with reason; absurdly.

IRRECLAIMABLE, a. not to be altered by instruction, threats, or persuasions.

IRRECONCILABLE, a. [irréconcilable, Fr.] not to be appeased or made to agree.

IRRECONCILABLENESS, s. impossibility to be reconciled.

IRRECONCILABLY, ad. in a manner not admitting a reconciliation.

IRRECONCILED, a. not atoned, or expiated.

IRRECOVERABLE, a. not to be regained, restored, or repaired; not to be remedied.

IRRECOVERABLY, ad. in a manner beyond recovery, or past all cure or remedy.

IRREDUCIBLE, ad. not to be reduced.

IRREFRAGABILITY, s. strength of argument not to be refuted.

IRREFRAGABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be confuted, applied to argument.

IRREFRAGABLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be confuted.

IRREFUTABLE, a. [in and refuto, Lat.] not to be overthrown or confuted.

IRREGULAR, a. [in and regula, Lat.] deviating from, or contrary to, any rule, standard, custom, or nature; immethodical; not consistent with the rules of morality.

IRREGULARITY, s. [irregularité, Fr.] the act of deviating from, or doing any thing contrary to, a rule; neglect of method or order; an action done contrary to the rules of morality.

IRREGULARLY, ad. without observation or rule, method or duty.

TO IRREGULATE, v. a. to make irregular; to disturb the order of time.

IRRELATIVE, a. [in and relativus, Lat.] having no reference or relation to any thing; single; unconnected.

IRRELIGION, s. [Fr.] contempt or want of religion.

IRRELIGIOUS, a. [irreligieux, Fr.] contemning or having no religion; impious; contrary to religion.

IRRELIGIOUSLY, ad. in an impious manner.

IRREMEABLE, a. [in and remeo, Lat.] not to be repassed; admitting no return.

IRREME/DIABLE, a. [Fr.] admitting no cure or remedy.

IRREME/DIABLY, ad. in a manner admitting no cure or remedy.

IRREMISSEABLE, a. [Fr.] not to be pardoned.

IRREMISSEABLENESS, s. the quality of admitting no pardon.

IRREMOVABLE, a. not to be moved, changed, or affected.

IRREPARABLE, a. [in and reparo, Lat.] not to be recovered; not to be restored to its former state.

IRREPARABLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be recovered or restored to its former state.

IRREPLE/VIALE, a. in Law, not to be redeemed.

IRREPREHENSIBLE, a. [Fr.] not to be blamed.

IRREPREHENSIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be blamed.

IRREPRO/ACHABLE, (irreprochable) a. free from blame or reproach.

IRREPRO/ACHABLY, (irreprochably) ad. in a manner not deserving blame or reproach.

IRREPRO/VABLE, a. not to be blamed or found fault with.

IRRESISTIBILITY, s. the quality of being above all resistance.

IRRESISTIBLE, a. [Fr.] superior to all resistance or opposition.

IRRESISTIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be hindered from effecting its design or end; in a manner not to be opposed.

IRRESOLUBLE, a. [in and resolvio, Lat.] not to be broken or dissolved.

IRRESOLUBLENESS, s. the quality of having its parts not to be broken or dissolved.

IRRESOLVEDLY, ad. without any fixed or positive determination of the will.

IRRESOLUTE, a. [irrésolu, Fr.] not constant in purpose; not fixed in one determination; continually varying in one's choice.

IRRESOLUTELY, ad. without firmness of mind or determination.

IRRESOLUTION, s. [Fr.] want of fixed and settled determination of mind.

IRRESPECTIVE, a. having no respect to persons or circumstances.

IRRESPECTIVELY, ad. without respect to circumstances.

IRRETREIVABLE, (irretrievable) a. not to be recovered or repaired.

IRRETREIVABLY, (irretrievably) ad. in a manner not to be recovered or repaired.

IRREVERENCE, s. [in and revereor, Lat.] want of veneration or respect; a state wherein a person has not that respect paid to him which is due to his rank and dignity.

IRREVERENT, a. [Fr.] not paying, expressing, or conceiving ing the homage, veneration, or respect, due to the character or dignity of a person.

IRREVERENTLY, ad. without due homage, respect, or veneration.

IRREVE/RSIBLE, a. not to be reversed, abrogated, or altered.

IRREVE/RSIBLY, ad. in a manner not to be reversed or changed.

IRRE/VOCABLE, a. [in and revoco, Lat.] not to be recalled, brought back, or reversed.

IRRE/VOCABLY, ad. without recovery or recall.

TO IRRIGATE, v. a. [irrigo, Lat.] to moisten or water. Applied chiefly to land.

IRRIGATION, s. the act of watering, wetting, or moistening.

IRRIGUOUS, a. watery or watered; dewy or moist.

IRR/PSION, s. [in and rideo, Lat.] the act of deriding, mocking, or laughing at another.

IRRITABILITY, s. that peculiar constitution of body, which inclines a person to be easily affected by stimulants. It is often applied to the mind, and is evident in fretful tempers.

TO IRRITATE, v. a. [irrito, Lat.] to provoke to anger; to tease. To cause inflammation, applied to wounds. Figuratively, to heighten any quality.

IRRITATION, s. the act of provoking, exasperating, or stimulating.

IRR/UPTION, s. [irrumpe, Lat.] the act of any thing forcing an entrance; an inroad, or forcible entry of an enemy into any place.

IS, 3rd pers. sing. pres. tense indicative, from the verb TO BE. After words ending in a vowel it is colloquially and poetically contracted thus, "There's some," Shak.

ISABELLA, the queen of Ferdinand V. of Aragon, and heiress to the throne of Castile; who shared her husband's valour, wisdom, and taste for magnificence; and has been ever associated with him in fame, both because of the great geographical discoveries made under her patronage as well as Ferdinand's; and because of the union of the two crowns, which resulted from their marriage. See FERDINAND V. She was an able sovereign; but she was a usurper. She died in 1504, aged 53 years.

ISATIAH, the most eminent of all the Jewish prophets, who was related to the royal family of Judah; and prophesied during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, being (according to tradition) most cruelly martyred by Manasseb. During his long ministry happened the invasion of Judea by the Assyrians, and the destruction of their army by the simoom, just as they expected to overthrow the city and the temple of God. This event, with what led to the invasion, is much dwelt on by the prophet. Isaiah's work, like that of all the Hebrew prophets, was the reproof of the national and individual sins, the threatening of punishment, and the promise of blessings to the penitent and pious. But with him the promises appear to be most numerous, and most distinctly referable to the Lord Jesus Christ. The allusions to some characteristics of his mission are so frequent and so distinct, that they look like historic rather than prophetic poetry. In many parts, his addresses are most entirely evangelical. The way in which these predictions were realized; the fulfilment of his predictions respecting Babylon, Tyre, Egypt, Idumea, and other nations surrounding Judea; and the very remarkable and distinct announcement of the very name of the king who was to restore Israel from bondage; are most satisfactory proofs of the Divine authority of the message of this prophet, independently of the character of his announcements. No one of the Hebrew writers equals Isaiah. For didactic clearness and force, and for pathos of entreaty and appeal, for touches of pastoral simplicity, for graphic skill, for gorgeous splendour of imagery and diction, and for pictures of appalling grandeur and terror, he stands unrivalled. The prophecies are plainly not arranged according to their dates, which has produced great confusion, and given rise to many very unsupported theories respecting the book of late. Isaiah was put to death about 690 B. C.

ISCHIA/DIC, (iskiddik) a. [ischias, Gr.] in Anatomy, a name given to the crural veins, called the greater and the lesser ischias. It signifies also a disease or pain of the hip, and is commonly called sciatica.

ISCHURY, (iskúry) s. [ischouria, Gr.] in Medicine, a disorder consisting of an entire suppression of urine.

Is'rc, a department of France, bordering on Savoy, and bounded by the departments of Hautes Alpes, Drôme, Ardèche, Haute Loire, Rhône, and Ain. It is about 90 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is exceedingly mountainous, and its chief peaks are above 10,000 feet in height. The Rhône, the Isère, (whence it is named,) and the Drac, are its chief rivers. It is very productive in iron, lead, coal, &c. &c., and there are quarries for building-stone and marble. It also yields corn, fruits, wine, timber in great variety and abundance, silk, and cattle. The chamois and other wild Alpine animals are also hunted for their skins, &c. This department has also some profitable manufactures, and its trade is very good. Grenoble is its capital. Pop. about 600,000.

ISII, [isc, Sax.] a termination added to words, expresses diminution, or lessening the sense of the word, if joined to an adjective; as, blueish, tending to blue. When added to a substantive, it implies likeness, or partaking the qualities of the substantive to which it is added; as foolish, wolfish, roguish. When added to the name of a country, it implies something belonging to or living in it; as Sveedish, Danish.

ISIDORE, the name of two saints in the Romish calendar; one surnamed from Pelusium, where he is represented as having lived in a kind of epistolary retirement; but many of the thousands of polemical and other letters ascribed to him are forgeries: —the other was a learned bishop of Seville, whose commentaries, annals, and liturgies are valuable and curious. He died in 636.

ISINGLASS, s. a kind of glue, or gelatine, very highly purified, made from the intestines of a cartilaginous fish, which is a species of sturgeon, and used in confectionery and medicines, to make a kind of jelly, &c.; and by wine coopers it is used in clearing wines.

ISIS, in ancient Egyptian Mythology, one of the chief goddesses, worshipped as a cow, with a very licentious ritual. The worship of Isis, with which was connected a great show of mystery and purity, and unmitigated impurity in reality, became very fashionable in the Roman empire, about the Christian era. Isiac mysteries were religious and philosophical quackeries, at first intended as a symbolical representation of the purification of the soul by knowledge, &c. There was a great deal of ingenious mechanical, optical, and chemical skill displayed in the ceremonies by which the various ordeals for the neophyte were prepared and exhibited.

ISLAM, s. [Arab.] submission; the name of the religion of Mohammed, because of the chief characteristic of it, in the thought of its founder.

ISLAND, (iland) s. [ealand, Erse,] a tract of land surrounded by water.

ISLANDER, (ilander) s. one who inhabits an island.

ISLAY, or Ila, one of the Western Isles of Scotland, to the S. W. of Jura, from which it is separated by a narrow strait. Its greatest length is 31 miles, and its breadth about 24. The face of the country is hilly. Here are mines of copper, emery, quicksilver, lead ore, and black lead; with immense stores of lime-stone, marl, coral, and shell-sand for manure. Some corn and flax are raised here, and numerous droves of cattle are annually exported. The goats that feed among the rocks are so wild, that they are shot like deer. Bowmore is its chief place. Including two small islands near it, its population is 18,071.

ISLE, (île) s. [isle, Fr.] an island, or country surrounded by water.

ISLIP, Oxfordshire. The chapel wherein Edward the Confessor was baptized, at a small distance N. from the church, yet remains, and is called the king's chapel. There are also some remains of an ancient palace, said to have been King Ethelred's. It has a good market for sheep, and is 50 miles from London. Population, 674.

ISOCHRONAL, ISOCHRONOUS, (isokronal, isokronous) a. [isos and chronos, Gr.] such vibrations of a pendulum as are performed in the same space of time.

ISOCRATES, an eminent Greek rhetorician. He wrote many orations, some of which have been preserved, and are greatly admired for their elegant style, and the rhythmical flow of their periods. He was not a public speaker; but he composed speeches for others, and taught others the art of rhetoric. He had been trained by some of the most eminent sophists, but he did not act as a sophist; enjoying a most unexceptionable reputation. His patriotism was intense, and after the defeat of Chæronæa, he saved himself to death, in 338, aged 98 years.

ISOMERIC, a. [isos and meros, Gr.] in Chemistry, composed of the same elementary substances, in the same proportions.

ISOMORPHIC, a. [isos and morphe, Gr.] in Mineralogy, assuming the same form of crystal.

ISOPERIMETRIC, a. [isos and perimetron, Gr.] in Geometry, such figures as have equal perimeters or circumferences, of which the circle is the greatest.

ISOCELES, s. [isos and skele, Gr.] applied to a triangle which has two sides equal.

ISOTHERMAL, a. [isos and thermos, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, equal in average temperature. Applied to certain lines drawn on globes to indicate the parts which have the same average temperature.

ISPAHAN, one of the capitals of Persia, in Asia. It stands in the middle of a plain, surrounded on all sides with mountains at eight miles distance, which rise gradually in the form of an amphitheatre. There is a small river, called Senderit, which supplies almost all the houses with water. It is 20 miles in circumference, with well-built houses, and a great number of magnificent places, that of the king being two miles and a half in circumference. There are great numbers of mosques, caravansaries, public baths, and coffee-houses, and very fine bazaars and streets, in which are canals planted on each side with trees. It is 265 miles N. E. of Bassorah, and 1400 S. E. of Constantinople. Pop. about 100,000. Lat. 32. 25. N. Long. 52. 50. E.

ISRAELITES, s. the descendants of Israel or Jacob, who are also called Hebrews, and Jews.

ISSUE, s. [Fr.] the act of passing out; passage outwards; an event, or the consequence of any action. In Surgery, a hole made in the flesh by incision, for a continued discharge. In Law, progeny, offspring; the profits growing from an amercement; the point of matter depending on a suit, wherein the parties join, and put the cause to the trial of a jury; hence, to join issue, is to agree upon some particular point, on which the decision of a cause shall rest.

To ISSUE, v. n. [uscire, Ital.] to come or pass out at any place. To proceed, applied to offspring. To be produced or gained, applied to funds or trade.—v. a. to send out by authority or judicially, used with out; this sense is most common.

ISSUELESS, a. without offspring or children.

ISTHMIAN GAMES, a national solemnity of Ancient Greece, held near Corinth, once in 4 years; when the victors in racing, boxing, wrestling, &c. received crowns of pine leaves.

ISTHMUS, (istmus) s. [Lat.] in Geography, is a narrow neck of land that joins two continents, or joins a peninsula to the terra firma, and separates two seas. The most celebrated isthmuses are that of Panama, or Darien, which joins North and South America; and that of Suez, which connects Asia and Africa; that of Corinth, of Crim Tatar, &c.

IT, pron. [it, Sax.] the neuter demonstrative, made use of in speaking of things. Sometimes it is used absolutely for the state of a person or affair; sometimes elliptically for the thing, matter, or affair.

ITALY, a large peninsula of S. Europe, extending in a very peculiar shape into the Mediterranean Sea, by which and the Gulf of Venice it is almost surrounded, being divided from the rest of Europe by the semi-circular mountain range of the Alps. Beside the Gulf of Venice, or Adriatic Sea, round Italy are the Gulfs of Genoa, Naples, Salerno, Tarento, &c., and the principal capes are those of Spartivento, Leuca, and Testa. The range of the Apennines runs in a wavy line the whole length of Italy, and divides near the S. extremity. The streams are numerous, and of them the Po, with its many tributaries, is the largest, and the Tiber and the Arno next in magnitude. The climate of the greater part of Italy is most delicious, but in the mountainous parts it is often very severe; whilst in many parts it is so unwholesome, that large districts are deserted in the summer-time from dread of the miasmata. The land is fruitful, but it has never yet been adequately farmed. It does produce corn and other grain, but fruits, wine, silk, olive-oil, are its chief productions. It also abounds in good pasturage. The rich and varied scenery makes Italy a land of great resort with tourists. Here too, sculpture, painting, and music, seem to have especially taken up their abode; but the chefs d'œuvres are all the productions of times of greater political freedom than Italy has for ages enjoyed. The chief arts cultivated are those of operatic performances; and this is not an unfair criterion respecting the people. They are voluptuous, polished, crafty, fierce in revenge, and profoundly superstitious. The N. part is occupied by the Austrian dominions, including Lombardy, or Milan, and Venice; and the dominions of the king of Sardinia: the central part, by the grand duchy of Tuscany; the duchies of Parma, Lucca, and Modena; the republic of San Marino; and the States of the Church: and the kingdom of Naples occupies all the S. extremity. These states are described under their respective titles. There is great uncertainty, however, about them, as revolutionary movements are witnessed every day; and the ancient opposition to imperial influence is most actively revived. The population of the whole peninsula, with the adjacent and connected islands of Sicily, Sardinia, Elba, &c., is about 25,000,000.

ITALIAN LANGUAGE, that branch of the dialect descended from the ancient Latin tongue, which is spoken in Italy. It is exceedingly soft and melodious; but the peculiarities of some provinces differ exceedingly from the cultivated speech. There are some of the finest poems and similar works, and some of the profoundest works of science and philosophy, with history, written in this language, to reward the student.

ITCH, s. [gicha, Sax.] in Medicine, a disease which appears as a pustulous eruption, and is excessively irritating. It is also communicated by contact; and sulphur seems to be a specific cure for it. It is believed that minute insects are the cause of it. To ITCH, v. n. to feel an uneasiness in the skin, which is removed by rubbing; to have a long and continual desire and propensity.

ITCHINGTON, BISHOP'S, Warwickshire, so called from the bishops of Litchfield and Coventry, once its possessors. It is situated on the river Leche, and was anciently one of the chief towns in the county. It is 100 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 463.

ITEM, s. [Lat.] an article in a bill or account.—ad. in Law, in wills means also, "Item, I give and bequeath."

ITERANT, part. [itero, Lat.] repeating.

To ITERATE, v. a. to repeat the same thing; to inculcate by frequent mention or repetition; to do a second time.

ITERATION, s. repetition or recital.

ITHACA, one of the Ionian Islands, lying between Cephalonia and the continent. It is about 10 miles long, and 5 broad. It is hilly, and produces abundance of corn, wine, raisins, currants, &c. Bathi is its chief place. Pop. about 10,000. The inhabitants call it Ithaki.

ITINERANT, a. [Fr. from iter, Lat.] wandering; not settled; travelling.

ITINERARY, s. a book of travels.

ITINERARY, a. travelling; done on a journey.

ITSELF, pron. [hit and syf, Sax.] the neutral reciprocal pronoun, applied to things.

ITURBIDE, AUGUSTINE, the leader of the Mexican revolution, and first emperor of that country. He was a soldier in the Mexican army, and of distinguished courage and skill; who having obtained the confidence of the troops, planned and effected, in the distractions of the times, the overthrow of the Spanish rule. His ambition in seizing the empire led to his own downfall. His usurpations produced such discontent that he abdicated, and proceeded to Italy, whence he returned to attempt the recovery of the throne; but the leaders of the republic apprehended him and he was shot, in 1824, aged 40 years.

JUAN FERNANDEZ, an island in the S. Sea, about 12 miles long, and 6 wide. It is 330 miles W. of the coast of Chili, parallel with St. Jago. It is uninhabited, but having a good harbour on the N. coast, called Cumberland Bay, it is found extremely convenient to touch at and water. Lat. 33. 40. S. Long. 83. W.

JUBILANT, part. [jubilo, Lat.] uttering songs of triumph.

JUBILATION, s. the act of uttering songs of triumph, or of declaring triumph.

JUBILEE, s. [jubilæ, Fr.] a public festivity; a time of rejoicing; a great church festival celebrated at Rome, originally once every hundred years, wherein the pope grants plenary indulgences. Among the Jews, a festival held once in 50 years, with great solemnity and joy; at which slaves were manumitted, and the land reverted to the original owners of it.

JUCUNDITY, s. [jucundus, Lat.] pleasantness, agreeableness.

JUDAISM, s. the system of ecclesiastical and political affairs established by Divine direction amongst the Jews, and maintained by them, with much faded glory, as their religion to this hour, in their dispersion and persecution.

To JUDAIZE, v. n. [judaizer, Fr.] to conform to the manners or customs of the Jews.

JUDE, or JUDAS, also called THADDEUS and LEBBEUS, was brother of James the Less, and one of our Lord's apostles; but nothing is recorded concerning him in sacred history. A General Epistle is ascribed to him, and appears to be genuine, although rejected by some from the first ages. It was written to expose and to threaten the evil-livers, or heretics of the times, and has the same scope as some other of the general epistles, being particularly like the 2nd Epistle of Peter. The apocryphal books, called the Ascension of Moses, and the Book of Enoch, are quoted in it; which has occasioned great trouble to some, who forget that quotation by a sacred writer does not change the original value of a writing, and that Paul has quoted a Greek comedian.

JUDGE, s. [juge, Fr.] one who is empowered or authorized to hear and determine any cause or question, real or personal, and presides in a court of judicature. Figuratively, one who has skill sufficient to discover and pronounce upon the merit of any thing.

To JUDGE, v. n. [juger, Fr.] to decide or determine a question; to pass sentence; to discern or distinguish.

JUDGER, s. one who forms an opinion or passes sentence.

JUDGES, the name of a Book of the Old Testament, recording the history of the Israelites after the death of Joshua, under the guidance of persons specially appointed by God as chieftains, &c. till the death of Samson. There are also some sketches of the state of society at the time, highly instructive, and most useful to be understood, in order to the proper understanding of the subsequent Jewish history.

JUDGMENT, s. [Fr.] that act of the mind by which the agreement or non-agreement of two notions is discerned; the assertion of such agreement or non-agreement; the quality or power of discerning the propriety and impropriety of things; the right, power, or act of passing sentence; decision; opinion; sentence passed against a criminal; condemnation or punishment inflicted by Providence for any particular crime; the distribution of justice; the sentence passed on our actions on the last day; the last doom.

JUDICATORY, s. [judicio, Lat.] distribution of justice; a court of justice.

JUDICATURE, s. [Fr.] the power or province of dispensing justice, or hearing causes and passing sentence.

JUDICIAL, (judishial) a. practised in the distribution of justice, or in a court of justice; inflicted as a penalty; belonging to a judge or court of justice.

JUDICIALLY, (judishially) ad. in the forms of legal justice; in a court of justice; before a judge.

JUDICIARY, (judishary) a. passing judgment upon any thing.

JUDICIOUS, (judishious) a. [judicieux, Fr.] prudent; wise; skilful in any affair.

JUDICIOUSLY, (judishiously) ad. in a manner which speaks an extensive judgment or understanding; justly or wisely.

JUDITH, one of the books classed amongst the Apocrypha of the Old Testament. It records the piety and valour by which a Jewish maiden saved Bethulia, by assassinating Holofernes, the general of the Assyrians, who was besieging it. It has no historic value at all, being palpably a romance.

JVES, ST., Cornwall. A sea-port seated on a bay of the same name, which trades largely in pilchards and Cornish slates. It is 277 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 5666.

JVES, ST., Huntingdonshire. It has the largest market in England for cattle, except that of Smithfield; and is an ancient, large, and handsome place, seated on the river Ouse, over which it has a fine stone bridge. It is 59 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 3514.

JUG, s. [jugge, Dan.] a large drinking vessel with a long neck, swelling out towards the bottom.

JUGGERNAUT, a famous temple and idol in Orissa, Hindustan, of one of the appearances of Vishnu. At the annual festival, immense crowds come together from all India; and some devotees throw themselves under the wheels of the car in which the hideous idol is drawn, and expect by dying so to merit heaven.

TO JUGGLE, v. n. [jouger, Fr.] to play tricks by sleight of hand; to practise or impose on by artifice and imposture.

JUGGLE, s. a trick performed by sleight of hand; an imposture, fraud, or deception.

JUGGLER, s. one who practises sleight of hand, or performs tricks by nimble conveyance; a cheat or impostor.

JUGGLINGLY, ad. in an unfair or deceitful manner.

JUGULAR, a. [jugulum, Lat.] situated in, or belonging to, the throat.

JIVICA, one of the Balearic islands, in the Mediterranean, about 15 miles long, and 12 wide, subject to Spain. It is mountainous, but fertile in corn, wine, and fruits; and remarkable for the great quantity of salt made in it. The capital is of the same name, seated on a bay, with a good harbour, and a population of about 7000. Lat. 39. 30. N. Long. 1. 25. E.

JUICE, (pron. juee, both in this word and its derivatives.) s. [jus, Fr. jus, Belg.] the liquor, sap, or water of a plant; the fluid or moisture in animal bodies.

JUICELESS, a. dry; without moisture or juice.

JUICINESS, s. plenty of juice or moisture, applied both to plants and animals.

JUICY, a. moist; full of moisture or juice.

JUJUBES, s. a kind of confection made with gum arabic.

TO JUKE, v. n. [jucher, Fr.] to perch as birds do upon a tree.

JULEP, s. [Fr.] in Pharmacy, an agreeable potion usually made of waters sweetened, and used sometimes as a vehicle to such medicines as cannot be taken alone. Also, a kind of intoxicating drink.

JULIAN ERA, s. in Chronology, an epoch fixed by the reformation of the calendar by Julius Caesar, who introduced the intercalary day in leap-year, and divided the months into the number of days they now contain. This was further improved by Gregory XIII. Julian Period, is a term of years produced by the multiplication of the lunar cycle, 19, the solar cycle, 28, and the Roman indiction, 15, together, and consists of 7980 years, beginning 4713 before the Christian era. Julian Year, the year according to Old Style, as fixed by the Julian reformation of the calendar.

JULIANUS, FLAVIUS CLAUDIUS, commonly called the Apostate, emperor of Rome, after his cousin Constantine. He was professedly a Christian till he ascended the throne, and then he avowed himself a philosophical pagan, and restored the ancient heathen worship and profession in the empire, as far as he could. He endeavoured, further, by his writings, by bribery, by oppression and spoliation, to destroy Christianity. He even attempted to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem, but was prevented by some circumstances, which the superstition of the times regarded as miraculous. He entered on an extensive expedition against the Persians, in which he fell, in 363, aged 32 years, having reigned about 2. He was learned and wise, and deserved the eulogies bestowed on him as a ruler. His hatred of Christianity arose from his disgust at the character and conduct of the greater number of the ecclesiastics of his day, and his intimate acquaintance with the Neo-Platonic philosophy. With all his determined opposition to it, he more nearly approached it in his own character than the Christian emperors did who had preceded him.

JULIUS, the pontifical name of three popes of Rome, the second of whom was famed for his warlike predilections and his taste for the arts. His career was that of a military commander, rather than of a supreme bishop of a church, and the result of all his campaigns was far from favourable to Italy or to Rome. He died in 313, having been pope for 10 years.

JULY, s. [Julius, Lat.] the name affixed to the seventh month of the year from January, by the Romans, in honour of Julius Cæsar, which before his time was named Quintilis, or the fifth, i. e. from March.

TO JUMBLE, v. a. to mix in a confused and violent manner together.—v. n. to be agitated or shaken together.

JUMBLE, s. a confused mixture; a violent and confused shaking.

TO JUMP, v. n. [gumpen, Belg.] to move forward by raising oneself from the ground into the air; to leap; to jolt.

JUMP, s. the act of springing or raising one's feet from the ground in the air; a leap, or skip. Figuratively, a lucky chance.

JUNCATE, s. [juncade, Fr.] a cheese-cake; any kind of delicacy; a private or clandestine entertainment; it is generally written juchake.

JUNCUS, s. [juncus, Lat.] full of bulrushes.

JUNCTION, s. [junction, Fr.] union; coalition.

JUNCTURE, s. [jungo, Lat.] the line or part in which two things are joined together; a joint, joining, or articulation; union; a critical point or period of time.

JUNE, s. [Junius, Lat.] the sixth month of the year from January.

JUNIOR, s. [Lat.] a person younger than another.

JUNIPER, s. [juniperus, Lat.] in Botany, a kind of shrub, belonging to the pine tribe, whose berries are used to flavour gin.

JUNIUS, the name assumed by a political writer of the last century, whose letters occasioned great excitement, but are not very highly regarded now. The only thing which has preserved any interest in them, being the mystery which yet envelops the writer. They have been attributed lately to Sir Philip Francis, and to Lord George Sackville, but without any preponderance of proof either way.

JUNK, s. [jumo, Span.] a small ship used in China; pieces of old cable.

JUNKET, s. See JUNCATE.

JUNO, in Mythology, a goddess; the daughter of Saturn and Ops, the sister and wife of Jupiter. In Astronomy, the name of one of the asteroids, or small planets revolving in very perplexed orbits between Mars and Jupiter.

JUNTO, s. [Ital.] a company of men combined in any secret design; a cabal.

IVORY, s. [ivoire, Fr.] the substance of the tusks of the elephant, which is much used in articles of luxury and comfort.

IVORY BLACK, s. in Commerce, &c., carbonized bone and similar animal substances. It is extensively used to decolourize organic solutions.

IVORY COAST, a country of Africa, on the coast of the Atlantic, between Cape Apollonia and Cape Palmas. The chief commodities are gold, ivory, and slaves; the former in the greatest plenty.

JUPITER, in Latin Mythology, the sovereign god, son of Saturn and Ops, married to his sister Juno, occupying his throne by revolt against his father, and famous chiefly for his numerous and infamous amours. He is generally confounded with Zeus, who held the like place amongst the Greek deities, and whose history furnished many particulars for his. In Astronomy, the largest planet of the solar system, revolving next beyond the orbits of the asteroids, at a distance of about 490,000,000 of miles from the sun, in a period nearly equal to 12 of our years. His rotation on his own axis is effected in about 10 hours; and his diameter is nearly 90,000 miles, so that in bulk he equals the combined bulk of all the other planetary bodies. In appearance he is spheroidal, and his disc is crossed by cloudy and variable belts. He is attended by 4 moons, whose eclipses furnish us with a very beautiful means for ascertaining the difference of time or longitude between any two places on the earth; and thus he is a miniature representation of the solar system itself, and affords a very compendious means for the study of its phenomena and laws. He is the most easily observed of all the planets, but a good telescope is required to show his belts and moons.

JURA, one of the Hebrides or Western Isles of Scotland, lying between Islay and the coast of Argyll. It is about 30 miles long, and 6 broad, and is very mountainous, some points being above 1000 feet high. Its coast is broken by numerous and deep bays, and it is watered by many small streams. It furnishes some pastures, which feed goats and sheep. It forms one parish with several other small islands, whose united population is 2299.

JURA, the name of some mountain ranges lying in the E. of France, the W. of Germany, and the N. W. of Switzerland. They are connected with the Vosges by some intermediate heights. In length they stretch about 400 miles, and their breadth, between the lake of Geneva and the river Doubs, is about 150 miles, but they are generally much narrower. The highest peak, Le Remlet, is about 5600 feet high, and many exceed 4000 feet. The Ain and the Doubs and other feeders of the Rhone, with some feeders of the Rhine in the opposite direction, flow from these mountains.

JURA, a department of France, bordering on Switzerland, and bounded by the departments of Doubs, Haute Saône, Côte d'or, Saône et Loire, and Ain. It is about 70 miles long, and 40 broad. The Juristic mountain chain (which gives the department its name) traverses the S. E. part; its greatest heights are about 4000 feet. The rivers are the Doubs with its tributaries, and the Ain with its. Corn and wine are abundantly produced; cattle and sheep are also reared in considerable numbers. It produces, besides, honey, timber, game, &c. &c.; and, in the mineral department, iron, coal, limestone, (especially that kind used in lithography,) and some marble. Lons-le-Saunier is its chief place. Pop. about 325,000.

JURAT, s. [juratus, Fr.] a magistrate of the nature of an alderman.

JURATORY, a. [juratoire, Fr.] by means of, or by giving, an oath.

JURIDICAL, a. [jus and dico, Lat.] acting in the distribution of justice; used in the courts of justice.

JURIDICALLY, ad. with legal authority; according to forms of justice.

JURISDICTION, s. legal authority; extent of power; a district in which authority belongs.

JURISPRUDENCE, s. [jus and prudencia, Lat.] the science of the law, either civil or common.

JURIST, s. [juriste, Fr.] one who professes the science of the law; a civilian.

JUROR, s. [juror, Lat.] one who serves on a jury.

JURY, s. [juré, Fr.] a company of men, consisting of twelve or twenty-four, and sworn to deliver a truth upon such evidence as shall be laid before them touching the cause they are to decide. The grand jury consists ordinarily of twenty-four grave and substantial gentlemen, or some of them yeomen, chosen out of the whole shire by the sheriff, to consider of all bills of indictment preferred to the court, which they approve of by writing billâ vera, or disallow by writing ignoramus, on them. Petty jury, are those who try the cases brought into court from the grand jury. A special jury, is a jury composed of parties chosen from a list specially prepared by the sheriffs of counties, consisting of the squires and persons of similar standing in the county: on the application of one party in a cause, a ballot is taken for 48 names from the list; each party then removes 12 names, and the first 12 who answer to their names in court are the jury. Trial by jury, is a form of administering justice, of very old standing in England, and is generally, but incorrectly, ascribed to Alfred the Great. It was the insensible growth of centuries of Saxon and Anglo-Norman legislation. It is undoubtedly one of the most valuable institutions of the country, but it needs some modification now to adapt it to the advanced state of society, and make it more effectually serve the purpose it has hitherto, generally, so admirably fulfilled.

JURYMAN, s. one who is impanelled on a jury.

JURYMAST, s. something set up in the room of a mast lost in a fight or storm.

JUSSIEU, the name of four eminent French botanists; three brothers, who obtained distinction early, but were eclipsed by the fame of one in the second generation, Antoine, who was the inventor of the natural system of classifying plants, which, improved by the study and care of subsequent investigators, has nearly supplanted the artificial system of Linnaeus. He was professor of Botany in the Jardin des Plantes, and died in 1836, aged 88 years.

JUST, a. [justus, Lat.] unbiassed in distribution of justice; honest in dealing with others; exact, proper, accurate, or agreeable to the standard of justice; virtuous, or living conformably to the laws of morality; true; well grounded; proportionate; regular.

JUST, ad. exactly; merely, or barely; nearly, or not far from.

JUSTICE, s. [justicia, Lat.] the virtue whereby we give every one their due, inflict punishment on those that deserve it, and acquit the innocent after a fair trial. Figuratively, punishment; right, or the act whereby a person asserts his rights. In Law, it is a person deputed by the king to administer justice to his subjects. Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, is a lord by his office, and chief of the rest; he determines all such pleas as concern offences committed against the crown, dignity, or peace of the king. Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, is a lord by his office, and formerly did hear and determine all causes in common law; from whence arose his title. Justice of the Forests, is a lord by his office, and with his assistants determines all offences within the king's forests, committed against venison and vert. Justices of Assize, are such as by special commission are sent into the country to take assizes. Justices in Eyre, or itinerant justices, (from erre, Fr.) were formerly sent by commission into different counties to try such causes particularly as were termed pleas of the crown. Justices of Gaol-Delivery, are such as are commissioned to hear and determine all causes for which persons are cast into gaol. Justices of Nisi Prius, are the same as justices of the assize, and receive their name from the common adjournment of a cause in the Common Pleas, "Nisi Prius Justiciarii venerint ad eas partes," i.e. Unless the justices shall come to those parts before. Justices of the Peace, are persons appointed by the king's commission to keep the peace of the county in which they reside; and some of these, who are of superior rank or quality, are called Justices of the Quorum; and without the presence or assent of these, or at least one of them, no business of importance can be transacted. A Justice of the Peace ought to possess an estate of at least 100*l.* per annum in freehold or copyhold, for life, or for the term of 21 years, without encumbrances; and if a Justice of the Peace not thus qualified presume to act in that office, he is liable to the penalty of 100*l.*

JUSTICESHIP, s. the office, rank, or dignity of a justice. Used generally in a ludicrous sense.

JUSTICESHIP, or COURT OF JUSTICIARY, s. in Scotland, a court of supreme jurisdiction in all criminal cases. The lords of justiciary likewise go circuits twice a year in the country.

JUSTIFIABLE, a. to be defended by law or reason conformable to law or justice.

JUSTIFIABLENESS, s. the quality of being cleared from an accusation; the quality of being defensible by law or reason.

JUSTIFIABLY, ad. in such a manner as to be reconciled to law, reason, or justice.

JUSTIFICATION, s. [Fr.] a defence, vindication, or the act of clearing from an accusation of guilt; absolution from guilt. In Theology, acceptance with God, or the reception of God's favour; also, and chiefly, the restoration to God's favour through faith in the Saviour, including the forgiveness of sins.

JUSTIFICATOR, s. one who defends, vindicates, or clears from any charge of guilt.

JUSTIFIER, s. one who clears both from the charge and punishment of sin.

To JUSTIFY, v. a. [justifier, Fr.] to clear from any charge of guilt; to absolve or quit from any accusation; to vindicate. In Theology, to impart or procure the favour of God, restoration to spiritual life, and forgiveness of sins.

JUSTIN MARTYR, a father of the Christian church in the 2nd century. He was a native of Palestine, but trained in the heathen philosophy of the day. The Platonism of Alexandria prepared him for the reception of the gospel; and he became one of its most successful defenders both from heathens and Jews, and one of its most eminent witnesses to its truth and power in his life and death. He was slain at Rome in about 164. His Apologies, and Dialogue with Trypho a Jew, are yet extant.

JUSTINIANUS, FLAVIUS, an emperor of Rome in his later days, who succeeded Justinus I., his uncle, having been his co-emperor for 9 years before. His reign is one of the most brilliant periods of that portion of Roman history. It was marked by the victories of one of the greatest and best military commanders that ever lived,—Belisarius, who regained Italy, Sicily, and Africa, from the barbarian conquerors and spoilers of the empire (see BELISARIUS). Other soldiers, such as Narses, ably seconded his arms. A code of laws was compiled by the emperor's command, by Tribonian and others, which all western Europe received, though they never bowed to Roman arms even; and which has survived the fall of the empire (see PANDECTS). Admirable monuments of art were reared, after two centuries had passed during which destruction had been the only regard shown to art. He protected commerce and improved manufactures, and he displayed the greatest sagacity in the choice of his ministers. But he extinguished the schools of philosophy, and maintained his own dogmas by the sword; he suffered his people to be impoverished by taxation, and his most able generals to be injured by the flattery of his courtiers; every year of his long reign was marked by an invasion of the barbarians, and it is reckoned that at each invasion 200,000 of his subjects perished. And to complete the dark side of the picture, earthquakes happened more frequently than ever before, and the plague ravaged the empire for 5 years together. It did not require such calamities to overthrow the empire; the people were so utterly fallen, that sanguinary contests, endangering the very throne of Justinian, took place between the partisans of the charioteers in the circus; and this, when the enemy was at the gate. Justinian died in 565, aged 83 years, and having reigned alone for 38 years.

JUSTINUS, the name of two emperors in the later days of Rome;—the first rose by military service, from being a Dacian peasant; is only remarkable for having introduced his nephew Justinian to the crown. He died in 527, having reigned 9 years. The second succeeded his uncle, Justinian, and was compelled by a complexity of difficulties he could not unravel, to abdicate the throne, in 574, after a reign of 9 years. He died in 578.

JUSTINUS, a Latin historian, who made an epitome of the history by Trogus Pompeius, not very skillfully, in the 2nd and 3rd centuries, and about whom nothing whatever is known.

TO JUSTLE, v. n. [jouter, Fr.] to encounter, clash, or run against each other.—v. a. to push, drive, or force, by rushing against.

JUSTLY, ad. in a manner consistent with rigid justice and honesty. Figuratively, properly; exactly; in due proportion.

JUSTNESS, s. the exact conformity of things and actions to any law, rule, or standard; justice, propriety, or exactness.

TO JUT, v. n. to push or shoot into prominences; to stand out beyond the other parts of the surface.

JUTES, one tribe of the Teutonic family who occupied Denmark, and invaded and conquered England. The kingdom of Kent was the only separate and distinct conquest made by this tribe.

JUTLAND, a large peninsula of Denmark, bounded by the duchy of Holstein; and reaching from the German Ocean to the Baltic Sea. It is about 200 miles in length, and 95 in breadth. The air is very cold, but wholesome, and the soil is fertile in corn and pastures, which feed a great number of horses, heeves, and hogs, which are sent to Germany, Holland, &c. Hence Jutland is commonly called the land of bacon and rye bread. This was anciently called the Cimbrica Chersonesus; and is supposed to be the country whence the Anglo-Saxons came that conquered England. It is divided into two parts, called N. and S. Jutland; the latter being the duchy of Sleswick. North Jutland has four chief cities, Aalborg, Wiborg, Aarhuys, and Ripen. Population, about 550,000.

JUTTY, s. a part of a building which stands out further than the rest.

JUVENALIS, DEC. JUNIUS, a Roman satiric poet, who lived in the end of the 1st and beginning of the 2nd century. He was a pleader, and having offended Hadrian, was dismissed into a distant province, as captain of a cohort, and died there, in 128 A. D. His satires are written with great force, and terrible severity and plainness of speech in castigating the vices of the age. But his descriptions of what he reprobates are too graphic to produce the desired effect; and he knew of nothing to substitute as a principle for that, whose fruits he so unsparingly condemned.

JUVENILE, a. [juvenis, Lat.] young, or youthful.

JUVENILITY, s. the state of youth; youthfulness.

JUXTAPOSITION, s. [juxta and positio, Lat.] the state of being placed close to each other.

IVY, [Uff, Sax.] in Botany, an evergreen plant, which is very common in England. It is often planted by old walls, to hide their defects, being a vigorous climber. It is deemed injurious to trees. The leaves which it puts forth on the unattached stems, differ widely in form from the others. Its berries are the chief winter food of some of our native warblers.

K IS the tenth letter of our alphabet. Its sound is the same as that of the hard c, in acre, cure, come, &c., and it has before all the vowels only that sound; as in keen, ken, kid, kind. K is silent before n; as know, knife, knee, knave. It used formerly to be always joined with c at the end of some words, but is at present most frequently omitted; thus for publick, music, arithmetick, &c. we write public, music, arithmetic, &c. However, in monosyllables it is still retained; as in mock, slack, back, wreck, stick, &c. The Romans seldom used it, except in proper names, or as a numeral. The French make no use of it, except in proper names of men and places. As a numeral, K denotes 250, and with a dash over it thus K̄, 250,000.

KÄMPFER, ENGELBRECHT, a celebrated naturalist and traveller, who accompanied a Swedish embassy to Persia, and thence visited the principal countries and southern Asia, including some of the islands of the Indian Ocean and Japan. He published several works relating to the countries he had visited; and attained some eminence as a medical practitioner, after his return. He died in 1716, aged 65 years.

KATHIRA. See CAIRO.

KALENDAR. See CALENDAR.

KALI, s. [Arab.] in Botany, a plant growing on the sea coasts, from whose ashes soda is procured. In Chemistry, the old name of the protoxide of potassium.

KALMUCS. See CALMUCKS.

KALEIDOSCOPE, s. [kalos, eido, and scopos, Gr.] in Optics, a toy formed by placing two strips of looking-glass into a tube, inclined at an angle of 45 degrees to each other, with small pieces of stained glass and similar objects enclosed between two plates of glass at one end, and an opening in the centre of the other to look through. When the tube is directed towards the light, each object enclosed at the end that falls between the pieces of looking-glass is reflected and re-reflected, until a symmetrically arranged circular figure is produced, which varies with the slightest change of the arrangement of the objects.

KAM, a. [Ere.] crooked; not to the purpose. "This is clean kam," Shak.

KAMTSCHATKA, a peninsula of Siberia, Asiatic Russia, stretching between the North Pacific Ocean and the sea of Ochotsk and the Ponzinskoe Gulf, bounded by the province of Ochotsk. It is about 600 miles in length, and from 30 to 200 in breadth, and the southern extremity is Cape Lopatka. This tract has several ranges of mountains, amongst which are volcanoes exceeding 15,000 feet in height. The chief river gives its name to the whole country. Very little of the land is cultivated, owing in part to the rigour of the climate, and in part to the low state of civilization which the people have reached. They support themselves chiefly by hunting and fishing, and their only trade is with the produce of these pursuits. The people are chiefly of the Calmuck variety, and the settlers are very few. Pop. under 10,000. Bolcheretsk is the principal place, situated on the S. W. coast, in Lat. 52. 55. N. Long. 156. 57. E.

KANGAROO, s. in Zoology, a quadruped which is a native of New South Wales, and is one of the largest of the opossum tribe, whose females are furnished with a sort of pouch under the belly, in which they nourish and guard their young. It does not walk, but advances by flying leaps; and when standing, supports itself on its long hind legs, and its exceeding thick and strong tail. It is naturally inoffensive, but when attacked defends itself by inflicting serious blows with its hind feet and tail.

KANT, IMMANUEL, the great reviver of metaphysical studies in Europe, and the founder of Transcendental or Critical Philosophy. He was admirably trained by his parents, who were of a family originally Scottish, and sent to Königsberg university, where he distinguished himself by his mathematical skill, having actually predicted the discovery of the planet Uranus. His whole life he spent at this university, as student or professor; and the only incidents of his life beyond his daily routine of duty, and social intercourse, were the books which he wrote. He died in 1804, aged 80 years, having effected a revolution in European (or rather human) thought, and attained a reputation by his literary labours, which as nearly resembled hero-worship as any that have been gained in late days. It is impossible to give more than a bare intimation of the character of his system, which, amongst the smatterers in Scotch philosophy, is ridiculed as a collection of idle dreams. It is disadvantageously presented to English readers in a novel set of names, some of which are common words applied very differently from common usage, and other most cumbersome inventions. The great feature of it is its iron logic. It rigidly investigates the operations of the mind, and determines the part taken by it in common observation. It distinguishes between the faculty of observing these common things, and the faculty for apprehending spiritual and moral truth, and lays a broad and secure foundation for the detection and investigation of the laws of spirit. His work on Religion is a most wonderful production. He may be regarded, perhaps, as rather one to destroy and overturn falsely founded systems, than as the erector of a new one. In truth, his logical habit unfitted him in some respects for this latter office. He, however, cleared the ground, and ascertained the solid foundations on which a system of metaphysics might be erected; and his followers, and opponents, Fichte, Schelling, Hegel, &c., have willingly owned their obligations to the Königsberg sage.

KA'OLIN, in Pottery, the Chinese name of the clay used in the manufacture of porcelain, applied now to a very fine species of earth, used in more common manufactures.

KARA'MSIN, NICHOLAS MICHAELOVITSCH, the imperial Russian historiographer, entered the guards, and served in that regiment for some time, and afterwards travelled in Europe. On his return, he devoted himself to literature, and planned, but did not live to complete, a History of Russia. He died in 1826, aged 61 years.

KASAN', capital of the government of the same name, Russia. It contains several churches, almost all of which are built with stone, and 11 convents in and near the town. It is seated on the river Casanka, where it falls into the Volga, 400 miles from Moscow.

KATER, CAPTAIN HENRY, an eminent natural philosopher and mathematician. He was in the army in India, and was engaged in the trigonometrical survey of that country. On his return, he devoted himself to practical science; and his standards of weight and measure, and his researches into the pendulum, procured him a solid reputation. He died in 1835, aged 58 years.

KAUFMANN, MARIA ANNA ANGELICA, an artist of some distinction in the latter part of the last century. She was of Swiss birth, and studied in Italy. In England she enjoyed royal patronage, and was greatly admired for her female characters. She died at Rome in 1807, aged 66 years.

TO KAW, v. n. to make a noise like a raven, crow, or rook.

KAW, s. [from the sound,] the cry of a raven, crow, or rook.

KEAN, EDMUND, one of our most eminent tragic performers, who, after gaining great renown for his representations in the provinces, entered Drury Lane theatre, and performed with distinguished success, in the most famous characters. He travelled and extended his fame in America, and undertook the management of the Surrey theatre on his return. He died in 1833, aged 46 years.

KEATS, JOHN, a young poet whose chief production, Endymion, gave great promise of future excellence; but being of an exceedingly sensitive nature, an unjustifiably severe critique in one of the principal reviews so affected him, that he gradually sank under the combined effects of the disappointment of his hopes and physical malady. He went to Italy, and there died in 1820, aged 24 years. His works have the usual faults of young writers, but they are marked by the excellencies of a poet of no ordinary genius.

KEBLA, or KEBLAH, among the Mussulmans, denotes that point, or quarter, to which they turn themselves when they say their prayers.

TO KECK, v. n. [kecken, Belg.] to heave the stomach; to retch at something nauseous or squeamish.

TO KECKLE, v. a. to defend a cable round with rope.

TO KEDGE, v. a. [kaghe, Belg.] in Navigation, to bring a ship up and down a narrow river by the wind, though the tide be contrary, by means of the kedge anchor.

KE'DGER, KEDGE ANCHOR, s. a small anchor used in a river.

KE'DLACK, s. a weed, the same with the charnock.

KEEL, s. [keel, Sax.] a principal piece of timber in a ship, which is usually first laid on the stocks in building. In Botany, a name given to the lowermost petal in a butterfly-shaped blossom, from its resemblance to the keel of a ship.

TO KEEL, v. a. [ceelan, Sax.] to cool, or prevent from boiling over.

KEELFAT, s. a cooler, or vessel in which wort or other liquor is set to cool.

KEEL-HAULING, s. a punishment for offences at sea, by dragging the criminal under water on one side of the ship under the keel, and up again on the other.

KEEL-SHAPE, s. in Botany, applied to those parts of a flower that are bent like the keel of a ship or boat, as the pointed shaft of the pea, &c.

KEELSON, s. that piece of timber in a ship which is next to her keel, and lies right over it next above the floor timber.

KEEN, a. [ceane, Sax.] sharp, or cutting easily, applied to the edge of an instrument, and opposed to blunt. Severe, piercing, or excessively cold, applied to the winds or weather. Eager, vehement. Of great subtlety, applied to the understanding. Acrimonious, or affecting with uneasiness, applied to wit.

KEENLY, ad. sharply, or cutting easily; vehemently, or eagerly; bitterly, or acrimoniously.

KEENNESS, s. the quality of being sharp, or cutting easily; rigour of weather, or piercing cold; acrimony; bitterness of mind; eagerness or vehemence.

TO KEEP, v. a. preter. and past part. kept; [cepan, Sax. kepen, old Belg.] to retain, preserve; to hold for another; to copy carefully; to observe time punctually; to hold; to remain in a place; not to reveal or betray a secret; to remain unbent; to adhere strictly; to practise or accustom oneself to. "I keep bad hours," Pope. To celebrate, applied to festivals. To observe without violation, applied to promises, contracts, or laws. To maintain at one's own expense; to have in the house. "Keep lodgers," Shak. Used with back, to restrain from doing an action. "Keep back thy servant—from presumptuous sins," Psa. xix. 13. To reserve. Joined to with, to be often with a person as a lover or suitor. "Keeping company with men," Dromio. To keep in, to conceal; to forbear telling, applied to secrets. To keep out, to defend from. "Keep out the weather," Prior. "Keeps out hunger," Dryden. Used with pace, to walk as fast as another. "Keep pace with him." To keep under, to suppress; to subdue; to tyrannize over, or hold in a state of base subjection.—v. n. to remain in any state. "To keep his bed," Shak. SYNON. We keep that which is our own; we detain that which is another's. We keep what we intend not to part with; we detain what we purpose not to restore.

KEEPER, s. one who has prisoners committed to his custody; one who holds any thing for the use of another; one who has the care of parks, or the superintendence of another. Keeper of the Great Seal, is a lord by his office, and styled Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of Great Britain, and is always one of the privy council. All grants, charters, and commissions of the king under the great seal, pass through the hands of the Lord Keeper; for without that seal many of these grants, &c. would be of no force; the king being, in the interpretation of the law, a corporation, and therefore passes nothing but by the great seal, which is also said to be the public faith of the kingdom, being in the greatest esteem and reputation. Keeper of the Privy Seal, is also a lord by his office, through whose hands all grants, pardons, &c. pass before they come to the great seal; and even some things pass his hands which do not pass the great seal at all. He is also one of the privy council; his duty is to put the seal to no grant, &c. without a warrant, nor with a warrant where it is against law, or inconvenient, but shall first acquaint the king thereof.

KEEPERSHIP, s. the office of a keeper.

KEEPING, s. in Painting, denotes the representation of objects in the same manner that they appear to the eye at different distances from it; for which the painter should have recourse to the rules of perspective.

KEG, s. [coque, Fr.] a small barrel.

KELLINGTON, or CA'LLINGTON, Cornwall. It has a woollen manufactory, and is situated on the river Tamar. It is not inferior to the best half of the Cornish boroughs for wealth and buildings, having one very good broad street, a market-house, and a neat church. It is 217 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1685.

KELP, s. in Commerce, a salt produced from calcined sea-weed. KE'L'P'ORT, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, distinguished from others in the same class and order by its seed resembling a snail-shell; there are two species found in England, viz. the prickly glasswort, and the stoncrop.

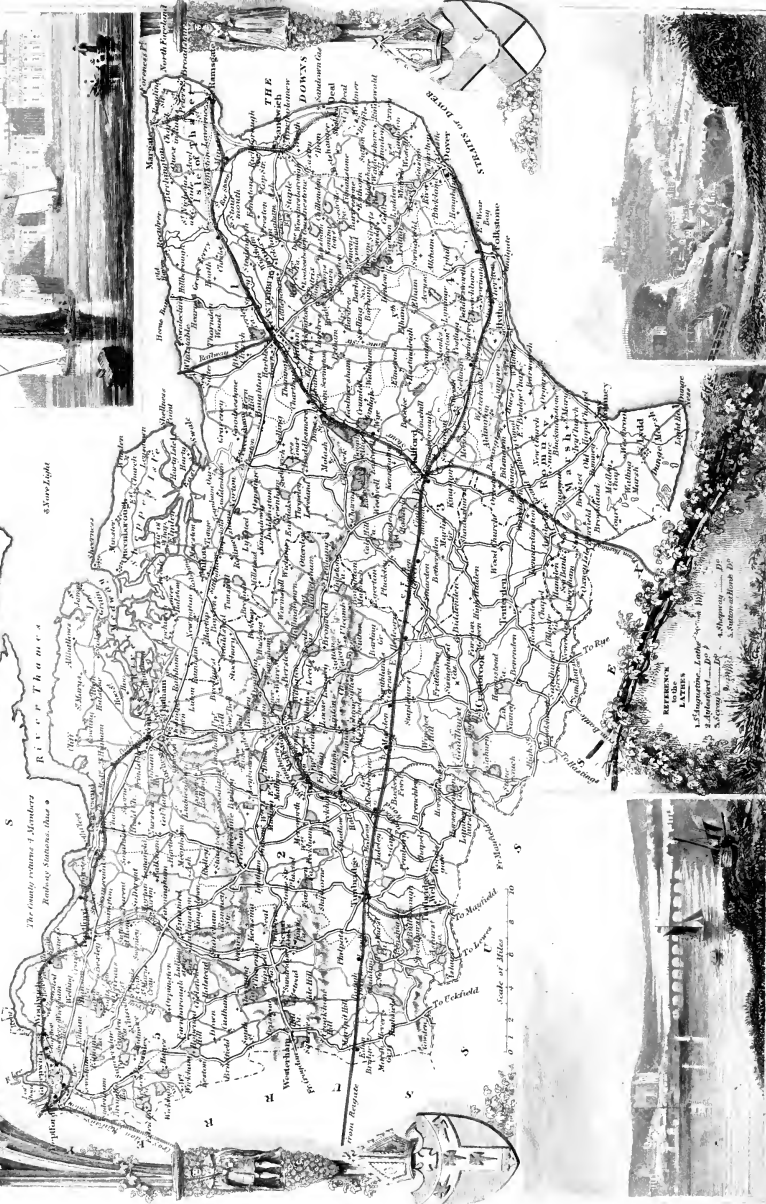

The County returns 4 Members
Parliamentary Seats, thus

River Thames

3 Yearly Light

KELSO, Roxburghshire, Scotland. It contains a large market-place, one principal, with two small streets. It has some manufactures of flannels, linen, stockings, and shoes. The celebrated and magnificent abbey, the ruins of which still remain, was founded by David I. in 1128. The environs of it are very agreeable, and abound in grand and beautiful prospects. Much wheat is raised in this neighbourhood, and the fleeces of the sheep are remarkably fine. Kelso has a good market for corn, and is situated on the river Tweed, over which it has a handsome bridge of six arches, at its conflux with the Tiviot. It is 42 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 4594.

KELSON, v. a. See KELSON.

To KEMB, v. a. [camban, Sax.] to comb or disentangle the hair; also, to dress flax, hemp, &c.

KEMBLE, JOHN PHILIP, one of our most distinguished actors since the times of Garrick. He was regularly trained for the stage, and appeared in London first as Hamlet. He afterwards appeared in the most renowned tragic characters, and gained a reputation for truth and power, seldom equalled. He died in Lausanne, in 1823, aged 66 years.

KE-MO, s. in Conchology, an enormous white shell which is found on the coast of Sumatra, frequently three or four feet in diameter.

KE-MPIS, THOMAS A., a monk of the beginning of the 15th century; who wrote works of devotion, &c., and amongst the rest a work, believed to be by John Gerson, which has ever since gone by Ke-Mp's name, on the Imitation of Christ. He died about 1471.

To KEN, v. a. [cennan, Sax. kennan, Belg.] to desecr or see at a distance; to know.

KEN, s. view; or the distance within which a person can see an object.

KEN, THOMAS, a learned and pious prelate of the English Church; who had a rare reputation in the days of Charles II., and has obtained considerable note lately, from his writings and from his being one of the 7 bishops sent by James II. to the Tower, amongst a certain class of Churchmen. He died in 1711, aged 74 years.

KENDAL, also called KIRBY CANDALE, (that is, a church in a valley,) Westmoreland. It is the largest town in the county, and has been long noted for its woollen manufactures; particularly knit stockings, a thick stuff, called cottons, for the clothing of the people in the West Indies, and for sailors' jackets, and linsey-woolsey. There is likewise a considerable tannery; and fish-hooks, waste silk, and wool cards, are manufactured here. The mills for scouring, fulling, and friezing cloth, and for cutting and rasping dyeing-wood, &c. are well worth seeing. Kendal is pleasantly situated in a valley, among hills, upon the river Kent, or Kant, over which it has two stone bridges, and one of wood, with a harbour for boats, and communicating by a canal with all the late inland navigations. It is 259 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 10,225.

KENNEL, s. [chenil, Fr.] a cot or place where dogs are kept; a pack of hounds; the hole of a fox or other beast.—[Belg.] the small channel or hollow in which water runs through a street.

To KENNEL, v. n. to live or lie, applied properly to dogs or fowls, and contemptuously used of men.

KENNICOTT, DR. BENJAMIN, a learned divine, and Hebrew critic of the Church of England. He obtained solid rewards for his learning and labours in church preferments, and a reputation in his own particular department of biblical lore, not yet approached. His great work was an edition of the Hebrew Bible, with various readings from the Samaritan Pentateuch and rabbinical writers, as well as from all the MSS. he was able to collate. He died in 1783, aged 65 years.

KE/NSINGTON, Middlesex, 2 miles from London. Here are a royal palace, and handsome gardens open to the public.

KENT, a county of the S. of England, washed by the English Channel, the Straits of Dover, and the German Ocean; and bounded by Surrey, Sussex, Essex, and Middlesex. It is about 58 miles in length, and 35 in breadth. It is divided into five lathe, under each of which are several hundreds, which contain 2 cities, 39 market towns, 408 parish churches, and 1180 villages. In the soil and face of the country there is great diversity. The banks of the Thames are low and marshy, but backed by a range of chalky eminences, sometimes rising to a moderate height, which extend to the sea at Dover, and form those lofty white cliffs, which present so striking an appearance at sea, and probably originated the name of Albion. The S. part of Kent, called the Weald, is a flat, woody tract, of a clayey soil; fertile, but not very healthy. It terminates in the great marsh of Romney. The midland and western districts are a happy mixture of bill and vale, arable and pasture, equal in pleasantness, and variety of products, to any part of England. This county produces, besides corn, &c., large quantities of hops; fruits of various kinds, especially cherries and apples, of which there are large orchards for the London markets; madder for dyeing; timber, &c. The downs and the marshes afford excellent pasture for sheep and cattle. Its manufactures are but trifling. The principal rivers, besides the Thames, are the Medway, Darent, Stour, Cray, and Rother. Maidstone is the county town. Pop. 548,337. It sends 18 members to parliament.

KENT, WILLIAM, an ingenious artist of the beginning of the last century, who being desirous of a higher walk than that of ornamental coach-painting, went to Italy, where he obtained the patronage of the Earl of Burlington. He never attained great excellence as a painter, nor yet as a sculptor, but he planned some fine buildings, and in landscape gardening he introduced a completely new style of art. He died in 1748, aged 63 years.

KENTUCKY, one of the United States of N. America, bounded by the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Virginia, Tennessee, and Missouri. It is about 400 miles long, and 170 broad, and is divided into 90 counties. The only mountains are the Cumberland, which are of no great elevation. The rest of the surface is variable, but presents a great expanse of fertile soil. Its rivers are the Mississippi, the Ohio, and their tributaries, the Kentucky, the Cumberland, the Tennessee, &c. Iron, coal, lime, and salt are produced; also wheat and other grain, tobacco, hemp, fruits, cattle, &c.; and these form its chief trade. There are some flourishing manufactures, and 14 banks. There is one university, and 7 other colleges. Frankfort is the seat of government, and Louisville and Lexington are places of importance. Pop. 779,828, of which 182,258 are slaves.

KENYON, LLOYD, LORD, an eminent English judge, who first appeared prominently as counsel for Lord George Gordon, of No Popery fame. He afterwards was attorney-general, and chancellor of the exchequer, under various administrations, and finally rose to be lord chief justice. His public character was of a very complex kind, but he seems to have been more of a favourite with the people, than with the profession, or any other party. He died in 1802, aged 70 years.

KEPLER, JOHN, the celebrated astronomer. He studied at Tubingen, and became astronomical professor at Grätz, where he published his first book, and begun those extraordinary guesses and theories, by which in time he laid the foundations for Newton's great discoveries. Being subjected to some inconvenience because of his profession of Protestantism, he joined Tycho Brahe, the Swedish astronomer, in Bohemia. He was employed on the Rudolphine Tables, and whilst about them, discovered two of the planetary laws, which are now known by his name. Subsequently, whilst struggling to carry on his work, and embarrassed with difficulties occasioned by the indifference of those on whose patronage he was wholly dependent, he discovered this. His works were numerous, and he died in 1630, aged 58 years. He was well versed in the mathematics of the day, and possessed of most indefatigable patience. But his most wonderful faculty was that by which he seized on some central fact, and by its aid endeavoured to reduce to the regularity of law the miscellaneous facts presented to him, working it out with most consummate skill and caution, and pitilessly rejecting it when proved wanting. His private character was one deserving of all admiration; his very impetuosity lent a charm to his actions; it seemed born to prove that true genius can overpower all obstacles.

KEPLER'S LAWS, in Astronomy, the name by which are known the following facts relating to the planetary bodies;—1st, that they move in elliptical orbits;—2nd, that the surface travelled over by a line extending from the planet to the centre, is equal in extent in equal periods of time;—and 3rd, that a definite relation subsists between the periodic times of the planets' revolutions and their mean distances from the sun.

KEPT, preter, and past part. of To KEEP.

KE/RCHIEF, s. a head dress.

KERF, s. [ceorfan, Sax.] the slit sawn away between two pieces of stuff.

KERMAN, a province of Persia, lying on the Persian Gulf, and bounded by Segestan, Korasan, Mecran, and Faristan. The northern part is barren and nearly desert, without rivers or brooks, and the air unhealthy. Towards the S. the air is more pure and the land fertile. The Guebres are numerous, who are chiefly employed in manufactures of stuffs and silk. Here are some mines of copper, lead, and iron. The inhabitants drive a great trade in wool, which the sheep regularly shed in the spring. Sirjan is the capital.

KERMES, s. in Commerce, a dye-stuff similar in origin and properties to cochineal, but inferior to it in beauty of tint. The insect producing it is the coccus ilicis.

KERN, s. an Irish foot-soldier; also, a hand-mill, consisting of two pieces of stone, by which corn is ground.

KERNEL, s. [cyrnol, Sax.] that part of a nut which is contained in the shell; any thing included in a husk or skin. Figuratively, the central part of any thing which is covered with a crust, hard substance, or with a concretion.

To KERNEL, v. n. to ripen or grow to kernels.

KERNELLY, s. full of kernels; resembling kernels.

KERNELWORT, s. in Botany, a species of fig-wort.

KERRY, a county of Munster, Ireland, lying on the Atlantic Ocean, and bounded by Clare, Limerick, and Cork. It is about 54 miles long, and about 30 broad. It possesses many fine harbours, and the southern district is plain and fertile; but a large part is full of mountains, almost inaccessible, so that little corn is produced, and grazing is more attended to. Considerable quantities of beef, butter, hides, and tallow are exported. Iron ore is to be had in most of the southern baronies, and here are several spas, or medical springs. The principal rivers are the Blackwater, Feal, Gale and Brick, Cash in Mang, Lea, Flesk, Laune, Carrin, Farthin, Finny, and Roughy. The county town is Tralee. Pop. 293,880. It sends 3 members to parliament.

KERSEY, s. [karsaye, Belg. carsiée, Fr.] a coarse woollen manufacture between a stuff and a cloth.

KERSEYMERIE, s. [from kersey,] a kind of woollen cloth resembling kersey.

KESTREL, s. [querelle, Fr.] in Falconry and Natural History, a little kind of hasted hawk.

KESWICK, Cumberland. It is a neat and well-built town, and has considerable manufactures of woollen stuffs, fannels, duffels, &c. It is pleasantly seated in a beautiful and extensive vale, surrounded by hills, through which flows the Derwent. It is 287 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2442.

KESWICK, VALE OF, a romantic spot, in the southern part of Cumberland, much visited by tourists. Here is the lake of Keswick, or, more properly, the lake of Derwent-water. To the N. of this romantic piece of water soars the lofty mountain Skiddaw, near the foot of which is Basingthwaite Water. To the S. are the craggy hills of Borrowdale, where the eagles build their nests, and whence the Derwent derives its supplies of water.

KETCH, s. [caicchio, Ital.] a small vessel used to bring fish to market, or as a tender to large ships. It has two masts, its mainsail and top-sail standing square as ships' do, and its fore-sail and jib like those of boats.

KETTERING, Northamptonshire. It has manufactures of lace, shalloons, serges, tammies, &c. It has a sessions-house for the county, and is seated on a river that runs into the Nen. It is 74 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 4867.

KETTLE, s. [cetl, Belg.] a culinary vessel in which water is boiled.

KETTLEDUM, s. a kind of drum, made of brass, in the form of a hemispherical vessel, over the top of which the parchment is stretched. It is used in pairs, in cavalry bands and orchestras.

KEW, Surrey. It lies on the Thames, and is noted for a royal palace; but more for its botanic gardens, which are well maintained and arranged. It is 6 miles from London. Pop. 923.

KEX, s. in Botany, a provincial term for hemlock.

KEY, s. [coeg, Sax.] a little iron instrument, formed with holes answering to the wards of a lock, by which the bolt is pushed forward or backward; an instrument by which any thing is screwed, turned, shut, or opened. Figuratively, an explanation of any thing obscure, mysterious, or difficult. The parts of a musical instrument which are moved by the fingers. In Music, a certain fundamental note or tone, to which the whole piece is accommodated, with which it must always end. In Architecture, the last stone placed at the top of an arch.

KEYAGE, s. [corruptly from quay,] money paid for laying, or loading and unloading, goods at a quay.

KEYHOLE, s. the aperture in a door or lock through which the key is put.

KEYNSHAM, Somersetshire. Its chief trade is malting. It is seated on the river Avon, over which it has a bridge of 15 arches; it has also another bridge over the Chew. It is 115 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 2307.

KEYSTONE, s. the middle or upper stone of an arch.

KHAN, s. [Pers.] the title of the emperor of the Avars; also assumed by the governors of provinces in Persia.

KHERSON, a government of Russia in Europe, lying on the Black Sea, and bounded by the governments of Bessarabia, Podolia, Pultowa, Catherinoslav, and Tauride. It is above 200 miles in length, and above 100 in breadth. It is bordered by and watered by the Dniester and the Dnieper, and their tributaries, and consists of one continuous, almost unbroken plain, which is used for pastures, and rarely broken up and cultivated. The greater part of it is quite wild, and overrun by wild animals. Cherson is its capital. Pop. about 700,000.

KIBE, s. [kibwe, Brit.] a chilblain in the heels, caused by cold.

KIBED, s. troubled with kibes or chilblains.

To KICK, v. a. [kauchen, Teut.] to strike with the foot.

KICK, s. a blow given with the foot.

KICKER, s. one who strikes with his foot.

KICKSHAW, s. [supposed to be corrupted from quelque chose, Fr.] something contemptuous, fantastical, or ridiculous; a dish so changed by cookery that it can scarcely be known.

KID, s. [kid, Dan.] the young of a goat. Figuratively, applied to a young child.

To KID, v. a. to bring forth kids, applied to a she-goat.

KIDDER, KIDDER, s. a person who carries corn, dead victuals, or other merchandise, up and down to sell; a pork butcher.

KIDDERMINSTER, Worcestershire. It is the principal manufacturing place in the county, and long celebrated for its different manufactures of woollens, carpets, poplins, crapes, bombazines, &c. Its former trade of stuffs, however, is much declined, on account of the general use of cotton goods; but its carpet manufactory has greatly increased; and it is still the first market in England for pile or plush carpets, which, for beauty of colour and patterns, exceed any other. These are frequently called Wilton, from having been first made at that town; but, at present, by much the greater part are made at Kidderminster. The silk and worsted trades have also been introduced here. It is seated under a hill, on the river Stour. It is 125 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 14,309.

KIDDLE, KIDDEL, s. a dam or wear in a river, with a narrow cut in it, for the laying of pots or other engines to catch fish. They are corruptly called kettles, and are much used in Wales and Kent.

To KIDNAP, v. a. [kind, Belg.] to steal children or human beings.

KIDNAPPER, s. one who steals children or human beings.

KIDNEY, s. in Anatomy, the name of two vascular bodies, placed in the loins, which secrete the urine, or separate it from the blood, and convey it by vessels to the bladder. Figuratively, race or kind, in ludicrous language.

KIDNEY-BEAN, s. in Horticulture, a plant so named from its resembling a kidney.

KIDNEY-VETCH, s. in Botany, a plant, the same with the ladiesfinger, found on dry and chalky pastures.

KIDNEYWORT, s. in Botany, an herb, called also navelwort, and wall-pennywort. It has alternate leaves, with central leaf-stocks; a branched stem; and yellowish, or greenish white, spikes of flowers. It grows on old walls and stony places, and flowers from May to July.

KIDWELLY, Caernarthenshire, Wales. Here is a castle, the very large remains of which, extremely well preserved, show it to have been very stately and magnificent. It is situated on the Gwandrath Vach, a branch of the Towy, which empties itself into that river, at its efflux into the British Channel. It is 224 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs on May 24, July 22, and October 29. Pop. 1563.

KIEL, the capital of Holstein, in Germany. It stands on a bay of the Baltic, and is well fortified. It has a good trade; but has derived greater notoriety from its university, which has a very excellent library. Pop. about 12,500. Lat. 54. 20. N. Long. 10. 10. E.

KIEN-LO'NG, the emperor of China, during the latter part of the last century. He was distinguished for his love of literature; and wrote many poetical pieces, which he communicated to Lord Macartney, during his embassy in China. He also greatly extended his empire, and died in 1799, aged 80 years; having reigned the throne 3 years, after a reign of above 60.

KIEW, a government in the S. of Russia, bordering on those of Minsk, Tchernigov, Putlow, Kherson, Podolia, and Volhynia. It is hilly, and is watered by the Dniéper and its tributaries. It is wholly agricultural; but is far from being wholly reclaimed from nature. Pop. about 2,000,000. Its capital, of the same name, stands on the Dniéper, and is the seat of a long-established university. Pop. about 50,000.

KILDA, ST., a small island of Scotland, one of the Hebrides, about 11 leagues W. of North Uist. It is about 2 miles each way; and is very mountainous. The inhabitants live chiefly by fishing and catching wild fowls, which nest on the ledges of the rocks round its coast. St. Kilda is the most westerly island of Great Britain. Pop. about 100. Lat. 55. 48. N. Long. S. 18. W.

KILDARE, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It is 40 miles in length, and about 20 in breadth. It is bounded by King and Queen's County, Meath, Dublin, Wicklow, and Carlow. It is very level, and is a fine, arable, fertile country, well watered by the Barrow, Liffey, Boyne, and other rivers. It exports grain and cattle, and has a few manufactures. Its chief place is Kildare. Pop. 114,488. It returns but 2 members to parliament.

KILDARE, capital of the county of the same name. It is noted for horse races, on what is called the Curragh, a fine plain, containing upwards of 3000 acres. It gives a name also to a bishopric. It is 27 miles from Dublin. Pop. 1629.

KILDERKIN, s. [kindekin, Belg.] a small barrel; a liquid measure, equal to half a barrel, containing two firkins, or eighteen gallons, beer measure, and sixteen, ale measure.

KILFENORA, Clare, in Munster, Ireland. It is a bishop's see, in conjunction with Killaloe, Clonfert, and Kilmacdnagh. The town is small, and has an old cathedral in it. It is about 180 miles from Dublin. Pop. 621.

KILGARREN, Pembrokeshire. It is seated on the S. side of the river Tyvy. Near it is a remarkable salmon leap, and also large works for the fabrication of tin plates. It is 227 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1149.

KILHAM, Yorkshire, E. Riding. It stands in the Wolds, in a good soil for corn. It is 200 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1120.

KILKENNY, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It is 45 miles in length, and 24 in breadth, and is bounded by Tipperary, Queen's County, Carlow, Wexford, and Waterford. It contains 127 parishes. The surface is generally level, and the soil fertile, and being proper for tillage, produces corn, wool, marble, and a species of coal, which, like charcoal, burns without smoke, is very durable in burning, and, without any blaze, produces an uncommon heat. The country abounds with fine plantations, and is, from the purity of the air, esteemed extremely healthful. The principal rivers are the Barrow, which bounds it on the E.; the Suir, which forms its southern boundary; and the Nore, which crosses it from N. to S. It has some considerable manufactures, and exports much agricultural produce. Kilkenny is its chief town. Pop. 183,349. It returns 3 representatives to parliament.

KILKENNY, capital of the county of the same name. It has a small cathedral, and is one of the newest towns in the kingdom. The borough of St. Canice, or Irish Town, is joined to English Town, which is the principal; and both together form one large town. The manufactures chiefly carried on here, are coarse woollen cloths, blankets of extraordinary fine quality, and considerable quantities of starch. The houses are decorated with a beautiful black and white marble, dug from quarries near the town, and which is cut and polished by water. It is seated on the river Nore, over which it has two handsome bridges. It is 54 miles from Dublin. Pop. 19,071.

TO KILL, v. a. [formerly written quell, from excellen, Sax.] to murder, or deprive of life. Figuratively, to deprive of the power of growing.

KILLALA, Mayo, in Connaught, Ireland. It stands at the mouth of the Moy, and has some trade. It has also linen manufactures, but of no great extent. Here is an old cathedral. It is a bishop's see, in connexion with Tuam and Achoury. It is about 150 miles from Dublin. Pop. 1446.

KILLA'LOE, Clare, in Munster, Ireland. It is seated on the river Shannon, over which it has a bridge of 19 arches. Here is a considerable salmon and eel fishery. There is a cathedral here; and it is the see of a bishopric, in conjunction with Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacdnagh. It is 86 miles from Dublin. Pop. 2783.

KILLARNEY, Kerry, in Munster, Ireland. Here are some valuable iron-works, which have been of great service to the town, and some linen manufactures. It is 100 miles from Dublin. Pop. 7127. Near this town are the beautiful lakes of Killarney. The lower lake is about 6 miles long, and 3 broad, surrounded by wooded rocks, with jutting promontories, from which fall many fine cascades. The upper lake is about 4 miles long, and 2 broad, almost surrounded by mountains, and well supplied with cascades. The centre lake is small, but has one very fine and remarkable cascade. These lakes are much visited by tourists, and are universally admired.

KILLER, s. one who deprives of life, or puts to death. KILLICRANKIE, a noted pass of Perthshire, near the junction of the Tummel with the Garay. It is the grand entrance into the Highlands on those parts, and is formed by lofty mountains impending over the Garay. There is a good road here now.

KYLLOUGH, or PORT ST. ANNE, Down, in Ulster, Ireland. It lies N. of St. John's Point, and has a good quay, from which considerable quantities of barley are exported. Here is a profitable manufacture of salt. It is 76 miles from Dublin. Population, 1148.

KYLOW, or CA'LOW, s. an English name for a black earth, common in many parts of England, Wales, and Ireland. KILMACDUGH, an Irish bishopric. See KILLALOE.

KILMARNOCK, Ayrshire, Scotland. It is noted for its manufactures of gloves, carpets, stockings, night-caps, bonnets, and other woollen goods. There are many coal-mines round it. It is 64 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 12,232.

KILMORE, an Irish bishopric, in conjunction with Ardagh and Elphin.

KILN, s. [ceyln, Sax.] a stove or furnace contrived for admitting heat, and drying or burning such things as are contained in it. To KILNDRY, v. a. to dry in a kiln.

KIMBO, a. [schembo, Ital.] crooked; bent; with the arms bent, and sticking out from the sides.

KIMCHI, the family name of several celebrated Jewish rabbins, the most distinguished of whom was David, who is esteemed the best native Hebrew grammarian. Beside his Grammar and Lexicon, he wrote a Commentary on the Hebrew Scriptures. He died in 1240, at a very advanced age.

KIN, s. [eynne, Sax.] of the same family; a relation; of the same race. Used as a termination to express something diminutive; as mannikin, a little man; minnikin, a very small pin.

KINCARDINE. See MEARNS.

KIND, a. [eynne, Sax.] behaving with civility to others; benevolent, or filled with general good-will.

KIND, s. [eynne, Sax.] race, or class containing several species; the particular nature of a thing; the natural state of a thing; nature, or particular manner. Used with in, sort; manner; way, implying by way of. Kind answers to genus, and sort to species, but the distinction is not always observed.

TO KINDEL, v. a. [eyndelan, Sax.] to set on fire; to light, or make to burn. Figuratively, to excite, to inflame, or exasperate; to catch fire.—[cennan, Sax.] to bring forth, applied to rabbits, &c.

KINDLER, s. one that lights or sets fire to. Figuratively, one that inflames, or excites disturbances.

KINDLY, ad. in a civil, good-natured manner.

KINDLY, a. of the same nature; homogeneal; suiting or agreeing with; insinuating; mild.

KINDNESS, s. civil behaviour; favourable treatment, or a constant and habitual practice of friendly offices and benevolent actions.

KINDRED, s. [eywrene, Sax.] relation by birth or marriage.

KINDRED, a. native; congenial; agreeing to the nature of a person or thing.

KINE, s. the old plural of Cow.

KING, s. [cyng, Sax.] a person who rules singly over a people. In England the king is hereditary, but not without the consent of the people, as has repeatedly been proved. He is, according to constitutional fiction, one of the three powers of government, but the chief one. He sends embassies, and proclaims war; summons parliament, and makes its acts laws by his formal assent. He is the sole source of titles of dignity and nobility, and is also the head of the church by law established. He claims also the right of granting exclusive privileges of trading, and of being irresponsible to all law, but these points are not well established. In fact, the invention of councils and ministries, the imposition of oaths at the coronation, and the passing of certain bills at the Restoration of Charles II. and the Revolution of 1688, have made the king of England little more than a name, the real power lying elsewhere. In Gaming, a card with the picture of a king. The four kings are, David, Alexander, Cæsar, and Charles, whose names are still printed on the French cards, and are supposed to represent the four monarchies of the Jews, Greeks, Romans, and that of the Franks under Charlemagne. King at Arms, is a principal officer at arms, that has pre-eminence of the society of heralds; of these there are three, named Garter, Norroy, and Clarenceux.

TO KING, v. a. to rule as a king; to raise to the dignity of a king.

KING, PETER, LORD, chancellor of England in the reigns of George I. and II. He was related to the celebrated Locke; and after having passed all his youth in trade, studied at Leyden, took up the legal profession, entered the Temple, obtained a seat in parliament, and having served the Whigs in the Sacheverell business, was gradually promoted to the Great Seal. He has very little renown as a lawyer, but much, incidentally acquired, as an ecclesiastical writer. His works on the Constitution of the Primitive Church, and on the Apostles' Creed, being yet esteemed for their learning and ingenuity. He died in 1734, aged 65 years.

KINGCRAFT, s. the art of governing.

KINGCUP, s. a Botany, a kind of crowfoot.

KINGDOM, s. [cyndadon, Sax.] the dominion or territories subject to a king. Among naturalists, a class or order of things or beings. Figuratively, a tract or region. Saxon, Empire conveys an idea of a vast territory, composed of various people; whereas kingdom implies one more bounded, and intimates the unity of that nation of which it is formed.

KINGFISHER, s. in Ornithology, a very beautiful bird, which frequents the banks of rivers and feeds upon fish.

KING GEORGE'S SOUND, a name of a harbour on the W. coast of N. America, at the mouth of a great river, in Lat. 49. 33. N. Long. 126. 48. W., called by the natives Nootka, the name now generally adopted by the English. Upon the sea-coast the land is tolerably high and level, but within the Sound, it rises into steep hills, which have a uniform appearance. The trees of which the woods are composed are different sorts of pine. The natives are allied in race to the Kamschatkans and the Esquimaux, and are in a very rude and uncultivated state. The whole of the country round the Sound is in the possession of the emperor of Russia. There is another sound called by this name, on the S. coast of the island of New Holland.

KINGLIKE, K'INGLY, a. royal; belonging or suitable to a king.

K'INGLY, ad. with an air of majesty; with superior dignity.

KINGS, THE BOOKS OF, the name of two historical books in our translation of the Old Testament, which record the deeds and the characters of the kings of Judah and Israel, with events of national importance, from the last days of David to the Babylonish captivity. They were evidently written by several different parties, at different periods. In the Septuagint, the Books of Samuel are called by this name; and our two Books range as the 3rd and 4th of Kings.

KING'S BENCH, or QUEEN'S BENCH, s. the court formerly presided over by the king in person, and therefore movable, but now presided over by the lord chief justice and the other judges, and fixed at Westminster. It takes cognizance of the proceedings in the inferior courts, and peculiarly of the pleas of the crown. It has power to fine and imprison, but appeal may be made from its decisions by a writ of error to the whole body of the judges of the courts, and then to the House of Lords.

KINGSBRIDGE, Devonshire. It is seated at the head of a small river, which falls into the sea a little below, affording a harbour for boats. Here is a bridge over the Salcomb or Dodbrook. It is 206 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Population, 1564.

KINGSCLEAR, Hampshire. It is pleasantly situated on the edge of the Downs, and was once the seat of the West Saxon kings. It is 56 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 2732.

KING'S COLLEGE, the name of a college at Cambridge, and of another at London. That at Cambridge was instituted in the 15th century, by Henry VI., in immediate connexion with Eton College. The buildings are very fine; but the chapel surpasses every other work of the kind at Cambridge, and is one of the most exquisite specimens of early Tudor ecclesiastical architecture in England. The magnificence of the interior of this chapel cannot easily be described; but the harmony of every part,—the lofty windows with their splendid paintings, and the screen and stalls of dark oak finely carved, the richly groined ceiling, with its massive and carved pendants, and the light and graceful arches which seem to support the ceiling, which is wholly framed of stone; with the admirably proportioned exterior, the strong yet elegant buttresses, and the tapering pinnacles, the towers at the angles, and the elaborate tracery of arches and mouldings,—produces an ineffaceable impression on the mind. This college has many peculiar privileges. That at London was established as a counterpoise to University College, for students belonging to the Church of England. It is the E. wing of Somerset House, and maintains its credit as a seat of learning, although, contrary to the intention of its establishers, its students more frequently remove to Oxford or Cambridge for graduation, than avail themselves of the charter to the University of London. There is a good library belonging to it, and a high school or gymnasium is also carried on.

KING'S COUNTY, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It is 43 miles in length, and about 36 in breadth. It is bounded by W. Meath, Kildare, Queen's County, and Tipperary. It has some ranges of hills, some of which exceed 1500 feet in height, but they, in general, attain no great elevation. Its rivers are the Shannon, the Blackwater, the Boyne, &c. Its soil is various, in some parts very fertile; and it has a very large extent of mere bog. It produces slate, limestone, and marble; grain, and cattle. And it has a few manufacturers. Philpinstown is its chief place. Pop. 146,857. It sends 2 members to parliament.

KING'S-EVIL, s. in Medicine, a scrofulous distemper, in which the glands are ulcerated; it derives its name from a vulgar opinion that it may be cured by the touch of a king or crowned head.

KINGSHIP, s. royalty, or the state, office, and dignity of a king.

KINGSPPEAR, s. in Botany, the asphodelus.

KINGSTON. See HULL.

KINGSTON UPON THAMES, Surrey. It is so called from its having been the residence of several of our Saxon kings, some of whom were crowned here, on a stage in the market-place. It is seated on the Thames, over which it has a wooden bridge of 22 piers and 20 arches. It is 10 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 9700.

KINGSTON, or KY'NTON, Herefordshire. It has a good trade in narrow cloth. It is seated on the river Arrow. It is 149 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. The markets on Wednesday before Easter, Whitsuntide, and Christmas, are so considerable for corn, cattle, leather, home-made linen, woollen cloth, and provisions, that they more resemble fairs. Pop. 501.

KINGSTON, the capital city of Jamaica, in the West Indies. It is seated on the N. side of the Bay of Port Royal, on the S. coast of the island. It is a large town, laid out into little squares and cross streets, and is a place of considerable trade and opulence. Many of the houses, in the upper part of the town, are very magnificent; and the markets for flesh, turtles, fish, poultry, fruits, and vegetables, are inferior to none. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 18. N. Long. 76. 33. W.

KING'S-YELLOW, s. among painters, a yellow paint made from orpiment.

KI'NO, s. in Commerce, the gum or candied juice of several trees growing in Asia, Africa, Australia, and other tropical countries, and used for dyeing, and as an astringent medicine.

KINROSS, a county of Scotland, bounded by Perthshire and Fifeshire; and about 10 miles in extent each way. It is hilly, but not mountainous; and the Leven is its chief river. Loch Leven, with its islands, and island castle, rendered so tragically interesting by its share in the history of Mary, Queen of Scots, is in this county. It yields coal and building-stones. And some attention is given to farming and grazing, and to planting. Pop. 8763. It returns a moiety of a member of parliament.

KINROSS, capital of the county, Scotland. It stands on Loch Leven, and has some good houses. It manufactures linen, &c. It is 20 miles from Edinburgh. Its fairs are much frequented. Pop. 2062.

KINSALE, Cork, in Munster, Ireland. It is seated on the river Bandon. It is a very populous trading place, and has a deep, commodious, and secure harbour. It has good fisheries. It is 180 miles from Dublin. Pop. 6918.

KINSEFOLK, s. [from kin and folk.] relations, or those that are of the same family.

KINSMAN, s. a man who is related to, or of the same family with, another.

KINSWOMAN, s. a woman of the same family with another.

KIOF, or K'ow. See KIEW.

KIPPERNUT, s. in Botany, the same with the pig-nut.

KIPPIER, DR. ANDREW, a Dissenting minister, of some note as a divine and miscellaneous writer, in the last century. He studied under Dr. Doddridge, and after filling various stations as congregational pastor, became tutor of an academy at Hackney. His works were critical, biographical, and polemical; and his edition of Dr. Lardner's works is, perhaps, the best known and most valuable of them. He belonged to some of the learned societies, and died in 1795, aged 70 years.

KIRCHER, FATHIER, ATHANASIUS, a Jesuit of great learning and celebrity in the 17th century. He studied in various schools, and became so skilled in Hebrew, &c. that he was for some time professor of the Oriental languages at Würzburg; and so eminent subsequently for mathematics, that he taught them, as professor, at Rome. His works are numerous, and on many different subjects; and are very curious. He died in 1680, aged 78 years.

KIRK, s. [kyrc, Sax.] a church: obsolete in England, but still retained in Scotland.

KIRKBY LONSDALE, Westmoreland. It has a woollen manufactory, and is seated on the river Lon. It is 253 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 4178.

KIRKBY MOORSIDE, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is seated on the edge of Black Moor, near the river Don. It is 225 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 2758.

KIRKBY STEVEN, or KIRBY STEPHEN, Westmoreland. It is noted for a manufactory of yarn stockings. It has a good free-school, with two exhibitions, and is seated on the W. side of the river Eden, near the hills which separate this county from Yorkshire. It is 281 miles from London. Market, Friday. Population, 2850.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It is seated at the mouth of the river Dee, and has a fine harbour, with depth of water sufficient to admit ships of any burden to come up to the town, and yet has but an inconsiderable trade. The town consists of two streets, which form a right angle with each other, having in the centre the town house. It is 83 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2692.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, a county of Scotland. It lies on the Irish Sea, and is bounded by Ayrshire, Dumfriesshire, and Wigtonshire. It is nearly 45 miles in length, and about 30 in breadth. It is not very mountainous, yet it has heights of near 2000 feet in it; and is, especially against the sea, very rocky. It has also fine pasture land. It has mines of lead, &c., and it feeds abundance of sheep and cattle. The Dee is its chief river, and there are several small lakes. Pop. 41,119. It sends one member and a moiety to parliament.

KIRKHAM, Lancashire. It has a well-endowed free-school, for three masters. It is seated near the Ribble, by which it communicates with the inland navigations, and has a considerable manufactory of sail-cloth. It is 223 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 11,604.

KIRKWALL, chief town of Mainland, in the Orkney Isles. It is built upon an inlet of the sea, on the E. side of the island. Here is the stately cathedral of St. Magnus. Lat. 58. 33. N. Long. 0. 25. W. Population, 2205.

KIRTLE, s. [cyrtel, Sax.] an upper garment or gown. Not in use.

KIRTON, Lincolnshire. It has a truly magnificent church. It is seated on an eminence, on the edge of Lincoln Heath. It is 151 miles from London. It gives name to its hundred, in which are 4 villages of the same name. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2092.

To KISS, v. a. [cusan, Brit.] to touch with the lips. Figuratively, to treat with fondness; to touch gently or in a loving manner.

KISS, s. a salute given by joining the lips.

KISSER, s. one that kisses.

KISSINGCRUST, s. the crust of bread formed where one loaf touches another in the oven.

KIT, s. [kitte, Belg.] a large bottle; a small fiddle; a small wooden vessel in which flour is kept.

KITCHEN, s. the room in a house where the provisions are dressed.

KITCHENER, DR. WILLIAM, a physician of the last generation, whose fame rests on his optical studies and practice, and on his devotion to the art of cookery. He published works on these and other subjects, distinguished by a quaintness and earnestness such as a man not too strong might evince. He kept an excellent table, and so gathered excellent company. He died in 1827, aged 53 years.

KITCHENGARDEN, s. a garden wherein salads, roots, herbs, cabbages, and other esculent plants, are produced.

KITCHENMAID, s. a cook or maid who does the business of the kitchen.

KITCHENSTUFF, s. the fat collected in various ways during cooking, and sold for the tallow-chandlers.

KITCHENWENCH, s. a scullion, or maid employed to clean the vessels or instruments used in cookery.

KITCHENWORK, s. cookery, or work done in a kitchen.

KITE, s. [cyta, Sax.] in Ornithology, a bird of prey that infests farms, and steals chickens. Figuratively, a person of remarkable and notorious rapacity. A plaything made of paper, and raised into the air by means of a long string, and running against the wind.

KITESFOOT, s. in Botany, a kind of plant.

KITTEN, s. [kattelen, Belg.] a young cat.

To KITTEN, v. n. to bring forth young cats.

KITTIWAKE, s. in Ornithology, a species of gull; they inhabit the cliffs of Flamborough Head, the Bass Isle, and the rocks on the east coast of Scotland.

KLEBER, JEAN BAPTISTE, one of Buonaparte's greatest generals. He was always a soldier, and volunteered during the first war of the Revolution. In the Netherlands, in La Vendée, and in the subsequent campaigns, he greatly distinguished himself, and rose rapidly to a generalship. He accompanied Napoleon to Egypt, where he appeared to such advantage, that he was left in command when Napoleon left for France. His courage, skill, and humanity, during the most difficult circumstances of his command, were unequalled. He was assassinated by a young Arab, in 1800, aged 40 years.

To KLICK, v. n. [from the sound,] to make a sharp noise like the claps of an iron chain beating against each other.

KLOPPSPRINGER, s. in Zoology, a kind of antelope, that inhabits the vicinity of the Cape of Good Hope.

KLOPSTOCK, FREDERIC THEOPHILUS, a German poet of the last century, who enjoyed during the greater part of his life a most extraordinary celebrity; and who has received corresponding dispraise since his death. He was an excellent lyric writer, but his name is associated with more ambitious works, and his dramas, and a tedious epic, entitled The Messiah, show that he mistook his proper walk, and that those who applauded these very productions so much, could scarcely have been acquainted with them. His private character was most interesting, his love of liberty ardent, and he entertained great hopes respecting the French Revolution. He received distinguished honours both when living, and when he died, in 1803, aged 79 years.

To KNAB, (the k before the n in this and all the following words is mute,) v. a. [knappen, Belg.] to take a short bite; to bite something bitter that makes a noise between the teeth.

KNACK, s. [knec, Brit.] a toy or bauble, which discovers skill or contrivance; a readiness; a peculiar sleight or habitual dexterity in doing any thing; a nice trick.

To KNACK, v. n. to make a sharp, shrill noise like that of a stick when breaking.

KNACKER, s. a maker of small work; a rope-maker; a dealer in dead horses; a saddler and harness-maker.

KNAG, s. a knob or hard knot in wood.

KNAGGY, a. knotty, or full of knobs.

KNAP, s. [knapp, Brit.] an eminence; a swelling protuberance.

To KNAP, v. a. [knappen, Belg.] to bite or break short; to strike so as to make a sharp noise like that of breaking; to make a sharp noise by a sudden clash or breaking.

KNAPBOTTLE, s. in Botany, a kind of poppy.

To KNAPBOTTLE, v. n. to break off with a short, sharp noise.

KNAPPSACK, s. [knappen, Belg.] the bag which a soldier carries at his back; a bag of provisions, &c.

KNAPWEED, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which there are several species; the bluebottle, matselfon, star-thistle, and St. Barnaby's thistle, belong to this genus.

KNARE, s. [knor, Teut.] a hard knot.

KNARESBOROUGH, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is pleasantly seated on the river Nid, over which it has a stone bridge, on a rugged, rough rock. It is famous for its medicinal springs; here, too, are St. Mungo's well, a cold bath; and the dropping well, whose waters incrust substances, placed in them with tufa. The adjacent fields are used for the cultivation of liquorice. It has a manufacture of linen cloth, sheeting, &c. It is 211 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 9947.

KNAVE, s. [knafa, Sax.] a sly, artful, or dishonest fellow. In Gaming, it is applied to a card having a soldier painted on it.

KNAVEERY, s. dishonesty; tricks; low cunning; any thing put to an ill use.

KNAVISH, a. dishonest; tricking; waggish; mischievous.

KNAVISHLY, ad. in a sly, cunning, and dishonest manner.

KNAWEL, s. in Botany, an herb with greenish blossoms, found on sandy ground, and in corn-fields.

To KNAD, (need) v. a. [knadan, Sax. kneden, Belg.] to beat or mingle any substance. Seldom applied to any thing but the manner of making dough fit for baking, by often rolling it in different forms, and pressing it with the knuckles.

KNEDINGTROUGH, (kneding-traff) s. a trough in which the paste of bread is worked together.

KNEE, s. [kneco, Sax.] in Anatomy, the joint of the leg whereby it is united to the thigh.

To KNEE, v. a. to place the knee upon; to entreat kneeling.

KNEED, a. having knees. In Botany, having joints.

KNEE-DEEP, a. rising to the knees; sunk to the knees.

KNEE-HOLM, s. in Botany, a kind of herb.

KNEE-PAN, s. in Anatomy, a little round bone about two inches broad, convex on both sides, and covered with a smooth cartilage on its fore-side; which serves as a pulley to the tendon of the muscles that extend the leg.

To KNEEL, v. n. to bend the knee; to touch the ground with the knee, as a sign of subjection and supplication.

KNEETRIBUTE, s. worship or obeisance shown by kneeling.

KNELLS, s. [knell, Brit.] the sound of a bell rung at a burial or funeral.

KNELLER, SIR GODFREY, an eminent portrait painter, who was a native of Lübeck, and studied in Italy, where he first acquired his fame. He was afterwards for a long time resident in England, and was patronized by Charles II., James II., and William III. for the last of whom he painted the Beauties of Hampton Court. He was intimate with the literary men of his time, and was much sought for his social spirit. His portraits are excellent for the likeness, the colouring, and the execution, but they have nothing to show his possession of an artist's soul. He died in 1723, aged about 75 years.

KNEW, the preter of To Know.

KNIBB, WILLIAM, a Baptist missionary in Jamaica, who was one of the sufferers in the cause of Negro emancipation, from the ferocious spirit of opposition to all efforts for bettering the condition of the slaves, nurtured and acted on by the English planters. He had his house destroyed, and the place where he preached. He had been himself forced to serve in the militia called out on occasion of an insurrection of the slaves, and was imprisoned on pretence of being concerned in the rising. He first compelled the Missionary Society, which supported him, to oppose slavery; and by his impassioned eloquence, not a little aided in creating that public feeling which finally overturned this bideous wrong. He frequently visited England in this sacred cause; and at last, in defence of the missions against charges, which were never refuted, but yet were withdrawn. He died in 1845, aged 42 years.

KNIFE, s. plural knives; [knif, Sax.] an instrument consisting of a steel blade with an edge on one side, and sometimes with a sharp point.

KNIGHT, (nite) s. [knicht, Sax.] among the Romans, was a person of the second degree of nobility, following immediately that of the senators. At the ceremony of conferring this honour, he had a horse given him, which was kept at the public charge, with which he was to serve in the wars. Knight, in a modern sense, properly signifies a person who is by the king raised above the rank of gentlemen, into a higher class of dignity and honour. Knighthood was formerly the first degree of honour amongst the nobility, and conferred with much ceremony on those who devoted themselves to the profession of arms. The ceremonies at their creation have been various; the principal was the accolade, or stroke with a sword on the shoulder; they put on him a shoulder-belt, a gilt sword, spurs, and other military accoutrements; being thus armed as a knight, he was led to the church, where he had to watch his armour for a night. Knights are now created in connexion with some order; as, of the Garter, the Bath, &c. See under the different heads.

KNIGHT, RICHARD PAYNE, a gentleman of wealth, distinguished as a literary critic, and an encourager of literature and the fine arts. He was for a time in parliament, but had no taste for that kind of public service. He collected a great number of antiques, chiefly Greek, which illustrated the private life of that people; and these he bequeathed to the British Museum, of which he was for some time a trustee. He published many works, of which his Essay on Taste, and his edition of Homer, are the best known. He died in 1824, aged 76 years.

KNIGHT, THOMAS ANDREW, an eminent horticulturist, whose knowledge of vegetable physiology was applied with great industry and success to the improvement of fruits and vegetables, and whose name is yet affixed to many of the best varieties. He wrote on his favourite subject, and his treatises are esteemed of value in that branch of applied science. He was brother to the critic, and died in 1838, aged 79 years.

KNIGHT-ERRANDRY, s. in the Middle Ages, the practice of wandering about to set right by force of arms, all kinds of wrong done to the feeble, and especially to women. It in time became a most intolerable nuisance, as such modes of redress must always be, and was finally laughed out of existence by humorous tales and ballads, having been in a very meagre condition by the increase of lawyers and law-courts.

KNIGHT OF THE POST, s. a hireling evidence, or one that will swear any thing if paid for it.

KNIGHTS OF THE SHIRE, s. in the British Constitution, are representatives elected by the voters in counties for parliament. The qualification of a knight of the shire is, to be possessed of 600*l.* per ann. in a freehold estate.

KNIGHTS' FEE, and KNIGHTS' SERVICE, s. in the Feudal System, were correlative terms, implying land that might support a knight suitably with his station, and the duty required of the lord of his vassals who held such land under him.

To KNIGHT, v. a. to create a person a knight.

KNIGHTHOOD, s. the rank or dignity of a knight.

KNIGHTLY, ad. befitting a knight; befitting a knight.

KNIGHTON, Radnorshire, Wales. It is seated in a valley on the river Tend or Teme, which separates it from Shropshire, and has a considerable trade. It is 155 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1404.

To KNIT, v. a. preter knit, or knitted; [knitan, Sax.] to form any texture or manufactures on wires or needles without a loom. Figuratively, to interweave; to join together in friendship; to join close, or unite. To tie, applied to knots. To join or unite two persons together, applied to matrimony. To contract in wrinkles, applied to the forehead, or eye-brows.

KNIT, s. the texture, degree, or fineness of any thing formed by knitting.

KNITTER, s. one who makes any manufacture by knitting.

KNITTING-NEEDLE, s. a wire with which stockings, &c. are made without a loom.

KNITTING, s. a string with which the mouth of a purse is gathered and closed.

KNOB, s. [knop, Belg.] a protuberance; a part rising bluntly above the surface of a thing.

KNOBBED, a. set with knobs or protuberances.

KNOBBISSNESS, s. the quality of having knobs or protuberances.

KNOBBY, a. full of knobs. Figuratively, hard or stubborn; alluding to wood, which is not easily bent, when full of knots.

To KNOCK, v. n. [knocotapee], to clash; to be driven forcibly together; to beat at a door for admittance. To knock under, to submit, or pay submission. To knock down, to fell, or make a person fall, by a violent blow. To knock on the head, to kill or destroy by a blow.

KNOCK, s. a sudden stroke or blow; a loud stroke made at the door for entrance.

KNOCKER, s. one who makes a noise at a door to gain entrance; the hammer banging at a door for persons to strike with to gain admission.

To KNOLL, (noll) v. a. [from knell], to ring a bell for a burial.

KNOLLES, s. in Botany, the wild turnip.

KNOP, s. [a corruption of knapp], any tufted top. In Botany, a kind of crowfoot.

KNOT, s. [cnotta, Sax.] a hard knob formed by tightly drawn interlacings of rope or cord, &c. Figuratively, any figure formed of lines frequently intersecting each other; any bond of union or association; a difficulty or intricacy not easily resolved; an intrigue, or difficult perplexity; a cluster, or collection. In Dress, a ribbon worn by way of ornament on the head of a woman. A hard part of wood, caused by the growing of a bough in that part.

To KNOT, v. a. to tie threads or cords in such a manner as to make a hard knob; to entangle or perplex; to unite.

KNOTBERRIES, KNOUTBERRIES, s. in Botany, the cloudberry bramble.

KNOTGRASS, s. in Botany, a plant with white flowers, in naked whorls, and trailing stems, found in wet pastures; also a kind of snakedew.

KNOTSFORD, Cheshire. It has a silk mill, and a manufacture of shag velvets. It is seated on a rivulet called Birken, which divides it into two parts. It is 173 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 4006.

KNOTTED, a. full of knots.

KNOTTINESS, s. the quality of abounding in knots; an intricacy or difficulty not easily solved.

KNOTTY, a. full of knots, applied either to threads or trees; hard, intricate, perplexed, difficult.

KNOUT, is the name of a punishment inflicted in Russia, with a kind of whip so called, and made of a long strap of leather prepared for this purpose.

To KNOW, (the w in this word and its derivatives is mute, and o pron. long.) v. a. preter. I knew or have known; past part. known; [cnawan, Sax.] to perceive with certainty; to be acquainted with; to be free from ignorance.

KNOWABLE, a. possible to be discovered or understood.

KNOWER, one that has knowledge or skill.

KNOWING, a. skilful; well instructed; of extensive knowledge or experience; free from ignorance; conscious; intelligent; given to display one's knowledge.

KNOWING, s. knowledge, experience, or understanding.

KNOWINGLY, ad. deliberately; wilfully; without being ignorant.

KNOWLEDGE, (nledge) s. [from know], the possession of the representations or images of external things, by the mind, to which it, according to its own laws, certainly ascribes existence; and a similarly assured apprehension of the truths and ideas of reason; learning, or improvement of our faculties by reading; experience, or the acquiring new thoughts and facts by seeing a variety of objects, and making observation upon them in our own minds; acquaintance with any person or fact.

KNOX, JOHN, the great Scottish Reformer; who was born in lowly circumstances, and was educated at Haddington, and at St. Andrews, for the priesthood; and appears to have been remarkable for his attainments in some of the departments of study, and to have been favoured in consequence of it. The doctrines of the Reformation had already acquired great hold on the minds of all classes in Scotland; but fear of the priests respected the profession of them. Knox, having embraced them, at once preached them, and was immediately an object of persecution. On the surrender of the castle of St. Andrews to the French, Knox, who had joined the party in it, was carried as a prisoner to France, and was made a galley slave. On his liberation, he proceeded to England, and was favourably received by Cranmer; but he retired to Geneva when Mary became queen; and there he became confirmed in his presbyterian predilections and stern Calvinism. After a season of unsettled wandering, marked by the publication of a most extraordinary diatribe against queens in general, he returned to Scotland in the heat of the conflict between old and moribund Catholicism, and young and fierce Protestantism. The fire of his zeal precipitated the work of destruction, and arms were resorted to on both sides. During a season of alternate treaty and threatenings of war, Knox never abated his preaching, nor changed his theme; even when it was at the peril of his life, as when the Lords of the Congregation had taken possession of Edinburgh, and his enemies placed soldiers to fire on him if he dared to speak. At length, the beautiful and ill-fated Mary became queen; and Knox, who had spoken so publicly against her rule and her religion, was an object of interest, and she sought to win him; but he lived for one object, and knew but one language. The queen failed, so she attempted to silence him by law; but the judges acquitted him of her charge, and he continued his work. After a series of vexatious attempts to hinder him, all unsuccessful, he laid the foundation for the legal recognition of Presbyterianism, in the very souls of the Scots; and he died in 1572, aged 67 years. Knox was most remarkably fitted for his work. He was learned, kind-hearted, firm as steel; terribly stern and earnest in his address; of a courage that never quailed; his zeal consumed him. The people to be taught were akin to him in the qualities of heart; but were ignorant, and not a little barbarous in their habits; moderation would have been treason in their eyes. The impression he made was not touched even by all the savage draconings of the Episcopalians; nor by all that Cromwell and his Independents could do, and did in their way; nor yet by long ages of uninterrupted worldly prosperity. Successions and schisms have not changed the Scots in Scotland a whit, from what they were made by the thunders of the man that feared God and knew no other fear. The one thing that Knox could not impart,—which each man must find and keep for himself,—the living principle of religion,—that has varied as in most cases, being often sunk to absolute nonentity; and especially has it dwindled beneath the fierce fire of polemics, and the soft south wind of patronage and power; but the form he could and did give to the creed and to the Church stands unimpaired. Yet there are influences at work now which may change even it; and then will the great work of John Knox stand forth to the day, as clearly and nobly as that of his fellow soldiers, who fought and fell, unconquered in other battle fields for the truth of God.

KNOX, DR. VICESIMUS, an English clergyman, who was for many years master of the Tunbridge grammar school, and who published many works of a literary and religious character. Besides his own Estrays, he compiled the works known by the title of Elegant Estrays, which were very popular in the beginning of this century. He died in 1821, aged 60 years.

KNOXVILLE, a town of Tennessee, United States. It stands on the Holston river, and is regularly planned and handsomely built. East Tennessee College is here; a flourishing institution, with a good library. It is 498 miles from Washington. Pop. 1500. Eight other places in the States are so named.

To KNÜBBLE, v. a. [knippler, Dan.] to beat.

KNUCKLE, s. [cnucle, Sax.] in Anatomy, the joints of the fingers. The knee joint of a calf, applied to Cookery. The articulation or joints of a plant, in Botany.

To KNUCKLE, v. a. to put the knuckles close to the ground.—v. n. to submit, used with under.

KNUCKLED, a. joined, applied to plants.

KNUR, KNURLE, s. [knor, Teut.] a knot; a hard substance.

KNUTSFORD. See KNOTSFORD.

KOLYVAN, a government of the Russian empire in Asia, bounded by the governments of Tobolsk, Irkutsk, and by Tataria. Its capital, of the same name, is seated on the Obi. This country has produced silver mines, which have been called the Potosi of Russia.

KONIGSBERG, in the kingdom of Prussia. It was once the capital, and is now second only to Berlin, and is a provincial metropolis. The city is about 7 English miles in circumference, and stands on the Pregel, a navigable river, which here falls into the eastern extremity of the Frische Haf, an inlet of the Baltic. No ships drawing more than 7 feet water can pass the bar, and come up to the town; so that the large vessels anchor at Pillau, a small town on the Baltic, which is the port of Königsberg; and the merchandise is sent up in smaller vessels. It is fortified, and has some very magnificent public buildings, amongst which the old palace, the castle, the cathedral, and the government houses are conspicuous. It has a university also, with every needful apparatus of library, museum, &c. The trade of Königsberg is very considerable. Its population is about 70,000. Lat. 54. 42. N. Long. 20. 48. E.

KORAN, A'LCORAN, s. [Arab.] the sacred writings of the Mohammedans. The various chapters composing this extraordinary book, were written at different times by Mohammed, according to the necessity of the hour, on loose sheets and pieces of bone, and were collected into a volume by Abubekr, after the prophet's death. The composition of this work is highly eulogized by Mussulmans for its elegance; but this does not reveal itself to the apprehension of unbelievers. It is chiefly made up of loose, rambling declamation, with proverbs and proverbial sayings interspersed; mixed with popular traditions of characters and deeds recorded in the Hebrew Scriptures, and records of alleged, but often contradictory, revelations. It is read completely through once in every 24 hours, by courses of priests in the great mosque at Mecca. And the mere reading of it, even where the meaning of the words is quite unknown, is generally recommended and practised by Mohammedans, as in the highest degree meritorious.

KORDOFAN, a country of Africa, lying between Nubia and Darfur, and bounded by the desert regions of that part of the continent. It is hilly in some parts, and there are found all that makes the country habitable, springs of water and fertile patches of ground, with iron and gold. It is in a very uncivilized state, and is now subject to Egypt. The chief place is Obeidin.

KÖRNER, THEODORE, a patriot poet and soldier of Prussia, during the continental wars of the beginning of this century. He studied at the chief universities, and had brought out some dramas, when the turn of affairs which roused all Germany against Napoleon, awakened him, and his pen and his sword were devoted to his country's freedom. His songs were universally admired and sung; but the poet, wounded in more than one fight, fell at Leipzig, in 1813, aged but 22 years. Youthful fire and ardent patriotism are the characteristics of his verses; and these are all that should be asked of such a bard, cast in such times.

KOSCIUSKO, THADDEUS, a Polish commander, who signalized himself first in the American war of Independence, and afterwards in the struggle for the existence of Poland, with extraordinary courage, and with brightest gleams of success. On the fall of his country, he was taken prisoner, but was released, and spent the rest of his days in America, France, and Switzerland, resisting the overtures of Napoleon, and dying in 1817, aged 61 years.

KOTZEBUE, AUGUST. FREDERIC FERDINAND VON, a German playwright of the first water, who by ready wit and good fortune, and finally, by being assassinated as a foe to liberty, made a great noise in the European literary world. He received from Russia the equivocal compliment of a forced journey to Siberia, but was afterwards placed in more pleasant and profitable situations. He dabbled in politics also, and having, as was thought, written down Napoleon, attempted to write down the growing spirit of freedom in Germany; and for this was assassinated by Sand, in 1819, aged 58 years. His plays are numerous, and have passages of real excellence, or they could never have been tolerated. Some were translated into English, and Kotzebue was looked at as the prodigy of modern Germany.

KRAKEN, s. in fabulous Natural History, the name given to an imaginary sea-monster, the most lucid descriptions of which make it resemble the cuttle-fish; but the engravings representing it, very like a dragon. It is never seen now, except in newspapers during parliamentary vacations.

KRISHNA. See VISHNU.

KURDISTAN, a country of Asia, lying on the confines of Asiatic Turkey and Persia, and partly subject to both. Its boundaries are not well defined. It is very mountainous, and some ridges rise above 10,000 feet in elevation; but the greater part of the country is about 5000 feet above the sea level. It is well watered by one of the tributaries of the Tigris; and it is a very fertile region, producing grain of different kinds, herbs, fruits, &c. &c. in abundance. There are also many kinds of manufacture carried on, but of course in a very rude way. The people whence the country takes its name are the Kurds, who are a scarcely reclaimed nomade race, similar in appearance, &c. to most of the aborigines of this part of Asia. Besides these, who are not numerous, there are Turks, Armenians, Jews, Persians, and Christians of the Nestorian communion. All these different people maintain their own religion. Sulimaniab and Kermanshah are the principal places. Population, about 2,000,000.

KURILES, a chain of islands, extending from the southern extremity of Kamtschatka to Japan, chiefly valuable for their furs, particularly that of the sea-otter. They are 22 in number, exclusive of the very small ones. There are several volcanoes yet active in them. The people live by hunting and fishing; but agriculture has been attempted in the most southerly of them. The N. islands belong to Russia; a few of the S. to Japan.

KURSKOI, a government of European Russia, bounded by the governments of Orel, Voronez, Charkov, and Novgorod-Sieverskov. It is about 180 miles in each direction. It is completely agricultural, and is very fertile. There are some few common manufactures. Kursk is its capital. Pop. about 2,000,000.

L

L IS a semi-vowel, or liquid consonant, the eleventh letter of the English alphabet. In the Saxon it was aspirated, as in leaf, Sax. a loaf; as it is at present by the Spaniards, and by the Cambr-Briggs, in llan, a temple. The figure of the capital L we borrow from the Romans, who borrowed it from the Δ of the Greeks, as it appears in their ancient inscriptions, thus, >. It is pronounced by putting the tongue to the palate, and breathing from the throat. At the end of a monosyllable it is always doubled, as in fall, kill, &c.; but at the end of a word of two or more syllables it is written single, as in doubtful; as it likewise is when it occurs in the middle of compound words, as in skillful. When it comes before e, at the end of a word, it is pronounced as if the e came before it, as in bible, feeble, tillle. As a numeral, it stands for 50, and when a line is drawn over it, thus,  $\overline{L}$ , for 50,000.  $\overline{L}$  also stands for Libra, a Pound; also for Libra, a Book.

LA, interject, look! behold! see!

LAB'DANUM, s. in the Pharmacopœia, a resin of the softest kind, of a strong and not unpleasant smell, an aromatic, but not an agreeable taste. It exudes from a low spreading shrub of the cistus kind, in the Greek islands, &c.

To LAB'EFY, v. a. to weaken; to impair.

LABEL, s. [labelum, Lat.] a small or narrow slip, scrip, or scroll of writing. In Law, a narrow slip of paper or parchment affixed to a deed or writing, in order to hold the seal which is fastened to it; likewise any paper added by way of explanation or addition to a will, called either label or culcilli. In Heraldry, an addition to the arms of a younger brother, to distinguish him from the eldest.

LAB'ENT, a. [labor, Lat.] falling, gliding, slipping, passing away.

LAB'IAL, a. [labium, Lat.] expressed by the lips, applied to letters.

LAB'IATED, a. formed with or having lips.

LABIODENTAL, a. [labium and dens, Lat.] in Grammar, formed or pronounced by the co-operation of the lips and teeth, as the f and v.

LABORATORY, s. [laboratoire, Fr.] the place where a chemist performs his operations. In an hospital, a place where chemical medicines are made. In a camp, the tent where the engineers or fireworkers prepare their works.

LABORIOUS, a. [labor, Lat.] diligent, assiduous, and indefatigable; tiresome; fatiguing.

LABORIOUSLY, ad. with labour, toil, or fatigue.

LABORIOUSNESS, s. the quality of requiring great labour, or causing fatigue; diligence; assiduity.

L'ABOUR, (labôr, s. [labor, Lat.]) the act of performing something which requires an exertion of strength, or tiresome perseverance; pains; toil; work; exercise; travail; or the state a woman is in previous to her being delivered of a child.

To L'ABOUR, v. n. [laboro, Lat.] to toil; to exert strength in the performance of any thing; to do work, or take pains. Figuratively, to move with difficulty; to be oppressed; to be in the state preceding childbirth; to prosecute with great pains.

L'ABOURER, s. [laboureur, Fr.] one who is employed in coarse and toilsome work; the person who carries mortar, bricks, &c. to builders; one who exerts much strength.

L'ABOURSOME, a. done with great exertion of strength.

L'ABRADOR, an extensive country of N. America. It extends from Hudson's Bay along Hudson's Straits and the Atlantic, to the Gulf of St. Lawrence; and equals Spain, France, and Germany in area. It is most sterile and naked in aspect, and its whole surface seems broken up with rivers, lakes, and rocks; but it is most imperfectly explored. The climate is in severity completely polar; and its animals, and its vegetation, are exactly like what are known in the most northern regions of the earth. Its entire coast is indented with excellent harbours, and its fisheries are very valuable. These and the furs obtained by hunters are its commercial wealth. Its inhabitants are the native Esquimaux, the hunters, and the Moravians who have visited this country for the purpose of communicating religious knowledge to the people. Its whole population is about 4000.

LABRADOR SPAR., s. in Mineralogy, a kind of crystalline rock, of a gray or bluish colour, with patches of most richly iridescent colours, golden, blue, and green, in it. It is found in this country as well as in Labrador.

LABRUS, s. in Ichthyology, a genus of fishes, which have remarkably thick prominent lips.

LABURNUM, s. in Botany, a tree well known in our gardens, bearing long bunches of beautiful yellow flowers in springtime. Its seeds, in pods resembling peas, are poisonous; and its wood is used for small ornaments in turning.

LABYRINTH, s. [labyrinthos, Gr.] a winding, mazy, and intricate walk in a garden. The most famous labyrinth was that of Crete, built by King Minos, it was said, to conceal the Minotaur in. They are now made in public gardens for the amusement of visitors.

LAC, s. [laccæ, Lat.] in Commerce, a kind of resin, obtained from some trees of the E. Indies, from which it exudes through small holes bored by insects. It is distinguished into stick-lac, seed-lac, and shell-lac, according as it is in its natural or prepared state. It is used in making sealing-wax, and various kinds of varnish; also in dyeing, &c.

LACAÏLLE, NICHOLAS LOUIS DE, an eminent French mathematician and astronomer of the last century. He made a voyage to the Cape of Good Hope, and constructed a catalogue of the stars of the S. hemisphere. The perfection of the theory of the sun, researches into the law of refraction, and a catalogue of 400 of the principal stars, are his other great works. He aided also in measuring a degree of the meridian in France. He held for some time a chair in Mazarin College; and published many works, which are still valuable. He died in 1762, aged 49 years.

LACCADIVE ISLANDS, a group of small coral islands in the Indian Ocean, on the Malabar coast; the largest are inhabited and cultivated, the others furnish cocoa nuts, oil, &c. Rice is grown on the inhabited islands, with betel, &c. &c. Auderott, one of the largest, is in Lat. 11. 30. N. Long. 72. 5. E.

LACCIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to lac.

LACE, s. [laccæ, Fr.] a string or cord; a snare or gin; a plaited string with which women fasten their stays or bodices; a web of thread, or gold and silver, curiously woven, and used as ornaments in dress.

To LACE, v. a. to fasten with a plaited string running through eyelet holes; to adorn with gold, silver, or thread webs, curiously wrought. Figuratively, to embellish with ornaments of different colours.

LACEDÆMONIANS, that branch of the Dorian race of ancient Greece, inhabiting Laconia or Sparta. See these names.

LACÉMAN, a. one who deals in lace.

LACEPEDE, BERNARD GERMAIN ETIENNE, COUNT OF, an eminent French naturalist, who was first connected with the army; and afterwards with the Jardin du Roi, in which he was a coadjutor of Buffon. He took part in the Revolution; escaped the dangers of the Reign of Terror, and received many distinctions from Napoleon. He wrote works relating to fishes and reptiles; and died in 1825, aged 69 years.

LACERABLE, a. liable to be torn.

To LACERATE, v. a. [laccro, Lat.] to tear, rend, or separate by violence.

LACERATION, s. the act of tearing or rending; a breach made by tearing.

LACERATIVE, a. tearing; having the power of tearing.

LACERTA, in Astronomy, the lizard, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

LACHESIS, (Lakesis) s. in Greek Mythology, one of the three Fates; the others being Clotho and Atropos.

LACHRYMAL, (lákrymal) a. [Fr. lachrymal, Lat.] producing or containing tears.

LACHRYMARY, (lákrymary) a. containing tears.

LACHRYMATORIES, (lákrymatories) s. [lachrymatórios, Fr.] vessels in which the ancients saved the tears of surviving friends and relations, to the honour of the dead.

To LACK, v. a. [laecken, Belg.] to want; to be without; to be deficient or wanting.

LACK, s. want; defect; failure; need. In India, a lack of rupees is 700,000 rupees.

LACKBRAIN, a. one that wants wit.

LACKER, s. a kind of varnish, which, when spread on a white surface, appears of a golden colour. Figuratively, applied to a vicious way of writing, in which unnecessary tropes and other rhetorical figures are used; or such ornaments used to conceal real poverty of thought and knowledge.

To LACKER, v. a. to smear over with lacker.

LACKEY, s. [laquis, Fr.] a footboy.

To LACKEY, v. a. to attend as a servant; to wait upon as a footboy; to wait upon in a servile manner.

LA CONDAMINE, CHARLES MARIE, a French traveller and mathematician, whose greatest work was the part he took in measuring a degree of the meridian in Peru. He published works relating to this, and other matters seen in his travels; and died in 1774, aged 73 years.

LACONIA, a country of Ancient Greece, occupying the E. and the central promontories which project from the Peloponnese into the Mediterranean Sea, and bounded by the states of Messenia, Arcadia, and Argolis. It consisted of two mountain ridges, which formed the two promontories; and the valley between them, watered by the river Eurotas. The only city was Sparta.

LACONIC, a. [laconicus, Lat.] short; concise; brief; expressed in few words.

LACONICALLY, ad. in a brief or concise manner.

LACONISM, LACONICISM, s. [Lacon, Lat.] a concise style expressing much in few words.

LACTANTIUS, LUCIUS CÆLIUS, or CÆCILIUS FIRMIANUS, a Latin Father, of the 3rd and 4th centuries. He studied under Arnobius, and opened a rhetorical school in Nicomedia in the reign of Diocletian. He was afterwards made private tutor to Crispus, Constantine the Great's eldest son. He was a learned but not profound theologian, and the most elegant writer of all the Latin Fathers. His works are numerous, the Divine Institutions being the chief. He died, a very old man, in about 330.

LACTARY, a. [lac, Lat.] milky; full of juice resembling milk.

LACTARY, s. a dairy-house.

LACTATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with lactic acid.

LACTATION, s. in Medicine, the act or time of giving suck.

LACTEALS, s. in Anatomy, vessels which convey the chyle, a milky-coloured fluid, from the intestines to the great subclavian vein, where it is mixed with the œmulsion.

LACTEUS, a. milky; lacteal; conveying the milky juice called chyle.

LACTESCENCE, s. tendency to turn into a liquor like milk.

LACTESCENT, a. producing milk or a white juice.

LACTIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to milk.

LACTIFEROUS, a. [lac and fero, Lat.] in Anatomy, conveying or bringing milk.

LAD, s. [lade, Sax.] a boy, or stripling, in familiar language and pastoral poetry.

LADDER, s. [ladre, Sax.] a frame made with two upright pieces, crossed with others at proper distances, which serve as steps; anything by which one climbs; a gradual rise.

LADE, s. [Sax.] in Composition, implies the mouth of a river, by which its waters are discharged either into a great river or the sea.

To LADE, v. a. preter. and past part. laded or laden; [laden, Sax.] to put a burden upon a beast; to burden. To freight, applied to a ship. See Lo.

LADESFINGER, s. in Botany, the kidney-vetch.

LADIESMANTLE, s. in Botany, a plant, of which three are natives of England.

LADING, s. the burden, cargo, or freight of ships.

LADLE, s. [hlaele, Sax.] a large spoon; a vessel with a long handle, used to take liquor out of a pot, &c.; the boards of a mill-wheel, on which the water falling, turns it.

LADOGA, in Geography, the name of a large lake of Russia in Europe, lying E. of the Gulf of Finland, and communicating with it by the river Neva, and with Lake Onega on the opposite side by another river. A town of the same name, Olonetz, and St. Petersburg, are situated in the immediate vicinity of this lake.

LADRONE, or MARIAN ISLANDS, a chain of islands of the N. Pacific Ocean, about 1600 miles from the coast of China, and occupying a space of 150 leagues in extent. They are about 16 in number, exclusive of the small islets and rocks. They are mostly volcanic, and contain, besides other fruits natural to the soil and climate, that extraordinary and useful plant, the breadfruit tree, which was first discovered here. The names of the principal islands are Guam, Saypan, Tinian, and Rota. Pop. about 6000.

LADY, s. [læfdig, Sax.] a woman of rank, the title belonging properly to the wives of knights, and all degrees above them, and to the daughters of earls; at present used as a ceremonious or respectful expression to women that dress tolerably.

LADY-BIRD, LADY-COW, LADY-FLY, s. in Entomology, a small round insect, whose wing-covers are of a reddish colour spotted with black.

LADY-DAY, s. in the Calendar, the festival of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin, kept on the 25th of March.

LADY-LIKE, a. resembling a person of delicate breeding and constitution; soft; delicate.

LADY-SEAL, s. in Botany, a plant with heart-shaped undivided leaves, greenish blossoms, and red berries; the same with the black bryony.

LADYSHIP, s. the title of a lady.

LAFAYETTE, GILBERT MOTIER, MARQUIS DE, one of the most eminent actors in the two French Revolutions, of 1789 and 1830. He was one of the old noblesse of France, and very highly connected, and arriving at manhood at the time when all classes of society were lip-worshippers of philosophy and liberty, devoted himself to the cause of freedom, and fought in the American war of Independence, gaining great renown, and a lasting name throughout the States of the Union. He was one of Calonne's notables after his return, and possessed so fully the confidence of the Parisians, that he was made commandant of the national guard. During the earlier period of the Revolution he was always before the public, and divided the sovereignty of the people with the great Mirabeau. He was engaged, against his will, in that mad march of women and soldiers on Versailles to fetch the royal family to Paris;—he was joint founder of the short-lived club of Feuillants;—he invented the phrase "sacred right of insurrection," which received a wider application than he dreamed of;—he was at the summit of glory at the grand confederation held at the Champ de Mars; and he fell headlong by exercising martial law in the same place, a short time afterwards. He fought as one of the generals against the first attacks of coalized Europe on the Revolution; and having made a desperate attempt to save his beloved idea of a constitutional monarchy from overthrow, and failed, he emigrated, and was imprisoned by the Austrian emperor at Olmutz. Being released in consequence of Napoleon's victories, he returned to France; and passed a comparatively inactive life, varied by a visit to America, till 1830, when he was again made commandant of the national guard; and was able to realize his cherished idea of king and constitution, in the enthronement of Louis Philippe, king of the French. He died in 1834, aged 77 years. He was too slight a man to deserve the intense hatred the court felt for him, or the imputation of ambition contained in Mirabeau's soubriquet of Cromwell-Grandison. He would have been an admirable man in peaceable times, when he could not have been a leader except in parliamentary debates. His fixed constitutional idea, joined with quiet, conscientious vanity, (for was he not the hero of two worlds?) made him overthrow himself in the first Revolution, and his country in the second.

LAG, s. [laga, Swed.] that is behind, at the latter end, or falls short; sluggish; slow in motion; last or long delayed.

LAG, s. the lowest class; he that comes last or stays behind.

To LAG, v. a. to loiter, or move slowly; to stay behind, or not come in.

LAGGER, s. a loiterer, or one who moves but slowly.

LAGO MAGGIORE, a lake of N. Italy, reaching from the foot of the Alps to the rich plains of Lombardy, watered by the numerous tributaries of the Po. It lies partly in Switzerland, partly in the Austrian dominions, and partly in those of the kingdom of Sardinia. It is surrounded by exquisite scenery, and diversified by islands. Its length is about 40 miles, and its breadth about 5. The river Tessin, or Ticino, flows through it. The towns of Arona, Palanza, Angera, &c. stand on its margin.

LAGOON, s. [Ital.] in Geography, a small lake communicating with a river, or the sea, and separated from them only by a mere embankment, such as are formed by tides and currents, with the alluvion of rivers, and the sand of the sea-shore.

LAGRANGE, JOSEPH LOUIS DE, a distinguished French natural philosopher and mathematician of the last century. When quite a youth he was appointed professor at the military college of Turin; and afterwards was presented with a chain at Berlin, by Frederic the Great. He finally settled at Paris in connexion with the normal and polytechnic schools; and received from Louis XVI., and afterwards from Napoleon, all the honours his eminent scientific attainments claimed. His works are numerous, but amongst them his Analytic Mechanics stands first. His discoveries were all in the region of the highest mathematics; and they were such as to excite the astonishment of its most successful explorers before him. He died in 1813, aged 77 years.

LAHORE, a province in Hindustan, bounded by Cabul, Candahar, Cachemire, Ajmeer, Delhi, and Moultan. It is near 320 miles in length, and about 220 miles in breadth. The soil is remarkably fertile, abounding in rice, corn, vines, sugars, cotton, wool, and fruits of every kind. In the tract between the Indus and the Behat are salt springs wonderfully productive, and affording fragments of rock salt, hard enough to be formed into vessels, &c. The capital of the same name is a place of high antiquity, and was the residence of the Mohammedan conquerors before they established themselves in the central parts of the country. It is now the capital of the Sikhs. Here they have extensive manufactures of cotton cloths, and stuffs of all kinds, and they make very curious carpets. It is situated on the S. bank of the Rauvee, 280 miles N. by W. of Delhi, and 420 E. of Candahar. Lat. 31. 15. N. Long. 72. 48. E. See PUNJAB.

LAICAL, a. [laikos, from laos, Gr.] belonging to the people, opposed to the clergy.

LAID, part. preter. of To LAY.

LAIN, part. preter. of To LIE.

LAINEZ, JAMES, a Spanish monk, who aided Loyola in establishing the Society of the Jesuits. The alterations he made in its constitution, greatly aided it in acquiring that power, which has been exercised so harmfully, and so secretly. He died in 1565, aged 53 years.

LAIR, s. [lai, Fr.] the couch of a boar or wild beast; the daily harbour for deer; also a shelter for cattle to rest in.

LAIRD, s. [halford, Sax.] the lord of a manor, in the Scottish dialect.

LAITY, s. [laos, Gr.] the people distinguished from the clergy; the state of a layman.

LAKE, s. [lac, Fr. lacus, Lat.] a large collection of waters enclosed in some inland places. Figuratively, a small plash of water. In Painting, a fine crimson colour, much used by artists.

LALANDE, JOSEPH JEROME LE FRANÇAIS DE, a celebrated French astronomer of the last century. His first undertaking, which obtained him fame he never afterwards lost, was a series of observations on the moon, made at Berlin, in conjunction with those of Lacaille at the Cape of Good Hope, for determining her parallax. He edited a scientific journal on his return to Paris, and succeeded to the professor's chair of astronomy in the college of France. He received great attention from Napoleon, and died in 1807, aged 69 years. His works are very voluminous, but he was more an astronomical observer than a rival of Lagrange and Laplace. He aided Clairaut in working out the calculations respecting Halley's comet; and his tables were extensively used in the construction of those in our own Nautical Almanac.

LAMA, the title of an order of priests among the western Tartars on the frontiers of China, who are held in great veneration. The grand lama or Dalai lama is not only the chief priest but king of Tibet, and is regarded as an incarnation of the Deity.

LAMMAISM, a. form of Buddhism, which prevails in Tibet.
 LAMARCK, JOHN BAPTISTE P. A. DE MONNET, CHEVALIER DE, a distinguished French naturalist of the last century. After having obtained some name in military service under Broglie, being disabled, he directed his attention to Botany, and devised a natural system, under which he classed all the plants native to France. He travelled in pursuance of this subject, for the Jardin du Roi, and greatly enriched it. He was so eminent in this line, that he wrote for the great methodized Encyclopedia. During the Revolution, he received an appointment which led him to study conchology, and resulted in the arrangement of that branch of natural history in the most beautiful order, and in a way that is yet employed. In the course of his writings he developed a theory of human nature, which, after being greatly admired by the philosophers of his day, was consigned to its proper doom of ridiculous contempt; but which has been revived in these times, with a slight and unimportant difference, as challenging the attention of the profound speculators on man's being and destiny. He supposed (improving on Lord Monboddo's notorious hypothesis) that all animated being commenced at the lowest stage, and that the constant efforts made by individuals of the then universal species, succeeded in the attainment of new properties, which again were surmounted by the results of fresh efforts on the part of other individuals; till, from the little fleshy animalcule, hardly distinguishable from the plants, we have all the wonderfully varied kingdom of animated nature, and man at its head, as the crowning effort placed him there. As this process of transformation has no where been detected in operation, and other well-established facts are unkindly to it, it may be left as an innocent joke of these sages; and no man need be under any alarm that by the neglect of due effort on his part he should relapse into his pristine gelatinous condition. Yet it might be as well for men to attempt the development of that part of their being, by the due cultivation of which, alone, they merit the name and position of men.

LAMB, (the b is mute), s. (Sax. and Goth.) the young of sheep.
 LAMB, CHARLES, a well-known poet and essayist of the last generation. He was the school-fellow, and friend through life, of Coleridge, and was occupied as a writer in the East India House almost all his days. His writings are stamped with a genial humour and beauty of style that places them far above the common mark of literary excellence; and it may surely be expected that by time alone they can reach the estimation they deserve. Charles Lamb's home-companion was his only sister, who has become thus, and by his writings, peculiarly identified with himself. His Essays of Elia is his best known book. He died in 1834, aged 59 years.

LAMBATIVÉ, a. (lambo, Lat.) to be taken by licking.—s. a medicine taken by licking with the tongue.

LAMBENT, a. (lambo, Lat.) gliding about; playing about, or upon, without doing any harm.

LAMBERT, JOHN, one of the military commanders during the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century. He was a lawyer, but took up arms when the war broke out, and rose gradually to fill the highest offices in the army, and in the state, under Cromwell. But he was not so great a man as he deemed himself; and feeling that Cromwell slighted him, he was not very active in his service. After the Protector's death, Lambert headed the military officers in their proceedings against poor Richard; but General Monk, by his treaty with Charles II., circumvented him. He was imprisoned at the Restoration, and banished to Guernsey, where he died, about 1690, aged about 70 years.

LAMBETH, Surrey. It stands on the Thames, opposite Westminster. Lambeth Palace, in which the archbishops of Canterbury have resided ever since the year 1109, contains stately and magnificent apartments; its gallery is well furnished with the portraits of all the archbishops, and other eminent personages; and its noble library is filled with MSS. of great value. Pop. 115,888.

LAMBKIN, a. a little lamb.

LAMBOYDAL, a. (lambo and eidos, Gr.) having the form or shape of the Greek letter  $\Delta$ , lambo.

LAMBORN, Berkshire. It is seated on a small river of the same name, which is remarkable for being high in the summer and low in the winter, and falls into the Kennet below Newbury. It is 68 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 2595.

LAMBLETUCE, s. in Botany, a species of valerian.

LAMBSWOOL, s. a mixture of ale and roasted apples.

LAME, a. (laam, Sax. lamm, Belg.) crippled or disabled in the limbs; walking in a hobbling manner. Figuratively, not smooth, or not having its due quantity of feet, applied to verse. Imperfect; unsatisfactory.

To LAME, v. a. to deprive of the use of a limb, either by a blow or by accident.

LAMELLE, s. [Lat.] little thin plates, whereof the scales or shells of fishes are composed; also thin plates of brass used in making toys and nicknacks.

LAMELLATED, a. [lamella, Lat.] covered with thin plates or films.

LAMELY, ad. like a cripple; not being able to walk without hobbling; imperfectly; in a defective manner.

LAMENESS, s. the state of a person who cannot make a perfect use of his legs or other limbs. Figuratively, imperfection; weakness.

To LAMENT, v. e. [lamentor, Lat.] to express sorrow for any loss.—v. n. to mourn.

LAMENT, s. sorrow expressed so as to be heard; grief uttered in complaints and cries.

LAMENTABLE, a. to be lamented; causing sorrow; mournful; sad; expressive of sorrow; miserable, pitiful, or despicable.

LAMENTABLY, ad. in a manner which expresses or causes sorrow; in a pitiful or despicable manner.

LAMENTATION, s. expression of sorrow; audible grief.

LAMENTATION, BOOK OF, a poetical book of the Old Testament, written by the prophet Jeremiah, after the taking of Jerusalem by the Assyrians. The poetry is in the highest degree pathetic, and the different parts of the book are constructed so that each line begins with a particular letter of the alphabet, as was often the case in Hebrew poems.

LAMENTER, s. one who expresses sorrow for the loss of any person or thing in such a manner as may be heard.

LAMENTINE, s. in Natural History, a fish called a sea-cow or manatee, which is nearly twenty feet long, and belongs to the seals.

LAMINA, s. [Lat.] a thin plate, applied to substances which consist of scales, or one coat laid over another.

LAMINATED, a. plated, applied to bodies consisting of parts resembling thin plates lying one over another.

To LAMM, v. a. to beat soundly with a cudgel.

LAMMAN, s. (lamf-mass, Sax.) the first day of August.

LAMP, s. (lamp, Fr.) a light made of oil and a wick. Figuratively, any kind of light, whether real or metaphorical. Safety-Lamp, in Mining, a cylindrical case of fine wire-gauze, placed over a lamp, and used in mines to prevent the explosion of the inflammable air (called by the miners, the fire-damp) which issues from crevices in the coal-beds. This property of wire-gauze was discovered by Sir Humphrey Davy, but since his time many important improvements have been made in it.

LAMPASS, s. (lampas, Fr.) in Farriery, a lump of flesh about the size of a nutmeg, which rises in the roof of a horse's mouth between his teeth.

LAMBLACK, (lamblack) s. in Painting, a black pigment formed from the soot collected over oil lamps, or in a furnace built for the purpose, by the burning of pine-wood.

LAMPOON, s. [Fr.] a personal satire, or severe censure, written purely to make a person uneasy.

To LAMPOON, v. a. to abuse with personal satire.

LAMPOONER, s. one who abuses with personal satire.

LAMPREY, s. (lamprey, Belg.) in Natural History, a well-known fish, which somewhat resembles an eel, but is of superior delicacy and flavour.

LAMPRON, s. in Natural History, a kind of sea-fish.

LANARKSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded by the counties of Dumbarton, Stirling, Linlithgow, Edinburgh, Peebles, Dumfries, Ayr, and Renfrew. It is about 40 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. The Clyde divides it into two parts; one hilly, heathy, and fit for pastures; the other level, and proper for agriculture. It yields coal, lead, &c., and various kinds of building-stone. The Clyde, Avon, and Tweed are its chief rivers. Agriculture and manufactures are alike flourishing here. LANARK is its county town, and stands near the Clyde. It is an ancient place, and has some great fairs, but is completely eclipsed by Glasgow. It is 34 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 4831. This county, especially the S. part of it, is often called Clydesdale. Pop. 426,972. It sends 3 members to the imperial parliament.

LANARK, NEW, Lanark, Scotland. It stands near the county town, and has long been the seat of some flourishing manufactures. But it has obtained more notoriety as the place where Robert Owen, the founder of the Socialists, attempted, at a vast cost, to carry out his communitarian scheme, by which, without principle or conscience, religion or God, but simply by the judicious application of the force of circumstances, the whole world was to be regenerated. It is about 30 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1642.

LANCASHIRE, a county of England, lying on the Irish Sea, and bounded by Cumberland, Westmoreland, Yorkshire, and Cheshire. It is 75 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It is divided into 6 hundreds, which contain 27 market towns, 62 parishes, and 894 villages. This county comprises a variety of soil and face of country; there being mountains of more than 2000 feet high, in the N. and E. parts, with wide moorlands or heaths amongst them; extensive bogs or mosses, which yield only turf for fuel, and are very dangerous; and some most fertile land for agricultural purposes. It yields iron, coal, slate, and other building-stones; salt, &c., &c. Grazing is more attended to than agriculture. The fisheries, both in the rivers and the sea, are valuable. As a commercial and manufacturing county, Lancashire is distinguished beyond most others in the kingdom. Its principal manufactures are linen, silk, and cotton goods; fustians, counterpanes, shalloons, beads, serges, tapes, small wares, hats, sail-cloth, sacking, pins, iron goods, cast plate-glass, &c. Of the commerce of this county, it may suffice to observe, that Liverpool is now the second port in the united kingdom. The principal rivers are the Mersey, Irwell, Ribble, Lune, Leven, Wyre, Hodder, Roche, Duddon, Winstar, Ken, and Calder, and it has two considerable lakes, Winandernere and Coniston Water. Lancaster is the county town. Pop. 1,667,054. It returns 26 members to parliament.

LANCASTER, Lancashire. An ancient, well-built, and improving town. On the summit of a hill stands the castle, which is not ancient, but large and strong, and now serves both as the shire house and the county gaol. On the top of this castle is a square tower, called John of Gaunt's Chair, where there is a fine prospect of the mountains of Cumberland, and of the course of the Lune; the view towards the sea extending to the Isle of Man. The town hall is a handsome structure. Lancaster carries on some foreign trade, especially to the West Indies, America, and the Baltic. The exports are hardware, woollen goods, candles, and cabinet work, for the making of which last it is noted; and it has also a manufacture of sail-cloth. It is seated on the river Lune, which here forms a port for vessels of moderate size, and over which it has a new stone bridge of five elliptical arches. It is 235 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday, and one on every other Wednesday for cattle. Pop. 24,707.

LANCASTER, a city, formerly the capital of Pennsylvania, United States. It is regularly laid out, in wide streets, crossing each other at right angles, which are well paved and kept. Its commerce and manufactures are considerable. There are several liberally supported academical institutions. It is 111 miles from Washington. Pop. 9226. There are 11 other places in the States so named.

LANCASTER, JOSEPH, a member of the Society of Friends, who devised the system of general instruction commonly known as the Lancasterian or British system. He received encouragement and aid in his benevolent undertaking from the Duke of Bedford, and from George III. By labouring most devotedly at this work, he ruined himself in his pecuniary affairs, and went to America; where in Canada and the States he continued his labours without any diminution of his difficulties. He died in 1838, aged 67 years. His system as he at first promulgated it was deformed by many needless particularities, which excited the ridicule of the adherents of Dr. Bell's system. But now, stripped of all those unimportant parts, and improved by the suggestions of years of experience under most varied circumstances; uncharacterized by sectarian exclusiveness, and unfeathered by government interference, it can yet compete with its rival for the approbation of those who desire the poor to receive the best education possible in their circumstances and consistent with their freedom; just as Lancaster himself may lay claim to as high an estimation as Dr. Bell for philanthropy and ingenuity.

LANCE, s. [lance, Fr. lancea, Lat.] a spear borne in the hand, and somewhat resembling the half-pike.

To LANCE, v. a. to pierce or cut. In Surgery, to open a wound with a lancet, &c.

L'ANCET, s. [lancette, Fr.] a fine small surgeon's knife or instrument, straight-pointed, two-edged, and used in opening veins, &c.

To LANCH, (corruptly written launch), v. a. [lancier, Fr.] to throw like a javelin; to dart or throw.

LAND, s. [Sax. and Goth.] a country; earth, opposed to water; the ground or surface of a place. Used in the plural for an estate consisting in land. Figuratively, a nation or people.

To LAND, v. a. to set on shore from a ship or other vessel.—v. n. to come to shore from a ship or other vessel.

LANDED, a. set on shore from a ship; having a fortune consisting in lands.

LANDER, RICHARD AND JOHN, two brothers engaged in one of the most recent exploring expeditions to W. Africa, which was successful in tracing the course of the Niger, from Bonssa, where Park was killed, to the Bight of Biafra, where it enters the Atlantic Ocean. Richard was servant to Captain Clapperton, during his expedition which proved fatal to him, and was of great service to the undertaking. After his return, he was engaged to conduct another attempt, and was accompanied by his brother. It was during this perilous journey, that they traced the course of this great river to the ocean, and greatly enlarged our knowledge of the natives of that part of Africa. Richard Lander was again engaged, after his return, in the conduct of an expedition, having commercial objects in view: he in part succeeded, but died in consequence of a gun-shot wound received whilst visiting one of the settlements he had formed, in 1835.

LANDES, a department of France, so named from the barren districts occupying great part of its area, called the Landes. It lies on the Bay of Biscay, and is bounded by the departments of Gironde, Lot et Garonne, Gers, and Basses Pyrenees. It is about 65 miles long, and 40 broad. There are a few hills on the inland borders; the rest is a series of sandy desolated plains, intersected by marshes. Its rivers are the Adour, with its tributaries, and some of smaller size. Iron and building-stone are procured in the interior. A little grain, fruits, wine, fir-timber, pitch, sheep, &c. are the produce of its cultivated ground, forests, and pastures. Its manufactures are inconsiderable. Mout de Marsan is its capital. Pop. about 300,000.

LANDFALL, s. [landfaul, s.] in Law, a sudden translation of property in lands by the death of a person. Among mariners, the action of falling in with the land.

LAND-FLOOD, s. an inundation or overflowing of land.

LAND-FORCES, s. forces or soldiers used on land.

LANDGRAVE, s. [landgraff, Teut.] a German title of dominion.

LANDHOLDER, s. one whose fortune consists in land.

LANDING, LANDING-PLACE, s. the uppermost step of a pair of stairs, or the floor of a room you ascend upon; a place where persons come on shore from a ship or boat.

LANDJOBBER, s. one who deals in buying or selling lands.

LANDLADY, s. a woman who has tenants holding under her; the mistress of a public-house.

LANDLESS, a. without property.

LANDLOCKED, a. shut in or enclosed with land.

LANDLOPER, s. [land and loopen, Belg.] a landman; used by seamen as a term of reproach to those who pass their lives on shore.

LANDLORD, s. an owner of lands and houses, who has tenants under him; the master of a public-house.

LANCASHIRE.

REFERENCES TO THE HUNDREDS.

Ashton-under-Lyne	1	Lancaster	4
Blackburn	2	South	5
Leigh	3	West	6

The County returns numbers

Scale of Miles
0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
Railway Stations, thus ■

SCIENTIA
NAVIGATIO
INDUSTRIA

LANDMARK, s. any thing set up to preserve and mark the boundaries of lands.

LANDSCAPE, s. [landscape, Belg.] the view or prospect of a country. In Painting, a piece representing some rural or champain subject, such as hills, vales, rivers, seats, &c.

LAND'S-END, a promontory of Cornwall, the most westerly point of Great Britain. Lat. 50. G. N. Long. 5. 45. W.

LAND-TAX, s. a tax laid upon lands and houses.

LAND-WAITER, s. an officer of the custom-house, set to watch goods, to prevent their being landed without paying duty.

LANDWARD, ad. toward the land.

LANE, s. [lana, Sax.] a narrow way between hedges. In cities, a narrow passage with houses on each side, somewhat broader than an alley, and not so wide as a street.

LANFRANC, archbishop of Canterbury in the 11th century, a great encourager and promoter of learning. He enjoyed great fame in England as a sort of prime minister under our first two Norman kings. Whilst in the ecclesiastical world, he was famous as a partaker in the conflict of authority and reason, in his writings against Borengier, respecting the real presence in the eucharist. He died in 1089, aged 84 years.

LANGPORT, Somersetshire. It is seated on a hill, on the river Parrot, which is navigable for large coal-barges, &c. to Bridgewater. It is 128 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1172.

LANGTON, STEPHEN, archbishop of Canterbury, respecting whose appointment to that see the strife arose between King John and Pope Innocent. He was a learned man; but he was not so subservient in his devotion to the church as Innocent hoped. He died in 1228.

LANGUAGE, (the u before the a, e, i, o, in this and the following words, is pronounced like u; as langage, languid, languor, &c.) s. [langage, Fr. lingua, Lat.] speech; the medium of expressing thought, whether in vocal sounds or written characters.

LANGUAGE-MASTER, s. now written master of languages; one who professes to teach languages.

LANGUET, s. [languette, Fr.] any thing cut in the form of a tongue.

LANGUID, a. [languo, Lat.] wanting force, strength, or spirits. Figuratively, dull; heartless; wanting courage.

LANGUIDLY, ad. in a weak or feeble manner.

LANGUIDNESS, s. the quality or state of wanting strength, courage, or spirits.

To LANGUISH, v. n. [languo, Lat.] to grow feeble; to pine away; to lose spirits, or strength; to lose vigour; to be dejected, or to sink and pine under sorrow, or any slow consuming passion; to look at with melting affection, softness, and tenderness.

LANGUISH, s. any soft, tender, weak, or feeble appearance.

LANGUISHINGLY, ad. weakly; feebly; with feeble tenderness. Dully, tediously, applied to time.

LANGUISHMENT, s. the state of pining either with some slow passion or disease; a soft and melting look of tenderness.

LANGUOR, s. [languor, Lat.] faintness arising from fatigue or emotion; languishment.

To LANIATE, v. a. [lanio, Lat.] to tear in pieces; to lacerate.

LANIFICE, s. [lana and facio, Lat.] woollen manufacture.

LANIGEROUS, a. [lana and gero, Lat.] bearing wool.

LANK, a. [lancke, Belg.] loose; limber; wanting stiffness; not curled, but hanging straight, applied to hair. Meagre; slender; faint or languid.

LANKNESS, s. the quality or state of being thin, meagre, or slender. The quality of hanging down straight without curls, applied to hair.

LANIER, s. [lanier, Fr.] in Ornithology, a species of hawk.

LANNES, JEAN, Duke of Montebello, and Marshal of France, was one of Napoleon's most famous generals. He rose by his energy and courage from the ranks, and distinguished himself in Egypt, at Marengo, Austerlitz, Jena, &c. &c., and died of a wound received at the battle of Essling, in 1809, aged 40 years.

LANSEQUENET, s. [Belg.] a German foot-soldier; a game at cards.

LANTERN, (erroneously written lanthorn.) s. [lanterne, Fr.] a transparent case in which a candle or other light may be carried about; a light-house, or light hung out to guide ships. A dark lantern is a lantern fitted with a movable slider, which, by being turned round, intercepts the light. Magic lantern, in Optics, is an instrument, by the light of which, figures painted in transparent colours, on glass sliders, are through two magnifying glasses thrown on the wall of a darkened room. It was a great means of magical delusions in former times, but is now only a means of diversion.

LANUGINOUS, a. [lanugo, Lat.] downy; covered with soft hair.

LAOS, a kingdom of Asia, bounded by Siam, Ava, China, Tonquin, Cochinchina, and Cambodia. The whole region is crossed from N. to S. by one large river, called the Mecon, into which descend an infinite number of rivulets, that render the soil very fruitful, assisted by canals. The trade of this country with the surrounding nations is very great, especially with China. It produces gold, silver, and other metals; with animal and vegetable rarities. Lanjan is the capital. Very little is definitely known respecting it.

LAP, s. [lappo, Sax.] the loose part of a garment, which may be doubled at pleasure; that part of the clothes that is spread over the thighs as a person sits down, and will hold any thing laid on it, without letting it roll off; that part of the body which is parallel to the seat of a chair when a person sits down.

To LAP, v. a. to wrap or twist round any thing, used with round, in, or about; to cover, wrap, or involve in any thing.—v. n. to be spread so as to double over.

To LAP, v. n. [lappian, Sax.] to drink by licking up with the tongue.

LAPDOG, s. a little dog, so called because indulged by the ladies to lie in their laps.

LA PEROUSE, JEAN FRANÇOIS GALAUP DE, a distinguished French navigator, who perished in an expedition of discovery in the S. Seas, which he had undertaken in two French government vessels, under the patronage of Louis XVI., in 1785, aged 44 years.

LAPFUL, s. as much as can be contained in the lap.

LAPICIDE, s. [lapis and cædo, Lat.] a stone-cutter.

LAPIDARY, s. [lapidaire, Fr.] one who cuts or deals in precious stones.

LAPIDEOUS, a. [lapis, Lat.] stony; of the nature of stone.

LAPIDE-SCENCE, s. a stony concretion.

LAPIDE-SCENT, a. growing or turning to stone.

LAPIDIFIC, a. [lapidifique, Fr.] forming stones.

LAPIDIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of forming stones.

LAPIDIST, s. one that deals in precious stones.

LAPIS, s. [Lat.] a stone. Lapis Bomonensis, is a particular species of stone found in Bolonia, which shines in the dark. Lapis Calammaris, the ore of zinc. Lapis Infernalis, an artificial caustic stone. Lapis Lazuli, or azure stone, is a copper ore, so hard and compact as to take a high polish, and is worked into a great variety of toys. It is found in detached lumps, of an elegant blue colour, variegated with clouds of white, and veins of a shining gold colour; to it the painters are indebted for their beautiful ultramarine colour, which is only a calcination of it.

LA PLACE, PIERRE SIMON, MARQUIS DE, the most celebrated mathematician and astronomer since the days of Newton. He was first professor of mathematics in a provincial military school, and afterwards in that of Paris. He received every mark of distinction that testified the appreciation of his ability; and he was for a short time made minister of the interior by Napoleon, which office he could in nowise fill. He was afterwards somewhat ungrateful to the emperor; but undertook only scientific labour. He died in 1827, aged 78 years. The foundation of his fame is his stupendous work The Mechanism of the Heavens, which embraces the profoundest researches in statics and dynamics, both of solids and fluids, and the most complete solution of all the great problems of physical astronomy that ever was published. He was a mathematician more resembling Newton in a sort of instinctive power of arriving at truth in his researches, than any other that ever lived. His discoveries were such as can be understood only by aid of some knowledge of the higher mathematics. La Place is known also as the developer of the nebular hypothesis of the origin of the solar system, which has been satisfactorily answered by the discoveries made with Lord Rosse's gigantic telescope.

LAPLAND, a large country, in the N. part of Europe, lying next to the N. Sea. It is divided into Danish or North Lapland, Swedish or South Lapland, and Russian or East Lapland. It has mountains which attain 2000 feet in height generally, and have peaks exceeding 5000 feet; but it is chiefly level. Its productions are such as are peculiar to the most northerly regions of the earth; as is its climate also: it reaches at N. Cape the Lat. 71. 10. N. Its inhabitants greatly resemble the Esquimaux, and other races inhabiting the coldest countries of the globe. They support themselves by hunting and fishing. Some parts of Lapland have been colonized by the people of more southern countries, who attempt agriculture during the summer.

LA PLATA, one of the largest rivers of S. America, which drains the whole of the centre of that continent, receiving the waters of large streams that flow from the Andes, and from the mountains of Brazil; and after a course of above 2000 miles, enters the Atlantic Ocean by an embouchure of about 100 miles in width.

LAPPER, s. one who wraps or laps up; one who laps or licks. LAPPET, s. (a diminutive of lap), the part of a head-dress that hangs loose.

LAPSE, s. [lapseus, from labor, Lat.] a flow or fall of water from a higher place. Figuratively, a small error or mistake. In Law, a benefice is said to be in lapse, when the patron, who ought to present thereto in six months after it is voidable, omits doing it in that time, upon which the bishop or ordinary has the right of presentation.

To LAPSE, v. n. to glide slowly; to fall by degrees; to fail in any thing; to slip; to be guilty of a small or trivial fault through inadvertency or mistake; to lose or let slip the proper time; to fall by the negligence of one possessor to another; to fall from perfection, truth, or faith.

LAPSIDED, a. the state of a ship built in such a manner as to have one side heavier than the other, and consequently to retain a constant heel or tendency towards the heavier side, unless when she is brought upright by placing a greater quantity of the cargo or ballast on the other side.

LAPWING, s. in Ornithology, a name of the peewit.

LAPWORK, s. work in which one part is lapped or folded over another.

LARK, the capital of the province of Laristan, in Persia. It has a considerable manufacture of silk; and its territory abounds in oranges, dates, and very large tamarinds. Lat. 27. 30. N. Long. 42. 35. E.

LARBOARD, (labbord) s. in naval affairs, the left-hand side of a ship, when you stand with your face towards the head; opposed to the starboard.

LARCENY, s. [larcin, Fr.] the felonious taking away a person's goods in his absence. Great larceny, is when the goods are above the value of 12*l.* Petty larceny, is when the value of the goods stolen does not amount to 12*l.*

LARCH-TREE, s. in Botany, a kind of pine, with tufts of small bright green leaves. The gum of this tree is the Venice turpentine.

LARD, s. [lardum, Lat.] the grease of swine; bacon, or the flesh of swine.

To LARD, v. a. [larder, Fr.] to stuff with bacon; to make fat. Figuratively, to mix with something else by way of improvement.

LARDER, s. [lardier, old Fr.] the room where meat is kept or salted.

LARDERER, s. one who has the charge of the larder.

LARDNER, DR. NATHANIEL, a learned divine of the Unitarian communion; who, having studied at Utrecht and Leyden, became a minister of a congregation in London. His great work is a most elaborate defence of the New Testament, from the writings of the Fathers, and from Jewish and pagan authors. His other works were numerous. From his Credibility of the Gospel History, Paley gathered the materials for his lucid treatise on the Evidences of the Gospel; and they contain a vast amount of recondite and most valuable learning, ready for more enlightened writers on that and kindred subjects. He died in 1768, aged 82 years.

LARDON, s. [Fr.] a bit of bacon.

LARES, s. [Lat.] certain domestic gods of the Romans, called also Penates, set in some private place of the house, or in the chimney-corner, which the family honoured as their protectors, and offered to them wine and frankincense.

LARGE, a. [largus, Lat.] bulky, or of great dimensions; wide or extensive; liberal, abundant, or plentiful. In a diffusive manner, applied to style.

LARGELY, ad. in a wide or extensive manner; abundantly, plentifully, or without restraint. In a copious or diffusive manner, applied to style. In a liberal or bountiful manner, applied to giving.

LARGENESS, s. extent, bulk, or spaciousness, applied to place. Greatness or elevation, applied to the mind. Extent or bulk, applied to things.

LARGESS, s. [largesse, Fr.] a present, gift, or bounty.

LARGO, s. in Music, signifies a slow movement, yet one degree quicker than Grave, and two than Adagio.

LARISTAN, a province of Persia, lying on the Persian Gulf, and bounded by Kerman and Farsistan. The air is unwholesome, and water fit for use is very rare. The principal trade of the inhabitants is in camels. Lar is the capital.

LARK, s. [lascere, Sax.] in Ornithology, a genus of small singing birds.

LARKSPUR, s. in Botany, a flower, so called from its nectary resembling the spur of a lark.

LARMIER, s. [Fr.] in Architecture, a flat, square, massive member of a cornice, between the cymatium and the ovolo, so called from its use, which is to disperse water, and cause it to fall at a distance from the wall, drop by drop, or as it were by tears.

LARVA, s. [Lat.] in Entomology, the first form assumed by insects after being hatched. It is commonly called the caterpillar or grub. The shapes and habits differ very widely in different classes of insects.

LARVÆ, s. in Mythology, the ghosts or spirits of wicked men, which after death were believed to wander up and down the earth; malignant phantoms and apparitions.

LARVATED, a. [larva, Lat.] masked; also frighted with imaginary spirits.

LARUM, s. [larwin, Brit.] any noise made to excite attention, and give notice of danger; a clock which makes a noise at any particular hour to which its index is set.

LARYNGOTOMY, s. [larynx and temno, Lat.] in Surgery, an operation where the fore part of the larynx is divided, to assist respiration during large tumours on the upper parts, as in the quinsy.

LARYNX, s. [Gr.] in Anatomy, the upper part of the wind-pipe, which is one of the organs of respiration, as well as the principal instrument of the voice.

LASCIVIOUS, a. [lascivus, Lat.] lewd; wanton; soft; effeminate.

LASCIVIOUSLY, ad. lewdly; in a wanton or loose manner.

LASCIVIOUSNESS, s. the quality producing lewdness, either in behaviour or words.

LASH, s. [schlagen, Belg.] a stroke or blow given with a whip, or any thing pliant and tough; the thong of a whip with which a blow is given. Figuratively, a stroke of censure or reproach.

To LASH, v. a. to strike with a whip, or any thing pliant; to move with a sudden spring or jerk, used with up. To beat so as to make a sharp sound, like the lash of a whip, applied to the beating of waves against the shore. Among mariners, to tie or fasten two things together with a rope or cord. Figuratively, to scourge with satire.

LASHER, s. one who whips, lashes, or satirizes.

LASS, s. [perhaps from lad, with the feminine termination ladies contracted], a girl, maid, or young woman.

LASSA, or LASSA, otherwise called Baronthala, or Tonker, is the capital of the country of Thibet, in Asia. It is not a large city, but the houses are of stone, and are spacious and lofty. About seven miles on the E. side of the city is the mountain of Putala, which contains on its summit the palace of the grand lama, the high priest and sovereign of Thibet. Lassa is 24 miles N. E. of the crossing-place of the river Sampoo, which is 7 miles from the foot of Mount Kambala; and it is 250 miles N. E. of Patna. Lat. 29. 30. N. Long. 91. 25. E.

LASSITUDE, s. [lassus, Lat.] weariness, or a loss of vigour and strength by excessive labour. In Medicine, applied to that weariness which proceeds from a disordered state, and not from exercise, which wants no remedy but rest.

LAST, a. [lastet, Sax.] superlative of late; after all others; utmost; next before the present, as "last week." At last, at the end; in conclusion.

To LAST, v. n. [lasten, Sax.] to continue; to endure.

LAST, s. [last, Sax.] a mould on which shoes are made.—[last, Teut.] a load. A last of codfish, white herrings, meal, and ashes for soap, is 12 barrels; of corn or rape-seed, 10 quarters; of gun-powder, 24 barrels, 2400lb. weight; of herrings, 20 cades; of hides, 12 dozen; of leather, 20 dickers; of pitch or tar, 14 barrels; of wool, 12 sacks; of stockfish, 100; and a last of flax or leathers contains 1700lb. weight.

LASTAGE, s. [lastage, Fr.] custom paid for goods sold by the last, for freightage; or the ballast of a ship.

LASTING, part. continuing; durable; of a long continuance; wearing a long while.

LASTINGLY, ad. durably; perpetually.

LASTLY, ad. in the last place; at last; in the conclusion.

LATCH, s. [letse, Belg.] the fastening of a door, which is moved either by a string or handle.

To LATCH, v. a. to fasten by a latch. Figuratively, to fasten or close.

LATCHES, s. in a ship, small lines like loops, fastened by sewing into the bunnets and drablers of a ship, in order to lace the bunnets to the courses, or the drablers to the bunnets.

LATCHET, s. [lacet, Fr.] the string with which shoes or sandals were fastened.

LATE, a. [lat, Fr.] that is longer than it should be, or not so soon as expected; last in any place, office, character, or time; deceased or dead, when prefixed to a person's name; far advanced in the day or night.

LATE, ad. after long delays; after a long time; after its proper time; not long ago. At an unseasonable hour, or far advanced in the day or night.

LATED, a. surprised by the night.

LATELY, ad. not long past.

LATENESS, s. any time far advanced.

LATENT, a. [lateo, Lat.] hidden; concealed; secret. Latent heat is a term of natural philosophy, to express that amount of caloric which is not appreciable either by our feelings or by the thermometer, the existence of which is proved both by experiments and calculations.

LATER, a. [comparative of late,] happening after a particular period, or after something else.

LATERAL, a. [latus, Lat.] growing out on the side; placed or acting in a direction perpendicular to the horizon.

LATERALITY, s. the quality of having distinct sides.

LATERALLY, ad. by the sides; sideways.

A LATERE, s. a title applied to such cardinals as are the pope's counsellors in ordinary, and assistants.

LATEWARD, ad. [late and ward, Sax.] somewhat late.

LATH, s. [latta, Sax.] in Building, a long, thin, narrow slip of wood, generally nailed on the rafters of a roof, to sustain the tiles or other coverings.—[lath, Sax.] part of a county something larger than a tithing, and less than a hundred.

To LATH, v. a. to fit up with laths.

LATHIE, v. a machine used in turning, in which, by various means, the substance to be worked is made to revolve very rapidly, so as to be easily shaped by chisels to the required form. Great ingenuity is shown in the production of eccentric revolutions, so that very difficult forms can be executed with the greatest precision. Lathes have been made even for turning busts.

To LATHER, v. n. [lathan, Sax.] to form a froth or foam; to cover with froth made by soap and water.

LATHER, s. a foam or froth made by beating soap with water.

LATIMER, BISHOP HUGH, one of the English reformers of the 16th century. He was silenced for his heresy when he first preached the doctrines of the Reformation, but after the schism effected by Henry VIII., he was brought into notice by Lord Cromwell. During the vicissitudes of that infamous reign, he was imprisoned for the very conduct that had obtained him his mitre. Under Edward VI. he prosecuted the work he had begun, and apparently with great earnestness and zeal. He was one of the first victims of Mary's reign; and, having undergone the mockery of a trial, was burnt, in company with Ridley, in 1555, aged about 73 years. His works are only sermons.

LATIN, a. an appellation of any thing pertaining to the Romans. Latin Language, that tongue which was formed out of the various dialects of ancient Italy, on the basis (it is presumed) of the one spoken by the tribe called Latini. It is very nearly akin to the Greek, but has none of its refinement. It is the basis of French, Spanish, and Italian, and continues to this day to be the language of scholars of all nations.

LATINISM, s. a manner of expression peculiar to the Latin tongue.

LATINIST, s. one capable of writing or speaking Latin in its purity, and acquainted with the beauties of the authors that have written in that language.

LATINITY, s. the purity of Latin style.

To LATINIZE, v. a. [latiniser, Fr.] to use words or phrases in another language that are borrowed from the Latin.—v. n. to give names a Latin termination; to make them Latin.

LATIROSTROUS, a. [latus and rostrum, Lat.] broad-beaked.

LATISH, a. somewhat late; somewhat advanced in the night.

LATTITAT, s. [Lat.] in Law, a writ, which issues from the Queen's Bench, so called from a supposition that the defendant lurks or lies hid, and cannot be found in the county of Middlesex, but is fled to some other county, to the sheriff whereof this writ is directed, commanding him to apprehend the defendant there.

LATITUDE, s. [Fr. latitudo, Lat.] breadth or width; in bodies of unequal dimensions, the shortest space between the two extremes of its surface, or the measure of a straight line drawn through its ends; room, space, or extent. In Astronomy, the distance of a star or planet from the ecliptic, either north or south. In Geography, the extent of the earth or heavens measured from the equator to either pole. The distance of a place from the equator either north or south; or an arch of the meridian comprehended between either pole of the heavens and the horizon of the place. Figuratively, unrestrained or unlimited acceptance; freedom from any settled rules; extent or comprehension of any art or science. He is out of his latitude, a figurative expression, implying that a person is in a place he is ignorant of, or that he is handling a subject beyond his abilities or comprehension.

LATITUDINARIAN, a. [latitudinaire, Fr.] not confined or restrained, either with respect to actions or opinions.

LATITUDINARIAN, s. a person not conforming to any particular opinion or standard. This name is particularly applied to certain divines of the Church of England, characterized by extensive scholarship and enlightened philosophy, who have held as of slightest importance religious doctrines and profession, and have made individual sincerity the test of the worth of an individual's profession. Their adherence to the Church of England is somewhat inconsistent with their characteristic tenet; but that, they regarded rather as a political institution than any thing else. They have always been found in connexion with the university of Cambridge, and were most eminent at their rise, in the days of persecution and licentiousness immediately following the restoration of Charles II.

LATIUM, a region of ancient Italy, lying between the Tiber and the territory of the Campanians, and reaching from the Apennines to the Mediterranean Sea. It was occupied by various tribes, all claiming to be of Latin origin; the most enterprising of which, having built the city of Rome, became the parents of one of the widest empires the world ever saw.

LATRANT, a. [latro, Lat.] barking.

LATREILLE, PIERRE ANDRÉ, a distinguished French entomologist of the last and the present centuries. His whole life was devoted to his favourite pursuit, and he had the friendship and assistance of all the other great naturalists of his time, to whom he afforded his co-operation in return. His scientific attainments alone saved him during the frenzy of the Revolution, and he continued to a very advanced age to hold a distinguished professorship at Paris. He died in 1829, aged 67 years. His works are considered as of first-rate authority in his department of natural science, and his system of classification leaves little to be desired for that branch of the animal kingdom.

LATRIA, s. [latreu, Gr.] the highest kind of worship; distinguished by the papists from dulia, or inferior worship.

LATTEN, s. [Brit.] brass; a mixture of copper and calaminaris-stones.

LATTER, a. not long done or past; towards the last; mentioned the last in order.

LATTICE, a. [lattia, Fr.] a window made of bars crossing each other at small distances.

To LATTICE, v. a. to mark with cross strokes like a lattice; to mark with bars crossing each other at small distances.

LAVA, s. a name given by the Italians to the liquid and melted matter discharged by volcanoes during eruptions.

LAVATER, JOHN GASPAR, the celebrated physiognomist. He was a Swiss pastor, and discharged the duties of his office with great fidelity at a time when infidelity was gaining ground daily. At the taking of Zurich by the French he was wounded, and died about 18 months afterwards, in 1801, aged 60 years. His name would hardly have gained notoriety had he not devoted himself to the study of physiognomy, and published several works respecting it, which made it very popular, until it was supplanted by phrenology. The rules he lays down for the application of the principles of his favourite study are laughably minute, but there is a good faith in all he has written, as there was in all he did, which preserves them from ridicule.

LAVATION, s. [lavo, Lat.] the act of washing.

LAVATORY, s. in Medicine, a wash; some liquid with which diseased parts are washed.

LAUD, ARCHBISHOP WILLIAM, an Anglican prelate of the 17th century, who was the type of the churchman of that period, and of a school recently risen at Oxford. His promotions appear to have begun early, for he was royal chaplain, and (apparently) director and adviser, when James I. first went to Scotland to try to set up Episcopacy there. He afterwards accompanied Charles I. on a similar errand, but with different results. His zeal for his church theory led him to take a prominent place in the brandings and lashings, ear-croppings and nose-slittings, which were the customary arguments employed against dissenters. His pedantic formalism made him insist on and practise ritual observances, that, in the eyes of Puritanism, looked more like Romanism than Christianity. One of the first acts of the Long Parliament was to secure him; and he was imprisoned on a charge of treason. After lying in the Tower for three years, he was beheaded, after the success of the Parliament and the Presbyterians at Marston-Moor, in 1645, aged 72 years. He was a learned man, and a patron of learning; and he was devotedly attached to the Church of England, as he understood it, having held more than one controversy with Romanists, being the convert of Chillingworth from that Church, and refusing a cardinal's hat. But he was a feeble creature, full of all puerilities of belief and superstition, and as earnest in the least and most minute shade of his faith, as in the deepest principle he was acquainted with. His execution has brought much blame on the Long Parliament, from such as forget that he could not be seen into and judged then, as now; and that the party which destroyed him, had suffered every outrage in person and property, in Scotland particularly, at his instance.

LAUD, s. [laus, Lat.] the act of praising for any good, benevolent, or noble deed.

To LAUD, v. a. [laudo, Lat.] to praise; to acknowledge or mention with a sense of gratitude.

LAUDABLE, a. [laudo, Lat.] worthy of praise or commendation.

LAUDANUM, s. in Medicine, the popular name of the tincture of opium.

LAUDABLY, ad. in a manner deserving praise.

To LAVE, v. a. [lavo, Lat.] to wash or bathe in any liquid.—v. n. to wash himself; to bathe.

To LAVE, v. n. to change the direction often in a course.

LAUENBURG, commonly called SAXE-LAUENBURG, a duchy of Germany, lying on the Elbe, and bounded by Holstein, Lübeck, Mecklenburg, Hanover, and Hamburg. It is a tolerably fertile agricultural tract, about 70 miles in length, by 60 in breadth. It has also a good trade by its rivers and canals. Lauenburg is its capital, and stands on the Elbe at the S. termination of the canal from the Baltic, with about 4000 inhabitants. The duchy belongs to Denmark. Pop. about 40,000.

LAUENDER, s. [lavendula, from lavo, Lat.] in Botany, a sweet-scented plant, of which there are four species in our gardens, which are propagated by cuttings. A spirit is distilled from it by the perfumers.

LAVENHAM, or LA'NHAM, Suffolk. Its church, a very handsome Gothic structure, with its steeple, 137 feet high, are reckoned the finest in the county. It has a spacious market-place, encompassed with 9 streets, or divisions, and is pleasantly situated, in a fine healthy air, on a branch of the river Bret, from whence it rises gradually to the top of a hill. It is 61 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Thursday. Pop. 1871.

LAVVER, s. [lavoir, Fr.] a vessel to wash any thing in. To LAUGH, (pronounced in this word and its derivatives lauff.) v. n. [lachen, Teut. and Belg.] to make a loud and uninterrupted noise of sudden merriment and mirth. Figuratively, to appear gay, favourable, pleasant, or so as to cause joy.—v. a. to deride, to ridicule or mock.

LAUGH, s. [lah, Sax.] an uninterrupted sound, caused by any object which excites sudden mirth.

LAUGHABLE, a. proper to be laughed at; causing laughter.

LAUGHER, s. a person fond of mirth, or easily provoked to laughter.

LAUGHINGLY, ad. in a merry manner; with great pleasure or mirth.

LAUGHINGSTOCK, s. a butt; an object of contempt or ridicule.

LAUGHTER, (Lifter) s. [hleahter, Sax.] an expression of sudden mirth, occasioned by a convulsive motion of the thorax and muscles of the mouth and face; a continued expulsion of breath, with a loud noise, and shaking of the breast and sides.

LA'VINGTON, MARKET, Wiltshire. Here is a great market for corn and malt. It is 84 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Wednesday. Pop. 1115.

LAVISH, a. generous or liberal to excess; scattered in waste; profuse. Figuratively, wild or unrestrained.

To LAVISH, v. a. to waste extravagantly; to be profuse.

LAVISHER, s. a prodigal or profuse person.

LAVISHLY, ad. in an extravagant or prodigal manner; with such a degree of liberality as borders on excess and indiscretion.

LAVISHMENT, s. LAVISHNESS, s. an extravagant, prodigal, or indiscreet wasting or giving away what belongs to a person.

LAU'NCESTON, Cornwall. It had formerly a monastery, and a noble castle, because of its strength called Castle Terrible, the lower part of which is now made use of for the jail. It is seated on the river Tamar. It is 214 miles from London. Markets, Thursday and Saturday. Pop. 2460.

To LAUNCH, v. n. [lancer, Fr.] to force out to sea; to rove at large; to expatriate. To be diffuse, applied to style.—v. a. to push to sea; to dart from the hand.

LAUNDRESS, s. [lavo, Lat.] a woman employed in washing linen.

LAUNDRY, s. a room wherein linen is washed or ironed.

LAVOISIER, ANTOINE LAURENT, a very celebrated French chemist of the last century, to whom science owes the complete explosion of the phlogistic theory, and the basis for all the discoveries prior to Sir Humphrey Davy's and Wollaston's experiments. He was early eminent for his chemical skill, which he showed in the improvements in gunpowder-making, and in a scheme for lighting up Paris streets. But after he became acquainted with the experiments and discoveries of Scheele in Sweden, and of Priestley in England, he verified them, and at once attacked the whole theory on which the science of chemistry rested. His subsequent experiments established the general features of his own theory; but he was not so much an experimenter as a theorist. His proof of Sir Isaac Newton's statement respecting the nature of the diamond, by actual combustion, ought not to be forgotten. Lavoisier had been appointed to the situation of a farmer-general of the revenue; and in the height of the Reign of Terror, when all that class were arrested, for the sake of their property, and condemned on any excuse, or none, he was condemned and guillotined, in 1794, aged 51 years.

LAVO'ITA, s. [Ital.] an odd dance, which consisted in a variety of turnings and caperings; a caper.

LAVO'RO, a province of the kingdom of Naples, lying on the Mediterranean, and bounded by the Papal States, and by the provinces of the Abruzzi, Sannio, the Principati, and Naples. It is about 70 miles long, and 40 broad. The lower slopes of the Apennines are included in it, and some ranges extending from that chain towards the Mediterranean Sea. Its rivers are the Volturno, the Garigliano, and some smaller streams. Agriculture and the growth of the vine supply occupation and trade to almost all its inhabitants; but there are some few manufactures. Caserta is its chief town. Pop. about 700,000.

LAUREATE, a. [laurus, Lat.] decked with laurel, crowned with laurel. A Poet Laureate, is an officer of the royal household in England, who makes the odes which are performed before the sovereign on anniversaries and public occasions.

LAUREATION, s. in the Scottish universities, the act or state of having degrees conferred.

LAUREL, s. [laurus, Lat.] in Botany, a kind of evergreen shrub, very common in gardens.

LAURELED, a. crowned or adorned with laurel.

LAUSANNE, the chief town of the canton named Pays de Vaud, Switzerland. It is built upon such a steep ascent, and such a very uneven tract, that in some places the horses cannot, without great difficulty, draw up a carriage; the foot passengers ascend to the upper part of the town by steps, from the heights of which the prospects are very grand and extensive, comprehending the lake of Geneva, the Pays de Vaud, and the rugged coast of Chablais. The town-house and other public buildings are magnificent. There is a famous college here, with an excellent library. It is seated between three hills, in a very pure and healthy air, with plenty of excellent water, and every necessary of life in the greatest abundance. It is 41 miles from Bern. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 46. 30. N. Long. 6. 37. E.

LAW, s. [laga, Sax.] a rule of action; a precept or command coming from a superior authority, which an inferior is bound to obey; a judicial decision. Civil Law is that which is intended to secure to individuals the possession of their rights, and to make such as infringe them give compensation. Common Law is that which is based on the universal practice and customs of the realm. Criminal Law is that administered by the crown or its officers for the punishment of wrong-doers. Penal Law is that in which the injured party prosecutes in cases resembling those of criminal law. Positive Law is that which must be obeyed under penalties. Statute Law is that which is contained in the Statutes or Acts of Parliament. Unwritten, or "Judge-made Law," is that the basis of which is the interpretation of usage or precedent by the judges in the case. In science, both physical and metaphysical, it means only an invariable course or method of action or operation. Law of Nature is a phrase by which the constant operation of natural agencies is represented. Synonym. Law is often confounded with equity; but equity is the idea of justice, or the eternal distinction between right and wrong applied to conduct; whereas, law is the like application of the mere statutes and judicial decisions of a country. To take the law, implies to enter an action against a person.

LAW, s. in Biblical Science and Theology, a name by which the first five books of the Old Testament, called the Pentateuch, or Five Books of Moses, are designated in the Hebrew Bible, and amongst the Jews; also the Divine standard of right and wrong, as revealed in the conscience of man, and exemplified and enforced in the Sacred Scriptures.

LAW, JOHN, a very noted schemer of the last century, who having committed a murder in a duel, left England; and after various adventures, was taken up by the Duke of Orleans, and opened a bank at Paris, under royal authority. His proposed object was to pay off the debt of that country, and he obtained the monopoly of the trade of Louisiana, for a joint-stock company, called the Mississippi Company, as a security to the shareholders of his bank, and the holders of his notes, which he issued profusely. An East India Company with wider monopolies was added also to the bank; and soon after this, Law's bank farmed the revenue. The shares in the bank were bought at a most enormous premium, and the whole monetary affairs of the kingdom were revolutionized. But a series of royal proclamations altering the value of the notes, and otherwise interfering with public credit and monetary transactions, suddenly overthrew the whole scheme, which was in its very nature utterly baseless. The speculators were in most instances ruined; and Law was exiled. He died in 1729, aged 48 years.

LAW, WILLIAM, an eminent English divine, whose works, of great practical utility, particularly his Serious Call to a Decent Life, are well known and highly estimated. He was a mystic in religion, only less thoroughly than Jacob Behman, whose writings he devotedly edited and illustrated in the latter part of his life. Coleridge, Dr. Johnson, and Wesley, have all expressed their obligations to him and his writings. It was from him that Wesley and the Wesleys derived the article in their creed respecting perfection. Law died in 1761, aged 75 years.

LAW, DR. EDMUND, bishop of Carlisle, a divine and philosopher of the Latitudinarian school. His own works are Treatises on the Theory of Religion, and the Character of Christ, &c., and he edited Locke's Works, and King on the Origin of Evil. He died in 1787, aged 84 years.

LAWES, HENRY, an eminent composer of the 17th century. He held official stations under both Charles I. and II., and he appears to have been, in early life, the friend of Milton, whose Comus he set to music. His style is greatly admired in the present day, when closer study has enabled critics to judge more fairly of original work and beauty. He died in 1662, aged 62 years.

LAWFUL, a. agreeable to law; that may be done without violating the precepts of superior authority, or incurring any punishment.

LAWFULLY, ad. in a manner conformable to law.

LAWFULNESS, s. legality; allowance of law.

LAWGIVER, s. a legislator, or one who has authority to make laws; a supreme magistrate.

LAWGIVING, a. legislative, or enacting laws.

LAWLESS, a. unrestrained by any law; contrary to law.

LAWLESSLY, ad. in a manner contrary to law.

LAWMAKER, s. a legislator, or one who makes laws.

LAWN, s. [Brit.] an open space or plain between woods; fine linen, remarkable for being used in the sleeves of a bishop's robe.

LAWRENCE, ST., the largest river in North America, proceeding from the Lake Ontario, from which it runs a course of about 700 miles to the Atlantic Ocean. It is navigable as far as Quebec, which is above 400 miles; but beyond Montreal it is so full of shoals and rocks, that it will not admit large vessels without danger.

LAWRENCE, SIR THOMAS, a celebrated English portrait painter; who evinced considerable skill and taste in his very childhood, which brought him very early under the notice of artists of established reputation; and who enjoyed a growing celebrity to the day of his death. He was appointed royal portrait painter; and went to the continent at the peace of 1814, to take the portraits of the allied sovereigns and other eminent persons for the Prince Regent. He became president of the Royal Academy on West's death; and died in 1830, aged 61 years. His paintings are very numerous, and well known, and are justly admired for combining fidelity in the likeness, with that amount of idealism which makes them true works of art.

LAWSUIT, s. a process or action in law.

LAWYER, s. a counsellor, or one that is skilled in the law.

LAX, a. [laxus, Lat.] without restraint, or not confined; not compact, or not having its parts strongly or closely joined; vague; not accurate, exact, or composed with any caution. In Medicine, subject to a diarrhæa; slack, or not strained.

LAX, s. a looseness; a diarrhæa.

LAXATION, s. [lazo, Lat.] the act of loosening or slacking; the state of being loosened or slackened.

LAXATIVE, a. [laxatif, Fr.] in Medicine, having the power to remove costiveness, or to make loose.

LAXATIVE, s. in Medicine, a remedy that purges, or removes costiveness.

LAXATIVENESS, s. the quality or power of curing or removing costiveness.

LAXITY, s. the state of a body whose parts are not strongly compacted, but may be easily separated; slackness or looseness; openness. Vagueness, applied to the different senses in which words are used.

LAXNESS, s. looseness; vagueness. In Medicine, a loose habit of body.

TO LAY, v. a. preter. laid, past part. lain; [legin, leggan, Sax.] to place along upon the ground; to put or place; to put in any state. To beat down, applied to corn or grass. To fix firmly, applied to the foundations of buildings, &c. To calu, still, quiet, or allay, applied to winds or storms. To set on a table, applied to food. To deposit money in a wager. To bring forth eggs or young, applied to birds. To apply with violence, joined with siege. To scheme, contrive, or plan, applied to plots, projects, &c. In Law, to exhibit or offer, joined with indictment. Used with apart, to reject or put away. Used with before, to expose to view; to show; to display. To lay by, to keep or reserve for some future occasion. Used with down, to deposit as a pledge, equivalent, or satisfaction, generally followed by for; to quit or resign; to lie along a bed, in order to sleep or repose. To lay hold of, to seize, catch, or apprehend. To lay in, to keep as a reserve; to store or treasure. To lay out, to spend or pay away, applied to money; to plan or dispose; to use or take measures. Used with on, to, or unto, to charge upon, or impute. Used with up, to confine, applied to diseases; to reserve, store, or treasure against some future time. Used with upon, to impute or charge, applied to faults; to impose or inflict, applied to punishment. Used with on, to strike, or beat furiously.

LAY, s. [ley, leg, Sax.] a row or stratum. A wager. Grassy ground; a meadow ground unploughed, and kept for cattle.— [lay, Fr.] a song or poem.

LAY, a. [latus, Lat. from laos, Gr.] in ecclesiastical language, not belonging to the clergy.

LAYER, s. a bed; a row or stratum of earth, or any other body spread over another. In Botany, a sprig, stalk, or branch of a plant, which is laid under the mould, in order to take root and propagate. With housewives, a hen that lays eggs.

LAYMAN, s. one who is not in orders, opposed to a clergyman. In Painting, an image to draw by.

LAYSTALL, s. a heap of dung.

LAZAR, s. [from Lazarus,] a person afflicted with filthy and pestilential sores and diseases; a leper.

LAZARETTO, LAZAR-HOUSE, s. [Ital.] an hospital, or house for the reception of the diseased.

LAZILY, ad. in an idle, inactive, sluggish, or heavy manner. LAZINESS, s. idleness; slothfulness; sluggishness; an unwillingness to apply to business or labour.

LAZY, a. [lazig, Teut.] unwilling, or slow and tedious, in working.

LEA, s. [lep, Sax.] unploughed ground.

LEACH, WILLIAM E., an eminent English naturalist of the beginning of the present century. He held an office in the British Museum, by which means he was enabled both to cultivate his favourite study, and to make known the results of his researches. During the latter part of his life he lived mostly in Italy, on account of his health; and there he died in 1836, aged 46 years. His works are valuable contributions to natural science, and he aided greatly in advancing the study of this science to the level it had reached on the continent by the labours of Cuvier and others.

LEAD, (this word and its derivatives are pronounced léd, s. [lead, Sax.] in Chemistry and the Arts, one of the softest, most ductile, and most heavy metals next to gold, very little subject to rust, and dissolved by the weakest acids. It is of a bluish white colour, and melts at a low temperature. It is very abundant in this country, and is easily worked. Lead is employed to cover buildings, to form water-pipes, to make a great variety of vessels for economical and chemical purposes, and in refining gold and silver. Its oxides are used for dyeing and calico-printing; in the manufactures of glass, earthenware, and porcelain; and in the preparation of various pigments. It is a poison when combined with oxygen. Black lead is a carburet of iron. See PLUMBAGO.

TO LEAD, v. a. to fit or cover with lead.

TO LEAD, (this word and its derivatives are pronounced léd, v. a. preter. led, [leden, Sax.] to conduct or guide by holding a person's hand; to conduct to any place; to go before any body of men, as a commander; to guide, or show a person the method of attaining any thing. Used with on, to draw on, entice, or allure; to induce or persuade by some pleasing motive. In Gaming, to play first.

LEADEN, (leden) a. made of lead. Figuratively, heavy; unwilling, or motionless.

LEADER, (ledder) s. one that goes before to show the way to another. A captain, or commander, applied to an army. The head of any party or faction in politics.

LEADING, (ledjing) part. principal or chief.

LEADING-STRINGS, (leading-strings) s. strings by which children used to be held when taught to walk.

LEAF, (pronounced leaf, in this word and its derivatives), s. plural, leaves. [lef, Sax.] in Botany, thin flattened expansions of cellular tissue, veined by a fine net-work of vessels, and invested with a delicate epidermis. In form, position, &c. they vary with almost every species of plants. In most plants the under surface is provided with numerous minute pores, by which is conducted a two-fold process of exhaling the superfluous moisture, and inhaling atmospheric air for the purpose of forming carbonic acid gas, by which they are nourished. To the exercise of which functions they are mainly stimulated by sun-light. Figuratively, in books, it is a part containing two pages. One side of a double or folding door; the flap of a table; any thing beaten thin, hence leaf gold and silver.

TO LEAF, v. n. to bring leaves; to bear leaves.

LEAFLESS, a. without leaves.

LEAFSTALK, s. in Botany, the footstalk which supports the leaves.

LEAFY, a. full of leaves.

LEAGUE, (leeg) s. [lige, Fr.] a confederacy; a combination, or an alliance entered into between princes and states for their mutual aid and defence.

TO LEAGUE, (leeg) v. n. to unite; to confederate or enter into an alliance for mutual aid and defence.

LEAGUE, (leeg) s. [lige, Fr.] a measure of length by land and sea, containing about 3 miles.

LEAGUED, (leeged, the g pronounced hard), a. confederated; united by an alliance for mutual defence and aid.

LEAGUER, (leiger, the g pronounced hard), s. [beleggoren, Belg.] a siege or investment of a town.

LEAK, (leek) s. [leke, Belg.] a breach or hole which lets water into a ship, and out of a barrel or other vessel. To spring a leak, among mariners, is when a ship receives some damage, by which water may enter.

TO LEAK, (leek) v. n. to let water in or out; to drop through a breach.

LEAKAGE, (leekage) s. the state of a vessel that lets water in or out through some breach; an allowance of 12 per cent. in the customs, to importers of wine, for waste and damage it may be supposed to have received in its passage; likewise an allowance of two barrels in twenty-two made by the officers of excise to brewers of ale and beer.

LEAKY, (leegy) a. full of breaches or chinks which let water in, applied to ships; but full of chinks which let water out, applied to barrels.

LEAMINGTON, Warwickshire. A beautifully situated town, with many new and handsome buildings, both public and private. It owes its name and wealth to its mineral waters; which bring a great number of visitors to it, especially in the autumn. It is 89 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 12,864.

TO LEAN, (pronounced leen in this word and its derivatives), v. n. preter. leaned or leant. [hléan, Sax.] to rest against; to be in a bending posture. Figuratively, to have a tendency, inclination, or propensity.

LEAN, (pron. leen, with its derivatives), a. [hléne, Sax.] thin, or wanting fat or flesh.

LEAN, s. that part of flesh which is entirely muscular, without any fat.

LEANLY, ad. wanting fat or flesh; meagerly; thinly.

LEANNESS, s. want of flesh; want of fat. Figuratively, want of money.

TO LEAP, (pronounced leap in this word and its derivatives), v. n. [leapan, Sax.] to jump or move forwards with the feet close together; to rush with violence; to throw the whole body forwards by a spring from any place, without any change of the feet; to bound or spring; to fly or start.

LEAP, (leap) s. a bound or jump. A sudden or abrupt transition.

LEAP-FROG, s. a play wherein children leap over each other.

LEAP-YEAR, s. in the Calendar, a year the number of days in which is 366, and in which February has 29 days. See BISSEXTILE.

TO LEARN, (the a is mute in pron. this word and its derivatives; as lern, lérned, lérning) v. a. past tense and part. learned and learned. [loornian, Sax.] to improve by instruction; to teach; to get intelligence; to take example from.

LEARNED, a. having the mind improved by study and instruction, by observing and reading; skilled; skilful; expert; knowing. SYNON. That knowledge which we can reduce to practice, makes us able; that which requires speculation, makes us skilful; that which fills the memory, makes us learned. Thus we say, an able preacher or lawyer; a skilful mathematician or philosopher; a learned historian or civilian.

LEARNEDLY, ad. with great appearance of extensive reading, deep study, and diligent observation.

LEARNER, s. one who is yet under the tuition of another; one who is acquiring some art or science.

LEARNING, s. skill in languages or sciences; skill in any thing.

LEASE, (pron. leese in this word and its derivatives.) s. [leas, Sax.] a contract by which houses or lands are parted with or granted to another, for a certain term of years. Figuratively, any tenure or right by which a person enjoys a thing.

To LEASE, (leese) v. n. [lesen, Belg.] to glean, or gather corn that lies scattered after the harvest is carried in.

LEASER, (lezer) s. a gleaner; one that gathers corn after the reapers.

LEASH, (leesh) s. [lisse, Fr. lase, Belg.] in Hunting, three creatures of the same sort, applied to dogs, hares, &c. Any collection consisting of three in number; a band wherewith any thing is tied.

To LEASH, (leesh) v. a. to bind; to couple, or hold in a string.

LEASING, (leezing) s. [leasse, Sax.] lies; falsehood.

LEAST, (leest) a. the superlative of little, the comparative of which is less; [laest, Sax.] smaller than all others; exceeding others in smallness.

LEAST, (leest) ad. in the lowest degree; less than any other way. At least, to say no more; to mention only in the lowest degree.

LEATHER, (pron. lether, in this word and its derivatives and compounds.) s. [lether, Sax. leadr, Erse.] the hides of beasts dressed and tanned.

LEATHERCOAT, s. in Horticulture, an apple, so called from the roughness of its rind.

LEATHERCUP, s. in Botany, a kind of lichen.

LEATHERDRESSER, s. he who dresses hides and makes leather.

LEATHERHEAD, Surrey. Here is a bridge over the river Mole, which having partially sunk into the earth near Mickleham, at the foot of Box Hill, rises again near this town. It is pleasantly situated on a rising ground by the side of the river, in a fine, open, dry, champaign country. It is 18 miles from London. Pop. 1740.

LEATHERN, a. made of leather.

LEATHERSELLER, s. one who sells leather.

LEATHERY, a. resembling leather.

LEAVE, (pron. leee in this word and its derivatives.) s. [lefe, Sax.] permission to do any thing; allowance or consent; farewell; adieu; compliment or ceremony paid before a person's departure.

To LEAVE, v. a. pret. and past part. left: to quit, abandon, depart from, or desert; to appeal to, or to permit without interposition; to cease to do; to desist. To leave out, to omit. Used with to, to bequeath by will.

LEAVED, (leaved) a. covered with leaves; made with folds.

LEAVEN, (ween) s. [levain, Fr.] ferment mixed with any mass to make it light, particularly applied to that used in making bread. Figuratively, any mixture which makes a general change in a mass.

To LEAVEN, (veen) v. a. to ferment by something mixed, as in making bread. Figuratively, to taint; to corrupt or imbue.

LEAVINGS, (leavings) s. a remnant; a residue. Relics, applied to persons. Offals, applied to meat.

LECHEROUS, a. (from lecher,) lewd; lustful.

LECHEROUSLY, ad. lewdly; lustfully.

LECHERY, s. lewdness; lust.

LECHLADE, Gloucestershire. It is seated at the confluence of the river Lech with the Thames, and has a canal from the Severn which joins the Thames (navigable for barges of 50 tons burden) near this town. It is 77 miles from London. Market. Tuesday. Pop. 1300.

LECLERC, JOHN, an eminent biblical critic of the 17th century, who was born at Geneva, and settled as a professor of philosophy, &c. at Amsterdam. His numerous works greatly promoted the study of the sacred Scriptures, but are superseded now, accurate and extensive scholarship having furnished better laws for the study of the Scriptures, than acuteness and ingenuity could. He bears the character of an insufferable dogmatist. He died in 1736, aged 69 years.

LECTION, s. [lego, Lat.] a reading; a variety in the copies of a book.

LECTURE, s. [Fr.] a discourse upon any subject read or pronounced in public; a sharp reproof or reprimand.

To LECTURE, v. a. to instruct in a set or public discourse; to reprimand, or reprove, in an insolent or magisterial manner. —v. n. to read in public; to instruct an audience by a formal explanation or discourse.

LECTURER, s. one who publicly pronounces a discourse on any subject; a person who is chosen by a parish to preach in a church on a Sunday in the afternoon, and paid by voluntary subscription; a person appointed by will to preach at a certain time, with a salary for his trouble.

LECTURESHIP, s. the employ or office of a lecturer.

LED, the past. pret. of To LEAD.

LEDBURY, Herefordshire. It is a fine, well-built town, and is noted for clothiers. It is seated on a navigable canal, that passes from Gloucestershire to Hereford, 123 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 4501.

LEDGE, [leggen, Belg.] a row or layer; a ridge rising above the other parts of a surface; any prominence or rising part; a small narrow shelf fixed against a wall or wainscot.

LEDER, s. in Book-keeping, an account-book, into which all transactions are posted under distinct heads, so that the state of any particular account can be seen at a glance, and that a general balance is more easily taken.

LEDHORSE, s. a sumpter or state horse.

LEDYARD, JOHN, an enterprising traveller, who was born in Connecticut, United States, and first travelled amongst the Indians. He next went to London, and engaged himself to Captain Cook, with whom he sailed one voyage. After his return, he attempted to travel round the world on foot, and proceeded as far as Yakutsk, in Siberia, when he was sent back. He next undertook, with characteristic energy and promptitude, to explore the interior of Africa; but he only reached Cairo, and there died in 1788, aged 37 years.

LEE, s. [le, Fr.] dregs or sediment of any liquor; seldom used in the singular. Among sailors, that part which is opposite to the wind: a lee-shore, is that on which the wind blows; to be under the lee of the shore, is to be close under the weather shore; a leeward ship, is one that is not fast by a wind, to make her way so good as she might; to lay a ship by the lee, is to bring her so that all her sails may lie against the masts and shrouds and the wind to come right on her broadside, so that she will make little or no way.

LEECH, [laec, Sax.] a physician; a professor of the art of healing. In Natural History, a kind of annulose worm, found in fresh water, which has a small mouth, furnished with three jaws, and lives by sucking the blood of any animals coming within its reach. It is employed by medical men for local blood-letting, and is a valuable auxiliary to medical skill.

LEECRAFT, s. the art of healing.

LEEDS, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is situated in a vale which trade has rendered one of the most populous spots in England. It is the principal of the clothing towns in Yorkshire, and is particularly the mart for the coloured and white broad cloths, of which vast quantities are sold in its magnificent cloth halls. That called the Mixed-cloth Hall, is a building of considerable extent, in which the cloth is placed on benches, for sale, every market-day; and the whole business is transacted within little more than an hour, without the least noise or confusion, and with a whisper only, the laws of the market being observed here with particular strictness. The White-cloth Hall, is a similar building. The manufacturers that supply these two halls lie in the immediate vicinity of the town, on the banks of the rivers. Leeds has a manufactory of camlets, which has declined, and a flourishing one of carpets, resembling those of Wilts and Scotland. Here are also mills for the cutting of tobacco, and a great pottery, with several glass-houses. Within 3 miles of the town are numerous collieries. Of late years the town has been considerably enlarged; and some of the new parts are built, and building, in an elegant style. It is situated on the river Air, by which it communicates with the Grand Canal. It is 196 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 88,741.

LEEK, s. [leac, Sax.] in Botany, a kind of onion. It is the national emblem in Wales.

LEEK, Staffordshire. In its church-yard are the remains of a Danish cross, now upright, and 10 feet high from the ground, beneath which are three steps. In the neighbourhood are some extensive coal-mines. It is situated in a barren country, among moorlands and rocky hills, some of which are of a most surprising height, without any turf or mould upon them. It is noted for its button manufactories. It is 154 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 11,738.

LEER, v. n. [leare, Sax.] a side view; the act of looking askance, or by a stolen view. Figuratively, a labourer and affected cast of the countenance.

To LEER, v. n. to look at by turning the eye-balls to one corner, or by stealing a side-view; to look at with an affected or dissimulated cast of the countenance.

LEES, s. [lie, Fr.] dress; sediment: it has seldom a singular. LEET, s. a little court held within a manor, and called the king's court, because it originally took its authority of punishing offences from the crown, whence it is derived to inferior persons.

LEEWARD, a. opposite to the wind. See LEE.

LEFT, a. [laeus, Lat.] that side which is opposite to the right; that side of an animal on which the heart is situated.

LEFTHANDED, a. using the left hand more frequently than the right.

LEG, s. [leg, Dan.] in Anatomy, the limb by which the body is supported, and by means of which we walk, beginning from the knee, and reaching to the foot. Figuratively, that by which any thing is supported.

LEGACY, s. [lego, Lat.] any thing given by will.

LEGAL, a. [lex, Lat.] done or worded agreeably to the laws; lawful.

LEGALITY, s. [legalité, Fr.] the quality of being agreeable to, or consistent with, the laws.

LEGALLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to, or consistent with, the laws.

LEGATARY, s. [legataire, Fr.] one who has something left him by will.

LEGATE, s. [legatus, from lego, Lat.] a deputy ambassador, or one commissioned to transact affairs for another; a commissioner deputed by the pope to transact affairs belonging to the holy see.

LEGATEE, s. one who has something left to him by will.

LEGATION, a. made by, or belonging to, a legate of the pope.

LEGATINE, s. mission; deputation; commission; embassy; or the state of a person sent and authorized to transact business for another.

LEGATOR, s. one who makes a will and bequeaths legacies. LEGEND, s. [legenda, from lego, Lat.] originally a book in the Romish Church, containing the lessons that were to be read in Divine service; whence the word was applied to the histories of the lives of saints, because chapters were read out of them at matins; but now it signifies a tale of an incredible or inauthentic character, told in relation to any creed or religion.

LEGENDE, ADRIEN MARIE, one of the great French mathematicians of the last and present century. He was professor of the military school; and received under the empire, and the restored monarchy, many valuable marks of favour for his eminent attainments. He was engaged in the measurement of the arc of the meridian of Paris; and he directed his researches into the loftiest regions of mathematical inquiry. His most popular work is his Elements of Geometry, which is a very valuable addition to the works on that subject. His discoveries all were made in the most abstruse parts of mathematical science. He died in 1833, aged 82 years.

LEGER. See LEDGER.

LEGER, a. [Fr.] in Music, the designation of short lines used to show the exact position of notes which are written above or below the staff.

LEGERDEMAIN, s. [Legereté de main, Fr.] the power of deceiving the eye, by the quickness in which a person moves his hands; a trick; a juggle.

LEGGED, a. having legs; supported by legs.

LEGHORN, a fine sea-port of Tuscany, in Italy, called in Italian, Livorno; which see.

LEGHORN, the name of a fine kind of plaited straw, originally imported from Leghorn, or Livorno, and used in making women's bonnets.

LEGBLE, a. [lego, Lat.] such as may be read; apparent; discoverable.

LEGBLY, ad. in such a manner as may be read.

LEGION, s. [legio, from lego, Lat.] a body of soldiers in the Roman army. It consisted both of horse and foot, and contained in it both light and heavy-armed soldiers. Figuratively, an army or military force; any great number. Legion of Honour, an order of merit established by Napoleon Buonaparte, for every department of public service, and eminence.

LEGIONARY, a. belonging to a legion; containing a legion; containing any great or indefinite number.

LEGISLATION, s. [lex and latum, Lat.] the act of giving laws, or the science of government.

LEGISLATIVE, a. giving or making laws.

LEGISLATOR, s. a lawgiver, or one who makes laws for any community.

LEGISLATURE, s. the power of making, altering, or repealing laws; those in any state possessed of this power.

LEGITIMACY, s. the quality of being born of parents lawfully married; lawfulness of birth.

LEGITIMATE, a. [legitimus, from lex, Lat.] born in marriage.

To LEGITIMATE, v. a. [legitimare, Fr.] to communicate the rights of a person born in marriage to one that is a bastard. Figuratively, to authorize or make lawful.

LEGITIMATELY, ad. lawfully; genuinely.

LEGITIMATION, s. [Fr.] lawfulness of birth; the quality of being born in marriage.

LEGUME, LEGUMEN, s. [Lat.] in Botany, the seed-vessel of plants having butterfly-shaped flowers.

LEGUMINOUS, a. [legumineux, Fr.] belonging to plants resembling peas and beans.

LEIBNITZ, GOTTFRIED WILHELM, one of the most celebrated philosophers of Germany, of the 17th century. His father was a professor at Leipzig, and he studied at the same university. He pursued his studies at Jena and Nuremberg; and obtained such celebrity thus early, that he was made a counsellor of Mentz. We find him next at Paris, engaged in mathematics, taking a high rank amongst the great men of the day; and next in England, where he met with Newton and the mathematicians he had called into being. After an engagement in Hanover, and another under the Duke of Brunswick, he became president of an academy formed at Berlin. He held some titles of honour and emolument under the emperors of Germany and Russia; and returning to England, died in 1716, aged 70 years. Leibnitz was one of those rare beings who seem capable of taking the foremost rank in all branches of human knowledge. In mathematics, he disputed Newton's claim to the palm for the discovery of the calculus; but the angry feelings provoked by the controversy soon subsided, and we can honour him not only as an independent discoverer, but as one who so stated it, that it could be taken up and improved by subsequent students. His historical researches are profound and invaluable. But he is more widely noted as a metaphysical inquirer. Here, in addition to the facilities displayed in research and mathematical discovery, other and rarer qualities were displayed; and his attempts to construct a permanent system of mental philosophy may rank with the highest efforts ever made by human mind. It is quite impossible even to sketch the plan of his metaphysical system; and it is needless now, as it has long been supplanted by others, which again have given way to those which now attempt to solve the riddle of man's being and relations in the universe. He pursued the method of Descartes; and amongst other works, published more than one elaborate criticism on Locke's Essay on the Understanding; which may be regarded as the complete contradictory to all that Leibnitz held. His remarks pass as proverbs amongst metaphysicians, as much as those of our own Bacon; and he may be held to have advanced true science scarcely less than the Philosopher of Verulam.

LEICESTER, (Leister) Leicestershire. It is an ancient place, and though declined from its former magnitude, is still a large but not a handsome town. It contains 5 churches, near one of which are the famous ruins of a Roman wall. Here is also a Roman military, (or mile-stone,) which forms the centre of an obelisk in one of the principal streets. The hall and kitchen of its ancient castle are still entire. The former is lofty and spacious, and the courts of justice, at the assizes, are held in them. One of its gateways also remains, with a very curious arch, the tower over which is now turned into a magazine for the county militia.

REFERENCE TO THE HUNDREDS.

1. Hamland.
2. Gortice.
3. Gortice East.
4. Gortice West.
5. Southlinton.
6. Sparkenhoe.

The County returns 1 member.
0 1 2 3 4 5
Scale of Miles.

LEICESTERSHIRE

Here is a very spacious market-place, with one of the largest markets in England for corn and cattle. The combing and spinning of wool into worsted, and manufacturing it into stockings, is the chief business of the town and neighbourhood. Its fairs, which are upon a large scale, for sheep, horses for the collar, cattle, cheese, &c., are on May 12th, July 5th, October 10th, and December 8th. It is seated on the river Soar, which has been made navigable from Leicester to Loughborough. It is 99 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 48,167.

LEICESTER, ROBERT DUDLEY, EARL OF, an English nobleman who held a distinguished situation in the court of Queen Elizabeth, and was one of her favourites. His ability he showed in the conduct of the war in the Netherlands, to the failure of which, as far as the English force went, he mainly contributed. His morality was seen in his two private marriages, his procuring the death of his first wife, his entertaining Elizabeth's proposal for a marriage with Mary Queen of Scots, whilst his own wife was living, and in the somewhat questionable relation he stood in to Elizabeth during the whole period. He was an adept in courtly wile, and was a handsome man, and a nobleman; and to these qualities he owed his distinctions. His entertainment of the queen at Kenilworth is familiar to all. He died in 1588, aged 46 years.

LEICESTER, THOMAS COKE OR ROBERTS, EARL OF, best known as Coke of Holkham, one of the most eminent promoters of English agriculture, was for many years representative of Norfolk, and notable for the consistency with which he adhered to the politics of Fox, through all changes of the times and the government. His honesty and manfulness, conjoined with total absence of the qualities which make the legislator or the orator, gave him few opportunities of distinguishing himself in parliament, and made him dwell upon those opportunities with amusing pertinacity. His great wealth supplied to the influence of his character what he lacked in other qualities. His well-earned fame rests on his devotion to farm-improvements. His introduction of a new root-crop, (the mangel-wurzel,) and the liberal terms of his leases to his numerous tenantry, converted W. Norfolk from a mere waste into one series of model-farms, and gave a stimulus to agriculture throughout the country, to which its present condition is chiefly owing. He was in every respect a fine old English gentleman; and the attainment of his whim of being Earl of Leicester, produced no such change in him as is proverbially recorded of successfully ambitious commoners. He died in 1832, aged 90 years.

LEICESTERSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Lincolnshire, Rutland, Northamptonshire, and Warwickshire. It extends about 40 miles in each direction. It is divided into 6 hundreds, which contain 12 market towns and 200 parishes; the air is healthy, and the soil, in general strong and stiff, composed of clay and marl, affords great quantities of rich grazing land, and is peculiarly fitted for the culture of beans. Toward the N. W. the Bardons Hills rise to a great height; and in their neighbourhood lies Charnwood Forest, a rough and open tract. Farther to the N. W. are valuable coal-mines. The N. E. parts feed great numbers of sheep, which are the largest, and have the greatest fleeces of wool, of any in England; they are without horns, and clothed with thick long flakes of soft wool, particularly fitted for the worsted manufactures. The E. and S. E. part of the county is a rich grazing tract. This county has been long famous for its large black dray-horses, of which great numbers are continually sent up to London, as well as for its horned cattle, and sheep, which supply the London markets with the largest mutton. The manufacture of stockings is the principal one in this county. Its chief rivers are the Ayrn, the Soar, anciently the Leire, the Wreke, the Anker, Swift, Eye, and Welland. Leicester is its chief town. Population, 215,867. It returns 6 members to parliament.

LEIGHLIN, a bishopric of Ireland in conjunction with Ferns and Ossory. Leighlinbridge is the site of the see and the cathedral, and is 32 miles from Dublin. Pop. 1748.

LEIGHTON BEAUDESERT, or BUZZARD, Bedfordshire. It is seated on a branch of the Ouse, called the Ouzel, over which it has a bridge leading into Buckinghamshire, and it is 41 miles from London. Market, Tuesday, noted for fat cattle; and it has a great horse-fair on Whit-Tuesday, especially horses of the coach and cart kind. It has other fairs, on Jan. 25, July 26, and Oct. 24. Pop. 6053.

LEIGHTON, DR. ALEXANDER, a Presbyterian divine of the early part of the 17th century. He had studied medicine at Edinburgh and Leyden, and was a professor of philosophy in the former university. He held a lectureship in London, and brought on himself the vengeance of the Star-chamber by his writings, of which Zion's Plea against Prelacy was the fatal libel. His somewhat coarse and railing arguments against Anglicanism, as perfected by Laud, were confuted, or rather disposed of, by the brutal punishments of the lash and the pillory, with its usual horrid accompaniments, and imprisonment, continued till he lost his reason, and died in 1644, aged 76 years.

LEIGHTON, DR. ROBERT, son of the foregoing, but archbishop of Glasgow, under Charles II. His travels slackened the hold that Presbyterianism had on him; the stern and bigoted formalism of its adherents increased his disrelish; and the trouble he was involved in, by joining in the engagement with Duke Hamilton, which Cromwell extinguished at Preston battle, could by no means have prevented its growth. After resigning his parish, he was chosen president of Edinburgh university, and seems to have adhered to the Covenant by an official subscription, and to have discharged the duties of his office with great assiduity and success. When Charles II. inflicted Episcopacy on Scotland, Leighton was appointed to one of the bishoprics; and his conduct was so opposite to that of his fellow bishops, that he endeavoured to get free from the office; but soon afterwards, the king and his ministers, seeing that dragging out did not induce the Scots to renounce the Covenant and follow the bishops; and also, entertaining strong hopes of re-establishing Romanism, under the mask of aiding oppressed Protestantism, adopted Leighton's views of gentle dealing, and promoted him to the archbishopric of Glasgow. He prosecuted his efforts for coalition and peace, but fruitlessly; and at length laid down his crozier and retired to England, where he died in 1684, aged 73 years. His ecclesiastical position was the result of a naturally peaceful and unpractical disposition, and was a grievous mistake. His spiritual worth and wisdom, as far as can be gleaned from his writings, which show him to be no mean scholar, and of which his Commentary on the First Epistle of Peter is a classical work of its kind, can hardly be estimated too highly. By the most affectionate of his commentators, Coleridge, his works are placed next after the inspired writings, as records of heavenly wisdom and Christian truth.

LEINSTER, a province of Ireland, lying on St. George's Channel, and bordering on the other three provinces. It is about 112 miles in length, and 70 in breadth. It contains 12 counties, and 992 parishes. The counties are, Carlow, Dublin, Kildare, Kilkenny, King's County, Longford, Louth, Meath, Queen's County, West Meath, Wexford, and Wicklow. It is the most level and best cultivated province in the kingdom; but in the early ages was almost one continued forest, the remains of which are still found in the trees which are dug out of the bogs. The chief rivers are the Barrow, Boyne, Liffey, Neir, Urrin or Slane, May, and Inny. It is, in general, well cultivated, the air is temperate, and the soil fruitful in corn and pastures. Dublin is its capital. Pop. 1,973,731.

LEIPSIC, or LEIPZIG, a rich, large, strong, and celebrated town of Saxony, Germany. It is a handsome place, neat, and regularly built, and has a castle, where is an astronomical observatory. It carries on a great trade, and there are 3 great fairs every year, at the beginning of the year, Easter, and Michaelmas, which last 15 days each, and to which merchants from all parts of Europe come. But its great traffic is in books, the system of trading in which is unlike any of the arrangements of other countries. There is a famous university here, which has a very extensive and valuable library, and all needful scientific apparatus. Some of the manufactures are very large and productive. It is seated in a plain, between the rivers Saale and Mulde, near the confluence of the Pleyse, the Elster, and the Barde. It is 64 miles from Dresden. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 51. 20. N. Long. 12. 21. E.

LEISURABLE, (leisureable) a. [from leisure,] done at leisure; done gradually, or without hurry; enjoying leisure.

LEISURABLY, (leisureably) ad. at leisure; gradually, or without hurry or tumult.

LEISURE, (leisure) s. [loisir, Fr.] freedom from business or hurry; vacant time; convenience of time.

LEISURELY, (leisurely) ad. deliberately; slowly; gradually.

LEITH, Edinburghshire, Scotland. It is seated on the Frith of Forth, and is the port of Edinburgh. It is a large and populous town, containing many handsome houses; but the greater part of the ancient buildings are neither elegant nor commodious. As the town is situated on both sides of the harbour, it is divided into N. and S. Leith. The harbour is secured by a grand stone pier, at the mouth of the little river, called the Water of Leith, and is accommodated with an elegant drawbridge and a good quay, with basin and docks, so as to be a safe, capacious, and convenient station for trading vessels. The commerce of Leith is very considerable; and the vessels employed in the London trade are, in general, of a large size, and constructed with peculiar elegance. The largest ships in this port, however, are those employed in the Greenland whale fishery. Leith is well situated for the navigation of the eastern seas. Ships of considerable size are built at this port; and here are several extensive rope-walks. There are also flourishing manufactures of bottle-glass, window-glass, and crystal; a great carpet manufactory, a soap-work, some iron forges, and an ancient hospital for disabled seamen. It is 2 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 20,746.

LEITRIM, a county of Connaught, Ireland, lying on Donegal Bay, and bounded by Fermanagh, Cavan, Longford, Roscommon, and Sligo. It is about 42 miles long, and from 6 to 17 broad; is a fertile, well-cultivated country, and, though the northern parts (which however furnish food for great numbers of young cattle) are mountainous, yet the southern parts are level. It is rich in coal, iron, lead, and other mineral treasures; but they are little worked. It contains 21 parishes, but has few places of note. Leitrim is a mere village, pleasantly seated on the banks of the Shannon, 80 miles from Dublin. Pop. 406. Carrick-on-Shannon is the principal place. Pop. 155,297. It returns 2 members to the imperial parliament.

LELAND, JOHN, an antiquarian inquirer of the reign of Henry VIII., who spent 6 years in travelling through England, and examining the records, &c. of all cathedrals, monasteries, &c. under a royal commission. He did not live to publish the results of this work; but his Itinerary and Collections were edited by Hearne, and are valuable sources of authentic information on inaccessible subjects. He died in 1552, aged about 50 years.

LELAND, DR. JOHN, a Presbyterian minister, well known for the part he took in the controversy with infidelity during the last century. He wrote against Tindal, Morgan, Bolingbroke, and others, and his work On Deistical Writers has considerable value and reputation. He died in 1766, aged 75 years.

LELY, SIR PETER, a famous portrait painter of the 17th century. He began to be noticed in Charles I.'s reign; he received great encouragement from Cromwell, and for Charles II. he painted the series known as the Beauties of his Court. The style of his subjects, which is not slightly immodest, is chargeable to the profligate monarch; the painter deserves and has enjoyed a high reputation for skill and art, both in drawing and colouring. He died in 1680, aged 63 years.

LEMAN, s. [probably from l'aimant, Fr.] a sweetheart; harlot; gallant.

LEMMA, s. [lemma, from lambano, Gr.] in Mathematics, a kind of postulation or proposition, previously assumed or laid down, to render any demonstration or problem more clear and easy.

LEMMING, s. in Zoology, a kind of rat which inhabits Norway, Lapland, and Sweden. They appear in vast numbers once about every ten years, when they travel in a direct line, devouring all the herbage of the country through which they pass.

LEMNOS, a celebrated town and island of the Archipelago, now called STALIMENE, situated near the entrance of the Dardanelles. It is subject to the Turks; but the inhabitants, who are almost all Greeks, are very industrious. The two principal places, and once towns, are Cochino, formerly called Hephestias, and Lemno, or Stalimene, anciently Myrine. It is the see of a Greek archbishop. Pop. under 10,000. Lat. 40. 3. N. Long. 25. 28. E.

LEMON, s. [limon, Fr.] in Botany, the fruit of the lemon tree, which is allied to the citron and orange. Its appearance and uses are known to all.

LEMONADE, s. liquor made of water, sugar, and the juice of lemons.

LEMMSTER, or LE'OMINSTER, Herefordshire. It trades considerably in wool, fine wheat, flax, gloves, leather, hats, &c., and there are several rivers in and about the town, on which they have mills and other machines. It is seated on the river Lug, over which it has several bridges, and is 137 miles from London. Market, Friday. Its fairs, which are noted for horses, black cattle, &c., are on Feb. 13, Tuesday after Midlent Sunday, May 13, July 10, Sept. 4, and Nov. 1. Pop. 4916.

LEMUR, s. in Zoology, a genus of animals which bear some resemblance to the monkeys, but differ from them in the lengthened shape of their heads, in the length of their hind legs, and particularly in not having their mischievous disposition.

To LEND, v. a. [lennan, Sax.] to let a person have any thing on condition of returning it when demanded; to permit a person to use a thing on condition of its being restored.

LENDER, s. one who permits another to use any thing on condition of returning it when demanded.

LENGTH, s. [leng, Sax.] the extent of a thing from one end to another; a certain space, portion, or extent of place or time; long continuance or protraction; reach, extent, or degree; the end or latter part of any time assigned. At length, at last.

To LENGTHEN, v. a. to make longer; to continue or protract the duration of any thing. Sometimes used with out by way of emphasis, to protract; to extend to a longer space of time. — v. n. to grow longer; to increase in length.

LENGTHWISE, ad. according to the length; with the end foremost.

LENIENT, a. [lenio, Lat.] lessening; rendering less painful or violent. Laxative or softening; applied to medicine.

To LENIFY, v. a. [lenifier, old Fr.] to render less painful or violent; to assuage.

LENIS, a. [lenis, Lat.] soft or gentle. In Greek, an accent in this form [ ] over vowels at the beginning of words to denote that the letter is not aspirated.

LENITIVE, a. [lenitif, Fr.] lessening any pain; softening or emollient.

LENITIVE, s. any thing applied to ease pain; any thing used to palliate.

LENITY, s. mildness; a tenderness of disposition, exercised in overlooking small faults, and punishing great ones without rigour or severity.

LENOX. See DUMBARTONSHIRE.

LENS, s. in Optics, a general name for the flat glasses used in telescopes, &c. They are of various kinds, and are named according to their surfaces, double concave, double convex, plano-concave, plano-convex, concavo-convex, and the meniscus. Lenses are made of any other transparent media beside glass, as crystal, diamond, and even of oil and water.

LENT, s. [lenten, Sax.] in the Church Calendar, a time set apart for abstinence, consisting of forty days, which receives its name from its happening in the spring.

LENTEN, a. such as is used in Lent; abstinent or sparing.

LENTICULAR, a. [lenticulaire, Fr.] having the form of a lens.

LENTIFORM, a. [lens and forma, Lat.] in the form of a lens; shaped like a lens.

LENTIGO, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, a freckle or scurfy eruption upon the skin.

LENTIGINOUS, a. [lentigo, Lat.] scurfy.

LENTIL, s. [lentille, Fr.] in Botany, a plant; called likewise vetches.

LENTISC, s. [lentiscus, Lat.] in Botany, a beautiful evergreen tree, which produces gum mastich.

LENTO, ad. [Ital.] in Music, a word used to direct a passage to be performed slowly.

LENTOR, s. [Lat.] tenacity, or viscosity, applied to the consistence of bodies. Slowness or delay, applied to motion. In Medicine, applied to that coagulated part of the blood, which occurs in malignant fevers.

LENTOUS, a. [lentus, Lat.] viscous; tenacious, applied to the consistence of bodies.

LEO, the name assumed by twelve Roman pontiffs, the first of whom was bishop of the apostolical see during the devastating incursions of the Huns; and the third was the renewer of the title of emperor in favour of Charlemagne and his son Louis; but the most celebrated was Leo X. He was a son of Lorenzo the Magnificent, and was devoted to the exaltation of the Medici, by being dedicated to the clerical profession. His father used his extensive influence so well, that he was invested with the purple when only 13 years old, though forbidden to assume it for three years, and was at the same time possessed of rich bishoprics, abbaties, canonries, &c. beyond belief. After the death of his father, and the exile of his family from Florence, by one of those revolutions which happened so frequently in that city, the cardinal shared in all the vicissitudes which made personal history so often more romantic than fiction. He was at one time wandering through Europe, half incognito; at another, scheming with his brothers, by aid of Charles or Louis of France, or Caesar Borgia, or Venice, or the captain of some free-lances, to recover the power they had lost in Florence; or, he was high in esteem with the pope at one time; at another, a refugee from his attempts on his liberty: he was once even a captive of war. At length he effected the recovery of Florence, and shortly after became supreme pontiff of the Roman Church, as Leo X. His reign was distinguished, in its relation to the Italian states, by a continuance of the struggle between Italy, united or discordant, with the empire or opposed to it, against France;—in its ecclesiastical aspect, by the commencement of the great Lutheran and Swiss Reformation, on occasion of his attempts to raise money for the erection of St. Peter's at Rome by the sale of indulgences;—in its domestic character, by a generosity in the patronage of the arts and letters, such as showed the pope a true son of Lorenzo, and by the substitution of classical scholarship and elegance, with not a rare intermixture of classical ribaldry and licentiousness, for all that ought to have been seen in the life of the head of almost all Christendom. He died in 1521, aged 56 years, having reigned nine. In these days we are in no danger of bringing the elegant paganism of Leo into comparison with the God-fearing zeal of Luther; and so we can estimate the service done to the advancement of mankind by the papal patron of taste and learning. None who can appreciate the worth of these gifts, and who know the history of their revival in Europe, will fail to assign to Leo a place beside his father, nor yet to regret that this is the sole coronal that can be awarded to the man, who was deemed great enough to have the generation in which he flourished entitled "The Age of Leo the Tenth."

LEO, the title of six Byzantine emperors, the only one of which that deserves special mention, is the third, called Leo the Isaurian, from his native country. He rose from the lowest ranks of society by his military skill and courage to the imperial throne, and the records of his reign stand in happy contrast with those of most occupants of that position. He lived in the times when the not-yet-corrupted zeal of the Mussulmans was assailing Europe at each point of connexion with the neighbouring continents; and it was the Greek fire alone that kept Constantinople in his hands, and thus preserved Europe itself. But the chief feature of his reign was his struggle against the worship of images, which had already begun in the Roman Church. He withstood firmly the decrees of councils and of popes on this subject, but he was not above the use of persecution. He died in 741, having reigned 24 years.

LEO, s. in Astronomy, the lion, the fifth of the twelve signs of the zodiac.

LEO MINOR, s. in Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

LEOD, s. [Sax.] in the composition of names, implies the people; as, Leodgar, one of great interest with the people.

LEOF, s. [Sax.] in the composition of names, implies love; thus, Leofwin, is a winner of love; Leofstan, best-beloved.

LEON, formerly a kingdom of Spain, adjoining to Portugal and bounded by Asturias, Galicia, Estremadura, and Castile. The province comprises a part of this kingdom. The soil is in general fertile, and produces all the necessities of life; and the wine is tolerably good. It is divided into nearly two equal parts by the river Duero, or Douro. Leon is the capital, which has the handsomest cathedral in all Spain; in which are the tombs of 37 kings and one emperor, and was formerly richer and more populous than at present. It is seated between two sources of the river Esta, 174 miles from Madrid. Population, about 5000. Lat. 42. 45. N. Long. 5. 27. W. Population of the province, about 325,000.

LEONIDAS, the name of a famous king of Sparta, who, at the invasion of Greece by Xerxes, king of Persia, was stationed at the narrow pass of Thermopylae to obstruct the entrance of the great army into the plains of Boeotia and Attica. Here he, with 300 Spartans and their helots, and about 700 others, opposed the whole Persian army, and fell, to a man, for the liberty of Greece. This was in 480 B. C.

LEONINE, a. [leoninus, from leo, Lat.] belonging to a lion. In Poetry, a kind of verses, the middle of which always rhymes with the end; so named from the supposed inventor; "Ut vites panem, de potibus accipe comam," or for an English example, "Without stop or stay, down the rocky way," Song.

LEOPARD, (leopard) s. [leo and pardus, Lat.] in Zoology, a swift, fierce, spotted animal, nearly resembling the panther, but inferior in size. It has been observed, when perfectly tamed, to pur like a cat.

LEOPOLD, the name of two emperors of Germany; the first of whom lived in the eventful times of Louis XIV. of France, and had to withstand the rage for military conquest and territorial aggrandizement which made that monarch the pest of his age. The peace of Nimuegen, and the peace of Ryswic, form the land-marks dividing the first two wars between Louis and the emperor from each other, and from the war of the Spanish succession, which Leopold left, with his crown, to his successor. These were the last European wars in which the Turks appear in any prominent place; and, as distinguished from the religious wars of the preceding generation, and from the wars for oligarchical domination waged during the end of the last and the beginning of the present century, may be designated the monarchical wars. Leopold was served by our own Duke of Marlborough at the head of the English auxiliaries, and by the greater general Montecuculi. He effected several changes in the internal economy of the empire, during the leisure of the brief peaces he enjoyed, and died in 1705, having reigned 44 years. The second reigned two years, during the early revolutionary wars, and died in 1732.

LEPANTO, GULF OF, the great arm of the sea that divides the Morea from the rest of Greece, and was named, anciently, the Gulf of Corinth.

LEPER, s. [lepra, Lat.] a person infected with the leprosy.

LEPROSY, LEPROSITY, s. [lepra, Lat.] in Medicine, a disease, appearing on the skin in dry, white, scurfy scales, which cover the whole body, or some part of it. Figuratively, applied to metals whose surface, being oxidized, scales off.

LEPROUS, s. infected with leprosy.

LEPUS, s. in Astronomy, a constellation of the southern hemisphere.

LERE, s. [loire, Sax.] an old word for lesson, lore, doctrine.

LERWICK, Mainland, Shetland Islands. It is situated on the E. side of the island, and is a general rendezvous of the fishing busses from Britain, Holland, Denmark, and other parts. The principal fishery carried on by the inhabitants is that of ling and tusk, which are caught in the months of June and July. It is 280 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2787.

LE SAGE, ALAIN RENÉ, an eminent French novelist, whose two great works, Gil Blas and The Devil on Two Sticks, have been translated into almost every civilized language. He wrote several other fictions, and was, besides, a dramatic writer. He died in 1747, aged 79 years.

LESBOS, one of the islands of the Ægean Sea. It produced two of the most famous poets of ancient Greece, Sappho and Alcæus; and was the scene of many transactions of great consequence to the history of Greece. It is a fertile island, and has some good harbours. It is now called Mytilini, from the name of its chief town. Pop. about 60,000.

LESKARD, or L'ESKARD, Cornwall. It contains a handsome town hall, built on stone pillars, a large church, and an eminent free-school; and has some considerable manufactures of leather and yarn. It is 221 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 4287.

LES-LIE, SIR JOHN, a distinguished mathematician and natural philosopher of the last generation. He occupied a chair in the university of Edinburgh, and obtained considerable celebrity by his writings, as well as by his academical exercises. Some of his hypotheses are so extravagant, as to make it wonderful that they could have originated with so careful an experimenter as he was known to be. He died in 1832, aged 66 years.

LESS, a negative and privative termination, [leas, Sax.] joined to a substantive, it implies the absence or privation of the thing expressed by that substantive; as shameless, childless, fatherless.

LESS, ad. in a small degree; in a lower degree.

LESS, a. the comparative degree of little; [leas, Sax.] that which on comparison is not found as big or great as the thing it is compared with.

LESSEE', s. [from lease,] the person to whom a lease is given. To LESSEN, v. a. [from less,] to diminish the bulk, quantity, or quality, of any thing.—v. n. to grow less, shrink, or contract. SYNOM. To abate, implies a decrease in action; diminish, a waste in substance; decrease, a decay in moral virtue; lessen, a contraction of parts.

LESSES, s. [laisseés, Fr.] the dung of beasts, left on the ground.

LESSING, GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM, a German writer, whose renown rests not less on the versatility of his genius, than on the excellence of his writings which are most known to the literary world. After his university course his life was wholly given to letters, with the exception of a transitory flirtation with the theatrical profession at the outset, and an equally brief and remarkable one with the gaming table. His last appointment was that of librarian at Wolfenbützel. He died in 1781, aged 52 years. He numbered amongst his intimate friends Voltaire, Mendelssohn, Nicolai, &c. His works that are best known, are Nathan the Wise, Lacoon, his Fables, Emilia Galotti, &c. He was an admirable critic and polemic; and the love of truth seems to have been his passion.

LESSON, s. [leçon, Fr.] any thing read and repeated to a teacher by a scholar; a precept, or notion inculcated by teaching; a portion of Scripture read in a church service; a tune pricked for a musical instrument, and taught by a music-master to his pupil; a remonstrance, reprimand, or rating lecture.

To LESSON, v. a. to teach; to instruct.

LESSOR, s. one who lets any thing by lease.

LEST, conj. [from least,] for fear that; in order to prevent.

L'ESTRANGE, SIR ROGER, a political writer of the 17th century, who was amongst the emigrants driven to the continent by the success of the Puritan arms. He became a newspaper editor at the Restoration, and was a thorough Stuartite. His translations of Josephus, and of other classical works, show that he was not wanting in industry and learning. He died in 1704, aged 88 years.

LESTWITHEL, or LOSTWITHEL, Cornwall. It is a corporate town, and the courts belonging to the stannary are kept here; the gaol is likewise here. It is seated on the river Foy, near its fall into Foy Haven. It is 230 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1186.

To LET, v. a. [letan, Sax.] to permit, allow, or grant; to put to hire; to grant a tenant. To let blood, to open a vein, so as the blood may flow out. Used with into, to intrust with; to admit. To let off, to discharge, applied to the discharge of artillery.—[letan, Sax.] to obstruct; to hinder or oppose. In Grammar, it is used as an auxiliary mood-verb, implying moral possibility, and permission or command.—v. n. to forbear, to withhold himself.

LET, s. an obstacle, hindrance, or obstruction.

LET [lyet, Sax.] used at the end of substantives, implies little or small; thus owl makes owlet, a little or small owl; and eagle, eaglet, a small or little eagle.

LETHARGIC, a. [lethargique, Fr.] sleepy; of the nature of a lethargy.

LETHARGICNESS, s. sleepiness; drowsiness.

LETHARGIED, a. seized with a lethargy; laid asleep, or entranced.

LETHARGY, s. [letho, Gr.] a disease consisting of a profound drowsiness, or sleep, from whence a person cannot be easily waked.

LETHE, s. oblivion; a state of forgetfulness.

LETTER, s. [from let,] one who permits; one who hinders; one who gives vent to any thing, as a blood-letter.

LETTER, s. [lettre, Fr.] a character either in printing or writing, by which is expressed any of the simple sounds of which syllables are composed; a written message; a writing, whereby a person communicates his sentiments to another at a distance; any thing to be read; a type with which books are printed. In the plural, learning, as a mark of letters.

To LETTER, v. a. to mark or stamp with letters.

LETTERED, a. learned; conversant in, and improved by, reading; marked with letters.

LETTERFOUNDER, s. one who casts the letters or types used in printing.

LETTUCE, s. [lactuca, Lat.] in Botany and Gardening, a plant which derives its name from the milky juice with which it abounds.

LEVANT, a. [Fr.] raising or making turbulent; Eastern.

LEVANT, s. this word properly signifies the East; but it is generally used, when speaking of trade, for TURKEY IN ASIA; comprehending Anatolia, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Barka, the island of Candia, and the adjacent parts. The LEVANT SEA means the Eastern part of the Mediterranean.

LEVATOR, s. [Lat.] in Surgery, an instrument, whereby the depressed parts of the skull are lifted up. In Anatomy, applied to those muscles which lift up or raise the parts to which they are fastened.

LEUCOPHLEGMACY, (leucophlegmacy) s. [leukos and phlegma, Lat.] in Nosology, a kind of dropsy consisting of a white flaccid tumour all over the body.

LEUCOPHLEGMATICK, (leucophlegmâtik) a. troubled with a leucophlegmacy.

LEVEE', s. [Fr.] the time of rising. Figuratively, an assembly of persons to pay respect to a sovereign, or nobleman, early in the day, which used to be held at the time of rising.

LEVEL, a. [infel, Sax.] even, or not having one part higher than another; in the same line with any thing else; equal in perfection or dignity. In Botany, applied to the branches or fruit-stalks when they grow to equal heights, so as to form a flat surface at the top, as in the flowers of the sweet William.

To LEVEL, v. a. to make even or without any inequalities, applied to surface. To make of the same height with any thing else; to make or lay flat; to reduce to a condition equal to that of another.—v. n. to aim; to point a piece of ordnance in taking aim; to be in the same direction, or even with a mark; to aim or make attempts.

LEVEL, s. a plane; a surface without any inequalities. Figuratively, a rate, standard, or condition; state of equality. In Mechanics, an instrument used by masons to regulate their work; also an instrument employed by astronomers in fixing their telescopes, &c.

LEVEL, (BEDFORD) a tract of fenny land, consisting of about 300,000 acres, in the counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Huntingdon, Northampton, Lincoln, Cambridge, and the Isle of Ely, which was formerly a tidal estuary, called the Hoiiland. After many attempts to drain these fens, William duke of Bedford, and others, in 1649, undertook and completed it, so far as to bring about 100,000 acres of good land to use. In these fens are several decoys, where astonishing numbers of wild fowl are taken during the season.

LEVELLER, s. one who makes any thing even.

LEVELLING, s. in Engineering, the art or act of finding a line parallel to the horizon, at one or more stations, in order to determine the height of one place with respect to another, for laying grounds even, regulating descents, draining morasses, conducting water, &c.

LEVELNESS, s. evenness or equality.

LEVEN, LOCH, a lake of Kinross-shire, Scotland, surrounded by beautiful scenery; but chiefly noted because the unhappy Mary Queen of Scots was imprisoned on one of its islands.

LEVER, s. [levier, Fr.] in Mechanics, one of the instruments called mechanical powers. It is a bar of wood or iron, which is so rested on a prop or fulcrum, at one point, that a small force can be used successfully to overpower a considerably greater resistance. A crowbar is one of the most familiar examples of the application of the principle of the lever.

LEVERET, s. [lièvre, Fr.] in Sporting, a young hare in the first year.

LEVET, s. [lever, Fr.] the blast or sound of a trumpet.

LEVIALE, a. [from levy,] that may be levied or forced to be paid.

LEVIATHAN, s. [Heb.] a huge animal mentioned in the Bible, supposed to be the crocodile.

To LEVIGATE, v. a. [levigo, from levis, Lat.] to grind to an impalpable powder between two stones; to mix liquors till they become smooth and incorporated.

LEVIGATION, s. the act of reducing hard bodies, such as coral, into a subtil powder, by grinding them on a marble stone.

LEVITE, s. [from Levi], in the Jewish Economy, one of the tribe of Levi, which was set apart for the ministry of the tabernacle and temple. They did not possess any landed property; but were, by their office, a kind of aristocracy in the nation.

LEVITICAL, a. belonging to, or descended from, the Levites; exercised by, or confined to, the Levites.

LEVITICUS, the third book of the Pentateuch, or Law of Moses, in the Old Testament. It is principally taken up with the laws and regulations respecting the Levites, the priests, and the temple service. It contains the account of the consecration of Aaron and his sons; the presumption and the punishment of Nadab and Abihu; and the stoning of a blasphemer. The study of this book is essentially necessary for the correct understanding of much of the history and prophecy of the Old Testament, and of many allusions and illustrations in the New Testament. But it is not fitted for regular and devotional perusal. By some parties it is, however, employed for this purpose, by the spiritual interpretation of its facts and injunctions.

LEVITY, s. [Levis, Lat.] lightness, or want of weight; inconsistency, or changeableness; unsteadiness; trifling gaiety; want of seriousness.

LEUSDEN, JOHN, a celebrated Biblical scholar and critic of the 17th century. He was Hebrew professor at Utrecht. His works are numerous and valuable; though superseded, for general use, by the works, on the same subjects, of more recent scholars. His Greek Testament is particularly useful to a student. He died in 1699, aged 75 years.

LEUWENHOECK, ANTHONY VAN, a famous microscopical observer, of Delft, in the 17th century. By his acquaintance with practical optics, and by his patient research, he considerably advanced the knowledge of the minutiae of anatomical and physical research. The results of his observations were usually contributed to the learned societies of the day; and some of his mistakes are as remarkable as his discoveries. He enjoys his renown to this day, though it is surpassed by that of succeeding observers. He died in 1723, aged 91 years.

To LEVY, v. a. [lever, Fr.] to raise or bring together, applied to armies. To raise or collect money as a tax or fine. In Law, to pass; thus, to levy a fine, is to pass a fine.

LEVY, s. the act of raising men or money, for military purposes.

LEWD, a. [leuede, Sax.] wicked, bad, or vicious; lustful; lost to the sense of modesty.

LEWDLY, ad. wickedly or viciously; lustfully.

LEWDNESS, s. the quality of giving a loose to, or indulging such actions and inclinations as are inconsistent with modesty.

LEWES, Sussex. It is a well-built, populous, and ancient place, and is seated on the river Ouse, which is navigable here for barges. It is finely situated on the declivity of a hill, on which are the remains of an ancient castle, the environs of which command a beautiful view of a richly-varied country, scarcely to be matched in Europe. On the river are several iron-works, where cannon are cast for merchant ships, besides other useful works of that kind. The timber hereabouts is prodigiously large, and the soil is the richest in this part of England. It is 49 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 9199.

LEWIS, one of the most considerable of the Western Islands of Ross-shire, Scotland, which being connected by a narrow isthmus with Harris, forms but one island, which is about 80 miles in length, and from 10 to 23 in breadth. Like most of the Scottish isles, it is greatly intersected by arms of the sea: By these it may be said to be divided into five peninsulas. The country, in general, is wild, bleak, barren of wood, and little fitted for cultivation; the hills are covered with heath, which afford shelter for various sorts of game. The lakes and streams abound with salmon, large red trout, &c. The land animals here are similar to those found in the northern isles, and the fisheries on the coast are not inferior. Stornaway is the only town in Lewis. Pop. 21,466.

LEXICOGRAPHER, (lexikografer) s. [lexicon and grapho, Gr.] a writer or compiler of dictionaries, or books wherein the etymologies and meanings of words are explained.

LEXICOGRAPHY, (lexikography) s. the art or practice of writing dictionaries.

LEXICON, s. [lego, Gr.] a book containing the explanation of words; generally confined to such as contain the explanation of words in the Greek and oriental languages.

LEXINGTON, Kentucky, United States. This city stands on a branch of the Elkhorn river, and is one of the neatest and best built places of the W. States. The public buildings are very fine, and such as became what was formerly the capital of the State. Transylvania university is located here. Its buildings are excellent, and all its arrangements bear out the name it has acquired. It has a good library, and is especially frequented by medical students. It is 522 miles from Washington. Pop. 6997. There are in the States of the Union 14 other places bearing this name, of which the one in Massachusetts, where the first blood was shed in the war of Independence, and that in Virginia, where Washington college is situated, are alone worthy of notice.

LEY, LEE, LAY, [leeg, Sax.] in composition of names, signify a field.

LEYDEN, a city in the kingdom of Holland. It is seated in a country full of gardens and meadows, surrounded by ditches and canals, near the ancient bed of the Rhine, which now looks like a canal. It is about four miles and a half in circumference, and is intersected by canals bordered with rows of trees. It has eight gates, and contains 50 islands, and 145 bridges, the greatest part of which are made with free-stone. The public buildings are very handsome. There are several large hospitals, and a university with a library exceedingly rich in curious manuscripts. There is also a good botanical garden; and the anatomical theatre is very fine. It is celebrated for its manufactures. It is 22 miles from Amsterdam. Population, about 40,000. Lat. 52. 9. N. Long. 4. 27. E.

LEYDEN JAR, or PHIAL, s. in Electricity, a glass vessel coated inside and out, to a certain height, with tinfoil, for the purpose of accumulating the electric force, and discharging it at one point. See ELECTRICITY, BATTERY, &c.

LIABLE, a. [Fr.] obnoxious; subject to; not exempt from.

LIAR, a. one who wilfully and deliberately tells a falsehood; one who wants veracity.

LIAS, s. [corrupted from layers], in Geology, the name of a system of strata, chiefly of soft clayey slate and limestone, found in the west of England, extending in a wavy line from Dorsetshire to the north of Yorkshire. It is burnt as lime. Its fossil contents are most varied and remarkable. It is peculiarly rich in crocodilian remains; and some animals of this kind are amongst the most monstrous of the extinct inhabitants of the earth. (See ICHTHYOSAURUS, PLEIOSAURUS, STERODACTYLE.) It is equally well furnished with shells of the nautilus kind, and a species of bony or shelly polypus called Briarum, from its numberless arms or tentacula, is peculiar to it. There are besides all these, the remains of fishes and crustaceous animals, very numerous; and those of many kinds of tree-ferns, and similar plants, of a completely tropical character.

LIBANUS, the name of a chain of mountains of Asia, which lie between Syria and Palestine, and extend from the Mediterranean Sea to Arabia. It is composed of four ranges of mountains, which rise one upon the other. They were formerly famous for cedar-trees, but now there are very few remaining. Geographers distinguish them into Libanus and Anti-Libanus, which are separated from each other at an equal distance throughout, and form a country, called by the ancients Cælo-Syria.

LIBATION, s. [libo, Lat.] the act of pouring wine on the ground in divine worship. Figuratively, the wine so poured.

LIBEL, s. [libellus, a diminutive from liber, Lat.] in Law, a malicious aspersion in printing or writing, tending to injure the reputation of a person living, or the memory of one who is dead. The law of libel, though much amended, yet requires the attention of jurists.

To LIBEL, v. a. to print or publish any thing that shall injure the character of a person; to spread any defamatory report by writing or printing.

LIBELLER, s. one who spreads a report in writing which may injure a person's character.

LIBELLOUS, a. containing some report which may injure a person's character.

LIBERAL, a. [liberalis, from liber, Lat.] becoming a gentleman; generous; bountiful. Liberal arts are those that refine the mind, in opposition to mechanical arts.

LIBERALITY, s. [liberalitas, Lat. liberalis, Fr.] bounty; a generous disposition of mind, exerting itself in giving largely.

SYNON. Liberty implies acts of mere giving or spending; generosity, acts of greatness; bounty, acts of kindness. A liberal man gives freely; a generous man, nobly; and a bountiful man, charitably. Liberality is a natural disposition; generosity proceeds from elevation of sentiment; bounty, from religious motives. Liberality denotes freedom of spirit; generosity, greatness of soul; bounty, openness of heart.

LIBERALLY, ad. giving in a large manner, or without grudging.

LIBERTINE, s. one who acts without restraint; one who pays no regard to the precepts of religion.—(libertinus, Lat.) in Law, a freed man, or slave who is made free.

LIBERTINE, a. [libertin, Fr.] licentious; having no respect to the precepts of religion.

LIBERTINISM, s. an opinion or practice which is inconsistent with the precepts of religion.

LIBERTY, s. [liberté, Fr. libertas, Lat.] the absence of constraint; freedom; a privilege, exemption, or immunity; leave or permission. In Politics, it means national independence; a condition in which by law every one is protected in the enjoyment and exercise of his rights; a condition in which every advantage that can arise to individuals from society is secured to each and all, the governors and rulers being appointed for the good of the governed, and no class or individual considering itself privileged to benefit itself by the injury of others, on any pretext. City Liberty, is the name of a county attached to a city; a district under the civic jurisdiction, but not included in the boundaries. In Metaphysics, as opposed to necessity, it means the condition of man as made by God, capable of avoiding evil, and doing and being good; gifted with all useful knowledge, and a conscience which spontaneously judges every state or action according to that knowledge, and therefore, as responsible to God as a person, and not regarded or treated by him as a thing; whose movements and states are only the results of the operation of certain causes, which he himself sets in action and controls; also, by some writers, possession of the power, faculty, or ability of choice, volition, or desire.

LIBIDINOUS, a. [libido, Lat.] lewd; given up to lust.

LIBIDINOUSLY, ad. lewdly; in a wanton or unchaste manner.

LIBRA, in Astronomy, the Balance, one of the twelve signs of the zodiac, supposed to be thus denominated because, when the sun is in this sign in the autumnal equinox, the days and nights are of equal length.

LIBRARIAN, s. [librarius, from liber, Lat.] one who has the care of a library.

LIBRARY, s. [librairie, Fr.] a large collection of books, either public or private.

TO LIBRATE, v. a. [libro, Lat.] to poise, balance, or counterpoise.

LIBRATION, s. [libro, Lat.] the state of being balanced. In Astronomy, an oscillation or slight irregularity in the moon's motion, by which we have not always exactly the same parts of her surface turned directly towards us. It is very small in amount, and can only be observed by good telescopes; whilst the cause can be made plain only to those conversant with the higher mathematics.

LIBRATORY, a. balancing; playing like a balance.

LICE, plural of Louse.

LICENCE, s. [lice, Lat.] contempt of lawful and necessary restraint; a grant or permission; a liberty or consent; a power or authority given to a person to do some lawful act. In Canon or Ecclesiastical Law, a liberty or power granted to a person to marry without publication of bans. Among publicans, a liberty or power granted by a justice of peace for selling beer, or wine, &c.

TO LICENCE, v. a. [licencier, Fr.] to set at liberty; to permit a person to do something which he could not without such grant.

LICENSER, s. one who grants permission or liberty to do a thing.

LICENTIATE, (licentiate) s. [licentiatus, low Lat.] one who uses licence, or makes free with the laws. A degree in the Spanish universities. Among the college of physicians, a person who has licence or authority given him for practising physic, though not admitted a fellow of the college.

TO LICENTIATE, (licentiate) v. a. [licentier, Fr.] to permit; to authorize by licence.

LICENTIOUS, (the ti in this word and its derivatives is pron. like shi, as licentious a. [licentia, Lat.] not restrained by law, morality, or religion; overflowing its bounds; unconfin'd.

LICENTIOUSLY, ad. with too much liberty or freedom; without any restraint from law or morality.

LICENTIOUSNESS, s. boundless liberty; contempt or neglect of just restraint.

LICH, s. [lice, Sax.] a dead carcass; hence Lich-wake, or the custom of watching the dead every night till the corpse was buried; Lich-gate, the gate through which the dead are carried to the grave; Lich-field, the field of the dead, a city in Staffordshire, so named from Christians martyred there; Lich-fowl, certain birds accounted unlucky and ill-boding, as the raven, screech-owl, &c.

LICHEN, s. [Gr.] in Botany, the name of an extensive order of plants, which form broad leathery fronds, or naked branching stems; or else, merely spread themselves over the surface of the stone or wood they grow on. They are propagated by spores, or seeds, contained in cups which grow from the upper part or surface of the plant. They do not attain a very large size, and differences of soil, &c. produce great varieties in their appearance. Many of them are used in medicine, and some are eatable; and the well-known rein-deer moss is a very widely diffused species.

LICHFIELD, Staffordshire. It is a large and well-built city, containing 3 parish churches, besides a cathedral, a free-school, and other public buildings. It is seated in a fine campaign country, on a little river that divides it into two parts, called the City and the Close, and which falls into the Trent 3 miles below; communicating, however, with all the inland navigations. It is 119 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Friday. Pop. 6761.

LICHOW, s. in Natural History, a sort of owl, by the vulgar supposed to foretell death.

TO LICK, v. a. [liccan, Sax.] to touch or pass over with the tongue; to move the tongue over any thing; to lap or take in by the tongue. Used with up, to devour; to drink up any moisture. To beat; a vulgar term.

LICK, s. a blow; the act of rubbing the tongue over any thing; a low word.

LICKERISH, LIKEROUS, a. [liccera, Sax.] nice in the choice of food; eager; greedy; nice, or tempting in the appetite.

LICKERISHNESS, s. gluttony; greediness after dainties; niceness of palate.

LICTOR, s. [Lat.] an officer who in ancient Rome attended the consul, and was employed in apprehending criminals.

LID, s. [hid, Sax.] a cover which shuts down close upon or into a vessel; the membrane which covers the eye when we sleep or wink. In Botany, a cover to the tips of several of the mosses, as in the bogmoss.

LIE, s. [Fr.] a liquor impregnated with some other body, such as soap or salt.

LIE, s. [lige, Sax.] a statement made for the purpose of misleading and deceiving; an untruth; any thing done, or silence maintained, for the express purpose of deceiving any one respecting a matter on which he ought to be truly informed.

TO LIE, v. n. [leogan, Sax. legen, Belg.] to be guilty of a falsehood.

TO LIP, v. n. preter. and part, lay, lain, or lien, but the last is seldom used; [legen, Belg.] to rest horizontally, or with a great inclination, upon any thing else; to rest or lean upon; to repose or be in a bed; to be placed, or situated. To lie by, to be in reserve. To be in a person's power; to depend on a person, used with in. To lie in, to be in childbirth. Used with on, to be imputed to.

LIEF (leef) a. [lief, Belg. leef, Sax.] dear or beloved.

LIEF (leef) ad. willingly or readily.

LIEGE, (leef) a. [lige, Fr. and ligio, Ital.] bound by some feudal tenure; whence liegeant, a subject, and liege lord, a sovereign.

LIEGE, (leef) a large, populous, and rich city of Belgium, and capital of a province of the same name. Here the river Maese is divided into three branches, the Loose, Oorte, and Ambleve, which, after having passed through the streets under several bridges, unite again. Here is a famous university; the public structures are very numerous; and on the sides of the river are fine walks. This place is about 4 miles in circumference, and is seated on the river Maese, in a valley surrounded by hills, with agreeable and fertile meadows between. It is noted for its manufactures, which are chiefly in metallic goods, muskets, cannon, &c. &c. Pop. above 60,000. Lat. 50. 30. N. Long. 5. 31. E.

LIEGE, a province of Belgium, adjoining to Prussia, and bounded by Limburg, Luxemburg, Brabant, and Namur. It is fruitful in corn and fruits, and contains mines of iron, lead, and coal, beside quarries of marble. It has no particular hills except in the S. part, where it is rocky and broken. The Maese is its chief river. Liege is its capital. Pop. 400,000.

LIEGE, (leef) s. a sovereign; a superior lord.

LIEN, (leen) s. [Fr.] in Law, the right of any person to whom another is indebted in any way, to retain any thing belonging to that other, which may be in, or come into his possession, till the obligation is discharged.

LIVER, s. [from to lie.] one that rests or lies down; one that remains concealed.

LIEU, (leu) s. [Fr.] place; room; or stead: only used with in.
LIEUTENANCY, (lieutenant) s. [lieutenant, Fr.] the office of a lieutenant; the body of lieutenants.

LIEUTENANT, (lieutenant) s. [Fr.] a deputy, or one that is commissioned to act for another in his absence. In War, one who holds the next rank to a captain, and acts in his stead, when absent, or incapacitated by accidents. Lieutenant-general, an officer in the army next in rank to a general. Lord-lieutenant, an officer appointed by the crown to represent it, discharging its duties and securing its interests in an adjoining territory, as Ireland; or in each county of the realm. Deputy Lord-lieutenant, the officer appointed by the Lord-lieutenant, to do his work in his absence, and generally to assist him in the discharge of his duties.

LIEUTENANTSHIP, (lieutenanthship) s. the rank or office of a lieutenant.

LIFE, s. plural lives; [lifum, Sax.] the state in which an organized body is, when it performs its functions; the interior and unknown force which preserves organized bodies in the exercise of their functions; a state of conscious being, whether embodied or disembodied; the present state, opposed to the future; conduct, or the general manner in which a person behaves; the continuance or duration of our present state; an exact resemblance of a living form; a state of vegetation, or growing, applied to plants; the general state of mankind; manners; spirit; vigour; vivacity; also a written narrative of a person's life.

LIFE-ASSURANCE, (commonly, but incorrectly, life-insurance), a system of securing to the heirs, &c. of any one at his death, a certain sum of money, by the payment of a stipulated sum by him, annually. The amount of this premium is fixed by means of calculations of the probable duration of a healthy life, at various ages. Life-assurance is usually effected by means of associations of companies, in which the parties are either mutually assured, or else there are proprietors who undertake the payment of the assurance in return for the annual premium. There are various plans of assurance, and its benefits are so great, that no one who can avoid it should remain unassured.

LIFEBLOOD, s. the blood necessary to life.

LIFE-BOAT, a vessel fitted up with cork, or air-barrels, so as to be extremely buoyant, with pumps, &c., so as to be rapidly emptied in case of filling; built very strongly, that it may not be stove; and furnished with every needful apparatus, for the purpose of rescuing sailors from shipwrecked vessels, and in storms.

LIFEAVING, a, having the power to give life.

LIFE-GUARD, s. the guard of a king's person.

LIFELESS, a. deprived of life; dead. Figuratively, without vigour, power, force, or spirit.

LIFELESSLY, ad. without vigour or strength; jejune; frigid, or without spirit.

LIFELIKE, a. like a living person.

LIFE-PRESERVER, s. a cot made to swing on ropes, which are stretched between a vessel in a storm and the shore, for the landing of the crew, &c.; also a short club, made of whalebone, and loaded with lead at each extremity.

LIFE-STRING, s. a nerve; this word is used only in poetry.

LIFETIME, s. the continuance or duration of life.

LIFEWEARY, a. tired of living.

To LIFT, v. a. [lyfta, Swed. lyfter, Dan.] to raise from the ground; to heave or hold on high; to raise or elevate; to raise in esteem, fortune, dignity.—v. n. to strive to raise by an effort of strength. SYNON. We lift, in taking any thing up; we raise, in setting it upright, or placing it according to some order.

LIFT, s. the act or manner of raising any thing from the ground, or holding it upwards; an effort or struggle. A dead lift implies an effort to raise something that cannot be moved with the whole force; and figuratively, any state of distress, impotence, or inability.

LIFTER, s. one that raises any heavy thing from the ground; one that raises any thing.

LIGAMENT, s. [ligo, Lat.] any thing that ties or binds one thing to another. In Anatomy, a white, tough, solid, and inflexible part of the body, whose chief use is to fasten the bones together which are articulated for motion.

LIGAMENTAL, LIGAMENOUS, a. composing, or of the nature of, a ligament.

LIGATION, s. the act of binding; the state of being bound.

LIGATURE, s. any thing bound on as a bandage; the act of binding; the state of being bound. In Music, a curve drawn over notes in different bars, to show that the second is only a continuance of the first, or over notes which are to be sung to one syllable.

LIGHT, (ht) s. [leoht, Sax.] in Natural Philosophy, an emanation from certain bodies, such as the sun and stars; and from most substances, when in a state of intense heat; consisting either of infinitely small particles projected with great velocity, (as Newton held,) or of waves or pulsations in an ether equally diffused throughout the universe, (as Huyghens taught, and as most modern opticians hold,) and which we perceive by means of our organs of vision. Light proceeds in straight lines, except in the phenomena of Diffraction and Refraction, which see. It travels over nearly 195,000 miles in a single second. It is not only the condition of visibility and sight, but also the cause of all the abundant diversity of colours which we see. But the most remarkable phenomena of light are those which show its relation to magnetism or electricity, and to chemistry. See PHOTOGRAPHY. For the science of light, see OPTICS, REFLECTION, POLARIZATION, PRISM, MICROSCOPE, TELESCOPE, &c. &c. Figuratively, illumination, instruction, or the discovery of something before unknown. A point of view; a situation; the direction in which the light falls, applied to paintings. Explanation, or the means of clearing up any difficult passage in writings. A lamp or candle used to give light in the night-time. A person of great parts and eminent abilities, famous for his discoveries, and the communication of them. The Northern Lights, is the common name for the Aurora Borealis.

LIGHT, (ht) a. easily raised, or of small weight; not burdensome to be borne, worn, carried, or lifted up. Figuratively, easy to be endured; easy to be performed; active or nimble; slight or trifling; not thick or gross; gay; airy; trifling; irregular; unchaste; bright, or shining; clear. Tending to white, applied to colour.

To LIGHT, (ht) v. a. [from light, substantive,] to kindle, inflame, or to set on fire; to give light to.

To LIGHT, (ht) v. n. [licht, Belg.] to fall upon or meet with by chance, used with upon.—[alighen, Sax.] to dismount or descend from a horse or carriage, used with from, off, and formerly down; to fall, or strike; to settle; to fix, or rest.

LIGHT, ad. See LIGHTLY.

To LIGHTEN, (hten) v. n. [lichten, Sax.] to flash, applied to the glare of light occasioned by the flash from a thunder-cloud. To fall or light, used with upon.

To LIGHTEN, (hten) v. a. [from light, substantive,] to illuminate, or make things visible; to disperse any gloom or obscurity; to convey knowledge. To make less heavy, applied to burdens.

LIGHTER, (hter) s. a large heavy boat, in which ships are lightened or unloaded.

LIGHTERMAN, (hterman) s. one who owns or works a lighter.

LIGHTFINGERED, (htefingered) a. nimble at conveyance; thievish.

LIGHTFOOT, LIGHTEFOOTED, (htefutted) a. nimble in dancing, or swift in running.

LIGHTFOOT, DR. JOHN, a very learned Hebrew and Rabbinical scholar, whose works in explanation of the text of the Old Testament, and of various subjects connected with the Hebrew Law, &c. are extremely valuable. He lived during the unsettled times of the 17th century; and was a minister under the protectorate and the restored monarchy; and died in 1675, aged 73 years.

LIGHTHEADED, (lite-headed) a. unsteady; loose; thoughtless; giddy. In Medicine, delirious, or disordered in the mind by disease.

LIGHTHEARTED, (lite-hearted) a. gay; merry; airy; cheerful.

LIGHTHOUSE, (lite-house) s. a high building, at the top of which lights are placed to guide ships at sea. The most famous lighthouses of antiquity were, the Pharos of Alexandria, and the Colossus of Rhodes, which was used for a similar purpose. The Eddystone lighthouse, and the Bell Rock lighthouse, are wonderful monuments of skilful architecture applied to the beneficent purpose of preventing shipwreck.

LIGHTLEGGED, a. nimble; swift.

LIGHTLESS, (liteless) a. dark; wanting light.

LIGHTLY, (litley) ad. without pressing hard; easily; without uneasiness or affliction; cheerfully; unchastely; immodestly; nimbly.

LIGHTMINDED, (lite-minded) a. unsettled; unsteady; full of levity.

LIGHTNESS, (liteness) s. want of weight; agility, or nimbleness; inconstancy; unchastity, or levity.

LIGHTNING, (litening) s. [from lighten, verb.] a flash of light which precedes thunder. See THUNDER STORMS, and ELECTRICITY.

LIGHTNING CONDUCTORS, pointed metallic rods placed against buildings, and extended some way above them, communicating with the earth, for the purpose of receiving the discharge of electricity from thunder clouds, and diverting it from the building, so as to prevent damage and loss of life.

LIGHTS, (lites) s. the lungs, or organs by which the action of breathing is performed. The word is never used in reference to the human organs.

LIGHTSOME, (litesome) a. luminous; with great appearance of light; gay; airy.

LIGHTSOMENESS, (litesomeness) s. luminousness, or the quality of having much light; cheerfulness; levity.

LIGNA LOES, s. [lignum aloes, Lat.] aloes wood.

LIGNEOUS, a. [lignum, Lat.] made of wood; resembling wood.

LIGNITE, s. in Mineralogy, imperfectly formed coal, which is found in bogs, and many more recent formations.

LIGNUM VITÆ, s. [Lat.] a very hard wood, called likewise guaiacum.

FIGURE, s. a precious stone, mentioned in Scripture.

LIKE, a. [līc, Sax.] resembling, or having a resemblance; equal; of the same quality or quantity; likely, or in a state that gives probable expectations; but this last sense is improper. This word is often used with the definite article, as if it were a substantive.

LIKE, ad. in the same manner; in the same manner as; in such a manner as becomes. Followed by enough, probable or likely.

To LIKE, v. a. [līcan, Sax.] to approve of; to choose with some degree of preference; to view with approbation or fondness. SYNON. We are said to like that which gratifies the appetites; to love that which gratifies the passions or feelings.

LIKELIHOOD, LIKELINESS, s. [from likely,] appearance or show; resemblance; probability, or appearance of truth.

LIKELY, a. such as may be liked; such as may please by their external appearance; probable.

LIKELY, ad. probably.

To LIKEN, v. a. to represent as bearing some resemblance; to compare.

LIKENES, s. resemblance; one that resembles another.

LIKEWISE, ad. in like manner; also; too; moreover, or besides. SYNON. Also relates more to number than quantity, its proper office being to add and to augment. Likewise is used with more propriety when it refers to similitude or comparison; its particular office is, to denote the conformity and equality of things.

LIKEING, a. plump; in a state of plumpness.

LIKEING, s. a state of trial, wherein a person is placed, that he may see whether he likes, or is approved of; good state of body; plumpness.

LILAC, s. [Fr.] in Botany, a beautiful shrub, frequently cultivated in our gardens, the flowers of which are much admired for their beauty and smell.

LILAC, a. the name of a light purple colour, resembling the hue of the flower so called.

LILBURN, JOHN, called also Free-born John, a person who made himself somewhat conspicuous during the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century, by his pertinacious combativeness. He appeared first as a clerk or servant of Prynne, and was imprisoned and whipped for distributing his master's pamphlets. Cromwell brought his case before the Long Parliament, to John's great advantage. He was in the army during the war, and rose to be a lieutenant-colonel, being present at several engagements. But he got into trouble by his wrangling, and was imprisoned. He set himself most obstinately against Cromwell, and published some wonderful pamphlets in his zeal to unmask him. He was tried for his zeal, and acquitted, but kept in hold, as was very needful. Having begun as a Presbyterian, he ended as a Quaker, and died in 1657, without having harmed any, save himself and his admirers.

LILIED, a. adorned with lilies; of the whiteness of a lily.

LILLE, a city of the department of Nord, France. It is the chief place of the department, and stands on a canal which joins the river Lys, over which it has several bridges. It is a very strong place, being defended by a fine citadel, as well as by its own fortifications. It is, on the whole, handsomely built, and has some fine public edifices. It is a place of great importance, both for its trade and for its manufactures; and its canal gives it ready communication with the sea-coast. Its museums, library, &c. &c. are also deserving of mention. It is 135 miles from Paris. Pop. about 80,000.

LILLY, WILLIAM, a notorious astrologer and fortune-teller of the 17th century. He lived in the midst of the civil wars, and was consulted by the unhappy king, on more than one occasion. He was afterwards as much in favour with the victorious party. His fame rested on his almanack as much as on his astrological practice, and that publication was the progenitor of the Loyal Almanack, which brings in such a harvest to the Stationers' Company, at the cost of its ignorant purchasers. Lilly accumulated a good fortune by his fortune-telling, and also by three tolerably worldly-wise marriages, and died in 1681, aged 79 years.

LILY, s. [lilium, Lat.] in Botany, the name of several flowers of various colours; the most beautiful of which is of an intense white, and is very common in gardens.

LILY of the Valley, s. in Botany, the name of a very beautiful English plant, common in shady woods, having two broad green leaves, and a small spike of delicately scented, white, bell-shaped flowers.

LILY, WILLIAM, a famous English school-master of the beginning of the 16th century. He had travelled much before he began to teach; and he had, and deserved to have, a considerable reputation. He died in 1523, aged 54 years. It is worthy of observation, that many schools, both public and private, in England, in spite of all the advance that the science of language, and the study of the classics, have made during the 300 years that have passed since Lily's days, continue to indoctrinate their ingenious disciples in the mysteries of Latin inflections by Lily's doggerel hexameters, painfully known as the Properia que maribus, and As in presentis.

LILY-LIVERED, a. white-livered; cowardly.

LIMA, the capital of the republic of Peru, S. America. It stands at some distance from the coast, in a spacious and beautiful valley, on a small river, called by the same name. It is well planned, but the frequency of earthquakes forbids all attempts at architectural elegance. It has some public buildings, and a fine fountain in the great square. Owing to the climate, and to the recent political changes, and especially to the abundance of precious metals which is found near it, there is little activity of a mercantile or a manufacturing kind. It has, however, a university of good standing. Callao is its sea-port, at about 7 miles distance. Pop. about 75,000, of whom about 20,000 are slaves. Lat. 12. 2. S. Long. 77. 7. W.

LIMB, (lim) s. [līm, Sax. and Scot.] a member; a joint of any animal.—[limbe, Fr.] an edge or border, used by philosophical writers. In Botany, the upper part of a petal, in blossoms composed of more than one regular petal.

To LIMB, (lim) v. a. to assume limbs; to tear asunder; to dismember.

LIMBECK, s. [corrupted from alembic,] a still.

LIMBED, (lim'd) a. formed with regard to limbs.

LIMBER, a. [limp, Brit.] flexible; easily bent.

LIMBERNESS, s. the quality of being easily bent.

LIMBO, s. [limbus, Lat.] a middle state, bordering on hell, in which there is neither pleasure nor pain. Popularly, a prison; any place of misery and confinement.

LIMBURG, the name of an old province of the Netherlands, adjoining to Prussia, and divided now between the kingdoms of Belgium and Holland. It is altogether about 40 miles in length, by about 30 in breadth; but its form is rather wedge-shaped. It is generally level, and the soil is very fertile. The rivers Maese, Jaare, and Demer water it. It yields abundance of coals. It also produces excellent corn, fruits, &c., and is noted for a breed of fine cattle. Its manufactures are inconsiderable. At the partition, little more than a third was assigned to Holland. Maastricht is its capital. Pop. about 160,000. Pop. of the Belgian portion, about 230,000. The town of Limburg is in the Dutch portion. It stands on the Wese. Excellent marble is quarried in its neighbourhood; and it produces good cheese, and manufactures linen cloth. Pop. about 3000. Lat. 50.38. N. Long. 5.54. E.

LIME, s. [lim, Sax.] any viscous substance; particularly applied to that which is laid on twigs, and catches or sticks to the wings and feet of birds that touch it, hence called birdlime. In Mineralogy, an earth obtained from chalk, marble, limestone, &c. by burning; which furnishes the principal material for mortar; is employed by bleachers, tanners, soap-boilers, iron-masters, &c., in their several manufactures; by farmers, as a manure; and is of some use in medicine. Lime-water is used in medicine as an astringent, tonic, and purgative.

LIME, s. in Botany, called likewise the linden-tree; its wood is much used by carvers and turners.—[lime, Fr.] a species of lemon which grows in the West Indies.

To LIME, v. a. to smear with lime; to cement or unite as with mortar; to manure ground with lime. Figuratively, to entangle or insnare.

LIMERICK, s. a kiln, where chalk, &c. are burnt to lime. LIMERICK, Limerick, in Munster, Ireland. It is divided into the Irish and English town; the latter, which is the most ancient, is situated on an island, formed by the river Shannon, and called King's Island. It has increased prodigiously in late years by the addition of handsome streets and quays; and its commerce has kept pace with its size. The linen, woollen, and paper manufactures are carried on here to a great extent; and the exports of beef and other provisions are considerable. It contains many hospitals, and some handsome public structures. The country around it is fertile and pleasant, but the air is rather moist. It is 94 miles from Dublin. Pop. 48,391. Limerick is a bishop's see with Ardfer and Aghadane.

LIMERICK, a county of Munster, Ireland. It is about 51 miles in length, and 32 in breadth, bounded by Tipperary, Clare, Kerry, and Cork. It contains 125 parishes, and is a fertile and well-inhabited county, though the S. E. and S. W. parts are mountainous. The soil is particularly rich in pasture; the best cattle slaughtered at Cork being sent from this county. Several rivers water it, the principal of which are the Shannon and the Maig. Pop. 281,638. It sends only 2 members to parliament.

LIMESTONE, s. in Building and Commerce, any kind of stone which has such a preponderance of carbonate of lime in it, that it can be used for obtaining lime by calcining. See MOUNTAIN LIMESTONE.

LIMEWATER, s. a liquor made by pouring boiling water on unslaked lime, and racking it off when settled.

LIMEWORT, s. in Botany, a kind of pink.

LIMIT, s. [limes, Lat.] a bound; a border; the utmost extent of any place or space.

To LIMIT, v. a. to confine within certain bounds; to restrain; to circumscribe, or prescribe bounds to. To restrain or confine the sense, applied to words that have various significations.

LIMITA'NEOUS, a. belonging to the bounds.

LIMITARY, a. placed at the limits or boundaries as a guard.

LIMITATION, s. restriction; restraint; a certain time assigned by statute within which an action must be brought.

To LIMN, v. a. [enluminer, Fr.] to draw or paint any thing; to colour or illuminate in prints and maps; to paint in water colours, in crayons, oil colours, &c.

LIMNER, s. [enlumineur, Fr.] a painter, or one who draws portraits from the life.

LIMOGES, a city in the department of Haute Vienne, France. It is seated on the river Vienne, and is somewhat irregularly built; but has some fine public buildings. It has some manufactures of value, and is a place of considerable trade. It is 235 miles from Paris. Pop. about 26,000. Lat. 45. 47. N. Long. 1. 17. E.

LIMOUS, a. [limous, Lat.] muddy and slimy.

LIMP, a. [limp, Ital.] vapid, or having no taste. Without boards for covers, applied to bookbinding.

To LIMP, v. n. [limpen, Sax.] to halt; to walk lamely.

LIMPET, s. in Natural History, a kind of shell-fish.

LIMPID, a. [limpidus, Lat.] clear; pure; transparent.

LIMPIDNESS, s. the quality of being transparent, applied to streams.

LIMPINGLY, ad. in a lame or halting manner.

LIMY, a. [from lime,] containing lime; viscous or glutinous.

LINACRE, DR. THOMAS, a very learned English physician, of the time of Henry VIII. He had travelled and studied at the most eminent schools on the continent, and he took a very high place amongst the healers of his day. He founded the College of Physicians; and was himself physician to four successive monarchs of England. He became a parish priest at the latter part of his life; and was made prebendary of Westminster. He died in 1524, aged 64 years.

LINCHPIN, s. an iron pin that keeps the wheel on the axle-tree.

LINCOLN, (Linkon) formerly called Nicol, Lincolnshire. This city is pleasantly seated on the side of a hill, on the Witham, which here divides itself into three small channels. It is much reduced from its former extent and splendour, (when it contained 52 parish churches, and was one of the most populous cities of England, and a mart for all goods coming by land or water), and now consists principally of one street, above 2 miles long, well paved, and several cross and parallel streets well peopled. Here are some handsome modern buildings, but more antique ones. The Romans' northgate still remains under the name of New-port Gate. It is a vast semicircle of stones, of very large dimensions, laid without mortar, and connected only by their uniform shape. The cathedral is a stately Gothic pile, one of the largest in England, and stands on so lofty a hill, that it may be seen 50 miles to the N. and 30 to the S., and is particularly admired for its interior architecture, which is in the richest and lightest Gothic style. The famous bell, called Tom of Lincoln, is surpassed in magnitude by only two others in England. The chief trade here is in coals brought by the Trent and Foss-dyke; and oats and wool, which are sent by the river Witham. It is 129 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Friday. Pop. 16,172.

LINCOLNSHIRE, a county of England, lying on the German Ocean, and bounded by Norfolk, Cambridgeshire, Northamptonshire, Rutland, Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire, and Yorkshire. It is 77 miles in length, and 48 in breadth where widest. It is divided into three parts, namely, Holland on the S. E., Kesteven on the S. W., and Lindsey on the N. It contains 30 hundreds, 1 city, 33 market-towns, and 630 parishes. Its principal rivers are the Trent, Humber, Witham, Welland, Ancam, Nen, and Dun. The air is various, according to its three great divisions. The soil in many places is very rich, the inland part producing corn in great plenty, and the fens cole-seed, and very rich pastures; whence their breed of cattle is larger than that of any other county in England except Somersetshire; their horses are also excellent, and very large; and their sheep are not only of the largest breed, but are clothed with a long thick wool, peculiarly fitted for the worsted and coarse woollen manufactures. It has some manufactures also. Pop. 362,602. It sends 13 members to parliament.

LINCTUS, s. [lingo, Lat.] in Medicine, a preparation so called because licked up by the tongue.

LINDEN, s. [limd, Sax.] in Botany, a name of the lime-tree.

LINDSAY, or LYNDISAY, SIR DAVID, of the Mount, Lord Lion King-at-arms, of Scotland, a poet of some name and note amongst those who, in that country, before the great changes of the Reformation and the Union, stepped beyond the fabrications of ballads. He was at first a sort of page to the young king, but was afterwards promoted to the tabard, and was sent on a mission to the emperor Charles V. He espoused the cause of the Reformation, and died in 1557, aged 67 years.

LINE, s. [linea, Lat.] quantity or space, considered only with regard to length; a long and fine mark; a slender string; a thread extended as a guide or rule; the string that sustains the hook in angling; a lineament or mark in the face; a single row of letters written or printed from one margin to the other. Belonging to the regular troops or war-ships, in military affairs. A work thrown up, or a breach, applied to Fortification. In Geography, the equator or equinoctial line. In Pedigree, progeny, family, or relations, considered as ascending or descending. Figuratively, a letter, or poetical composition.

To LINE, v. a. [probably from linum, Lat.] to cover on the inside.

LINEAGE, s. [linage, Fr.] race; progeny; family.

LINEAL, a. [linea, Lat.] composed of lines delineated. Descending directly, as the son from the father, &c., applied to genealogy; allied by direct descent.

LINEALLY, ad. in a direct line, applied to pedigree.

LINEAMENT, s. feature; or any mark, either in the face or form, which distinguishes one person from another.

LINEAR, a. composed of lines; having the form of lines.

LINEATION, s. a draught or appearance of a line or lines.

LINEN, s. [linum, Lat.] cloth made of hemp or flax.

LINEN, a. made of linen; resembling linen in whiteness.

LINEN-DRAPER, s. [from linen and draper, of drap, Fr.] a person who sells linen. See DRAPER.

LING, s. [linga, Isl.] in Botany, a kind of heath. — [linghe, Belg.] in Ichthyology, a kind of sea-fish, usually dried and salted.

LING, [Sax.] a termination commonly implying diminution, as gossling, a little goose; darling, a little dear. Sometimes it denotes quality, or condition; thus suckling, denotes the state of an infant that sucks; and kirdling, the quality of a person who works for hire.

To LINGER, v. n. [ling, Sax.] to remain long in a state of languor or pain. Figuratively, to hesitate, or be in suspense; to wait long in expectation or uncertainty; to remain long in any state as loth to leave it; to be long in producing an effect.

LINGERER, s. one who does any thing in such a manner as to protract the time, or do it as slowly as he can.

LINGERINGLY, ad. in a tedious or delaying manner.

LINGET, s. [linget, Fr.] a small mass of metal.

LINGO, s. [Port.] language; tongue; or speech: a low cant word.

LINGUADENTAL, a. [lingua and dens, Lat.] in Grammar, applied to the letters uttered by the joint action of the tongue and teeth, as f and v.

LINGUIST, s. [lingua, Lat.] a person skilled in languages.

LINIMENT, s. [linio, Lat.] an ointment, or any medicine that may be spread or smeared over a sore.

LINING, s. [from line, the verb.] the inner covering of any thing.

LINK, s. [gelencke, Teut.] a single ring of a chain; any thing doubled, or forming a loop resembling the ring of a chain; any thing that connects; a chain. In reasoning, a single part of a series or chain of consequences; a proposition; joined to a foregoing and following proposition, a series.

To LINK, v. a. to connect or join together, as the links of a chain. Figuratively, to unite in concord or friendship; to connect, generally used with together.

LINKBOY, s. a boy that carries a torch, or link, to light persons in the night.

LINLEY, THOMAS, a distinguished composer and musician, who studied at Bath, and for some years superintended the musical department of Drury Lane Theatre. He set several of Sheridan's operas to music, and was a master in the genuine English school of music. His compositions are hardly known beyond the circle of students and admirers of that school. His sons and daughters all evinced the same predilection for music, and much of the same simple and refined taste. He died in 1795, aged 70 years.

LINLITHGOW, a county of Scotland, lying on the Frith of Forth, and bounded by the counties of Stirling, Edinburgh, and Lanark. It is about 20 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. Its surface is not hilly, but undulating, and is watered by many small streams. It produces coal, limestone, lead, salt, &c., and is tolerably well cultivated. It has also good pastures. There are some manufactures. Its chief town, of the same name, is an ancient, well-built, and regular place. Its palace is its chief ornament. It is 16 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 3872. Pop. of the county, 26,872. It returns one member and a moiety to parliament.

LINNEÆUS, or LINNÉ, CARL VON, the great Swedish naturalist, inventor of the compendious modern nomenclature, and first of the modern systematizers, was son of a poor country clergyman, who being attracted to the study of botany, by his diligence and devotion therein obtained such notice as enabled him to prosecute his studies in the way most agreeable to him. He studied at Lund and Upsal; gained the friendship of the botanical professor of Upsal; was sent on a naturalizing tour into Lapland; and published an account of his journey. After a while he set out on fresh travels, and visited Holland, where he became a doctor of medicine, and stayed for some time as superintendent of Clifort's famous gardens, near Haarlem. He next visited England, and was not greatly edified by it. After a rapid glance at Paris, he returned to Sweden; where he settled as a physician and professor of botany and mineralogy. He now made known his system of botanical classification, and entered on his career of fame. His studies were prosecuted incessantly; and the professorship of Upsal, and the connexion with the newly-formed royal academy, furnished him with fresh opportunities of obtaining information. He did not confine himself to botany, but remodelled the whole system of natural history, and added, by aid of information sent him by travellers in all lands, great numbers to the ascertained and defined species. Nor did he languish for lack of honour, knighthood and nobility were successively bestowed on him; and he acquired a degree of opulence also. He died, after a life of constant labour, in 1778, aged 71 years. The classification of Linnaeus is absorbed in, or ousted from, our herbaria and museums, by systems which are less artificial; yet his name and fame are not the less established. It is a matter of deep regret that his private character should deserve nothing but warm reprobation.

LINNET, s. [linot, Fr.] in Ornithology, a small singing bird, about the size of a sparrow, covered with brownish feathers.

LINSEED, s. [corrupted from linseed,] the seed of flax.

LINSEY-WOOLSEY, a. made of linen and wool mixed together. Figuratively, vile, mean, compounded of different unsuitable parts, mongrel.

LINSTOCK, a. a staff of wood, with a match at the end, used by gunners in firing cannon.

LINT, s. [lintum, Lat.] the soft substance called flax; linen scraped into a soft woolly substance, used by surgeons to lay on wounds.

LINTEL, s. [linteal, Fr.] the upper part of a door-frame, crossing the two upper posts.

LION, s. [Fr. leo, Lat.] in Natural History, the name of a genus of animals allied to the cat, and reckoned the largest and most perfectly developed of that family. It inhabits only the hottest regions of the earth. There is no great difference between the lion of Asia and that of Africa, and the general appearance of both is too well known to need description. The lion is more docile than the tiger, but the tales of its magnanimity are completely apocryphal. It is a remarkable fact, that as by commerce, &c. the haunts of the lion and other native monarchs of the forest and the desert are disturbed, by settlements, roads, &c. &c., these ferocious animals become more scarce, or are more rarely seen. The lion of S. America has no mane, and is commonly called the puma. In Astronomy, a sign in the zodiac, which the sun enters about July 23.

LION-HEARTED, a. of undaunted courage, like a lion.

LIP, s. [lippe, Sax.] the edge or outward part of the mouth; that muscular part which shuts and covers the mouth, both above and below. Figuratively, the edge of any thing. To make a lip, is to hang the lip, in anger and contempt. In Botany, the upper or under division of a gaping blossom.

LIP-LABOUR, s. action of the lips, without concurrence of the mind; words without sentiments.

LIPOTHYMOUS, a. [leipo and thymos, Gr.] fainting.

LIPOTHYMY, s. in Medicine, a sudden diminution or failure of the animal and vital functions; a swoon or fainting fit.

LIPPE, the name of two small German principalities. Lippe-Detmold lies between Prussia, Hanover, Hesse-Cassel, and Schaumburg-Lippe; and a detached portion lies quite in the Prussian territory. It has a ridge of hills, called the Osning, which yield building-stone, and timber. Its rivers are the Weser, the Lippe, and many smaller streams running into them from the Osning. It produces corn, flax, &c. &c., and a good many cattle. It has also some small manufactures. Detmold is its principal place. Pop. under 100,000. Schaumburg-Lippe consists of detached tracts bordered by Hanover, Prussia, Hesse-Cassel, and Lippe-Detmold. It lies on the same hill-range as the other Lippe, and is watered by the feeders of the Weser. Its productions are the same in general; and it has also some coal-mines. Its chief place is Bückeburg. Pop. about 30,000.

LIPPED, a. having lips.

LIPPITUDE, s. [lippus, Lat.] blearedness of the eyes.

LIGATION, s. [liguo, Lat.] the act of melting; capacity of being melted.

LIQUEATE, v. n. [liguo, Lat.] to melt or turn into liquor.

LIQUEFACTION, s. [liquidus and facio, Lat.] the act of melting; the state of a body melted.

LIQUEFIABLE, a. capable of being melted.

TO LIQUEFY, v. a. [liquidus and facio, Lat.] to melt, applied to fire. To dissolve, applied to liquor.

LIQUID, a. [liquo, Lat.] fluid, or giving way to the slightest touch. Soft or clear, applied to sound. In Grammar, capable of blending with other sounds, applied to the consonants l, m, n, and r.

LIQUID, s. a body which has the property of fluidity, or whose particles move freely amongst each other in all directions. Liquid substances are nothing more than solids converted into liquids by heat, a certain increase of which would convert the liquid into vapour.

TO LIQUIDATE, v. a. to clear away or lessen debts. In Commerce, to make bills current and payable.

LIQUIDITY, s. subtlety; thinness.

LIQUIDNESS, s. the quality of having its parts easily put in motion, and adhering to any thing immersed.

LIQUOR, (Skw), s. [Lat.] any thing liquid; generally applied to intoxicating or intoxicating drinks.

TO LIQUOR, v. c. to drench or moisten.

LIQUORICE, s. in Botany and Medicine, a plant cultivated for the sake of the juice of its root, which, when expressed and refined, is used in catarrhs, to remove the hoarseness.

LISBON, the capital of Portugal. The plan of the city is regular; the streets, some of which are more than three miles in length, and the squares, are spacious, and the buildings are elegant. The harbour will contain 1000 sail of ships, which ride in the greatest safety; and the city, being viewed from the southern shore of the river, affords a beautiful prospect, as the buildings gradually rise above each other in the form of an amphitheatre. There are 40 parish churches, and 50 convents of both sexes. The public buildings, for educational and government purposes, are numerous and handsome. There is a considerable trade here, but the manufactures are not of great value. Lisbon is seated on the river Tagus, 9 miles from the mouth of it. Pop. about 300,000. Lat. 38. 42. N. Long. 9. 9. W.

LISLE, DE, a distinguished family of geographers, &c. in France. Claude, the father, published a Universal History, and an Historical Atlas, and died in 1720, aged 76 years. His three sons were all men of distinction. William became royal geographer, and was of great service to history by his numerous maps. He died in 1720, aged 51 years. Louis was a traveller as well as a geographer, and died in 1741. Joseph Nicholas was an astronomer, and held office at St. Petersburg, and at Paris subsequently. He published a History of Astronomy, and died in 1768, aged 80 years.

LISMORE, Waterford, in Munster, Ireland. It stands on the Blackwater, over which is a handsome bridge. The castle and cathedral are noble buildings. It is a bishop's see, in connexion with Cashel, Emly, and Waterford. It is 115 miles from Dublin. Pop. 3007.

LISMORE, one of the Western Islands of Scotland, at the mouth of the bay of Lochlyol, in Argyshire. It is 8 miles long, and 2 broad, and the soil is pretty fertile. It was formerly the residence of the bishops of Argyre. Pop. 1399.

LISNE, s. a cavity; a hollow.

TO LISP, v. n. [lisp, Sax.] to speak with too frequent an application of the tongue to the teeth or palate.

LISP, s. the act of speaking with too frequent application of the tongue to the teeth or palate.

LISPER, s. one who speaks lispingly.

LIST, s. [liste, Fr.] a roll or catalogue.—[lice, Fr.] enclosed ground, in which tilts are run, and combats fought; hence, to enter the lists, is to contend with a person, either with bodily strength, or by disputation and argument.—[licium, Lat.] a stripe on the extremities of cloth; a border.—[lystan, Sax.] desire; willingness; choice.

TO LIST, v. n. [lystan, Sax.] to choose or desire; to be disposed or inclined to.

TO LIST, v. a. to enlist or register; to train and enrol as soldiers or sailors. Also, to hearken to; to listen.

LISTED, a. striped; marked with lines or streaks of different colours.

LISTEL, s. in Architecture, is a small band or kind of rule in the moulding; also, the space between the channelings of pillars.

TO LISTEN, v. n. [hlystan, Sax.] to hearken or give attention to.

LISTENER, s. one who hearkens or attends to what another says.

LITTLER, a. without any inclination or determination to one thing more than another; careless; heedless.

LITTLERLY, ad. without thought or attention.

LITTLERNESS, s. inattention; disregard; want of desire.

LIT, past tense (strong) of the verb to light.

LITANY, s. [litaney, Gr.] a general series of supplications used in public worship with responses.

LITCHFIELD. See LICHFIELD.

LITCHFIELD, a town of Connecticut, United States. It stands on the summit of a hill, and consists chiefly of two streets crossing each other at right angles. It has some handsome buildings. There is a famous law-school, in which many of the principal civilians of the States have been educated. There are several other scattered parishes which belong to this township, which is watered by the head branches of the Shepang and Naugatuck rivers, which afford water-power. It is 320 miles from Washington. Pop. 4038. Seven other places in the States bear this name.

LITERAL, a. [litera, Lat.] according to its primary and most obvious sense, opposed to figurative. Following the letter, or word for word, applied to translations. Consisting of letters.

LITERAL, s. primitive or literal meaning.

LITERALLY, ad. according to the primary and obvious sense of words, opposed to figuratively. With close adherence to the words or sense of an original, applied to translations.

LITERARY, a. respecting letters; regarding learning.

LITERATI, s. [Ital.] the learned. It has no singular.

LITERATURE, s. learning; erudition.

LITHARGE, s. [lithos and arguros, Gr.] lead vitrified either with or without copper.

LITHE, a. [lithe, Sax.] pliant; easily bent.

LITHESS, s. the quality of being pliant or easily bent.

LITHER, a. [from lithe,] soft; pliant; of little or no resistance; bad; sorry; corrupt.

LITHIUM, s. [lithios, Gr.] in Chemistry, a white-coloured metal, closely allied to potassium and sodium.

LITHOGRAPHY, s. [lithos and grapho, Gr.] the art of drawing and writing on a peculiar kind of stone, prepared for the purpose; and of taking impressions from the drawing, by means of printer's ink, with a rolling press. The stone is found in the jurassic formations of Germany, near the Alps, and is a slaty limestone of a cream colour. Slabs of this stone are prepared either with polished or slightly roughened surfaces; and the drawing is made with an ink composed for the purpose. After it is made, it is lithen by the application of an acid solution, which simply keeps it from being affected by water. When used, the stone is wetted with a sponge, and a roller covered with ink passed over it, leaves ink only on the lines of the drawing, which are not wetted. The press subjects the paper laid on the stone, to the passage of a blunt edge over it, and by that means the impression is made. The cheapness and facility of the process are its great recommendations; while, if the stone be finely prepared, and the drawing properly done, a great number of copies may be taken.

LITHOMANCY, s. [lithos and manteia, Gr.] prediction, or the art of foretelling, by stones.

LITHONTRIPTIC, a. [lithos and tribo, Gr.] medicines which have the power of dissolving the stone in the bladder or kidneys.

LITHOTOMIST, s. [lithos and temno, Gr.] a surgeon who extracts the stone by cutting or opening the bladder.

LITHOTOMY, s. the art or practice of cutting for the stone.

LITHOTRITY, s. [lithos and teiro, Gr.] the art or practice of crushing the calculus by certain instruments, in the bladder, so as to supersede the necessity for lithotomy.

LITIGANT, s. [lit, Lat.] one engaged in a law-suit.

LITIGANT, a. engaged in a law-suit.

LITIGATE, v. a. to contest in law.—v. n. to manage a suit; to carry on a cause.

LITIGATION, s. a suit of law.

LITIGIOUS, a. [litigiosus, Fr.] quarrelsome; wrangling; fond of going to law; disputable; controversial.

LITIGIOUSLY, ad. in a quarrelsome manner; in a manner which shows a fondness of law-suits.

LITIGIOUSNESS, s. a wrangling disposition; a fondness for debate or law-suits.

LITMUS, s. a sort of cheap blue paint, which is imported from Holland. It is regarded by chemists as furnishing an excellent test for acids and alkalis.

LITTER, s. [litere, Fr.] a carriage borne by horses, containing a bed; the straw laid under animals or plants. A breed of young, generally applied to those of swine. Any number of things thrown carelessly or confusedly together.

To LITTER, v. a. to bring forth young, applied to swine. To cover with things in a confused and slovenly manner; to supply cattle with straw to lie on.

LITTLE, a. compar. less, superlat. least. [lytel, Sax.] small in quantity, quality, number, dignity, or importance.

LITTLE, s. a small space; a small part or portion; a slight affair; not much; scarce any thing.

LITTLE, ad. in a small degree or quantity; not much.

LITTLENESS, s. smallness of bulk or size; meanness; want of grandeur or dignity.

LITTLETON, ADAM, a learned clergyman of the Anglican Church, who was one of the ejected under the Long Parliament. He was repaid for his martyrdom by a prebend in Westminster Abbey. He lives by means of a Latin Dictionary, which evinces no mean scholarship; and is of use as often giving a genuine idiomatic signification. He died in 1694, aged 67 years.

LITTORAL, a. [litus, Lat.] belonging to the shore.

LITURGY, s. [liturgie, Fr.] a form of prayers used in public worship. The Liturgy of the Anglican Church underwent many alterations from the time of its publication in 1549 to 1662, when the last hand was put to it, under the direction of Charles II. and the Act of Uniformity was passed to secure it, which produced the English St. Bartholomew. The traces of these changes are evident; and the diversity of parties in the pale of the Church, each holding by the Liturgy, is proof positive that the perplexities of untrammelled devotional practice and faith are not cast off by the adoption of such a guide. Before the Liturgy of 1549, there had been five different editions of these works of a like character with it; but less distinct from the Missals of the Roman Church. It ought to be observed, that at the time of the Reformation there were several differing Liturgies in use in the Roman Church, even in the compass of England.

LITUUS, s. [Lat.] in Medals, the staff used by augurs, in shape of a bishop's crosier.

To LIVE, (pronounced with the i short, as in if or gift.) v. n. [lyfan, Sax.] to be in a state of bodily existence and activity; to pass life in any manner with regard to habit, good or ill, happiness or misery; to continue in life. Followed by with, to converse or continue in the same house with another. To be supported; to feed; followed by on.

LIVE, a. (the i pronounced, as in time) quick; having life; active. Buraing, or not extinguished, applied to fire.

LIVELIHOOD, s. (from live and hood.) support of life; maintenance; sufficient to supply the necessities of life.

LIVELY, ad. in a brisk, vigorous, and active manner. With a strong resemblance, applied to description or painting.

LIVELINESS, s. appearance of life; vivacity; activity; sprightliness.

LIVELONG, (livelong) a. tedious; lasting; durable.

LIVELY, a. brisk; vigorous; gay; airy; vivacious; nearly representing life.

LIVER, (liver) s. one who is alive, or continues in life; one who lives in any particular manner with respect to virtue, vice, happiness, or misery. In Anatomy, an organ of great importance in the alimentary system, which secretes the bile. It is large and solid, divided into several flattened lobes, of a dark red colour; and lies on the right side, level with the edge of the ribs. In Chemistry, a combination of mineral substances, which is supposed to have the colour and general appearance of liver, as liver of sulphur, and liver of antimony.

LIVER-COLOUR, s. a dark-red colour.

LIVERGROWN, a. having a great overgrown liver.

LIVERHEMP, s. in Botany, a plant, called also hemp agri-mony, and water-hemp.

LIVERPOOL, or LIVERPOOL, anciently LITHERPOOL, Lancashire. It stands on the Mersey, and by its position, and wealth, has become the second port in the kingdom. It is, on the whole, a very handsome and commodious town; and the public buildings are numerous, and highly ornamental to it. The churches, the municipal edifices, the custom-house, the exchange, the charitable institutions, the markets, and the theatres, seem to have been constructed for the gratification of taste, as well as for their various and peculiar uses. But the docks are the most remarkable feature of the town; and the construction of them has enabled it to take its distinguished position in the commerce of the world. Its inland trade is aided by the rivers Irwell and Weaver, by the canals, and by the railroads, which converge there. It is 206 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 286,487.

LIVERWORT, s. in Botany, a very beautiful flower, called hepatica in Lat., from its resembling the lobes of the liver; also, a genus of the plants called liverworts.

LIVERY, s. [livrer, Fr.] in Law, the act of giving or taking possession; a release from a wardship; the writ by which possession is obtained; the state of being kept at a certain rate; clothes given to servants; any particular dress. To stand at livery, applied to horses, signifies to be kept in a public stable, where they are supplied with food.

LIVERYMAN, s. a servant who wears clothes of a particular colour, which are given him by his master. In London, a citizen who has a liberty of voting for the members that represent the city in parliament, &c., in respect of his belonging to some one of the trades guilds or companies.

LIVES, s. the plural of LIFE.

LIVID, a. [lividus, Lat.] discoloured as with a blow; black and blue.

LIVIDITY, s. [lividitè, Fr.] discoloration caused by a blow; a black and blue colour.

LIVING, s. support; maintenance; livelihood; the benefice of a clergyman.

LIVING, a. in a state of motion or vegetation; alive, or enjoying life.

LIVINGLY, ad. in a living state.

LIVUS, TITUS, PATAVINUS, commonly called Livy; a celebrated Roman historian, of the age of Augustus. Few facts are known respecting his life and career, beyond his enjoyment of the friendship and patronage of the imperial court. He died in 17 A. D., aged 75 years. His history is unfortunately considerably mutilated; out of above 130 books, only 35 are extant; and the epitomes of the others are not entirely complete. It is greatly to be regretted that the chief value of Livy's history is for the student of language. As a history of the most remarkable people in the world's records, it needs to be as cautiously received, even the later and more certain periods, as an unsparing eulogium would be; whilst in the earlier ages, he has recorded every legend that had floated down to his times, with all the gravity properly belonging to the narration of authentic fact alone.

LIVONIA, a province of the Russian empire, lying on the gulf of Riga, in the Baltic, and bounded by the provinces of Esthonia or Reval, Pskov, Vitepsk, and Courland. It is about 250 miles from N. to S. and 150 from E. to W. There are very many lakes of different extent; and the river Dwina, with its tributaries, drains it. The island called Oesel, and some smaller ones near it, in the Baltic, belong to it. The land is so fertile in corn, rye, and barley, that it is called the granary of the North; and it would produce a great deal more, if it were properly cleared and drained. There are plenty of fish, and of wild animals; cattle, and other kinds of live stock, are numerous. Here are a great number of forests, which consist of birch-trees, pines, and oaks; and all the houses of the inhabitants are built with wood. They export vast quantities of flax, hemp, honey, wax, leather, linseed, skins, and pot-ash. Riga is the capital. Pop. about 800,000.

LIVORNO, the proper name of the sea-port of Tuscany, in Italy, commonly called LEGNORI. It stands quite on the coast, and the harbour is formed by means of a mole; there are also docks; but neither are suitable to vessels of any great size. It is rather a handsome town, and it is fortified, but cannot be said to be strong. It is a place of considerable trade, and exports not only the products of the country, but also what has been brought from the Levant and other parts of the Mediterranean. Its chief trade is with England. It is about 50 miles from Florence. Pop. about 80,000. Lat. 43.32. N. Long. 10. 17. E.

LIVRE, s. [Fr.] a French money of account, consisting of 20 sols, each sol containing 12 deniers.

LIXIVIAL, s. [lixivium, Lat.] impregnated with salt; like a lixivium; obtained by calcining vegetables, and mixing their ashes with water; belonging to lye.

LIXIVIATE, LIXIVIOTUS, s. [lixivieus, Fr.] made from burnt vegetables, and extracted by lotion or washing.

LIXIVIATION, s. in Chemistry, the solution of an alkali or a salt in water, or in some other fluid, in order to form a lixivium.

LIXIVIUM, s. [Lat.] lye; water impregnated with salts or ashes; a liquor which has the power of extraction.

LIZARD, s. [lizard, Fr.] in Natural History, a class of small four-footed reptiles, most of which live on land; the most beautiful of which is the bright-green lizard of Jersey, &c.

LIZARD, the most southern promontory of England, which is not above 36 miles from the Land's End in Cornwall, and 12 S. of Helston. From hence the ships usually take their departure, when they are bound to the westward. Lat. 49. 58. N. Long. 5. 12. W.

LIZARDSTONE, s. in Mineralogy, a kind of stone.

LLAMA, s. in Zoology, a species of camel found in S. America. It is used as a beast of burden, its wool is employed as a material for cloth, and its flesh is an article of food.

LLANDILOVAUR, Caernarthenshire, Wales. It has a considerable manufacture of flannel. It is pleasantly situated on an ascent, on the river Towy, over which it has a good stone bridge. About a mile S. W. of it stands Dynevor Castle, on a remarkably fine elevation, with the river Towy beautifully meandering at the bottom. It is 196 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday, and a fair on Wednesday in Whit-sun-week. Pop. 5471.

LLANGOLLEN, Denbighshire, N. Wales. It is seated on the river Dee, over which it has a beautiful bridge of four arches. The scenes in the vicinity of this place are very romantic and sublime, especially in approaching the lofty Brwn Mountains which separate the two counties of Denbigh and Merioneth. It is 184 miles from London. Pop. 4906.

LLANOS, s. [Span.] the name given to certain plains in the neighbourhood of the river Orinoco, in S. America. They occupy an area of about 350,000 miles, and are for the most part covered with luxuriant grass, without any trees. In some parts they are exposed to annual inundations, from their lying so much below the average level of the continent. The jaguar, puma, and most of the tropical wild animals of S. America are found here. A considerable number of Spaniards have long been settled in the upper part of these plains, who possess great herds of horses and cattle, but live in a very barbarous condition.

LLANRWST, Denbighshire, N. Wales. It is seated on the river Conway. Though but a small place, it has a good market-house, a good bridge, and a free-school. It is 222 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 3905.

LL. D. [legum doctor,] an abbreviation, signifying doctor of the civil and canon laws.

LO! interject. look! see! behold!

LOACH, (loch) s. [loche, Fr.] in Ichthyology, a small kind of fresh-water fish, of a graceful form, light coloured, with dark spots. It is not uncommon, and used to be esteemed a great dainty.

LOAD, (lod) s. [lade, Sax.] a burden; a weight, or lading; as much weight as any person or animal can bear. Figuratively, any thing that depresses, applied to the mind.

LOAD, (more properly lode,) s. [lode, Sax.], the leading vein in a mine.

To LOAD, (lod) v. a. to put goods on board a ship, or burden on a man or a beast of carriage. Figuratively, to encumber or embarrass; to make grievous. To charge, applied to a gun or other fire-arms.

LOADER, (loder) s. a person who puts the freight on board a ship, or a burden on a man, beast, or in a carriage.

LOADSMAN, (lidsman) s. [ladan, Sax.] a pilot, or a person that conducts into and out of harbours.

LOADSTAR, (more properly lodestar;) s. [ladan, Sax.] the polestar; so called from its being used as a guide by seamen, before the invention of the compass.

LOADSTONE, (properly lodestone, or lodig-stone;) s. [ladan, Sax. and stone,] the magnet; a peculiar rich iron ore, found in large masses, of a deep iron grey when fresh broken, and often tinged with a brownish or reddish colour; it is very heavy, and is remarkable for its magnetic properties, although it does not possess these in a very eminent degree.

LOAF, (lof) s. plural loaves; [hlaf or laf, Sax.] a mass of bread baked; it is distinguished from a cake by its thickness; any mass into which a body is wrought.

LOAM, (lön) s. [laam, Sax.] a common earth, consisting of clay with a mixture of sand in it; the black earth called mould; a reddish earth used in making bricks; a kind of mortar, made of the best earth, by tempering it with water, straw, &c.

To LOAM, (lön) v. a. to smear with loam, marl, or clay; to cover with clay.

LOAMY, (löny) a. marly, or clayey.

LOAN, (lön) s. [lhen, Sax.] any thing lent; any thing given another on condition of his returning or repaying it at a certain time.

LOANGO, a country of Africa, formerly a part of Congo, but now independent, and lying on the Atlantic, next to the present kingdom of Congo; about 250 miles in length, and 188 in breadth. The climate is nearly as hot as any under the torrid zone, and much hotter than those of Congo and Angola, yet it is healthy and pleasant. The land is very fruitful, and produces millet, peas, and beans, with fruits, greens, roots, herbs, and vegetables; here also grow many kinds of trees, such as palm, banana, &c., of the excellent fruits of which they make agreeable wine, while others afford them materials for clothing, as also for building, covering their houses, making ships, &c. They have but few cattle of any sort, except goats and hogs. Pheasants, partridges, and other wild fowl, are in greater abundance. Their principal trade consists in slaves, elephants' teeth, and iron. The women cultivate the ground, sow, and get in the harvest. There is a great number of towns and villages in this country, of which little is known but their names. The inhabitants are black, and of mild and agreeable manners, but indolent. They are governed by an absolute prince, or chief, who is, in some measure, worshipped as a god by his subjects. The town of Loango, in the centre of which is the royal palace, a great square a mile and a half in compass, is situated on a river, about 6 miles from the Atlantic, in Lat. 4. 40. S. The population is unknown.

LOASA, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, allied to the cucumbers; some of which are cultivated in England. They are not very beautiful, and are thickly set with delicate spines, which produce an irritation far more annoying than that of the nettle's sting, by means of the poison secreted in a gland at the base of each.

LOATH, (loth) a. [lath, Sax.] unwilling; not inclining; averse. To LOATHE, (lothe) v. a. to look on with great disgust or abhorrence; to see food with nausea or squeamishness.

LOATHER, (lother) s. one who considers any thing with abhorrence.

LOATHFUL, (lothful) a. full of abhorrence, or hating; abhorrent or hated.

LOATHINGLY, (lothingly) ad. in a manner that testifies abhorrence or hatred.

LOATHNESS, (lôthness) s. unwillingness; reluctance; dislike.
LOATHISOME, (lôthsome) a. abhorred; detested; causing satiety, disgust, or nausea.

LOATHISOMENESS, s. the quality of raising hatred, disgust, or abhorrence.

LOAVES, (lôez) s. the plural of LOAF.

LOB, s. [lappe, Teut.] a heavy, dull, or stupid person. Lo'b's pound, a prison; the stocks; or a place of confinement.

To LOB, v. a. [from the substantive,] to let fall in a clownish manner.

LOBBY, s. [laube, Teut.] a porch or opening before a room.

LOBE, s. [Fr. lobos, Gr.] a division or distinct part; usually applied to the two parts into which the lungs are divided, and likewise to the tip of the ear. Used in the plural, in Botany, for those divisions of a cut leaf which are rounded at the edges, and stand distant from each other.

LOBO, JEROME, a Portuguese Jesuit, distinguished for his zeal in the Propagandist missions to Abyssinia and India. He was, after his return, made principal of the college of Coimbra, and died in 1678, aged 85 years. He wrote a History of Abyssinia.

LOBSTER, s. [lobster, Sax.] in Zoology, a well-known shell-fish, which when living is purplish-black, but when boiled is red. A cant word for a foot-soldier.

LOBULE, s. a small lobe.

LOCAL, v. a. [loca, Lat.] having the properties of a place; relating to place; being in a particular place; confined or appropriated to any particular place.

LOCALITY, s. existence in place; relation of place or distance.

LOCALLY, ad. with respect to place.

LOCATION, s. situation with respect to place; the act of placing; the state of being placed.

LOCH, (lôk) s. [Scot.] a lake. In Medicine, a composition of a middle consistency between a syrup and a soft electuary, used in diseases of the lungs.

LOCHIA, (lôkia) s. [Gr.] the evacuations consequent on a delivery.

LOCK, s. [loc, Sax.] a kind of bolt, secured by springs or tumblers, and turned by a key, used for the security of doors, drawers, &c.; the part of a gun by which fire is struck; a quantity of hair or wool hanging together; a tuft or small quantity of hay. In a river, a place where the waters are confined by floodgates, to swell and increase the natural depth and force of the stream, in order to render it navigable. An hospital for persons affected with the venereal disease.

To LOCK, v. a. to shut or fasten the door, &c. by turning the key round in a lock. To lock up, to shut up, or confine; to close.—v. n. to become fast by a lock; to unite by mutual insersion.

LOCK, MATTHEW, an English composer and musician of the 17th century, whose productions have received great approbation. He wrote music for the stage; and his compositions in Macbeth, though they are not in keeping with the intention of the great dramatist, have always been highly admired. He was composer to the Chapel Royal, under Charles II., and organist to his queen afterwards. He died in 1677, aged about 45 years.

LOCKE, JOHN, one of the greatest English philosophers and men of letters, lived in the latter half of the 17th century. He studied at Westminster School, and at Oxford; but beyond the leisure for reading and reflection, and the opportunity of becoming acquainted with eminent men, his university course seems to have done little for him. He devoted himself to the study of medicine chiefly; and to that may perhaps be, in no small part, attributed the peculiar character of his philosophy. Entering into public life, his great friend and patron was Lord Shaftesbury, whose fortunes he most intimately shared. He was also acquainted with other noblemen of distinction, who rendered him such aid as they could in the vicissitudes of his after-life. He once held an office under government; and as secretary to an ambassador, and as a valetudinarian, he visited Germany, France, and Holland. On Shaftesbury's fall, he escaped to Holland, and was protected there; and he did not return till after the Revolution of 1688. During the rest of his life he was engaged in his great work on the Human Understanding, and in answering treatises published against it. He also wrote treatises on politics, religious toleration, and religion, and died at the house of his friend Sir Francis Masham, at Oates, in Essex, in 1704, aged 72 years. The influence of Locke's philosophy, and of his political and religious opinions which sprang from it, has been felt wherever the language he wrote has been spoken. Nor has it stopped there; the ideology of the ante-revolutionary philosophy (if it deserve so august a name) was undoubtedly the offspring of his system. His great merit was the distinct and rigid application of the inductive method to the science of mind; and though others had before him used it, he first discarded all other methods, and relied on it alone. It is worthy of being observed also, that in so doing, he practically reconciled the Cartesian method, which was his first study, with the Baconian, by which his scientific inquiries were guided. But he failed in the application of it, through the narrowness of the initiative idea which he assumed; through the perverted use of some words; and through the employment of bare intellectual logic in its development. To him we owe the abuse of the term idea, which has entered so deeply into the texture of common speech, as to be almost hopelessly entangled in it. Admitting no sources of knowledge save sensation and reflection, he at once cut off the possibility of communion with spiritual and eternal truth, and tied man down to the narrow field of actual experience. Hence, for all religious knowledge, man is left to authoritative revelation, and has no test for its truth, save such as apply to any book or law, handed down to him from foregone ages. In all this, or most of it, he was anticipated by Hobbes; but he seems not to have known what were the real opinions of the philosopher of Malmesbury, and certainly not to have copied from him. Locke's opinions were carried out by Paley into the domain of ethics, and Christian evidence; and the use of his grand Essay, as the text book of philosophy, at Cambridge and other seats of learning, joined with the influence of Paley's writings, has made the whole English race to this day a living illustration of his philosophical principles. He is claimed by the Unitarians as belonging to their school; but his religious feeling was too warm for his cold theology; his writings may in some parts represent their views, but he was more spiritual than his own system, and certainly was not of them. It is remarkable that, in his earnest vindication of religious liberty, he never seems to have looked for more than toleration; forgetting that it involved the whole principle on which the right to persecute is based. The son of the old Parliamentarian, the friend of Shaftesbury, the advocate of the Revolution of 1688, the fearless observer and reasoner in opposition to time-honoured philosophers, could not fail to take a very advanced position respecting politics, though even there he was fettered, not by his system alone, but also by the awe which the unconstitutional but splendid reign of Cromwell had struck into the minds of most men, and the dread lest such confusion as ensued on his death should be repeated. Locke, like Cudworth, is a striking sign of the different spirit that animated religious reform after the Puritan revolution, from that which prevailed before it.

LOCKER, s. any thing that is fastened with a lock; a drawer. LOCKET, s. [loquet, Fr.] a small lock; a small case of gold with a lock of hair in it, worn by ladies as an ornament.

LOCKRAM, s. a kind of coarse linen.

LOCKRON, s. in Botany, a kind of ranunculus.

LOCOMOTION, s. [locus and motus, Lat.] the power or action of changing place.

LOCOMOTIVE, a. changing place; having the power of moving from one place to another.—s. a steam engine used for drawing trains of carriages, &c. on a railroad.

LOCUST, s. [locusta, Lat.] in Natural History, an insect somewhat resembling a grasshopper, but considerably larger, and of a brownish green colour, very destructive to vegetables, moving in large flights or companies. In some parts of the East, some kinds are eaten by the natives. In Botany, a tree, with butterfly-shaped blossoms, from whose empalement arises the pointal, which afterwards becomes a hard pod with one capsule, including roundish hard seeds, which are surrounded with a fungous stringy substance.

LOCUTION, s. [loquor, Lat.] the manner of speech used in any country.

LOCUTORY, s. a hall in religious houses, appointed for the meeting of monks, friars, &c. to converse together.

To LODGE, v. a. [logian, Sax. lager, Fr.] to supply with a house to dwell in for a certain time; to afford dwelling, or admit a person to lie or dwell in the same house. Figuratively, to place, fix, or plant.—v. n. to take up residence for a night.

LOGÈE, s. [logis, Fr.] a small house at the entrance of a park or forest; any small house or habitation.

LOGEMENT, s. [logement, Fr.] accumulation, or the act of putting in a certain place. In Fortification, an encampment made by an army; the possession of an enemy's works.

LOGGER, a. one who lives in an apartment hired in the house of another; one that resides any where.

LOGGING, a. rooms hired in the house of another; a place of residence; a place to lie in; harbour or covert.

LOFT, s. [loft, Brit.] a floor; the highest floor in a house; rooms in the highest part of a building.

LOFTILY, ad. on high; in a place at a distance from the ground upward. Figuratively, in a proud, haughty manner; sublimely.

LOFTINESS, a. height or distance from the ground upwards; elevation; sublimity; pride or haughtiness.

LOFTY, (lofty) a. high; at a distance from the ground; situated on high; sublime; elevated; proud; haughty. SYNON. Lofty carries with it an idea of magnificence, which high does not; thus we say, a lofty room, the lofty cedar; but a high house, a high tree.

LOG, s. [logge, Belg.] a shapeless bulky piece of wood. Figuratively, a sluggish, inactive person. In Hebrew measure, five-sixths of a pint. In Navigation, a small piece of timber, of a triangular form, having lead at one end to make it swim upright in the water, and a line fixed to the other with knots at about forty-two feet distance from each other; its use is to keep account, and make an estimate, of a ship's way, by observing the length of line unwound in half a minute's time, the ship sailing the same number of miles in an hour, as the knots which are run out in half a minute.

LOGARITHMS, s. [logos and arithmos, Gr.] in Mathematics, series of numbers constructed for the purpose of facilitating arithmetical computations, by reducing every numerical process to the simple operations of addition and subtraction. This is effected by considering every number to be the power of some root (either a whole number or a fraction) which may be fixed at pleasure, and which in the common logarithmic tables is 10; the exponent of this root is called the logarithm. Thus,  $10^0=1$ ,  $10^1=10$ ,  $10^2=100$ ,  $10^3=1000$ , &c. Here 1, 10, 100, 1000, &c. are numbers, to which the exponents 0, 1, 2, 3, &c. are respectively the logarithms. The logarithms for the intermediate numbers are of course fractions, representing quantities intermediate to these logarithms. For full information respecting these numbers, works on mathematics must be consulted. But it may be added, that the knowledge of the use of them would prove of considerable value to parties engaged in trade and commerce, especially now that a decimal coinage is proposed.

LOGARITHMIC, a. in Mathematics, connected with or relating to logarithms.

LOG-BOOK, a. in Navigation, a book ruled and columned like the log-board. It is used to enter the log-board's account in every day at noon, with the observations then made, and from hence it is corrected and entered into the journals.

LOGGATS, s. the ancient name of a play or game now called kittle-pins.

LOGGERHEAD, s. [logge, Belg. and head.] a person that is stupid, and of slow apprehension; a blockhead. To fall to loggerheads, or go to loggerheads, is to scuffle or fight without weapons.

LOGGERHEADED, a. dull; stupid; slow of understanding.

LOGIC, s. [logos, Gr.] in Mental Science, is the scientific development of the laws of reflection and reasoning. It has to do with language only so far as it is the expression of thought. Customarily, logic is restricted to the development of the processes of the understanding, exercised on what it comprehends, alone. But there is a logic that treats of the operations of the mind on truth that it can only apprehend, which is not to be confounded with syllogistic logic. And there is a logic of the feelings also, which differs widely from both the others. The study of logic, as treated by Aristotle, and by those who have followed him more or less closely, is of great value as an intellectual discipline, apart from any practical employment. But in practice, such subjects as are out of the range of its legitimate and true application, must not be subjected to it; neither must it be regarded as an instrument of discovery, either for fact or truth. Lord Bacon has overthrown the latter abuse of it; but who is to overthrow the former? This logic, inasmuch as it lays down rules for correct and demonstrative reasoning, is also properly regarded as an art. The philosophers of the transcendental school, alone, have devoted themselves to the logic of reason and of feeling.

LOGICAL, a. belonging to or taught in logic; skilled in or furnished with logic.

LOGICALLY, ad. according to logic.

LOGICIAN, (logishian) s. [logicien, Fr.] a professor of logic; a person skilled in logic.

LOGIST, s. [logista, Lat.] one skilled in computations and arithmetic.

LOGISTIC, a. (see LOGIST.) in Arithmetic, applied to the doctrine of sexagesimal fractions, used by astronomers before the invention of logarithms. A curve, so called from its properties and uses in constructing and explaining the nature of logarithms.

LOG-LINE, s. (see LOG.) in Navigation, a small line fastened to a piece of board, and having knots at certain distances, by which a ship's way is reckoned.

LOGOGRAPHY, s. [logos and grapho, Gr.] the art of printing with whole words' instead of single letters, attempted some years ago in this country, but disused, as being more troublesome than the usual mode.

LOGOMACHY, (logomachy) s. [logos and mache, Gr.] a contention about words.

LOGWOOD, s. [loghe, Belg.] in Commerce, a wood of a very dense and firm texture, brought to us in thick and very large blocks or logs, and is the heart of the tree that produces it. It is very heavy, and remarkably hard, and of a deep strong red colour; has been long known to the dyers, who use it in colouring blue and black; and lately has been introduced into medicine, wherein it is found to be astringent.

LOIN, s. [loyn, Brit.] the back of an animal as carved by a butcher. In Anatomy, the lower part of the back.

LOIR ET CHER, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Indre, Cher, Loiret, Eure et Loir, Sarthe, and Indre et Loire. It is about 80 miles long, and 40 broad, and is named from the two principal streams which water it. It is very level, and produces grain of all kinds, fruits, &c. &c., and abundance of excellent wine. Cattle, horses, &c., are also reared in great numbers. It has a few small manufactures, and a few mines of lead and iron. Blois is its capital. Pop. about 250,000.

LOIRE, one of the largest rivers of France, which, rising in the Cevennes, flows in a semicircular course, of above 500 miles in length, receiving the waters of a great number of tributaries, the chief of which are the Allier, the Sarthe, the Loir, &c., and empties itself into the Bay of Biscay.

LOIRE, a department of France, named from its chief river, bounded by the departments of Ardèche, Hante Loire, Puy-de-Dôme, Allier, Saône et Loire, Rhone, and Isère. It is about 80 miles in length, by 40 in breadth. It is very mountainous, and its greatest heights exceed 4000 feet. It is watered by many small streams beside the Loire. Its great wealth is its coal-mines; it also possesses mines of lead and iron, and quarries of building-stone and marble. It has much pasture land, and produces grain, wine, cheese, fowls, &c. &c. It has also valuable timber. Its chief place is Mont-brison. Pop. about 420,000.

LOIRE HAUTE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Puy-de-Dôme, Cantal, Lozère, Ardèche, and Loire. It is about 70 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. It is very mountainous, and some peaks rise more than 5000 feet above the sea. The Loire is its chief river; it has also some of its tributaries flowing through it. Coal, lead, building-stone, &c. are abundantly produced. It also yields grain, wine, cattle, sheep, &c. &c., in considerable abundance. Le Puy is the capital. Pop. about 300,000.

LOIRE INFÉRIEURE, a department of France, lying on the Bay of Biscay, and bounded by the departments of Morbihan, Ille et Vilaine, Mayenne, Maine et Loire, and Vendée. It is about 70 miles in each direction. It is a level district, and the coast is flat and sandy. The Loire is its largest river; the Vilaine also belongs in part to it; other streams flow into these, and water the department. Coal, iron, tin, building-stone, slate, &c., are obtained here. Corn, fruits, wine, &c., are also produced, and great numbers of cattle reared. It has also extensive forests of timber trees. There are some manufactures, and the mouth of the Loire affords a good means of carrying on trade. Nantes is its principal place. Pop. about 480,000.

LOIRET, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Cher, Loir et Cher, Eure et Loir, Seine et Oise, Seine et Marne, Yonne, and Nièvre. It is above 70 miles long, and about 50 broad. Its surface is just varied by some ranges of hills, that are connected with the Cevennes. The Loire is its chief river, and it is watered also by the Loiret, (whence its name), and various streams, some of which flow into the Loire and others into the Seine. It is chiefly agricultural; and having a good soil, produces abundance of grain of all kinds, fruit, flax, &c., with great numbers of cattle, sheep, poultry, &c. It is well wooded, and derives considerable advantage from its timber. In trade and manufactures, though not prominent, it is not poor. Its capital is Orleans. Pop. about 330,000.

To LOITER, v. n. [loteren, Belg.] to linger; to make use of idle and lazy delays.

LOITERER, s. one who passes his time in idleness; one who is sluggish and dilatory.

LOKMAN, surnamed Al-hakim, an Arabic fabulist, of whose history, residence, &c. so little is known, that he is regarded by some to be himself a fable. His fables are well known to others besides Arabic scholars, from the frequent imitations of them.

To LOLL, v. n. to lean in an idle or lazy manner against any thing. To hang out, applied to the tongue of a beast.

LO'LLARDS, in Ecclesiastical History, a soubriquet equivalent to psalm-singers, given to certain dissenters from the Roman Church, who appeared in Germany during the 14th century; and afterwards applied to the followers of Wicliffe in England.

LOMBARD-VENETIAN KINGDOM, a country of N. Italy, belonging to Austria. It borders on the Adriatic Sea, or Gulf of Venice, and reaches from the Alps to the Po; being bounded by Switzerland, the kingdom of Sardinia, Parma, Modena, and the Papal States. It includes some of the loftiest points of the Rhaetian, the Carnic, and the Julian Alps, some of which exceed 12,000 feet in height. The lakes di Garda, Como, Lugano, and Maggiore, are within this kingdom, and its chief rivers are the Po and Adige, with their numerous tributaries, whose smaller streams which flow into the Gulf of Venice, to the north of that city. The soil in the broad level between the foot of the mountains and the Po and the sea, is very rich and productive. But the meadows have to be strongly embanked, as they lie, for the most part, beneath the level of the river. Corn, and especially rice, wine, fruits, cheese, cattle, silk, and hemp, are abundantly produced. Its chief places are Venice, Milan, Mantua, Pavia, Brescia, Bergamo, Crema, Verona, Vicenza, Padua, Treviso, &c. Milan and Venice are the seats of the imperial authority. Pop. about 4,500,000. See the various cities named above.

LOMBO'K, an island lying between the islands of Sumbawa and Bali, in the Indian Archipelago. It is about 50 miles in each direction. One of its mountains exceeds 8000 feet in height. The island is fertile and well peopled, and belongs to the monarch of the island of Bali.

LOMOND, BEN, a great mountain in the N. of Stirlingshire, Scotland, about 3200 feet above the level of the lake, at its bottom. From this lofty mountain are seen Loch Lomond, the Clyde, the Forth, Edinburgh, the eastern coast as far as the Cheviot Fells, the Isle of Bute and Arran, the rock of Ailsa, Ireland, the mountain of Plinlimmon in Wales, and the Skiddaw in Cumberland, and the hills far beyond it.

LOMOND, LOCH, a beautiful and extensive lake of Dumbar-tonshire, which descends from the northern point of that county, expanding as it advances southward. It is 30 miles long; its breadth from 9 miles, decreasing to three quarters of a mile; and, were its windings followed, its circuit would be upwards of 100 miles. There are 33 islands in this lake, several of which are inhabited, and contain antique ruins, concealed among ancient yews. Others rise into high rocky cliffs, amongst which eagles form their eyries.

LONDON, Middlesex, Kent, and Surrey. The metropolis of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland stands on the Thames, which is crossed by eight bridges, and under which a tunnel has been driven; extends from Woolwich and Bow to Fulham and Hammersmith, and from Highgate to Norwood, including the cities of London and Westminster, with their liberties, and the towns, parishes, &c. &c. which cover this vast area. The streets of the city, with the exception of the great thoroughfares, are for the most part narrow and irregular; but the main lines of traffic and communication are wide and noble, as are the more recently built parts of this enormous city. In the outskirts, every year witnesses the erection of new masses of buildings, which unite in their aspect both the town and the country styles; and every year, also, new lines of fine streets are opened, or projected. In the chief resorts of retail trade, the shops are remarkable for their costliness and splendour of architecture and decoration; and some of the streets are models of that class of buildings. The public edifices are innumerable, and for magnificence may vie with those of any city in the world. St. Paul's Cathedral stands pre-eminent amongst these, built by Sir Christopher Wren; which, though it is most disadvantageously situated, being closely surrounded by houses, and is said not to have been the edifice Sir Christopher had hoped to raise, is yet sufficiently imposing in appearance. (For Westminster Abbey, see WESTMINSTER.) Many of the other churches are very noble buildings, but most of them are in by-streets, and scarcely any are built on the Gothic model, which prevails throughout the country; some of them, even, being express imitations of Roman and Grecian temples. Some of the places of worship belonging to other communions are fine structures. Of the government and public buildings, the New Palace of Westminster, the remains of Whitehall, the Horse-guards, Admiralty, and other connected public offices; the Post-Office, the Royal Exchange, the Mansion House, the Custom House, Somerset House, the India House, Lincoln's Inn Buildings, and the Royal Exchange, the Temple and other Inns of Court; the British Museum, the Bank (for the notion of complete security against unauthorized ingress,) the prisons of Newgate, Coldbath-fields, &c.; (for the notion of equal security against unauthorized egress,) the National Gallery, (for the exhibition of no notion at all,) University College, Christ's Hospital, the Theatres, the Colosseum, the Hospitals, the Bazaars, the Railway Termini, deserve special notice and mention. Whilst the club houses of the West End, the companies' halls of the city, and many private residences of the nobility and gentry, and the inns, vie with them in magnificence. The bridges, particularly London, Waterloo, and Hungerford bridges, are very noble structures. The Queen's Palace in St. James's Park, is chiefly noted for the marble arch and splendid bronze gates. The Monument, erected to commemorate the great fire of London, the Nelson and York Columns, the various statues of the Duke of Wellington, Charles I. at Charing Cross, and some others of less note in squares and corners, are the chief public tributes of national regard. Temple Bar, which obstructs the junction of the Strand and Fleet Street, is a relic of the past; as are the Tower, with its armouries and other marvels, sadly curtailed, and London Stone, said to be the central lapis miliaris of Roman Britain. Yet perhaps these are not, though they first meet the eye, the most astonishing features of the British metropolis. The prodigious docks, with their immense bonding-warehouses, the warehouses of the city, towering into the air, and sinking deeply into the earth, convey the notion of wealth and commerce completely stupendous. Vast manufactories of almost all kinds of commodities, which are hardly recognised in the endless crowds of buildings, make London, in this respect, the rival of whole provinces. By means of the river, London ranks as the first port of the kingdom; canals enable it to communicate, for the transit of heavy goods, with all the interior of the country; whilst railways, branching out in every direction, bring the remotest counties into closest proximity with this emporium of the world, for goods of more perishable character or lighter carriage, and for travellers. There are six parks, (including Greenwich Park,) which are open to the public. The squares, which are usually ornamentally planted, are of great advantage to some districts, in regard to health. But the parts of the metropolis inhabited by the poorer classes, are yet the prolific sources of disease; and the retention of Smithfield market and the slaughter-houses in the very heart of London must also be noticed as a heavy drawback on the health, safety, and even morality of the city. For every species of rational and intelligent recreation, London stands pre-eminent; theatres, concert-rooms, museums, lecture-rooms, scientific institutions, ranging from the Royal Society down to the District Mechanics' Institute, &c. &c., offering a wide and unequalled diversity of most instructive amusement. Unhappily, it is equally unavailing for affording all that can pollute, and degrade, and destroy. London is also the centre of the literary world; not only are the chief newspapers, and monthly and quarterly journals, published here, but most books, whose authors hope for any sale, also. Of the numberless charitable and religious institutions it is impossible to make any mention. The city of London is under the control of a corporation, of enormous wealth; whose practical inefficiency, and steadfast resistance of all reformation or change, are matters of painful notoriety. Several regiments of cavalry and infantry are customarily quartered in or near the metropolis; but chiefly for state purposes, and occasions of royal pomp; the guardianship of the streets and the public peace and safety are committed to a numerous and well-appointed body of police. The various fire insurance offices have joined together in the maintenance of establishments placed at intervals throughout the metropolis, where fire-engines, with a complement of efficient men, and a good supply of all that is needful for saving life and property in cases of fire, are kept. The whole of the district is also well lighted with gas, and well supplied with spring water, by various companies. There are also at different points round London, spacious and well laid out cemeteries; matters of serious necessity from the condition of the parish grave-yards; but which belong to proprietaries and shareholders, and so are of no benefit to the poor; and which usually exhibit, in either a painful or ludicrous way, the exclusiveness of those who belong to the established Anglican Church. (For a particular description of some portions of this great metropolis, see under the different names, WESTMINSTER, WOOLWICH, GREENWICH, &c. &c.) Pop., London (within the walls), 54,626; (without the walls), 70,382. Total metropolis, 1,873,676. Lat. 51. 31. N. Long. 0. 6. W.

THE ENVIRONS OF LONDON.

Railway Stations, thus •

LONDON CLAY, in Geology, the lowest group of the tertiary formations in England; so called because it fills up the chalk basin in which London stands. It is found as far N. as the Suffolk coast; and occurs again in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight. The lower parts were formerly called the Plastic Clay; but they are not properly to be separated from the London Clay, as they seem to have been deposits under different circumstances, proceeding at the same time with it. The greater part of this portion is of fresh-water origin, and contains both plants and shells closely resembling those of our present rivers and ponds. The London Clay is a thick blue clay, containing a great variety of well-preserved fossil remains. The greater part of them are of marine origin, except at the island of Sheppey, where fruits resembling those now growing in the vicinity of the Mediterranean Sea, with various other land remains, are very numerous. Large blocks of highly indurated clay, veined with crystals of carbonate of lime, called septaria, are very frequent; they contain fossils which seem to point to the lias beds as their origin. The Bagshot Sand, which is a local bed, which is a close-grained sand-stone, found on Bagshot Heath and some other places, contains a few ichthyolites.

LONDON, NEW, Connecticut, United States. It is a city, port of entry, and semi-capital of the State, and stands on the river Thames, with a harbour esteemed one of the best in the Union. It is built on a declivity, and excepting the most recent erections, is not well or regularly built. It has a light-house, and two forts to protect the harbour, and its trade is very considerable. It is much engaged in the whale fishery. The county courts are held alternately here and at Norwich. It is 353 miles from Washington. Pop. 55,119. There are eight other places in the Union similarly named.

LONDON UNIVERSITY, was formerly the name of the academical institution at London, now called University College; this name was changed when a charter was granted permitting the students of certain colleges, who conformed to certain regulations, wherever they might be situated in the United Kingdom, to be examined for the purpose of bearing certain academical degrees. In this University no difference of religious profession are taken notice of, and therefore there are colleges of every religious denomination, as well as University College, which is also open to all, affiliated to it.

LONDONDERRY, a county of Ulster, Ireland. It lies on the Atlantic, and is bounded by the counties of Antrim, Tyrone, and Donegal. It is about 40 miles long, and 35 broad, and contains four baronies. It is rocky and mountainous, some of its heights exceeding 2000 feet. The Foyle, the Roe, and the Bann are its chief rivers, and it touches on Lough Neagh and Lough Foyle. Slate, limestone, and building-stones are found here. Agriculture is pursued also with some success. But the linen manufacture is the chief source of wealth. Portrush and Coleraine are its chief trading places. Londonderry is its capital. Pop. 222,174. It sends four members to the imperial parliament.

LONDONDERRY, capital of the foregoing county, stands on the river Foyle, not far from the Lough. It is finely situated, and has some noble buildings, the cathedral and Walker's column being particularly deserving of notice. It is a port, and has some trade. The fisheries of the lake are also a source of considerable profit to the town. It is 145 miles from Dublin. Pop. 15,196.

LONG, a. [contracted from alone,] solitary, or without inhabitants; by one's self, or without company.

LONGELINESS, s. want of inhabitants or buildings; want of company.

LONGELY, a. without any inhabitants or buildings; solitary. LONGENESS, s. solitude; a place unfrequented, and void of buildings.

LONGESOME, a. unfrequented; void of company, inhabitants, or buildings; dismal.

LONG, a. [Fr.] with some continuance, applied to time; dilatory. Of great extent in length; reaching to a great distance. In Botany, applied to the calyx of a flower, when it is equal in length to the tube of the blossom.

LONG, ad. to a great length or space. For some time, or a great while, applied to time. In the comparative, longer, it implies a greater space, or more time; and in the superlative, longest, the greatest space, or most time. After not, it implies soon. Followed by ago, at some period of time far distant. All along, or throughout, when followed by a substantive.

LONG, s. [gelang, Sax.] by the fault; by the failure. This word, though much disused, is purely English.

To LONG, v. n. [gelangen, Teut.] to desire earnestly; to wish for with a continued and ardent desire.

LONGANIMITY, (the g pron. hard.) s. [longanimitas, Lat.] a disposition of the mind, which consists in bearing offences with patience.

LONGBOAT, s. the longest boat belonging to a ship.

LONGEVITY, (g pron. soft.) s. [longævus, Lat.] length of life; old age.

LONGFORD, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It is about 25 miles in length, and 24 in its greatest breadth; and is bounded by West Meath, Leitrim, and Cavan. It contains 23 parishes; and is a rich and pleasant country, in general flat, in some places apt to be overflowed by the Shannon, and towards the N. mountainous. A considerable quantity of linen is manufactured in this county, and large quantities of flax are sent to other parts. Grain and cattle are produced abundantly. Longford is its chief town. Pop. 115,491. It sends two members to parliament.

LONGFORD, capital of the foregoing county, is seated on the river Cromlin, or Camlin, which falls into the Shannon a few miles below, and is a handsome place. It is 64 miles from Dublin. Pop. 4966.

LONGIMANOUS, a. [longimanus, Lat.] having long hands, or a long reach.

LONGIMETRY, s. [longimetrie, Fr.] the art or practice of measuring lengths.

LONGING, s. earnest desire; continual wish.

LONGINGLY, LONGLY, (the g pron. hard.) ad. with incessant wishes and ardent desires.

LONGINUS, the celebrated secretary to Zenobia, the queen of Palmyra. After having carefully studied philosophy and rhetoric, he taught at Athens, and there is said to have written the famous Essay on the Sublime. Being invited by Zenobia, he removed to Palmyra, and there enjoyed the favour of the queen till the time of her overthrow by Aurelian, when Longinus was put to death, in 273 A. D. The Essay, which alone of his writings has remained, is highly valued by philosophers and critics.

LONGISH, (the g pron. hard.) a. somewhat long.

LONG ISLAND, an island of the State of New York, lying next to the Atlantic, separated from the continent by Long Island Sound. It is about 140 miles long, and 10 broad, and is hilly on the N. side and centre, but level to the S. The N. side has several light-houses. Pop. 110,406.

LONGITUDE, s. [Fr.] in its primary signification, length. In Astronomy, the distance of a star from the first point of Aries forward. In Geography and Navigation, the distance of any place from a certain fixed spot, reckoned by time, or by the number of meridians between. The longitude is found at sea by means of accurate chronometers, careful observations of the lunar distances, and comparison with the tables of the Nautical Almanack.

LONGITUDINAL, a. [Fr.] measured by the length; lengthwise.

LONGLAND, ROBERT, an old English poet, a contemporary of Chaucer. He is believed to have been a follower of Wicliffe. His writings, called Pierce Ploughman's Vision and Creed, contain severe remarks on the conduct of the priests and friars.

LONGMONTANUS, CHRISTIAN, a Danish astronomer, who, having acquired sufficient skill, chiefly by his own diligence, became assistant to the celebrated Tycho Brahe. He was afterwards mathematical professor at Copenhagen, and died in 1647, aged 85 years. His works are very numerous, and are not confined to astronomy and mathematics.

LONGSOME, a. tedious. Wearisome on account of its length, applied to time.

LONGSUFFERING, a. patient; not easily provoked.

LONGSUFFERING, s. patience under offences; clemency.

LONGWAYS, LONGWISE, ad. in the direction of the length; lengthwise.

LONGWINDED, a. long-breathed; tedious.

LONSDALE. See KIRKEY LONSDALE.

LOO, s. [loosen, Belg.] a game of cards, wherein the knave of clubs is reckoned the highest, and secures success to the person who has it.

LOOBLY, a. awkward; clumsy; clownish.

LOOBY, s. [lobo, Brit.] a clumsy clown.

LOOE, EAST and WEST, Cornwall. These two small fishing towns are separated from each other by a creek or river of the same name, over which is a narrow stone bridge of several arches. The river Looe is navigable for vessels of 100 tons burden. They are 232 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1542.

LOOP, s. [lufan, Sax.] the part of a ship aloft which lies before the chess-trees, as far as the bulkhead of the castle.

To LOOP, v. to bring the ship close to a wind.

To LOOP, v. n. [locan, Sax.] to behold, to see, to view, to direct the eye towards any object; to seem, or carry an air, mien, or appearance. To look after, to attend to; to take care of. To look for, to expect. To look into, to examine; to sift; to inspect closely, or observe narrowly. Used with on, to respect, regard, esteem, consider, view, or think. To look out, to search or seek; to be on the watch.

LOOK, interj. properly the imperative of the verb, and sometimes expressed by look ye; behold; see; look; observe.

LOOK, s. air of the face, or cast of the countenance; the act of looking or seeing; the act of directing the eye towards.

LOOKER, s. a spectator; a beholder. Looker on, an idle or uncontented spectator.

LOOKING-GLASS, s. a plane mirror made of glass, and used by the toilet.

LOOM, s. a frame in which manufactures are woven. Power loom, a loom worked by steam, and so constructed as to require nothing more than to be supplied with the yarn or thread, and to be watched in its working. The greater part of the weaving of this country is now done by power looms.

To LOOM, v. n. [loeman, Sax.] to appear at sea.

LOON, s. a sorry fellow; a scoundrel. In Ornithology, a bird as big as a goose, of a dark colour, dappled with white spots on the neck, back, and wings; each feather marked near the point with two spots; they breed in Farr Island.

LOOP, s. [loopen, Belg.] a thread or twist, &c. doubled in such a manner that a string or lace may be drawn through it.

LOOPED, a. full of holes resembling loops.

LOOPHOLE, s. an aperture in a loop; a hole to give passage. Figuratively, any shift or evasion.

LOOPHOLE, a. full of holes, openings, or void spaces.

To LOOSE, v. a. [lesan, Sax.] to unbind or untie any thing fastened; to free from an obligation; to let go. To relax, applied to the joints.

LOOSE, a. unbound; untied; not restrained, tight, or confined. Wanton, or not restrained by the dictates of modesty. Diffuse, applied to style. Disengaged from any obligation, used with from, and sometimes of. To break loose, to get rid of any restraint by force.

LOOSE, s. liberty; freedom from any constraint; indulgence, used with give.

LOOSELY, ad. in a manner that is not fast or firm, applied to any thing tied. Without any union or connexion. Irregularly, or not restrained by the rules of chastity or virtue.

To LOOSEN, v. a. to undo any thing that is tied; to be made less compact or coherent. To separate or divide; to free from restraint, or set at liberty. To cure of costiveness.

LOOSENESS, s. the state of things which are movable, and deprived of their firmness or fixedness. A disposition of mind, or a conduct, not restrained by any principle of law, charity, morality, or religion, applied to the manners.

LOOSESTRIFE, s. in Botany, a genus of plants of which there are several species; the yellow pimpernel of the woods, and the purple moneywort, belong to this genus.

LOOVER, s. an opening for the smoke to go out at the roof of a house.

To LOP, v. a. to cut off the branches of trees. Figuratively, to cut off a part from any thing.

LOP, s. that which is cut from trees.—[loyp, Scot.] a flea.

LOPE, the old preterite of leap.

LOPPED, part. a. in Botany, appearing as if cut off with a pair of scissors; the leaves of the great bindweed are lopped at the base; the petals of the periwinkle are lopped at the end.

LOPPER, s. one that cuts branches from trees.

LOQUACIOUS, (loquidishious) a. [loquor, Lat.] full of talk; talking to excess; speaking, or vocal; babbling.

LOQUACITY, (loquidity) s. the quality of talking to excess.

LORD, s. [hlaford, Sax.] a person invested with sovereign power over others; a master; a tyrant, or one who exerts his power to the distress of those that are subject to him. A title of honour given to those that are noble either by birth or creation, and invested with the dignity of a baron; by courtesy, it is applied to all sons of a duke or marquiss, the eldest son of an earl, persons in honourable offices, and to one that has a fee, and consequently can claim homage of his tenants. In Scripture, it is peculiarly applied to God, and is a translation of יהוה, when printed thus, LORD, but has the ordinary signification when printed in the common way.

To LORD, v. n. to exercise unbounded authority or power.

To behave like a tyrant, used with over.

LORDING, s. a lord; used in contempt.

LORD-KEEPER, the name of the officer who formerly kept the great seal of England, a trust now committed to the lord chancellor.

LORD-LIEUTENANT, the representative of the sovereign in relation to the militia, &c., appointed by the crown in each of the counties of the kingdom. Also the title of the regal representative in Ireland.

LORDLING, s. a diminutive of lord; a little, diminutive, or contemptible lord.

LORDLINESS, s. dignity; high station. Figuratively, pride or haughtiness.

LORDLY, a. becoming a lord, in a good sense. Proud, haughty, imperious, insolent, in a bad sense. Used adverbially, imperiously, proudly.

LORDS, HOUSE OF, the upper house of parliament, consisting of the peers of England, and the representative peers of Scotland and Ireland, whose consent is requisite before any bill passed through the House of Commons can be presented to the sovereign; and which is the highest judicial court in the realms, from whose decisions there is no appeal.

LORDSHIP, s. dominion; power; seigniority; domain; a title of honour given to a baron; a complimentary address to a judge, and some other persons in office.

LORE, s. [læran, Sax.] a lesson; doctrine, or instruction.

LORETTA, a town of the Papal States, Italy. It stands not far from the coast of the Gulf of Venice, and is a bishop's see, with a handsome and wealthy church. It is famous throughout Catholic Christendom, for a statue of the Virgin Mary, and a house in which it stands, which is affirmed to be the very house in which she lived; which, self-transported, came either in the 13th century. It is 112 miles from Rome. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 43. 27. N. Long. 13. 40. E.

To LORICATE, v. a. [lorica, Lat.] to plate over.

LO'RIMERS, LO'RINERS, s. [lormier, Fr.] bridle-cutters; one of the city companies.

LO'RRIOT, s. in Ornithology, a kind of bird.

LORIS, s. in Zoology, a nimble little animal of the lemur tribe.

To LOSE, (loaz) v. a. preter and passive lost; [loosan, Sax.] to suffer the want of any thing a person was possessed of before; to mislay, or have any thing gone, so as it cannot be found again. Used with the reciprocal pronouns himself, &c., to bewilder; to be embarrassed in an inextricable manner; to possess no longer, opposed to retain; to miss; to be unable to recover, — v. n. to be beaten at any game or contest, opposed to win.

LOSEABLE, (lozable) a. subject to privation.

LOSER, (loizer) s. one that is deprived of any thing he was in possession of, by accident, fraud, gaming, or mislaying; one that sells for less than he buys.

LOSS, s. a diminution of a person's wealth or possessions by fraud, by accident, by mislaying so as not to be able to find again, and by selling for less than prime cost; any detriment sustained; throwing away.

LOST, part. and a. [from lose,] not to be found; not to be perceived.

LOT, s. [hlot, Sax.] a die, or any thing used in determining a chance; a condition or chance, determined by lot; destiny, condition, circumstance, or state, assigned by Providence; a portion or parcel of goods; proportion of taxes. SYNON. Lot supposes distinctions, and a method of decision; we attribute to it a hidden determination, which keeps us in doubt till the instant in which it shows itself. Destiny forms designs, dispositions, and connexions; we attribute to it knowledge, will, and power; its orders are determined and unalterable. Lot decides; Destiny informs.

LOT, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Tarn et Garonne, Aveyron, Cantal, Corrèze, Dordogne, and Lot et Garonne. It is about 65 miles in length, by 50 in breadth. It is moderately hilly, and is watered by the rivers Lot, (whence it is named,) Dordogne, Corrèze, &c. It has coal and iron, but in no great quantities; building and lime-stones are abundant. It produces plenty of corn, wine, fruits, &c. &c., with silk, wool, &c. There are also a few manufactures. Cahors is the chief town. Pop. about 295,000.

LOT ET GARONNE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Lot, Tarn et Garonne, Gers, Landes, Gironde, and Dordogne. It is about 60 miles long, and 50 broad. There are a few hills, but they afford no particular mineral wealth, except lime and useful clays. The Garonne, Lot, and Baise are its chief rivers. Corn, wine, fruits, timber, cattle, &c. &c., are produced in some abundance. There are also some good fisheries on the rivers. It has no very valuable manufactures. Agen is its capital. Pop. about 350,000.

LOTH, a. unwilling; disliking. See LOATH.

LOTHIAN, EAST. See HADDINGTONSHIRE.

LOTHIAN, MID. See EDINBURGHSHIRE.

LOTHIAN, WEST. See LINLITHGOWSHIRE.

LOTION, (lûshon) s. [lotio, Lat.] a medicine compounded of various liquids, and used to wash any part with.

LOTT'RY, s. [lotterie, Fr.] a kind of public game at hazard, set on foot by authority, in order to raise money for the state, consisting of a number of blanks and prizes, which are determined by tickets put in two opposite wheels, and drawn by different persons, one of which contains all the numbers, and the other all the blanks and prizes; a game of chance; sortilege. Lotteries have been given up and declared illegal in England, but they are still continued by some continental states. The Art Union, and some similar institutions, have lately been legalized, although founded on the principle of the lotteries.

LOTUS, s. in Botany, a kind of water-lily, very large and handsome, growing in the Nile; which was a great favourite with the ladies of ancient Egypt, as appears by the frequency of its introduction into paintings.

LOVAGE, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which two are native in Britain, the Scotch sea-parsley, and the Cornwall saxifrage.

LOUD, a. [hlud, Sax.] noisy; striking the drum of the ear with great force; clamorous; turbulent.

LOUDLY, ad. with a great noise; with a great exaltation of voice; in a clamorous or turbulent manner.

LOUDNESS, s. that quality of sound which makes it to be heard at a great distance, and to strike the drum of the ear with great force.

To LOVE, (the o in this word and its derivatives and compounds is pron. short,) v. a. [lyban, Sax.] to regard with great desire and affection; to be pleased with; to be fond of.

LOVE, s. [loef, Sax.] the ardent desire of an object which seems amiable; that affection which is excited at the sight of any object that appears amiable and desirable. It is usually employed to express that affection which can exist only between persons of different sexes, and which is the most refined and elevated of all human passions. When applied to the affection we should have toward our Creator, it is the whole man exerted in one desire. Figuratively, a lover; an object of love. A kind of thin silk, of black colour, used for borders on garments during a person's wearing mourning.

LOVE-APPLE, s. in Botany, a kind of fruit, or large and fleshy seed-vessel, belonging to a plant nearly allied to the deadly nightshade, and commonly cultivated in gardens.

LOVE-KNOT, s. a figure made of many twistings and circulations, to denote the inextricable ardour of a person's affections.

LOVELILY, ad. in such a manner as to excite love.

LOVELINESS, s. qualities of mind or body which excite love.

LOVELY, a. fitted to excite love.

LOVER, s. one who has an ardent affection for one of another sex; a friend; one who likes any thing.

LOVESICK, a. languishing with love.

LOVESOME, a. lovely; so as to excite love.

LOVESUIT, s. courtship, or the addresses of a person to one whom he loves, in order to gain her affection.

LOUGH, s. [Irish,] a lake; a large inland standing water; a long bay, or part of the sea that rises up a great way into the land. See LOCH.

LOUGHBOROUGH, (Lûfloro) Leicestershire. It has a considerable manufacture of stockings, and a very extensive business in the coal trade, produced by the new canals. It is pleasantly seated among fertile meadows, on the river Soar, which runs here almost parallel with the Fosse, near the forest of Charnwood. It is 110 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 10,170.

LOVING, part. kind; affectionate; expressing kindness and affection.

LOVINGKINDNESS, s. tenderness; favour.

LOVINGLY, ad. in a manner that shows great love, kindness, and affection.

LOUIS, the name of 18 sovereigns of France. The first of whom was the son of Charlemagne, and was surnamed le Debonnaire; who, by his easy disposition, lost the greater part of his patrimonial possessions, although he committed great acts of injustice and cruelty for the purpose of preserving them. He died in 840, having reigned in all 27 years. The ninth was called St. Louis, from the good-will he always showed to the clergy, and the zeal with which he obeyed their suggestions. The greatest acts of his life were his crusades, the first of which ended in his being captured near Damietta, in Egypt; and the second, in his death near Tunis, in 1270, after a reign of 44 years. The eleventh was the crafty, superstitious, and cowardly monarch, whose wars with Charles of Burgundy, and whose dealings with our Edward IV., are so well known. He was the first who ventured to trifle with knightly honour by employing the basest menials as his ambassadors to the highest powers he treated with; and he first wore the epithet, afterwards characteristic of the French kings, — of Most Christian Majesty. He died in 1483, having reigned 22 years. The twelfth was notorious for his wars and intrigues in Italy; in which, by the duplicity of the pontiff and Italian princes, the superior valour and numbers of the Spanish troops, he was completely worsted. He allied himself in his old age, by marriage, to Henry VIII. of England, and soon after died, in 1515, after a reign of 17 years. The fourteenth, called Louis the Great, who was a child when he succeeded to the throne, was by far the most notable of all the French kings of the Capetian dynasty. Cardinal Mazarin was minister during his minority; and it was then that, owing to the intrigues of Cardinal De Retz, the civil war, called the Fronde, took place. After many vicissitudes, and sanguinary struggles, Mazarin triumphed, and all who had opposed him were humbled and punished. At the same time a war with Spain was vigorously carried on, which was ended by the peace of the Pyrenees. During the king's minority also happened the protectorate of Cromwell, and in the transactions with France arising out of the emigration of Charles and his nobles, and the persecution of the Protestants of the Alps, he showed that he was more powerful than the minister of France, though he was then at the height of his influence in Europe. It was then, too, that the young king crushed the constitutional power of the parliament of Paris, by a most daring violation of its privileges, which none ventured to condemn. After Louis came of age, and had lost his faithful minister Cardinal Mazarin by death, he entered on a career of war that embroiled all Europe; during which, immense treasure was squandered, and atrocities unheard of in modern and civilized warfare committed, which almost made the dreadful sacrifice of human life forgotten. His first war was chiefly against the Netherlands, and lasted till the peace of Nimeguen. His second was principally directed against the empire and Holland, and was ended by the peace of Ryswick. The last was the war of the Spanish Succession, and was waged in Italy, Germany, and Spain; it ended in the treaty of Utrecht, as far as regarded most of his opponents, and that of Rastadt with Germany. It was during these wars that Turenne, Condé, Luxembourg, Villars, and others gained their great fame as generals on the French side; and on the other sides, William of Orange, Prince Eugene, and the Duke of Marlborough. Colbert was the greatest minister Louis had; his administration and life has already been noticed. (See COLBERT.) The revocation of the Edict of Nantes was one of the most unwise and evil acts of this long reign. The results of it being not only cruel in the extreme to the Protestants against whom it was directed, but most prejudicial to France, since it drove to other countries great numbers of her most industrious and valuable citizens. It was this king who invented that well-known and commendous confession of political faith for the benefit of absolute monarchs:—"The state, it is I." Louis died in 1715, after a reign of 72 years. The sixteenth was one of the most infamously immoral kings that ever lived. The abominations of the absolute monarchy of France reached in him their culminating point, and all things betokened a speedy visitation of judgment. He carried on various wars on the continent, with the empire and with England; and in America, with England, also. The end of all was the peace of Paris, which was sufficiently humbling to France. Louis died in 1774, having occupied the throne, in name and in reality, for 59 years. The sixteenth was a well-disposed, virtuous, but vacillating monarch, on whom fell the whole burden of evil and woe that had been slowly heaping up for centuries. During the first years of his reign, he effected some useful reforms, and projected others; he also encouraged and aided the United States of America in their War of Independence. This mania for political liberty, joined with a wide-spread disaffection towards religion, arising from the conduct of the ecclesiastics, and the prevalence of a shallow, sensual philosophy, was aided in its operation by the desperate condition of the finances of the kingdom. Minister after minister attempted to conceal and to make up the deficit; but only one tangible source of income was available,—the taxation of the privileged classes; and this caused the outbreak against the court. Meanwhile the people, especially of Paris, sympathizing deeply with the anti-royalist proceedings of the parlement, and feeling most keenly the pressure of the times, encouraged every advance towards the much talked of liberty. At length the convocation of the states-general was proposed and resolved on; and after much debate the form given to the assembly was such as to bring king, nobles, and clergy at the feet of the middle class. Whilst step after step was being taken in this assembly, all tending to the overthrow and dissolution of the existing system; hunger and fear of massacre, from the numbers of foreign regiments introduced into Paris, roused the people, and the Bastille was taken. The Revolution then began. During all the subsequent part of his career, the hapless king was swayed to and fro, by hope and fear, by consideration of his dignity, by his natural amiability and concern for the poor people, by dread of the popular leaders, and by the insane and imbecile violence of the hangers-on of the court, by the aspect of events at home, and by messages from the emigrant nobles who had fled the kingdom, with the monstrous and treasonable intent of making war on France, and so extinguishing the Revolution. By a most revolting and humiliating proceeding on the part of the women, and mob, and national guards of Paris, he was brought from Versailles to the metropolis. He accepted and ratified the revolutionized constitution. He shared in a solemn farce called the Festival of Confederation, to celebrate the establishment of constitutional liberty in the nation. He attempted to exercise the power given him by the laws; he was subjected to the degrading insult of having his palace broken into and possessed by a mob, without the shadow of redress. He attempted flight, but with his usual indecision and un readiness, and was brought back a self-deposed king, in a most distressingly disgraceful manner. He was at length, by a popular insurrection, driven from the name of royalty, and imprisoned at the will of the Convention, assembled from the whole country. After the mockery of a trial, he was condemned and guillotined in 1793, having reigned 19 years, aged 39. His unhappy and noble queen suffered shortly after him. The eighteenth, was placed on the throne by the battle of Waterloo; and, with the exception of a war with Spain, had no greater difficulties than those arising from the state of the country, and the execution of the Charter. He, doubtless, prepared the way for the three days of July, 1830, by his inability to conform to the condition of the nation, which was so different from what it had been when he was in the court of his brother Louis XVI. He died in 1824, having reigned in all about 10 years.

LOUISBURGH, the capital of the island of Cape Breton, in N. America. It has an excellent harbour, about 6 miles in length, and more than half a mile in breadth. The fishery is its chief support, the cod being remarkably plentiful here, and, at the same time, better than any in Newfoundland; and, in general, is continued from April to the close of December, when the harbour becomes impracticable, being entirely frozen, so as to be walked over. The town is about half an English mile in length, and 2 in circuit, built for the most part of stone, and laid out in broad and regular streets. At a little distance from the fort, or citadel, is a large parade, the inside of which is a fine square near 200 feet every way. Lat. 45. 54. N. Long. 59. 54. W.

LOUIS D'OR, (loo-see-d'ore) s. [Fr.] a golden coin in France, valued at 20 shillings, or 24 livres. It is sometimes, though improperly, spelt Lewis d'or.

LOUISIANA, one of the United States of N. America, lying on the Gulf of Mexico, and bounded by the States of Texas, Mississippi, and Arkansas. It is 240 miles long, and 210 broad; and is divided into 38 parishes. It is in general a very level country, watered by the Mississippi, the Red River, the Washita, &c. The neighbourhood of these great streams is swampy, and liable to extensive inundations. Its staple productions are sugar, cotton, and rice. The forests also supply valuable timber. The manufactures are at present of no great account. New Orleans, which is its capital, is also its chief seat of trade, which is very considerable, embracing most of what passes along the great rivers connected with the Mississippi. There are 47 banks and 5 colleges in this State. The railroads and canals are extensive, and of great utility. Pop. 352,411, of whom 168,452 are slaves.

LOUISVILLE, the capital of Kentucky, United States. It stands on the Ohio, and is regularly laid out and well built, with a delightful prospect towards the river. It has many handsome public buildings, and is the seat of a very active trade, as well as of the chief manufactures of the district. It is a port of entry; and to obviate the hindrance to navigation occasioned by the rapids in this river, a canal has been constructed of sufficient capacity to admit the largest boats. There are some well-supplied institutions for educational and charitable purposes. It is 596 miles from Washington. Pop. 28,643.

To LOUNGE, v. n. [lunzieren, Belg.] to loiter; to live in an idle and lazy manner.

LOUNGER, s. an idler.

LOUSE, s. plural lice; [lus, Sax.] in Entomology, a small parasitical insect, which lives on the bodies of men or animals.

This name is likewise applied to animals that are supposed to resemble the former; hence we make use of the words book-lice, wood-lice, &c.

LOU/SEWORT, s. in Botany, the name of a plant; called also loutie and cockscomb.

LOU/SILY, (loosely) ad. in a paltry, mean, base, and scurvy manner.

LOU/SINESS, (looseness) s. the quality of abounding in lice.

LOU/SY, (loosely) a. swarming or overrun with lice. Figuratively, mean; low born or bred; poor.

LOUT, s. [loete, old Dutch,] a pumpkin; a mean, awkward, stupid, and clownish fellow.

To LOUT, v. n. [lutan, Sax.] to bend the body by way of obeisance; to make a bow.

LOUTH, Lincolnshire. It contains many handsome houses, and has a large church, with a fine steeple which is nearly 300 feet high. It is situated on the river Lud, from whence it takes its name. It is 148 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 8935.

LOUTH, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It is about 27 miles in length, and from 12 to 18 in breadth; lying on the Irish Sea, and bounded by Monaghan, Meath, Armagh, and separated from Down by Carlingford Bay. It is the smallest county in the kingdom, but very fertile and pleasant, and contains 61 parishes. It has some hills of considerable height, parts of them being nearly 2000 feet above the level of the sea. The manufacture of linen is the chief source of wealth. Dundalk is its capital. Pop. 111,979. It sends 3 members to parliament.

LOUTISH, a. clownish; awkward.

LOUTISHLY, ad. after the manner of a clown, or an awkward, ill-bred person.

LOUVAIN, or LOEVEN, a large city of S. Brabant, with a celebrated university. The walls of this place are near 7 miles in circumference, but within them are a great many gardens and vineyards. The public buildings are magnificent, and the university consists of 60 small colleges, much admired for their situation and architecture, but not sumptuous. They formerly made large quantities of cloth here, but at present their trade is generally decayed, and the place is chiefly remarkable for its good beer, to which it serves the neighbouring towns. Its castle is now in ruins. It is seated on the river Dyle, and is 14 miles from Brussels. Pop. about 30,000.

LOW, (low) a. [lagur, Isl.] applied to situation, implies comparison, and being nearer to the earth than something else; in this sense it is opposed to high. Applied to stature, measuring little, and opposed to tall. Applied to station or condition, mean, or not above the vulgar. Applied to price, not sold or purchased for much money; cheap. Applied to the mind, depressed or dejected. Applied to sound, scarce audible. Applied to style or sentiment, mean, grovelling, vulgar, base, or dishonourable. In Medicine, reduced by abstinence. Low in the world, implies, reduced, or in poor circumstances.

LOW, (low) ad. not high, applied to situation. Cheap, or of low price, applied to value. Mean or base, applied to rank, circumstances, thoughts, or expressions. Applied to the voice, in such a manner as scarcely to be heard. In Chronology, applied to times approaching to our own.

To LOW, (low) v. n. [hloucan, Sax.] to bellow, or make a noise, applied to that made by oxen, bulls, or cows.

LOW/BELL, s. [lowe, Scot. and bell,] a kind of fowling in the night, in which the birds are wakened by a bell, and lured by a flame into a net.

LOW COUNTRIES. See NETHERLANDS.

LOWE, s. [from Sax. leaw, or leaw, Goth.] a hill, heap, tomb, or barrow, and is used in the names of places.

LOWELL, a city of Massachusetts, United States. It stands at the junction of the Concord river with the Merrimac, and has a very extensive and easily available water-power, which is employed by means of canals, which are so constructed as to distribute the water to all the mills and manufactories, and afterwards to discharge it into one of the rivers. There are 11 incorporated manufacturing companies here, who work 32 mills. And there are also print-works and dye-houses belonging to these companies. Beside these, which produce sheetings, flannels, drillings, prints, shirtings, negro-cloth, carpets, rugs, broad-cloths, water-proof woollens, and cassimeres, there are mills and manufactories owned by individuals; a fine bleachery; a manufacture of milled blankets, and extensive powder-mills. New companies and manufactories are continually springing up, and much water-power is yet unimproved. This "Manchester of the United States," is distinguished from its English prototype most honourably. The wages are good, and a very considerable portion of them is deposited in the savings' institution. It has some fine literary and educational institutions, the Lyceum, the Lowell Institute, the Mechanics' Association, 29 public free-schools, and 6 grammar-schools. Seven newspapers are maintained, and a magazine called the Lowell Offering, supplied with original articles, chiefly by the girls who work in the factories. The character of the persons employed is such as to prove that there is no necessary tendency in such work to depress the intellect, or corrupt the morals; and this may be chiefly attributed to the fact, that it is not regarded, as in this country, as employment fit only for the poorest and the vilest. Three railroads and a canal communicate with Lowell. There are 2 banks beside the savings' bank. And the company that own the water-power have a very noble manufactory for all the needful machinery. It is 444 miles from Washington. Pop. 20,796. All this vast town has sprung up in about 20 years. A place in Ohio bears this name also.

To LOWER, (lœr) v. a. to humble; to bring down; to bring lower; to strike a flag by way of submission; to lessen the value or price of a thing; to make weaker by the addition of some weaker liquor. Figuratively, to depress or lessen a person's pride, — v. n. to sink; to fall; to grow less. SYNON. We make use of the word lower, with respect to the diminishing the height of things, or to certain motions of a body: We lower a beam; we lower the sails of a ship; we lower a building; we lower the eyes, the head, &c. — We use the expression let down, with regard to things made to cover others, and which, being lifted up, leave them uncovered: We let down the lid of a trunk; we let down the eye-lids; &c.

To LOWER, or To LOU, v. n. to appear dark or gloomy. To be clouded or stormy, applied to the sky. To frown, or look sullen and angry, applied to the countenance.

LOWERINGLY, ad. with cloudiness, or storminess, applied to the sky. With appearance of sullenness, or anger, applied to the countenance.

LOWERMOST, (lœrmost) a. [the superlative of low, which is thus compared, low, lower, lowernmost,] below all others in place, circumstances, or rank.

LOWESTOFFE, LOWESTOFT, or LE'STOFF, Suffolk. It is a neat town, standing on the most easterly point of England, near the ancient embouchure of the river Waveney, which has recently been re-opened. Very extensive works have made this seaport and its harbour as complete and secure as can be desired; and the railroad communicating with the interior, extends almost to the extremity of the pier. It has an improving trade; and is a considerable fishing town. It is 114 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 4674.

LOWLAND, (lôland) s. a vale, or plain; opposed to an eminence.

LOWLINESS, (lôliness) s. a disposition of mind wherein a person thinks humbly of himself; meanness; want of dignity.

LOWLY, (lôly) ad. in a humble manner; meanly; or without dignity.

LOWLY, (lôly) a. humble; thinking modestly of oneself; of low rank; mean; wanting dignity.

LOWN, (loon) s. [loen, Belg.] a rascal or scoundrel.

LOWNESS, (lôness) s. the quality of being near the ground, applied to situation; of short measure, applied to stature. Meanness, applied to condition; want of rank or dignity. Want of loftiness or sublimity, applied to thoughts or style. Dejection or depression, applied to the mind.

LOWSPIRITED, (lô-spirited) a. dejected; depressed; without vigour or vivacity; dull, melancholy, gloomy.

To LOWT, (ow pronounced as in now) v. n. to look sourly, sulkily, or clownishly.

LOWTH, WILLIAM, a divine of the Church of England, who was eminent for his scholarship in his day; but is known now chiefly by his Commentary on the four greater Prophets, which forms part of Patrick's Commentary on the Bible. He died in 1732, aged 71 years.

LOWTH, ROBERT, a bishop of the English Church, son of the preceding, and eminent as a biblical critic. He was professor of poetry at Oxford. His most valuable work is on the Poetry of the Hebrews, which is written in very elegant Latin, and is generally known by means of a translation by Dr. Gregory. He also published a new translation of Isaiah with a commentary, which is a good illustration of the laws of Hebrew poetry, and a very elegant work; but his conjectural emendations of the text were so many, and made on no well-grounded principles of criticism, and his version is therefore of no critical value. He died in 1787, aged 77 years. His controversy with Warburton was equally unworthy of his taste and his erudition, and is happily almost forgotten.

LOXODROMIC, s. [loxos and dromos, Gr.] in Navigation, the art of oblique sailing by the rhumb, which always makes an equal angle with every meridian; that is, when you sail neither directly under the equator, nor under one and the same meridian, but across them: hence the table of rhumbs, or the transverse table of miles, with the tables of longitudes and latitudes, by which the sailor may practically find his course, distance, latitude, or longitude, is called loxodromic.

LOYAL, s. [Fr.] obedient or true to the duty owing to a prince. Figuratively, faithful in love, or true to a lover.

LOYALIST, s. one who professes an inviolable adherence to a king.

LOYALLY, ad. with inviolable adherence and fidelity to a king.

LOYALTY, s. [loyauté, Fr.] firm and inviolable adherence to a prince. Figuratively, fidelity, or immovable attachment to a lover.

LOYOLA. See IGNATIUS LOYOLA.

LOZENGE, s. [lozenge, Fr.] a figure consisting of four equal or parallel sides, two of whose angles are acute, and the other two obtuse, the distance between the two obtuse ones being equal to the length of one side. In Heraldry, a rhomb, or figure of four equal sides, but unequal angles, resembling a diamond on cards; in this all unmarried gentlewomen and widows bear their arms. In Medicine, and Confectionery, a preparation of any drug, &c. with sugar, made in small flat pieces, cut in any form, and baked hard, which is held in the mouth till it is dissolved.

LOZÈRE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Aveyron, Cantal, Haute Loire, Ardèche, and Gard. It is nearly 70 miles in length, and about 50 in breadth. It is very mountainous, being crossed by the range of the Cévennes, one height of which gives it its name, and some of whose peaks exceed 5000 feet in elevation. It is watered by many streams, which are feeders to the Rhone, the Loire, and the Garonne. It yields several metals, but not very abundantly, and building-stone. It produces excellent timber in its extensive forests, and a little grain, fruit, &c. It is rich in cattle, sheep, &c., having very good pasturage. It has some manufactures also, but none of great worth. Mende is its chief town. Pop. about 150,000.

L.P. a contraction for lordship.

LUBBARD, s. [from lubber,] a lazy, sturdy fellow.

LUBBER, s. [lubber, Dan.] a sturdy drone; an idle, fat, or bulky person.

LUBBERLY, a. lazy and bulky.

LUBBERLY, ad. in an awkward, lazy, and clumsy manner.

LÜBECK, a free imperial city of Germany, which was long the head of the famous Hanseatic League. Its territory lies on the Baltic, and is surrounded by Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Lauenburg, Oldenburg, and Holstein. It is about 12 miles in extent each way. The houses of Lübeck are built all of stone, in a very ancient style of architecture, and the streets are, for the most part, steep, as the city stands on the two sides of a long hill, the eastern part extending towards the Wackenitz, as the western does towards the Trave. Here are 4 parochial churches, besides the cathedral. The town-house is a superb structure, and has several towers; in it is the hall, where the deputies of the Hans towns used formerly to meet. Here is also a fine exchange, and some excellent hospitals. In the churches are some very fine paintings by the great masters. Its trade is very considerable, and it has some manufactures. Lübeck is seated at the confluence of the rivers Trave, (which is the largest,) Stecknitz, (another navigable stream, by which it communicates with the Elbe,) and Wackenitz, which issues from the lake of Ratzburg, and, after joining the Schwartau, falls into the Baltic; by means of which several streams, long and flat-bottomed vessels pass from the Baltic into the German Ocean. It is 36 miles from Hamburg. Travemünde is the port of Lübeck, and is 12 miles from it, on the Baltic. Pop. about 50,000 for the territory; 30,000 for the city. Lat. 53. 52. N. Long. 10. 44. E. A principality belonging to the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg bears this name also.

LUBRIC, a. [lubricus, Lat.] slippery, or so smooth of surface that things would slip off with the least sloping; wanton.

To LUBRICATE, LUBRICATE, v. a. [lubricus, Lat.] to make smooth or slippery.

LUBRICITY, s. [lubricité, Fr.] slipperiness or smoothness of surface; aptness to glide over any part, or to facilitate motion. Figuratively, uncertainty; slipperiness; instability; wantonness; lewdness.

LUBRICIOUS, a. slippery; smooth; uncertain.

LUBRICATION, LUBRICATION, s. [lubricus and facio, Lat.] the act of making smooth or slippery.

LUCAN, or LUCANUS, M. ANNEUS, a Roman poet of the reign of Nero, and nephew of the philosopher Seneca. He competed with the emperor in public as a poet, and for his bad taste was prohibited from publishing any more verses, which war, was gallant a sentence that he conspired against the emperor, was detected, and put to death in 65 A. D., aged about 27 years. The only one of his compositions extant is that called Pharsalia, which relates part of the war between Caesar and Pompeius. It is written with considerable skill, and has found many admirers, but it is too artificial to be ranked with genuine poems.

LUCCA, a duchy of Italy, lying on the Mediterranean, and bounded by Tuscany, Modena, and Carrara. It is about 25 miles long by 20 broad. It includes the S. W. slope of the Apennines, whose height here varies from 4000 to 6000 feet. The Serchio is its principal river. It produces iron, copper, &c.; marble, building-stone, timber, fruit, oil, silk, &c. &c. It is a very busy country for manufactures, and its people are ingenious and industrious. Lucina, the capital, is a fortified city, standing near the Serchio, and is altogether a handsome place. Its chief public buildings are its cathedral, and other churches, the palace, and government buildings. Pop. about 25,000. Pop. of the state, about 100,000. The political relations of this state were rendered very perplexed by the congress of Vienna, and are much more perplexed by the recent movements in Italy. Lat. 43. 49. N. Long. 10. 38. E.

LUCENT, part. [lucens, from luz, Lat.] bright; shining; darting rays.

LUCERNE, one of the cantons of Switzerland, and the most considerable of them except Zurich and Bern. It is bounded by the cantons of Zug, Schweiz, Aargau, Unterwalden, and Bern. It is about 30 miles in length, and 20 in its mean breadth. The southern parts are mountainous, but without glaciers. Mont Pilate is nearly 7000 feet high. It has several streams, as the Aar, the Suhren, &c.; and one or two lakes, of no great extent. Its soil is fertile, and produces corn, fruit, &c. Many cattle are reared, and much cheese exported. The sovereign power of this republic resides in the council of 100, comprising the senate, or little council. The former is the nominal sovereign; but the power resides in the latter. Although the government appears purely aristocratic, yet this aristocracy is restrained in divers respects; as in the matter of making war or peace, concluding new alliances, acquiring new territories, or imposing new taxes, the consent of all the citizens must be obtained. The chiefs of the republic are two magistrates called advoyers. It is entirely Catholic, and it has some educational institutions of value. Lucerne, its capital, stands near the Waldstatten Lake, on the river Reuss: it has a beautiful situation, but has nothing in its appearance to recommend it. Over the river are 3 remarkable bridges, built of wood, and each forming a covered road. Near this town, carved in the living rock, is the monument of the Swiss guards, massacred at the storm of the Tuilleries, during the French Revolution. Pop. about 10,000. Pop. of the canton, about 130,000.

LUCERNE, s. in Farming, a plant cultivated in the manner of clover, and is the only plant whose hay is preferable to the sainfoin, for the fattening of cattle.

LUCIA, ST., or ALOUSTE, an island of the West Indies, about 27 miles in length, and 12 in breadth, lying between Martinique, St. Vincent, and Barbadoes. It exhibits a variety of hills, yet partly consists of very fertile plains, finely watered with rivulets, and well furnished with timber. It is provided with several good bays and commodious harbours, the chief of which, called Little Carenage, is reckoned the best in all the Caribbee Islands. In it are two remarkably round and high mountains, once volcanoes, by which this island may be known at a considerable distance. It yields sugar, cocoa, coffee, &c.: and it belongs to the English. Castries is its own town. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 13. 27. N. Long. 60. 30. W.

LUCIAN, an elegant Greek writer of the 2nd century after the Christian era. He was first a sculptor, afterwards an advocate, and finally a teacher of rhetoric in the Gallic province. After having retired from this employment, he was made procurator of Egypt by Commodus, and there he died at a very advanced age. His works are chiefly in the form of dialogues, and are remarkable for their wit. He is a most severe satirist, and has held up the various forms of paganism and the various schools of philosophy of the day to ridicule. He also attacked the Christian religion in the same way, and wrote many pieces of a grossly obscene character.

LUCID, a. [lucidus, from lux, Lat.] shining; bright; glittering. Figuratively, transparent. Without any disorder of the mind, applied to those intervals of sense which are sometimes met with in mad persons.

LUCIDITY, s. splendour; brightness.

LUCIFER, s. [Lat.] in Poetry, the morning star, whether Venus or Jupiter.

LUCIFEROUS, a. [lux and fero, Lat.] bringing light either to the eye or mind.

LUCIFIC, a. [lux and facio, Lat.] making or producing light.

LUCILIUS, CAIUS, a Roman satirist of the 2nd century B.C. He was present at the siege of Numantia, and he died in about 100 B.C. Few lines of his satires remain, but he is referred to by Horace, Juvenal, and others, with great praise.

LUCK, s. [geluck, Belg.] anything which happens unexpectedly in a person's favour; fortune, either good or bad; any event that happens without being designed or foreseen.

LUCKILY, ad. in a fortunate manner; by good hap.

LUCKINESS, s. the quality of turning out to a person's advantage, though undesigned or unforeseen by himself; casual happiness.

LUCKLESS, a. unfortunate, or unhappy.

LUCKNOW, an ancient city of Hindustan, capital of Oude. It is an extensive place, but poorly built; the houses are chiefly of mud, covered with thatch, and many consist entirely of thatch and bamboo; and are thatched with leaves of the coconut, palm-tree, and sometimes with straw. The houses of the merchants are of brick, lofty and strong, and there are some, but not many, magnificent edifices. Lucknow is 650 miles from Calcutta. Pop. about 300,000. Lat. 26. 24. N. Long. 80. 55. E.

LUCKY, a. [geluckig, Belg.] fortunate without any design, or contrary to expectation.

LUCRATIVE, a. [lucratus, Fr. lucrum, Lat.] gainful; profitable; bringing money.

LUCRE, (lucro), s. [lucrum, Lat.] gain; emolument; profit; increase of money.

LUCRETIVUS, TITUS, CARUS, a very celebrated Roman philosophical poet; whose great poem, On the nature of things, is a detailed exhibition of the system of Epicurus. He died in 52 B.C.

LUCRIFEROUS, a. [lucrum and fero, Lat.] profitable; producing gain.

LUCRIFIC, a. [lucrum and facio, Lat.] producing gain.

LUCROUS, a. producing gain or profit.

LUCRATION, s. [luctor, Lat.] wrestling; striving; struggling.

LUCUBROUS, a. [lucubro, Lat.] sorrowful.

LUCUBRATE, v. a. [lucubro, from lux, Lat.] to watch or study by night.

LUCUBRATION, s. study by candle-light. Figuratively, any original thought on any subject.

LUCUBRATORY, a. composed by night or candle-light.

LUCULENT, a. [luculentus, from lux, Lat.] certain; plain; evident; clear.

LUCULLUS, L. LICINIUS, a Roman general and statesman of the earlier part of the 1st century B.C., who defeated Mithridates, king of Pontus, and conquered Tigranes. He is more celebrated however for his enormous wealth, and prodigal expenditure in luxury. He was one who made Greek customs,

&c. the fashion at Rome; and aided in the downfall of the Republic. He died in 49 B.C.

LUDICROUS, a. [ludicre, from ludus, Lat.] burlesque; exciting laughter by its oddity or comicalness; sportive.

LUDICROUSLY, ad. in burlesque; sportively; in a manner that raises laughter by its extravagance or oddity.

LUDICROUSNESS, s. the quality of being ridiculous; the quality of exciting mirth or laughter.

LUDIFICATION, s. [ludus and facio, Lat.] the act of mocking or making sport of another.

LUDLOW, Shropshire. A large, neat, and well-built town, seated on the river Teme, near its conflux with the Corve, over which it has a stone bridge, in a pleasant, fruitful, and populous country. Here are some good schools, and a manufactory of gloves. It is 138 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 5064.

LUDLOW, EDMUND, one of the eminent men in the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century. He was well born, and took arms on the side of the Parliament, in whose army he held a commission. He joined in the movements by which the Independents defeated the schemes of the Presbyterians, and sat in the high court of justice at Charles's trial. His stubborn adherence to his democratic formula made him oppose Cromwell, who sent him into Ireland first, and on his return, kept him on his estate in Essex. At Cromwell's death he came before the world again; but having all his hopes overthrown by the Restoration, he retired to the continent. Having made an unsuccessful attempt to gain a footing in England, after some years, he returned to his exile, and died in 1693, aged 73 years.

LUDOLF, JOB, a great Ethiopic and Oriental scholar of Germany in the latter part of the 17th century. He studied at Leghorn, and afterwards resided as a private tutor at Paris, Gotha, and Frankfurt, where he died in 1704, aged 80 years. His works are yet very valuable.

LUES, s. a pestilence or plague.

LUES VENEREA, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, any syphilitic disorder.

LUFF, s. [Scot.] the palm of the hand.

TO LUFF, v. n. [lowager, Fr.] at sea, to keep close to the wind. See TO LOOF.

TO LUG, v. a. [alucean, Sax.] to hale or drag; to pull with great violence.

LUG, v. a small fish; a land measure, containing a pole or perch; the ear.

LUGGAGE, s. [from lug,] any thing cumbersome or unwieldy to carry.

LUGUBRIOUS, a. [lugubre, Fr. lugubris, Lat.] mournful; sorrowful.

LUKE, one of the evangelists, and an early convert to Christianity. Nothing is known with certainty respecting his life, except that he was a physician, and accompanied Paul in some part of his journeys, and to Rome. The close of his life is as unknown as its commencement. He wrote the Gospel that is called by his name, and the book called the Acts of the Apostles, both of which are addressed to one Theophilus. His narrative of the life of our Saviour, is avowedly a compilation from the various anecdotes and accounts which were current amongst the earliest believers in Jesus. And it differs widely in its nature and plan from the others, although it has remarkable points of agreement with them. Luke seems to have classified the incidents he records, but not by any very intelligent conception; and the account of the trial and crucifixion, with the succeeding events, he gives in such a way as to have made some regard him as a witness of them. The record of the proceedings of the apostles and first Christians, up to the conversion of Paul, relates to the prominent teachers and martyrs; after that circumstance, it is confined to the travels and acts of Paul alone; and it ends with his imprisonment on parole at Rome. Luke seems to have been a better Greek scholar than most of the New Testament writers.

LUKEWARM, a. moderately or mildly warm. Applied to the affections, indifferent; not ardent or zealous.

LUKEWARMLY, ad. with moderate warmth, applied to things. With indifference, applied to the affections.

LUKEWARMNESS, s. the quality of being moderately warm, applied to things. Applied to the affections, indifference, or want of ardour.

To LULL, v. a. [lulu, Dan.] to bring on sleep by singing or some agreeable sound; to compose, quiet, or pacify.

LULLABY, s. a song made use of by nurses to make children sleep.

LULLI, JEAN BAPTISTE, a French composer attached to the court of the Grand Monarque. He was by birth a Florentine; and became a drudge in Mademoiselle Montpensier's kitchen; but his musical talent being recognised, he was placed with an instructor, and rose to be one of the directors of the opera. His works are chiefly operas; and he died in 1687, aged 53 years.

LULLY, RAYMUND, a mystic and ascetic philosopher of the 13th century. He was first a soldier, and afterwards a zealous missionary amongst the Mohammedans; but he nearly paid his life for the honour of his generous attempts. His title of Enlightened Doctor, and his fame, arises from an effort which he made to liberate science from the rack and the dungeons of scholastic logic. His organon and apparatus were, however, incapable of producing such a result, and he only founded a new school, which substituted mystic for syllogistic formulas; and gained a name in the history of science, which ranks with those of Paracelsus, &c. He died in 1315, aged 81 years.

LUMBAGO, s. [lumbi, Lat.] in Medicine, a rheumatic affection of the kidneys, which causes great pain in the loins.

LUMBER, s. [goloma, Sax.] any thing useless and cumbersome.

To LUMBER, v. a. to heap together in a confused manner, like useless goods.—v. n. to move heavily, as burdened with his own bulk.

LUMINARY, s. [luminare, Lat.] any body which gives light; any thing which makes a discovery, or gives intelligence. Applied by way of eminence to the sun or moon, on account of their extraordinary lustre, and the great light they afford us. Figuratively, a person that makes discoveries and communicates them.

LUMINATION, s. [lumen, Lat.] the act of emitting light.

LUMINOUS, a. [luminere, Fr.] shining; giving light; darting rays; enlightened; bright.

LUMME, s. in Ornithology, the name of a water-fowl of the diver kind; common about Iceland and some parts of Norway, and scarce known in other parts of the world.

LUMP, s. [lompe, Belg.] a shapeless mass; the whole; all the parts taken together; the gross.

To LUMP, v. a. to take in the gross without regard to particulars.

LUMPFISH, s. in Ichthyology, a fish so named on account of its form.

LUMPING, a. large; heavy; great.

LUMPISH, a. heavy; gross; bulky, applied to things. Dull or inactive, applied to persons.

LUMPISHLY, ad. in a heavy manner, applied to things. In a stupid manner, applied to persons.

LUMPISHNESS, s. stupid or inactive heaviness.

LUMPY, a. full of lumps, or of small compact masses.

LUNACY, s. [luna, Lat.] madness or insanity, with or without lucid intervals; the mistaking of one's thoughts for things, and acting accordingly.

LUNAR, LUNARY, a. relating to the moon; under the dominion of the moon. Lunar periodical months consist each of 27 days, 7 hours, 43 minutes, and 4 three-fifths seconds. Lunar synodical months consist of 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, and 3 seconds. Lunar years, of 354 days, 8 hours, 48 minutes, and 36 seconds, or 12 synodical months. Lunar Observation, in Navigation, the measuring of the distance of the moon from any particular star, by means of a sextant; for the purpose of finding the longitude, by comparing the distance so discovered, with that given in the Nautical Almanack. Lunar Theory, in Astronomy, the application of the theory of universal gravitation to the moon, for the purpose of explaining its motions, perturbations, &c. &c.

LUNATIC, a. formed like a half moon.

LUNATIC, v. a. mad; insane.

LUNATIC, s. one who mistakes his thoughts for things, and acts on his mistake. The law with regard to lunatics is much improved now, in consequence of the increased knowledge which prevails respecting this fearful mental malady.

LUNATIC ASYLUM, a building erected for the purpose of imposing the needful degree of restraint on lunatics, and subjecting them to such treatment as may be calculated to remove the cause of the alienation of mind. These institutions were formerly so conducted as to be aggravations to the disease alone; but almost all are now reformed; and every thing is so arranged as to counteract the delusion under which the patients labour, and to restore them to mental health.

LUNATION, s. [lunaison, Fr.] the synodic revolution of the moon; the period or space of time between one moon and another.

LUNCH, LUNcheon, s. as much food as one's hand can hold; a large piece of bread or meat; usually applied to a meal between breakfast and dinner.

LUND, the capital of Scania, in Sweden, and the see of an archbishop. Here is a good university, furnished with a good library. Here likewise is established a royal physiographical society, which treats of natural history, chemistry, and agriculture. The cathedral is an ancient irregular building. It is 225 miles from Stockholm. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 55. 42. N. Long. 13. 13. E.

LUNDA, an island in the mouth of the British Channel, off the coast of Devonshire. It is about 5 miles long, and 2 broad, and encompassed with inaccessible rocks, so that it has but one entrance, and there scarcely two persons can go abreast. In the N. part of it is a high pyramidal rock, called the Constable. It affords good pasture for all kinds of cattle, &c., but the chief commodity is fowl, with which it abounds much. It had once a fort and a chapel; at present the only inhabitants are one or two families.

LUNE, s. [luna, Lat.] any thing in the shape of a half moon; a fit of lunacy; a hawk's leash. In Geometry, a plane in form of a crescent or half moon.

LUNENBURG, or LÜNEBURG, a city of Hanover, Germany, and capital of a province of the same name. It stands on one of the tributaries of the Elbe, the Ilmenau, and carries on a good trade. It has some manufactories, and some extensive salt works. There are some public buildings of note here. It is about 70 miles from Hanover. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 53. 15. N. Long. 10. 25. E.

LUNETTE, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, a demilune, or half moon; an enveloped counter-guard or elevation of earth, made in the middle of the ditch before the courtine, consisting of two faces forming a re-entering angle, and serving, like fausse-brays, to disperse the passage of a ditch. Also, a kind of watch-glass, which is flattened so as not to be a perfect segment of a sphere.

LUNEVILLE, a town in the department of Meurthe, France. It is seated in a marshy country, which has been drained, on the river Meurthe, near its confluence with the Vesouze. Its magnificent castle is now converted into barracks. Here are also a military school, a large library, and a fine hospital. This town carries on some manufactories, and has a good trade. It is about 200 miles from Paris. Pop. about 12,500. Lat. 48. 37. N. Long. 6. 31. E.

To LUNGE, v. a. [allonger, Fr.] in Fencing, to make a push.

LUNGE, s. in Fencing, a push.

LUNGED, (the g is pron. hard,) a. [from lunges,] having lungs; resembling the action of the lungs in drawing and forcing out air.

LUNGS, s. [luigns, Sax.] in Anatomy, the organs of respiration, which are lodged in the cavity of the thorax.

LUNGWORT, s. in Botany, the popular name of several different kinds of plants. The tree lungwort, or liverwort, is a kind of lichen, found on trunks of trees, particularly those of the oak and ash, on rocks, and sometimes on heaps of stones in shady places. The cow's lungwort is the same as the great white mullein. The golden or French lungwort is a species of hawkweed.

LUNISOLAR, a. [luna and sol, Lat.] compounded of the revolutions of the sun and moon. A lunisolar year, is a period made by multiplying 28, the cycle of the sun, by 19, the cycle of the moon, and consists of 532 years, in which time both lunaries return very nearly to the same point.

LUNT, s. [lonte, Belg.] matchcock with which guns are fired.

LUPINE, s. [lupin, Fr. lupinus, Lat.] in Botany, a flower of the butterfly class, much cultivated in gardens.

LUPUS, WOLF, in Astronomy, a southern constellation, joined to the CENTAUR.

LURCH, s. in Gaming, the act of winning so as that the opposite party shall have gained but little, or not above a certain number. A sudden, staggering inclination to one side. To be left in the lurch, is to be deserted in distress.

LURCH, v. n. to shift or play tricks; to lie in wait. See LURK.—v. a. to win a game with great advantage; to devour. Figuratively, to defeat or disappoint; to steal privately; to filch, or pilfer.

LURCHER, s. one that watches or lies in wait to steal, or to betray, or to entrap; a kind of hound.

LÛRE, s. [læure, Fr.] any enticement; any thing which promises advantage.

TO LURE, v. n. to call back or reclaim hawks with a lure.—v. a. to entice or attract by something which flatters a person's hopes or expectations.

LURID, a. [laridus, Lat.] gloomy or dismal.

TO LURK, v. n. to lie in wait; to lie hidden or close.

LURKER, s. a thief that lies in wait for securing his prey.

LURKING-PLACE, s. a hiding or secret place.

LUSCIOUS, (lûshious) a. extremely sweet. Cloying by its richness, applied to food. Pleasing; delightful.

LUSCIOUSLY, (lûshiously) ad. in so sweet or rich a manner as to cloy.

LUSCIOUSNESS, (lûshiousness) s. the quality of being so sweet or fat as to cloy soon.

LUSH, a. of a dark, deep, full colour, opposite to pale and faint.

LUSORIOUS, a. [lusorius, from ludo, Lat.] used in play.

LUSORY, a. used in play.

LUST, s. [Sax. and Belg.] carnal or lewd desire; any irregular or violent desire.

TO LUST, v. n. to have an unchaste desire for; to desire violently.

LUSTFUL, a. lewd; lecherous; libidinous; having strong and unchaste desires; having violent, irregular, or intemperate desires.

LUSTFULLY, ad. with sensual concupiscence.

LUSTFULNESS, s. libidinousness.

LUSTHOOD, s. vigour; sprightliness; bodily strength.

LUSTILY, ad. stoutly or vigorously.

LUSTINESS, s. sturdiness; great strength and vigour of body.

LUSTLESS, a. not vigorous; weak.

LUSTRAL, a. [lustrô, Lat.] used in purification.

LUSTRATION, s. purification by water.

LUSTRE, (lûstër) s. [Fr.] splendour; brilliancy; radiancy; glittering brightness; a sounce made of cut glass for holding a collection of lights; eminence; renown.—[lustrum, Lat.] the space of five years.

LUSTRING, (lûstëring) s. a shining, glossy silk.

LUSTROUS, a. [from lustrè,] bright; shining.

LUSTY, a. [lûstîg, Belg.] stout; vigorous; healthy; strong in body.

LUTANIST, s. one who plays on the lute.

LUTARIOUS, a. [lutum, Lat.] living in mud; of the colour of mud.

LUTE, s. [lûth, Fr.] in Music, a stringed instrument.—[lutum, Lat.] in Chemistry, any composition used to fasten the different parts of stills or alembics in distillation or sublimation.

TO LUTE, v. a. to close or fasten together with cement or lute.

LUTHER, MARTIN, the great German Reformer, was born of poor parents at Eisleben and received an education which he hoped would fit him for the study and practice of law. The sudden death of a companion determined him in the choice of the monastic profession, and he entered a monastery at Erfurt. He here first saw a Bible, and devoted himself to the study of it, aided by the writings of Augustine, and others who had held similar opinions; so as to become no mean proficient in theological lore. His fame was such that he was appointed philosophical professor at Wittenburg, through the influence of his superior Stauffitz. Shortly after he visited Rome, and gained such an insight into the practical infidelity of the heads of the Church, as not a little influenced his subsequent course. The next step in his life was his being made a doctor of divinity, which greatly increased his means of teaching what he held to be Divine truth. Meanwhile, Tetzel had commenced his sale of Indulgences, under the sanction of Leo X., and came to Wittenburg. Luther at once attacked this infamous traffic, and began his conflict with Rome. After some controversy, Cardinal De Vio, or Cajetan, was sent to bring the refractory monk to reason, but signally failed. Miltitz was next despatched against him, with no better success. He held another disputation with Dr. Eck at Leipsic, but no impression was made on him; so that the pope resorted to his spiritual armour, and a bull was promulgated requiring Luther's retraction of certain doctrines under pain of excommunication, and the books he had published were publicly burnt at Rome. Luther now openly braved the head of the Church; he burnt the bull at Wittenburg, and was forthwith cast out of the Church. Soon after a diet of the empire was held at Worms, and Luther was summoned to give account of himself to it. He went, and maintained his ground; so that he was put under the imperial ban. Returning from Worms, he was by the kindness of his friend, the Elector of Saxony, carried off secretly to the strong castle of Wartburg; and there he continued studying, translating the Scriptures, and gaining health and resolution, in complete safety. The headlong haste of his disciples, Carlstadt and Melancthon, to rid themselves of the badges of Romanism, made him suddenly leave his retirement, and take part in the proceedings, which restored some order into the course the Reformation was taking. He now sent out his German New Testament; and soon the mass was abolished; monastic vows declared invalid, and monasteries suppressed; and the beginnings of a Lutheran Church made. The revolt of the peasants, accompanied by all the horrors of a servile war, inflamed by religious fanaticism, next occurred. Luther sought to repress it; but they had outstripped him. They were put down by the sword miserably. It was about this time that Luther married, and it seems to have been one of the best advised steps for him. Sacramental controversies next ensued with the leaders of the Swiss Reformation; which ended in the alienation of these two Reformed communions, although several well-intended efforts at accommodation were made. During this strife at the diet of Spire, the princes of the empire who held by Luther's doctrines, signed a protest against a treacherous decree promulgated by their opponents, and thus gave rise to the name Protestants. At the diet of Augsburg, the Lutheran Confession of Faith was presented, drawn up by the father of that Church, and his brother in the work, Melancthon; and soon after Luther sent out the whole Bible in German. Luther's life was now devoted to the consolidation of his work, in controversies with various opponents, and with public business, which the Reformed princes would lay upon him, by their ceaseless consultations. This dependence of the Reformation on the protection of these princes, although it had seemed to be of great aid to its earlier progress, now became a serious hindrance, for they expected it to declare on their side, as they had done on its side; and Luther was grievously distracted. At length, wearied out of life with care and labour, he died, at the village where he was born, in 1546, aged 63 years. Luther was one of those men who appear in great crises of the world's history. He was admirably fitted for his work: he had considerable learning; a courage that quailed before no created thing; a great, loving, genial heart; an outspoken manner that scorned disguise; and not so much refinement of feeling as to make him nice in the words he used, or to make him keep back from any thing that needed to be done. To Germany he gave not only freedom of thought, but a language admirably fitted to be its instrument. For Europe, he was the one who broke the chains of authority, even whilst he was hoping to forge others to prevent what he dreaded as licentiousness; and ushered in a new age. To the world at large, he was the re-opener of those living fountains of Truth, which Romanism had blocked up, or poisoned—the Holy Scriptures;—he was a living preacher of the worth of man, as man, in face of all dignities and dignitaries, secular and spiritual. He was the stout-hearted woodsman, as he said himself, who by the main force of his arm fells whole forests, the growth of centuries; and so makes way for the herdsman and the tiller of the ground to exercise their callings, for the good of man. His writings are numerous, and great part of them are polemical. His Commentary on the Galatians; his Table Talk, recorded by friends, and published after his death; his Letters; some of his Sermons: are more or less known here; and they sustain his claims to be regarded with the affectionate reverence that he has usually received. His translation of the Scriptures is one of the best ever accomplished; not for its critical value, though that is not small; but for its fine, clear, correct, and heart-stirring language. It was the first standard book in the German tongue. He has met with many to slander him, and to point out the incongruities and absurdities in his doctrines, and the questionable parts of his proceedings in his great work, with malicious glee. He has also ever had those who loved to defend his name; and, better still, to follow him, as he followed his Lord.

LUTHERAN, s. one who professes the principles and doctrines of Luther.

LUTHERAN, a. belonging to or derived from Luther.

LUTHERANISM, s. the ecclesiastical system of doctrines and forms, devised by Luther; and professed in parts of Germany, Denmark, Sweden, &c.

LUTON, Bedfordshire. This town is noted for its manufacture of straw hats. In its church is a remarkable Gothic font, in form of a hexagon, open at the sides, and terminating in elegant tabernacle work. It is pleasantly seated among hills, on the river Lea. It is 31 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 7748.

LUTTERWORTH, Leicestershire. The famous reformer John Wicliffe was its rector, and died and was buried there, in the year 1384; but his bones were taken out of his grave and burnt, 40 years after, by order of the council of Constance. The pulpit in which he preached is still preserved in its church. The Roman Watling-street runs on the W. side of the town. It is situated on the little river Swift, (into which the bones of Wicliffe were thrown, after being burnt,) in a fertile soil, and pleasant open country. It is 88 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 2531.

LUTULENT, a. [lutum, Lat.] muddy.

To LUX, LUXATE, v. a. [luco, Lat.] to put out of joint; to dis-joint.

LUXATION, s. the act of disjoining; the slipping of the head of a bone out of its proper place into another, whereby its motion is destroyed; any thing out of joint.

LUXEMBURG, the Duchy, or, one of the provinces of the Netherlands, lies next to Prussia on one side, and to France on the other, and is bounded by Liege and Namur. It is about 70 miles in length by 50 in breadth. It is watered by many small rivers, the principal of which are the Ourt, the Semois, the Laas, and the Chiers, which discharge themselves into the Meuse, with several others which flow into the Moselle. In some parts it is covered with mountains and woods, but the soil is in general fertile. It produces corn and wine in abundance, beside cattle of various kinds, and game. It yields iron, copper, and lead, and has manufactures of iron, cloth, paper, &c. &c. Luxembourg, the capital, stands on the Alitz, which divides it into the Upper and Lower Towns; the former surrounded by rocks, the latter seated on a plain. It is strongly fortified, and has some manufactures. It is about 100 miles from Brussels. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 49. 38. N. Long. 6. 8. E. Pop. of the province, about 310,000.

LUXEMBOURG, FRANCIS HENRI DE MONTMORENCI, DUKE OF, a celebrated military commander of France in the 17th century. He served at first under the great Condé, and gained his fame by his conduct in the later campaigns of Louis XIV. He died in 1695, aged 67 years.

LUXURIANCE, LUXURIANCY, s. [luxuria, Lat.] abundance, applied to plenty. Exuberance or excess in growing, applied to vegetables.

LUXURIANT, a. superfluously plentiful; growing to excess.

To LUXURIATE, v. n. [luxurio, Lat.] to grow or shoot to excess.

LUXURIOSUS, a. indulging in high food or liquors; administering to luxury; lustful, voluptuous; enslaved to, or softened by, pleasure; luxuriant.

LUXURIOUSLY, ad. voluptuously.

LUXURY, s. [luxuria, Lat.] a disposition of mind addicted to pleasure, riot, and superfluities; voluptuousness, lust, or lewdness; luxuriance; excess of growth, or plentifulness. Elegance or deliciousness, applied to food. A state abounding in superfluities, or splendour of furniture, clothes, food, buildings, &c.

LYON, the chief of the Philippine Islands, in the Eastern Archipelago. See MANILA, and PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

LY, a very common termination in English;—[from leag, Sax.] a field or pasture; used with names of places, as Ashley;—[from lich, Sax.] implying likeness, or similarity of nature or manner; used with adjectives and adverbs, as lovely, greatly.

LYCANTHROPY, s. [lykos and anthropos, Gr.] a species of madness, wherein persons imagine themselves transformed into, and howl like, wild beasts.

LYCAONIA, in Ancient Geography, a country of Asia Minor, lying between Phrygia, Cappadocia, Cilicia, Pamphylia, and Pisidia, and consisted of a wide steppe, or plain, impregnated with salt, in which was a salt lake named Tatta. Iconium was its chief place. It was afterwards united with Cappadocia, and still later with Galatia.

LYCEUM, s. in Antiquity, the name of a celebrated school, or academy, at Athens, where Aristotle explained his philosophy. Since applied to buildings for similar institutions.

LYCIA, in Ancient Geography, a country of Asia Minor, lying on the Mediterranean Sea, between Caria, Phrygia, and Pamphylia. In it the range of the Taurus commenced, and some of its heights exceed 7000 feet. It was colonized by Greece, and had in it many great and wealthy cities, the ruins of which have been recently explored. It was a very beautiful and fertile land, and had a considerable trade with Egypt, and Phoenicia, and Greece. Xanthus, Phaselis, Patara, Olympus, &c. were its chief places.

LYCURGUS, the great mythic legislator of Sparta, in ancient Greece. He was of royal race, and might have seized on the chief power, but he nobly relinquished it, and devoted himself to the study of the laws of the most advanced countries of the times, which he visited. On his return to Sparta, he found all things ripe for reform, and he commenced his great work for giving laws to his native land. (For an outline of these see SPARTA.) Having secured his institutions by the sanction of the Delphic oracle, he left Sparta again, and died in voluntary exile. The place of his death was unknown; and this, as well as gratitude, led to his deification. He flourished about 880 B. C. This is the substance of the common legendary history; but it is beset with contradictions, and there can be little doubt that, as in the case of our own King Alfred, to Lycurgus were ascribed most of those institutions which, being the silent growth of ages, had no traceable origin; whilst it is probable, that much that gives to his personal character the stamp of such extraordinary nobleness and skill, was the invention of those who desired to give their rigid and heartless oligarchical constitution a glory that by itself it could not obtain.

LYDGATE, JOHN, one of the earliest English poets. He was a Benedictine monk of St. Edmund's Bury, and travelled in Italy and France to complete his education. After his return, he undertook to teach the young nobles and gentry rhetoric and poetry, at the convent; and he died in about 1460, aged about 80 years. His poems are very numerous, and the Fall of Troy was one of the most celebrated of them.

LYDIA, in Ancient Geography and History, a country of Asia Minor, lying on the Ægean Sea, and bounded by Mysia, Phrygia, and Caria. Mount Tmolus ran through its centre, and in its S. part was Mount Mæssogis. It was watered by the Hermus, the Hyllus, the Caystrus, the Pactolus, and the Meander. It was in ancient times an independent monarchy, and the wealth of its most famous king, Croesus, has passed into a proverb. It was afterwards part of the Persian empire. The coast was thickly studded with Grecian colonies. Sardis was its ancient capital. Smyrna, Ephesus, Philadelphia, Thyatira, and Priene, were other places of note. The people of this land first used coined money, and invented games of chance. They were skilled in the manufacture of costly garments and other articles of luxury; and at Sardis was the greatest slave-market of the old world. Gold was found in the Hermus and Pactolus, washed from Mount Tmolus. The chief places are described under their respective names; the Greek cities were part of Ionia; which see.

LYING, s. [lie, from lic] a falsehood; the practice of telling wilful and criminal falsehoods.

LYING, part. speaking falsehoods wilfully.

LYMEGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of grass, of which there are three sorts native in England, viz. the sea, dog's, and wood lymegrass.

LYME REGIS, Dorsetshire. It is seated in a cavity between two rocky hills, on the river Lyme, which runs through it, at the head of a little inlet, and from which it takes its name. Its harbour is formed by a noble pier, called the Cobb, behind which ships lie in safety; and it has a Newfoundland and coasting trade, but greatly on the decline. It is a place of resort for sea-bathing. It is 143 miles from London. Market, Friday. Population, 2756.

LYMINGTON, Hampshire. This is a pretty and pleasantly situated town, chiefly supported by the resort of visitors to it in the bathing season. It has some salt-works, and a little coasting trade; and in other respects, is one of those marvels which ancient corporate and parliamentary boroughs most usually are in these days. It is 95 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3813.

LYMPH, (lymf) s. [lymphe, Fr. from lymph, Lat.] in Anatomy, a thin, transparent, colourless fluid, secreted from the serum of the blood in all parts of the body, returning to it again by its own ducts, called lymphatics.

LYMPHATIC, (lymfätick) s. [lymphatique, Fr.] a slender, pellucid tube or vessel, whose cavity is contracted at unequal distances, inserted into the glands of the mesentery, and serving to convey the lymph to the blood.

LYMPHEDUCT, s. [lymph and ductus, Lat.] a vessel which conveys the lymph.

LYNN REGIS, or KING'S LYNN, Norfolk. The situation of this town, near the fall of the Ouse into the sea, after having received several other rivers, of which some are navigable, gives it a considerable trade. It has some fine churches, and the relics of other ecclesiastical buildings. By bridges, higher up on the river than it stands, it communicates with the W. of England. It has no manufactures of note, but ships are built and fitted out here. The harbour is safe, but difficult to enter by reason of the many flats and shoals in the passage, but they are well buoyed, and good pilots are always ready. Its air is unwholesome on account of its vicinity to the fens. The streets are narrow, but well paved, and it has a good market-place, and a noble old town-house and exchange. It is 96 miles from London. Markets, Thursday and Saturday. Pop. 16,039.

LYNX, s. [Lat.] in Zoology, an animal of the cat tribe, which inhabits the vast forests in the North of Europe, Asia, and America. In Astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

LYONS, a large, ancient, and famous city, in the department of Rhone et Loire, the most considerable in the empire, next to Paris, for beauty, commerce, and opulence, and is seated at the confluence of the rivers Rhone and Saone, over which are 11 bridges, by the side of two high mountains. The houses in general are high and well built: it has 4 suburbs, and beside public schools, a college of physic, an academy of arts and sciences and belles lettres, with a noble library, and other institutions of a similar character. The newer parts of the town are very handsome, and are adorned with fountains, statues, &c. The cathedral is very splendid, and the other churches and public buildings are noble structures. The silk manufacture is the greatest in the town, but there are many beside. Lyons is a place of very great trade, which is extended not only through France, but to Italy, Switzerland, and Spain; and there are four celebrated fairs every year. It derives vast advantages from the rivers it stands upon, and is 280 miles from Paris. Pop. 200,000. Lat. 45. 46. N. Long. 4. 49. E.

LYRA, s. in Astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

LYRE, s. [lyre, Fr. lyra, Lat.] a kind of harp.

LYRIC, LYRICAL, a. [lyra, Lat.] something set for, or sounding to, the harp.

LYRIC, a. a species of poetry, consisting of songs set or sung to the lyre, and was something like our airs, odes, or songs; a person who writes lyric poetry, odes, or songs.

LYRIST, a. a musician who plays upon the lyre or harp.

LYSANDER, the distinguished Spartan commander, whose military and naval skill, joined with political tact, finished the Peloponnesian war, and subjugated Athens. He was the chief support of Agesilaus, and contributed to his fame. He fell in a conflict with Thebes, when that city, for a short time, strove to obtain the supremacy of Greece. The private excellences of Lysander aided his more manifest qualities in gaining him the conspicuous place he holds in Grecian history. He died in 396 B.C.

LYSIAS, one of the chief orators of Athens, although not a citizen. He lived for some time in Magna Græcia, or Grecian

Italy, and on his return was engaged in a lucrative trade. His brother was put to death by order of the 30 tyrants, and himself imprisoned; and he, after his escape, aided in their suppression, both by his property and his eloquence. He died in about 378 B.C. Ten of his orations alone are preserved, and these are greatly admired, especially for the clearness and vivacity of the descriptive or historical parts.

LYSIMACHUS, one of Alexander the Great's chief military officers, to whom Thrace and its neighbourhood was assigned in the division of the empire. After having established himself in his kingdom, he joined in the league against Antigonus; against whom, though he was inactive at first, he fought so successfully as utterly to defeat him at Ipsus. This greatly added to the extent of his kingdom, and enabled him to ally himself by marriage with the king of Egypt. After further conquests, he excited his own subjects against him by the unprovoked execution of his own son, which led to a campaign with the king of Babylon, in which he fell, in 282 B.C.

LYSIPPUS, a famous Grecian sculptor, who was in great favour with Alexander the Great, in consequence of his skill. Most of his statues were executed in bronze. He flourished about 325 B.C.

LYTTLETON, GEORGE, LORD, a statesman, and man of letters, during the last century. He was one of those whose chief claim to notoriety rested on their opposition to Walpole; and he was rewarded by an office under the crown, after the great man's fall. Amongst his writings, his Dialogues of the Dead, and Observations on St. Paul, are the best known. In the latter work he has given the arguments by which he was led to the profession of Christianity. He died in 1773, aged 65 years.

LYTTLETON, SIR THOMAS, a great lawyer of the 15th century. He was a circuit judge both under Henry VI. and Edward IV., and under the latter was made one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas. He died in 1481, aged 60 years. He is known by a work on Tenures, which, with the ponderous Commentary of Sir Edward Coke, two centuries after, is a textbook in legal study and practice.

M

M IS the 12th letter of the English alphabet; it is pronounced by suddenly pressing the lips together, whereby the breath is intercepted, and strongly forced through the mouth and nostrils jointly. It is one of those consonants called liquids, or half-vowels, and in English words never loses its sound. In the beginning of words it admits no consonant after it, except in some Greek originals, nor does it follow any in that case. In some words, the sound of a after it is lost, as in culturem, solemn, condemn, &c. As a numeral it stands for 1000, and with a dash over it, thus,  $\overline{M}$ , for a thousand thousand, or a million. In contractions of words we find it thus, M. A. magister artium, master of arts; MS. manuscript; MSS. manuscripts. In physical prescriptions, it signifies manipulus, a handful; and at the end of a recipe, it means mixe, mix or mingle.

MABILLON JEAN, a learned Benedictine monk of France, in the 17th century. He travelled in Italy and Germany, and published accounts of his observations in these countries. He was the author of many other works on ecclesiastical antiquities; and of one on diplomacy: and beside these labours, aided Père D'Acheri in his Spicilegium. He died in 1707, aged 75 years.

MABLY, GABRIEL, ABBÉ DE, a political and historical writer of the last century. He was educated in the college of the Jesuits at Lyons, and afterwards became secretary to the Cardinal de Tenein. His writings treat of the political condition of the French in his own times, of the Romans, the Greeks, of the then new republic of the United States, &c. &c. He was one of the admirers and teachers of philosophical philanthropy, who made so much stir before the French Revolution, and aided so greatly in bringing it on. He died in 1783, aged 76 years.

MAUDSLAY, or MAUDSLEY, JOHN DE, properly John Goswird, a painter of the Flemish school in the 16th century, who studied in Italy, and resided for a time in England. He painted portraits of Henry VIII. and his family, and executed the altar-piece at Middleburg, representing the Descent from the Cross. He was a debauched character, and many anecdotes are recorded of him, evincing his wit, and his unscrupulous conduct in procuring the gratification of his degraded tastes. He died in 1562, aged 63 years.

MAC, s. an Irish word signifying a son, and frequently begins surnames.

MACACO, s. in Zoology, a tribe of animals, otherwise called lemurs. See LEMUR.

MACADAM, JOHN LOUDON, a Scottish gentleman of scientific taste, who was led by his position as trustee of roads, to devise the mode of making and repairing roads since known by his name. He was rewarded by grants of money from the government, and his son was knighted. He died in 1836, aged 80 years.

To MACADAMIZE, v. a. to make or mend the surface of a public road, by spreading over it broken stones, which are formed, by the passage of waggons, carts, &c. over them, into a firm and even surface. The bottom needs first to be carefully prepared, and well laid for the fall of the water from it; and when once properly made, by comparatively slight, but regular attention, the road can be kept in excellent repair.

MACAO, a town of China, seated in an island at the entrance of the Canton river. The houses are low, but built after the same manner as in Europe. The city is defended by 3 forts, built upon eminences; the works are good, and well planted with artillery. Merchants of all nations have establishments here; and the Portuguese maintain a governor, but there is a Chinese mandarin also. It has a considerable trade. Pop. about 40,000, almost all Chinese. Lat. 22. 10. N. Long. 113. 32. E.

MACARON, s. [macaroni, Ital.] a confused heap; a huddle of several things together; a coarse, rude, clownish fellow; a kind of sweet biscuit made of flour, almonds, eggs, and sugar. Macaroni verses, are those in which the language is designedly corrupted, and consists of a hodge-podge of different tongues.

MACARTNEY, GEORGE, EARL OF, the English ambassador to the emperor of China, in the last century. He was educated at Dublin, and travelled on the continent before his diplomatic engagements. He was sent to Italy on a mission to Louis XVIII. at Verona, after his return from China; and afterwards was appointed governor of Cape Colony, whence he returned because of his health, and died in 1806, aged 69 years. His conduct during the various public and confidential engagements he held, won for him the highest honour. He published works on Ireland, Prussia, &c. &c.

MACASSAR, a town and harbour of the island of Celebes, Indian Archipelago, capital of the kingdom of the same name. The houses are all of wood, and built so as to provide against the periodical inundations in the rainy season. It is seated near the mouth of a large river, which runs through the kingdom from N. to S. The king is in alliance with the Dutch. Lat. 5. 9. S. Long. 119. 48. E.

MACAULAY, CATHARINE, an historian of the last century, scarcely known now, although she enjoyed some notoriety during her life-time. She was first married to Dr. Macanlay of London, and afterwards to a young clergyman, a name Graham. Her works are, two histories of the Stuart and Hanoverian dynasties of England, in which she showed herself an ardent and not always candid republican, Remarks on the Politics of Hobbes, and some moral essays. She visited America for the purpose of seeing Washington, and died in 1791, aged 61 years.

MACAW, s. in Ornithology, the name of a large species of parrot, distinguished by the length of its tail. Also, in Botany, a species of palm-tree, very common in the Caribbee Islands, whose unripe fruit yields a pleasant liquor, and the body of the tree affords a solid timber resembling ebony.

MACCABEES, the name by which the family of a Jewish priest, called Matthias, was distinguished, after the surname of the eldest son. This family commenced and maintained a spirited and, in good part, successful resistance against Antiochus Epiphanes, and his successor. Judas fell in battle in 161 B. C., and the rest of the period of the power of the Maccabees was quite unlike the former in character and in glory. It ended in 39 B. C., when Herod the Great was made king by the Romans; who, during the government of Hyrcanus, had made Judea a province. In the apocryphal writings of the Old Testament are five books named The Books of the Maccabees. The first two are admitted into the collection declared canonical by the council of Trent, and used for moral instruction by the Church of England, but rejected by most others; they are distinct treatises, and the second is not esteemed equal in authority to the first. The third is found in the translation of the Seventy, and relates not to the Maccabees, but to the persecution of the Jews who resided at Alexandria, in Egypt, at an earlier period. The fourth contains parts of the Maccabean history, and is usually classed with the writings of Josephus; and the fifth, which is not in Greek, continues the Jewish history nearly to the time of our Saviour's birth.

MACCLESFIELD, Cheshire. It has manufactures of cotton, mohair, twist, handbans, buttons, and thread. Here are several mills for the winding of silk, and a considerable manufactory of mohair buttons. It is seated at the edge of a forest of the same name, near the river Bollin, 171 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 24,137.

MAC CRIE, DR. THOMAS, a Scottish divine, who founded the Associated Presbytery with some other seceders from the Kirk, and wrote the Lives of Knox and Melville, and a history of the fate of the Reformation in Italy. In spite of his schismatic proceeding, he was a thorough Presbyterian; his works are his witnesses, that he was as devoted to that ecclesiastical form as any of those who, in the 17th century, signalized themselves against Prelacy and sectarian Independency. He died in 1835, aged 63.

MAC CULLOCH, DR. JOHN, an eminent scientific writer and lecturer of the last generation. He was a physician and surgeon by profession, but he held at different times situations as teacher of chemistry to the East India College, and chemist to the Ordnance. He was also employed on the Ordnance survey of Scotland, in the geological department, and acquired a well-deserved name by his skill. His writings treat of most of the subjects he was connected with; and one is devoted to natural theology. He died in 1835, aged 62 years.

MACE, s. [massa, Lat.] an ensign of authority borne before magistrates, made of silver, and sometimes having an open crown at the top. A kind of spice, of a thin, flat, membranaceous substance, an oleaginous and yellowish colour, an extremely fragrant and agreeable smell, a pleasant but acrid and oily taste; being the second covering of the nutmeg: it is used in medicine as a carminative, stomachic, and astrigent.

MA'CEALE, s. ale spiced with mace.

MA'CEBEARER, s. one who carries the mace before a magistrate.

MACE'DONIA, in Ancient Geography, the country lying to the N. W. of the Ægean Sea, and bounded by Thracia, Messia, Illyria, Epiros, and Thessalia. When Philip, the father of Alexander the Great, was its king, it included a greater extent of country; and when it was a Roman province, it stretched to the Adriatic Sea. Pdyra, Pella, Thessalonica, Philippi, with other Greek colonies, and Dyrrachium and Apollonia, on the W. coast, were its chief cities.

MACE'DONIAN EMPIRE, in History, is the name given to the Grecian kingdoms, which arose in Greece, Egypt, Syria, Persia, Asia Minor, out of the conquests of Alexander the Great, and lasted till the establishment of the Roman empire, for which it prepared the way in those regions. See ALEXANDER, ANTIGONUS, LYSIMACHUS, &c.

TO MAC'ERATE, v. a. [maero, Lat.] to make lean; to wear away; to mortify; to steep a thing till it is almost dissolved, either with or without heat.

MACERATION, s. [Fr.] the act of wasting or making lean; mortification. In Chemistry, the steeping of a solid body in a fluid in order to soften it without impregnating the fluid.

MACHIAVELLIAN, a. in Politics, according to the principles of Machiavel; crafty, subtle, false.

MACHIAVELISM, s. the doctrine or principles respecting politics ascribed to Machiavel; a system of political craft and falsehood.

MACHIAVELLI, NICOLA, the celebrated statesman, political writer, and historian of Florence, in the 16th century. He received a careful education, and entered the office of the chancellor of the state as secretary. He was advanced to a subordinate chancellorship after some years, and was next made secretary to the council of Ten, who managed the foreign affairs. During the period in which he held this office, he discharged many important embassies to the Emperor Maximilian, to France, to Rome on the death of Alexander VI., to various of the lesser states of Italy, and in particular to Cæsar Borgia, when some connexion between him and Florence was attempted. The return of the Medici brought with it his downfall; and on the plea of a conspiracy he was arrested, tortured, and imprisoned. Released at length, he retired to the country, and devoted himself to literature, in the hope of winning some favour and some occupation from his triumphant enemies, in which, after many years, he was successful. This introduced him again to public life, and he found a good friend and patron in Clement VII. He was employed again in embassies, but the overthrow of the Medici again ruined his circumstances; and, partly from the intense chagrin he experienced at this reverse, he died in 1527, aged 59 years, in the deepest poverty. Of his diplomatic skill there can be no doubt; and though his need made him accept service wherever offered, and his consciousness of skill impelled him to seek any occasion for displaying it, he was at heart a republican. His Florentine History is his greatest work, and his Commentaries on Livy show his scholarship and taste. His smaller productions were numerous, and some of them were poetical. His letters are greatly admired. But the work which has made most noise, and converted his name into a proverb of no favourable kind, is his Prince, in which he has taught the whole art of tyranny, especially as adapted to men who regarded the violation of word and oath as a matter of no moment if some advantage were secured by it. This systematic inculcation of public falsehood has been palliated by various excuses, derived from the morality of the times, and from his desire for employ under the Medici; but no defence has yet been attempted which can set aside the verdict pronounced upon it, by the making his name the designation of a system of political craft and falsehood, which has been handed down to our days from those which immediately succeeded his own.

MACHINAL, (masheénal) a. [machina, Lat.] relating to machines.

To MACHINATE, (mákináte) v. a. to plot, contrive, or devise.

MACHINATION, (mákináshon) s. a plot, artifice, or wicked contrivance.

MACHINE, (masheén) s. [machina, Lat.] a contrivance or piece of workmanship, consisting of several parts, which variously subserve the purpose of the whole, whether it be the production of motion, the fabrication of any article, &c. &c.; an engine.

MACHINERY, (masheénery) s. any workmanship of a variety of parts adapted to work together for a common end; the works of an engine. In Poetry, that part which is performed by supernatural agents. In theatrical exhibitions, the engine made use of to introduce persons, in a surprising manner, on the stage; or the contrivances made use of to shift the appearance of things, so as to cause astonishment.

MACKENZIE, HENRY, an essayist of some note during the last century. He was by profession an attorney, and wrote essays, tales, dramas, and political pamphlets; of all which, The Man of Feeling seems to be the sole survivor. He received the post of comptroller of taxes in Scotland as a reward for some of his pamphlets, and he died in 1831, aged 85 years.

MACKENZIE, SIR GEORGE, a writer and lawyer of the latter part of the 17th century, in Scotland. His conduct as an advocate under Charles II. gained him, from the hapless Covenanters whom he had to oppose, the epithet of bloodthirsty. He retired when James II. declared the principles of toleration, and, being persuaded to resume his office, again retired when William III. ascended the throne; which seems to justify his odious appellation. His works are partly on professional subjects, and partly on religious and moral themes. He died in 1691, aged 55 years.

MACKENZIE, a river of N. America, discovered by a traveller of that name, who explored some parts of the interior of the more northerly parts of that continent. It runs from the Great Slave Lake into the Arctic Ocean.

MACKEREL, s. [mackerel, Belg.] in Natural History, a well-known and delicate sea fish, commonly in season in the months of May and June.

MACKINTOSH, SIR JAMES, a lawyer and writer of considerable celebrity, of the last generation. He studied for the medical profession, and after having taken his degree at Edinburgh, relinquished it for law. His first appointment was at Lincoln's Inn, where he maintained opinions differing considerably from those of his first work in reply to Burke, and in favour of the French Revolution. He was next sent as recorder to Bombay. On his return, he entered parliament, and held a course of consistent Whiggism throughout his parliamentary career. He was for a short time in office under Canning; and under Lord Grey, was at the head of the affairs in India. He died in 1832, aged 66 years. His first work was his Vindiciae Gallicae; and the History of England, which he began for Lardner's Cabinet Cyclopaedia, was his chief work. He also wrote a Dissertation on Ethical Science for the Encyclopaedia Britannica. But his most voluminous writings were his essays in the Edinburgh Review. And it is remarkable as a prominent fault in all his works, that they bear too much of the character of articles written for a Review; his History brings disquisitions on particular points, and sketches of particular scenes, rather loosely connected. He was a first-rate talker, and on the whole a most estimable man, though far below the rank which has been by some assigned him.

MACKLIN, CHARLES, the celebrated actor, called by one who knew not too much of the great bard, "The Jew, that Shakspeare drew," when he performed Shylock. He wrote plays, one of which, Love à-la-Mode, is yet somewhat popular. He died in 1797, aged 107 years.

MACKNIGHT, DR. JAMES, a learned Scottish divine, who rose by his writings to be a minister at Edinburgh. His most valuable work is his Translation of the Apostolical Epistles, which contains some remarks of considerable value. He wrote also a Harmony of the Gospels, of no more use than any other of such writings, and a work on the Truth of the Gospel History. He died in 1809, aged 79 years.

MACKLAURIN, COLIN, an eminent mathematician of the beginning of last century, who was successively professor of mathematics at Aberdeen and Edinburgh. He had become known personally to Sir Isaac Newton, and to many other distinguished men, when on a visit to England. His zeal against the Pretender in 1745, made it needful for him to leave Edinburgh; and a disease contracted during his efforts to fortify that city, carried him off, whilst staying at York, in 1746, aged 48 years. His chief work is his defence of Newton's great mathematical invention against Bishop Berkeley's objections. His other works, all on mathematical subjects, are superseded in their value to students, although curious from the part they played in the history of mathematics.

MACON, chief town of the department of Saône et Loire, France. It stands on the Saône, over which is an ancient bridge, on the slope of a hill; and it has thus a pleasing appearance, and a prospect which extends to the Alps, near Lake Geneva. It is well built, and has some good public edifices. It has some valuable institutions also, and a few manufactures. It is 237 miles from Paris. Pop. under 15,000. Lat. 46. 20. N. Long. 4. 48. E.

MACPHERSON, JAMES, the writer of the well-known Poems of Ossian, and thereby the provoker of one of the most fierce literary conflicts that have lately taken place. He was also a remarkable instance of the effects of industry and capability joined, in respect of worldly advancement. He began life as a parish schoolmaster of Scotland, and rose to be agent to the nabob of Arcot, and M. P. for Camelford. He visited America once, and wrote against the Congress, after the war of Independence had broken out. He died in 1796, aged 58 years. His Poems of Ossian were undoubtedly based on some ancient Gaelic poems, but the peculiarity of their style, which carried away their admirers, was all Macpherson's. No interest is felt in this controversy now, and a better taste has arisen, so that the real worth of the poems is often forgotten.

MACRINUS, OPILIUS, the murderer and successor of Caracalla, the Roman emperor. He was a native of Mauritania, and commanded that emperor's body-guard. He was not able, however, to keep the throne, being put to death by the army, together with his son Didimianus, in 218, after a reign of little more than a year.

MACROCOSM, s. [makros and kosmos, Gr.] the great world or universe, in opposition to the microcosm, or the world of man.

MACROULE, s. in Ornithology, the largest species of coot, which is found in Lancashire and Scotland.

MACULA, s. [Lat.] a spot. In Physic, any spot on the skin.

MACULATION, s. [macula, Lat.] a stain; a spot; a taint.

MAD, s. [gemad, Sax.] disordered in the mind, or deprived of reason. Figuratively enraged or hurried away by any violent and unreasonable desire.

To MAD, v. a. to deprive of reason; to raise to such a pitch of passion that a person is not under the government of reason; to make furious, or enrage.—v. n. to run mad, or become furious.

MADAGASCAR, an island lying on the eastern coast of Africa, about 840 miles in length, and from 120 to 220 in breadth. The centre of the island is occupied by a range of mountains, of about 10,000 feet in height. And it has some large rivers. Great quantities of gold, iron and steel, with precious stones, are found throughout the island. The productions of the island are, the razee, a kind of palm-tree known only in Madagascar, and applicable to a variety of uses; rice, barley, sugar-canes, white pepper, ginger, cocoa-nuts, grapes, saffron, several kinds of gums, five different kinds of honey, and a variety of plants unknown to Europeans. Buffaloes run in herds, and there are great numbers of sheep, as well as goats, and other kinds of useful quadrupeds, but neither elephants, tigers, lions, nor horses. Large crocodiles, monkeys, wild boars, cameleons, lizards, locusts, insects, birds, and fish, are numerous. The people resemble the Malays in many respects, and are much more civilized than those of the neighbouring parts of Africa. It has been lately brought under the government of one sovereign, and the heathenism professed is very bigoted and cruel.

MA'DAM, s. [ma dame, Fr.] a term of compliment to women of every degree.

MA'DBRAIN, MA'DBRAINED, a. disordered in mind; hot-headed.

MA'DCAP, s. a madman; a wild, hotbrained person. Most frequently used playfully.

To MA'DDEN, v. n. to become wild, furious, or mad.—v. a. to make mad; to enrage, or make furious.

MA'DDER, s. in Botany, a plant with oval perennial leaves, smooth on the upper surface, and four at each joint of the stem; the blossoms are yellow. The great bastard and crosswort madder are a species of goosegrass. The little field-madder is a species of redwort.

MADE, part. pret. of To MAKE.

MADEFACATION, s. [mado and facio, Lat.] the act of making wet.

MADEIRA, an island of the Atlantic Ocean, lying off the N. W. coast of Africa. It is about 40 miles long, and 15 broad. A lofty mountain, rising nearly 6000 feet above the sea level, occupies the greater part of the island, and furnishes abundant space for its vineyards. It is well watered, and its climate is one perpetual spring. Cattle, horses, and asses, especially, are numerous. Its birds are such as frequent temperate climates, and canary-birds abound; and only a beautiful kind of lizard is known amongst the reptiles. Plants and flowers cultivated with great care here, are common in all hedge-rows; and the oranges are of a peculiarly exquisite kind. The cedar and gumdragon tree are most plentiful. The sugar-cane, maize, plantain, palm, &c. &c. of the tropical flora are cultivated, or indigenous. Fruits of the most delicious kind, belonging to the temperate zone, are most abundant. Its chief product is, however, the grape, whence the exquisite wine, called Madeira, is made; and this forms the chief trade of this island. Funchal is the only town, and lies on the S. coast. It has no harbour, but is protected by forts, and has a pretty appearance from the sea. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 32. 57. N. Long. 16. 54. W. Pop. of the island, about 90,000, including slaves.

MA'DGEHOWLET, s. in Ornithology, a name of a kind of owl.

MA'DHOUSE, s. a house where mad people used to be confined before lunatic asylums and retreats were projected.

MA'DID, a. [mado, Lat.] wet, moist, damp.

MADISON, JAMES, one of the presidents of the United States, and a distinguished statesman of that country. He began his public career with the Union, being a member of the convention for Virginia in 1776. He held another post in that State afterwards, and was by it sent to Congress. He seldom was removed from public attention subsequently. He was one of the commissioners for framing the constitution of the United States, and was engaged in the Virginian legislature, and congress on various questions, till in 1809 he was chosen president, and held the office for 8 years. During his presidency happened the war with Great Britain, which was so vexatious and fruitless to both parties; and the president's conduct in it was warmly approved. After his retirement he took no part in public business except on occasion of some changes being made in the constitution of the State of Virginia. He died in 1836, aged 87 years.

MA'DLY, ad. in a furious, raging, or lunatic manner.

MA'DMAN, s. a person deprived of reason.

MA'DNEP, s. in Botany, a plant of which there are two sorts, one called cow's pursnip, and the other with narrow leaves called the jagged madnep.

MA'DNESS, s. insanity; the state of a person out of his senses; fury, wildness, or rage.

MADRAS, also called Fort St. George, an important city of the British empire in Hindustan. It stands on the E. coast of India, but has no harbour for the protection of shipping. The fort, which was the origin of the town, stands very near the shore, but is one of the strongest places in the country. The town is regular and well built, and has a noble appearance from the sea. It is strongly fortified, and has some fine buildings, such as the government-house, the barracks, and the hospital. Pop. about 500,000, who are chiefly natives. The violent surf on this coast makes this place an inconsiderable one for trade; but it gives its name to one of the presidencies, of which it is the capital, which extends from the Krashna river to Cape Comorin, and contains a population of nearly 15,000,000. Madras is above 1000 miles from Calcutta. Lat. 13. 4. N. Long. 80. 16. E.

MA'DREPORE, s. in Zoology, a kind of coral, much branched, and covered with open cells, in which the zoophytes live.

MA'DRID, the capital of Spain, in New Castile, situated on the Manzanares, a very small stream, over which are two most ridiculously noble bridges. It is seated in a large plain, surrounded by high mountains, and is protected by a wall, which has 15 gates. The houses are all built with brick, and the streets are long, broad, and straight, and adorned at proper distances with handsome fountains. There are above 100 towers or steeples, in different places, which contribute greatly to the embellishment of the city. The royal palace is built on an eminence, at the extremity of the city. The finest square in Madrid is the Plaza Mayor, which is spacious and regular, surrounded by lofty and equally built houses. Here the market is held, and here they hold the bull-fights. The Prado is the public promenade, and is shaded with regular rows of poplar trees, and adorned with many fountains. Madrid has a great number of churches and religious houses; hospitals and charitable institutions also abound. There are four academies in Madrid; the Academy of Belles Lettres, the Academy of Spanish Historical Monuments, the Academy of the Fine Arts, Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture, and the Academy of Medicine. Pop. under 200,000. Lat. 40. 24. N. Long. 3. 34. W.

MA'DRIER, s. in War, is a thick plank, armed with iron plates, having a cavity sufficient to receive the mouth of the petard when charged, with which it is applied against a gate, or other thing intended to be broken down.

MAD'RIGAL, s. [Span. and Fr.] originally a pastoral; at present, in Music, a vocal composition, to be sung without instrumental accompaniment; written in different numbers of parts, each of which is to be sung by several voices; and so composed, that the melody seems to be distributed amongst all the parts.

MAD'WORT, s. in Botany, a plant with purple blossoms; called also small wild bugloss, great goosegrass, and German madwort.

To MA'NDER, v. n. to flow in a tortuous course, applied to rivers; from the example of a beautiful river of Asia Minor, which is remarkable for its numerous windings.

ME'CE'NAS, C. CILNIUS, the great patron of literature in the reign of Augustus, and the distinguished friend of the emperor. He was a man of a supple and elastic mind, effeminate and voluptuous in his character, and admirable as a counsellor. His art was always to remain in a low rank, he never was more than a simple knight; but by these qualities, which never awoke any fear in Augustus, he acquired a very great power over him. He maintained complete quiet in Rome and Italy during the absence of the emperor on some occasions; and greatly contributed to the establishment of the peace that followed the overthrow of Sextus Pompeius. The poets Horace and Virgil have celebrated his deserved praise for his munificence to them. Some of his severe remarks to Augustus have been recorded. He and his companion Agrippa, who was a mere soldier, were the hands of the emperor; and there can be no doubt that Mæcenas aided not a little in preparing the mistress of the world for her corruption and fall. He died in B. C.

MÆLSTROM, a very extraordinary and dangerous whirlpool on the coast of Norway, in Lat. 67. 45. N. Long. 11. 56. E. It is apparently occasioned by the meeting of the direct current of the Gulf-stream from the Atlantic Ocean with the returning current that passes between the islands of Lofoden, Ambaeren, Hoeholm, &c., and the mainland. In stormy weather it is especially dangerous.

MÆSTRICHT, a large, ancient town of the Netherlands, capital of the province of Limbourg. The town-house and other public buildings are handsome, and it is so well defended by fortifications of different kinds, that it is reckoned one of the strongest places in Europe. It has some valuable manufactures. Here also is a fine public library. Near it are large stone quarries, in which are subterraneous passages of great extent. It is seated on the river Maese, which separates it from Wyck, and with which it communicates by a handsome bridge. It is about 120 miles from Amsterdam. Pop. 25,000. Lat. 50. 52. N. Long. 5. 37. E.

MAFFEI, the name of several distinguished Italian writers, the most eminent of whom are Francis Scipio Maffei, a marquis, native of Verona. He was at first a soldier, and served with distinction in the war of the Spanish Succession. His writings, which he produced on retiring from the army, are on many different subjects; he wrote a tragedy called Merope, and some critical essays, and died in 1755, aged 80 years. Giovanni Pietro Maffei was a Jesuit, and wrote in elegant Latin, a Life of Ignatius Loyola, and a History of the Indies. He died in 1603, aged 63 years.

MAGADOXA, or MOLDOSCHO, a town of Africa, on the coast of the Indian Sea, seated near the mouth of a river of the same name, with a good harbour. The country of Magadoda is but little known. The inhabitants are mostly Mohammedans, but mixed with them are the Bedouin Arabs, who still follow their old pagan superstitions, and a still greater number of Abyssinian Christians. All speak the Arabic tongue. The city is a place of great commerce, foreign merchants from Aden, and other parts, exchanging cotton, silk, cloth, spices, drugs, &c. for gold, ivory, wax, and other commodities. Lat. 2. 2. N. Long. 45. 13. E.

MAGAU'RI, s. in Ornithology, the name of a Brazilian bird of the stock and.

MAGAZINE, (magazien) s. [Fr.] a storehouse; generally applied to an arsenal, or place where military stores are laid up; a miscellaneous pamphlet, or collection of various pieces in prose and verse, generally published monthly.

MAGDALEN, s. a name applied to a penitent prostitute. Magdalen-houses, or hospitals, are places set apart for the reception of such. This name is founded on a mistake as to the character of Mary of Magdala, or Magdalene.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, Oxford, was founded in the 15th century, by Richard Wainfleet. Its buildings are large and handsome, and have been extended since their first erection. In the chapel is the painting of our Saviour bearing the Cross, which is attributed to Guido. It is a considerable establishment, and has some wealthy livings in its gift. Magdalen College, Cambridge, was built in the 16th century, by the Duke of Buckingham. It is a wealthy house, and possesses the curious and invaluable library of Samuel Pepys, who held office under Charles II. and James II. Magdalen Hall, Oxford, is a smaller establishment, the present buildings being quite modern, though the institution dates from the 15th century.

MAGDEBURG, a large, well-built, and trading town of Saxony, Prussia, capital of the province. In the cathedral is a superb mausoleum of Otho the Great. The cathedral square is ornamented with large elegant houses, and its area is well-paved. Here are different manufactories of cotton and linen goods, stockings, hats, beautiful leather gloves, tobacco and snuff; but the principal are those of woollen and silk. It is happily situated for trade, having an easy communication with Hamburg by the Elbe, and lying on the road between Upper and Lower Germany. It is strongly fortified, having, among other works, a citadel seated on an island in the river Elbe. It is 52 miles from Potsdam. Lat. 52. 8. N. Long. 11. 39. E.

MAGEE, DR. WILLIAM, an Irish Protestant bishop, whose work on the Atonement is by some theologians regarded as a treatise of great value and merit. He died in 1851, aged 66 years.

MAGELLAN, or MAGALHAENS, FERDINAND, a Portuguese navigator of the 16th century, who discovered the straits called by his name, and afterwards entered the service of Charles V., and was killed in the Philippine Islands, in 1521.

MAGELLAN STRAIT OF, the narrow seas which divide Terra del Fuego from the S. American continent, discovered by Ferdinand Magellan. It has many safe harbours in it, with narrow entrances, and vast large bays, sheltered so closely on all sides by high mountains, that ships may ride safely in them without the least anchor. It is not safe for navigation owing to its numerous rocks, &c., and hence is seldom used now. It is nearly 300 miles long.

MAGELLANIC CLOUDS, in Astronomy and Navigation, two remarkable nebulae near the S. pole of the heavens, resembling portions of the Milky Way, first noticed by Magellan the Portuguese navigator.

MAGGOT, s. [magrod, Brit.] the grub or larvæ of some kinds of flies and beetles, which live in nuts, apples, &c. Also, by corruption from meggot, a whim; an unreasonable fancy.

MAGI, s. (Persian,) a title given to the priests among the Persians, who were the chief personages in the kingdom, and had the whole management of public affairs.

MAGIC, s. [magicus, from magus, Lat.] in its primary sense, the doctrine of the ancient magi among the Persians; the knowledge of the secret operations of the powers of nature, or a science which teaches to produce surprising and extraordinary effects. Popularly, the power of producing extraordinary results by secrecy, or the aid of evil spirits. Natural Magic, is a name given to the scientific knowledge possessed by priests, and others of former times, exclusively, but not in a scientific form, and by them used in maintaining and extending their power over the people, who attributed the results they witnessed to supernatural agency.

MAGIC, a. acting by the co-operation of evil spirits; acting or performed by secret and invisible powers, either natural or supernatural. Magic square, in Arithmetic, a series of numbers in arithmetical progression, forming a square number, so arranged in the form of a square, that the products of each row, each way, and of each diagonal, are the same. They are useful as well as amusing to young arithmeticians, and were formerly believed to be possessed of some secret and magical influence.

MAGICALLY, ad. by the assistance or co-operation of evil spirits; according to the rules of magic, or the practice of magicians.

MAGICIAN, (magician) s. a conjuror; necromancer; enchanter; one skilled in magic.

MAGISTERIAL, a. [magister, Lat.] such as becomes a master; also, lofty, arrogant, proud, or imperious.

MAGISTERIALLY, ad. in a proud, imperious, or insolent manner.

MAGISTERIALNESS, s. the quality of ordering in a proud, haughty, and insolent manner.

MAGISTRACY, s. [magister, Lat.] the office or dignity of a person who is charged with authority or government over others.

MAGISTRATE, s. a person publicly invested with authority, or the government of others.

MAGLIABECHI, ANTONIO, a learned Italian critic, who rose from obscurity by his own skill and the patronage of Cosmo III., Grand Duke of Florence. He accumulated an extensive library, at the cost of living in a very mean style, and wrote nothing to preserve the fame he enjoyed whilst living. He was not exempt from the troubles which a man so taught and so employed would be liable to, through irritability of temper; but he was most generous in imparting all he knew to any who required his assistance. He died in 1714, aged 81 years.

MAGNA-CHARTA, (Magna-karta) s. [Lat.] the instrument presented by the barons for signature to King John, containing the terms of peace with him. It was in substance nothing but a statement of the rights and privileges enjoyed, by law or custom, by all the classes who had any recognised political existence, and which had been violated or interfered with by the king. It was not the advance of a single step towards liberty, but the making sure of steps already taken. The serfs were left in the same bondage they had ever been in. The original document is preserved, through hair-breadth escapes, in the British Museum.

MAGNA GRECIA, in Ancient Geography, the name given to S. Italy, from the number of Grecian colonies which occupied its most advantageous places for trade and commerce.

MAGNANIMITY, s. [magnanimus, Fr. from magnus and animus, Lat.] greatness of soul; a disposition of mind exerted in contemning dangers and difficulties, in scorning temptations, and despising earthly pomp and splendour.

MAGNANIMOUS, a. [magnus and animus, Lat.] courageous; generous; brave.

MAGNANIMOUSLY, ad. with greatness of mind and contempt of dangers, difficulties, pleasures, and external pomp.

MAGNESIA, in Ancient Geography, a hold foreland of Thessalia, running into the Ægean, almost opposite the island of Eubœa. In it the loadstone was first discovered, and from it it derived its name.

MAGNESIA, s. in Chemistry, the well-known oxide of magnesium, used in a calcined state, as a gentle purgative. But as its action in that state depends wholly on the presence of acid in the stomach, it is commonly taken with rhubarb and ginger, and now lately in a fluid state.

MAGNESIAN, a. in Chemistry, belonging to magnesia. Magnesian limestone, in Geology, the upper member of the new redstone group in England. It varies greatly in its character and appearance, but is usually to be traced by its fossils. It is met with most abundantly in Durham, and extends in an almost unbroken line from a little above Ripon in Yorkshire, to Nottingham. Its foreign analogues are the Keuper marls, Zechstein, Muschelkalk, &c., of France and Germany.

MAGNESIUM, s. in Chemistry, a metal having a brilliant metallic lustre, a white colour like silver, and very malleable. The existence of this base was doubted till Sir Humphrey Davy proved it by some of his splendid galvanic experiments. Its value is wholly in its compounds.

MAGNETIUS, one of the numerous claimants of the title of emperor, during the fate of Rome. He was of German birth, and rose from the ranks. He murdered Constans, who had greatly befriended him, and was put to death when taken prisoner by Constantius II., brother to Constans, in battle, in 353, after a titular reign of about 3 years.

MAGNET, s. [magnes, Lat.] the loadstone; also, a piece of steel impregnated with the property of attracting steel and iron. Artificial magnets, are bars of magnetized steel, either straight, or bent in the form of a horseshoe, and are much stronger in their magnetic properties than the natural magnet or loadstone is.

MAGNETIC, MAGNETICAL, a. relating to the loadstone; having the quality of attracting bodies like the loadstone; or of assuming a polar direction if left free, like the needle of the mariner's compass. Magnetic induction, the process by which polarity is communicated to a bar of iron, &c. Magnetic needle, the needle of the mariner's compass. Magnetic parallels, those parts of the earth at which the intensity of magnetic force is the same. Magnetic parallels, lines indicating the direction of the magnetic needle from the equator to the magnetic poles.

MAGNETISM, s. the attractive power of the loadstone. In Natural Philosophy, that branch of electricity which relates especially to the phenomenon of polarity, and the persistent power of attraction and repulsion displayed by steel bars when prepared in particular ways. These phenomena have been, by a most beautiful and complete course of experiments, thoroughly identified with electrical phenomena; the last step having been to obtain by a singular apparatus, an electrical spark from the magnet. The power of attracting iron and steel is communicated by friction with a magnet, by hammering the bar when placed in the direction of the magnetic poles, by surrounding the bar with an electrical current, &c. &c. Magnetism, however, has a kind of universal existence. Nickel holds the next rank to iron in magnetic capacity; and brass, cobalt, zinc, copper, bismuth, antimony, gold, &c. &c., and their ores, are susceptible. It has also been discovered that the ruby, chrysolite, emerald, garnet, mica, attract the needle; and even that the flesh and the blood act similarly. See ELECTRICITY, GALVANISM, &c. Animal Magnetism. See MESMERISM.

To MAGNETIZE, v. a. to make magnetic, or capable of exhibiting polarity, and of attracting iron and steel.

MAGNIFIABLE, a. capable of being extolled or praised.

MAGNIFIC, MAGNIFICAL, a. [magnus and facio, Lat.] noted; illustrious; grand; or noble.

MAGNIFICENCE, s. grandeur of appearance, consisting in buildings, clothes, or furniture; splendour.

MAGNIFICENT, a. grand in appearance; striking the eye with an appearance of richness, pomp, or splendour; fond of splendour, or an appearance of riches.

MAGNIFICENTLY, ad. pompously; splendidly.

MAGNIFICO, s. plural magnificoos, [Ital.] a grandee of Venice.

MAGNIFIER, s. one that praises or extols a person. In Optics, a glass which increases the apparent size of any object.

To MAGNIFY, v. a. [magnus and facio, Lat.] to make great; to extol with praise; to exalt; to elevate or raise higher in esteem. In Optics, to make a thing appear larger than its real apparent size.

MAGNITUDE, s. [magnus, Lat.] greatness, applied to size; comparative bulk; size. Grandeur or sublimity, applied to sentiment.

MAGNO-LIA, s. in Botany, a beautiful tree or shrub, indigenous to the S. States of N. America, and much cultivated in this country for the sake of its splendid, large, white blossoms, and exquisite fragrance. There are many different species, both in America and in Asia; and some of them are possessed of medicinal properties.

MAGPIE, s. in Ornithology, a bird allied to the family of crows, well known in England, by its particoloured or pied plumage of black and white, its thievish propensities, its apt imitation of the human tongue, and its prominence in country superstitions. Figuratively, a person who talks to excess.

MAHOGANY, s. in Commerce, and the useful arts, a well-known wood, in great esteem for its beauty and durability, the produce of a species of the cedar-tree, indigenous to the tropical regions of the American continent, and especially to Central America and Honduras.

MAHOMET. See MOHAMMED.

MAHRA'TTAS, a warlike people of Hindustan, who held Poonah and Berar, in the Deccan, and were the supreme lords of other territories south of them. Their social state much resembled that of the French monarchy in the middle ages, where the king was merely the nominal head of the great nobles. They have been, after long and sanguinary wars, quite overthrown by the British.

MAID, MAIDEN, s. [maiden, Sax.] a virgin; a woman-servant. In Ichthyology, a species of skate.

MAIDEN, a. consisting of virgins; fresh; new; unused; unpolluted.

MAIDEN, s. an instrument consisting of a sharp blade, moving in an upright frame, used in this country, in old times, for beheading criminals. See GUILLOTINE.

MAIDENHAIR, s. in Botany, a genus of the ferns. The great golden maidenhair is a species of the hairmoss.

MAIDENHEAD, s. the state or condition of a virgin; virginity. Figuratively, newness; freshness; an unpolluted state.

MAIDENHEAD, anciently South Ealing, in Berkshire. It is seated on the river Thames, and has a great trade in malt, meal, and timber. It is 26 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 3340.

MAIDENLIP, s. in Botany, an herb.

MAIDENLY, a. like a maid; modestly; gently; timorously.

MAIDMARIAN, s. the female character in all our long-observed popular masques, mummings, and morris-dances, taken from the legendary mistress of Robin Hood. It is not to be seen now except in the chimney-sweepers' of London May-day saturnalia.

MAIDSERVANT, s. a woman or female servant.

MAIDSTONE, Kent. It is a large place, consisting of four principal streets, which intersect each other. By means of the Medway, over which it has a fine bridge, it enjoys a brisk trade in exporting timber, flour, apples, nuts, and other commodities of the county, particularly hops, of which there are numerous plantations around it, as well as orchards of cherries. Here are likewise some capital paper-mills, and a manufactory of linen thread, originally introduced by the Flemings. Here is a large gaol, and very extensive barracks for horse-soldiers. The town-hall, corn-exchange, &c. are good buildings. It is 35 miles from London. Market, Thursday, and another market on the second Tuesday in every month. Pop. 18,086.

MAJESTIC, MAJESTICAL, a. august; noble; great; stately; pompous; sublime; elevated or lofty.

MAJESTICALLY, ad. with dignity or grandeur; with loftiness of style or sentiments.

MAJESTY, s. [majestas, from magnus, Lat.] greatness; dignity; power; sovereignty; the title given to kings and queens.

MAIL, s. [maile, Fr.] a coat of steel net-work worn for defence; any armour; a bag or postman's bundle of letters. Mail-coach, mail-train, a coach or railway train that conveys the letters for the post-office.

To MAIL, v. a. to arm or dress in a coat of mail; to cover as with armour.

To MAIM, v. a. [meighner, old Fr.] to cut off any member; to hurt or wound.

MAIN, s. the act of cutting off a limb, or disabling a person by a blow.

MAIMO'NIDES, or BEN MA'IMON, MOSES, one of the most famous Jewish doctors or rabbis, was a native of Spain, and became physician to the sultan of Egypt, in whose service he died, in 1204, aged 73 years. The most celebrated of his works are, the Moreh Novechim, a treatise on the difficulties of the Old Testament, and has been much used by later commentators of all schools; a Commentary on the Mishna; and some treatises on the laws of the Jews.

MAIN, a. [magne, old Fr.] principal or chief; vast; gross, or containing the chief part.

MAIN, s. [megan, Sax.] the gross, bulk, or greatest part; force. Figuratively, the great sea, as distinguished from bays and rivers; the continent. — [manus, Lat.] a hand at dice, or cards.

MAINE, one of the United States, N. America. It lies on the Atlantic Ocean, and immediately borders on the British possessions of New Brunswick and Lower Canada, and is bounded by the State of New Hampshire. It is about 250 miles long, by 150 broad, and is divided into 13 counties. It is an uneven and hilly region. Some of the points in the N. and W. parts of the State reach 2000 feet in height, and one even exceeds 5000. The Penobscot and the Kennebec are its chief rivers, and it shares the St. Croix, St. Francis, and St. John rivers. In the interior the streams expand in many parts into considerable lakes. The coast abounds with islands, and its shores are bold and rocky, and have many inlets. It yields some iron; its uncleared forests furnish valuable timber; grain of all kinds, some fruits, flax, and the usual farm produce abound. The manufactures are considerable for its population, and very various. It has 48 banks, and 4 colleges. Augusta is the seat of government. Portland, Bangor, Hallowell, &c., are its chief trading places. Its trade, owing to its facilities in the way of rivers and harbours, and its fisheries, is considerably extensive. Pop. 501,793, of whom 1355 are free coloured persons.

MAINE ET LOIRE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Indre et Loire, Sarthe, Mayenne, Loire Inférieure, Vendée, Deux Sèvres, and Vienne. It is about 75 miles in length, by 55 broad. It is a tolerably level tract, having a few rather more elevated hills on the E. and W. borders, but none of any account. The Loire, and its tributaries, of which the chief is the Mayenne, are its rivers. Iron, coal, building-stones of all kinds, from granite to slate, limestone, and marble, are found here abundantly. Corn, fruits, wine, cattle, sheep, timber, &c. &c. are just as abundantly produced; and it has good freshwater fisheries. It has, besides, some manufactures, and a good trade arising from its produce. Angers is its capital. Population, about 500,000.

MA'INOTES, the people of a mountainous district of the S. E. of the Morea, in Greece, called Maina, who were conspicuous in the history of Turkey, for their guerrilla and piratical habits, which they have not wholly abandoned.

MA'INLAND, s. the continent.

MA'INLAND, or POMONA, the principal of the Orkney Isles, is 24 miles long, and 9 broad. The general appearance of the country is rocky and barren, but the soil is in some parts fertile and cultivated. Kirkwall is the capital. Pop. 16,055.

MA'INLAND, the principal of the Shetland Isles, is 60 miles long, and its breadth is from 6 to 18 miles. The face of the country exhibits a prospect of black, craggy mountains, and marshy plains, interspersed with some verdant spots, which appear smooth and fertile. Wild fowl, eagles, &c. haunt its solitary places. A peculiar breed of sheep is kept here, and a race of small shaggy ponies, very strong and intelligent, called shelties. Copper and iron has been found, and some use is made of the salmon and trout fishery. Lerwick is the capital. Population, 21,102.

MA'INLY, ad. chiefly or principally; greatly or powerfully.

MA'INMAST, s. the chief or middle mast of a ship.

MA'INPERNOR, s. a person to whom one in custody is delivered, upon his becoming bound for his appearance; a surety or bail.

MA'INPRISE, (the s is pronounced like z), s. [main and pris, Fr.] in Law, the receiving of a person into friendly custody, who otherwise must have gone to prison, on security given that he shall be forthcoming at a certain time or place appointed. It differs from bail, because a person is in this case said to be at large from the day of his being mainprised until the day of appearance; but where a person is bailed till a certain day, he is in law always accounted to be in the ward of his bail till that time, who may, if he please, keep him under confinement.

To MA'INPRISE, v. a. to receive a person into friendly custody, by giving security for his appearance at a certain time appointed.

MA'INSAIL, s. the sail of the mainmast.

MA'INSHIEET, s. the sheet or sail of the mainmast.

To MAINTAIN, v. a. [maintenir, Fr.] to preserve or keep; to defend or hold out; to vindicate or justify; to support or keep up; to supply with the conveniences of life; to assert positively.

MAINTAINABLE, a. defensible; justifiable.

MAINTAINER, s. one that supplies another with the conveniences of life; one that defends a place against an enemy; one that asserts and supports any doctrine.

MAINTENANCE, s. [maintenement, Fr.] a livelihood; a sufficiency to supply the conveniences or necessities of life; support, protection, or defence; continuance without failure.

MAINTENON, FRAOISE D'AUBIGNÉ, MARQUISE DE, the secretly-married wife of Louis XIV. of France. After a childhood and youth of vicissitudes and trials, she married the aged poet Scarron; and after his death, was brought within the notice of the king, by his mistress, Madame de Montespan, who made her governess to her children. Louis discarded the mistress, and ennobling the governess, secretly married her. Her influence over him was never doubtful, but it was never tested by her. The references to her by all writers and eminent persons of the day, show what a station she occupied, and also how worthily she filled it. At the same time, her superstition, or rather that of the times, shows itself, though in the most amiable light, such as the foundation of the school of St. Cyr; for that secret marriage involved all the questionable relationship of a mere mistress, as she was regarded by the divines, philosophers, and men of letters, who paid court to her as the surest road to favour with the king. After her royal husband's death, she retired to St. Cyr, and died there in 1719, aged 84 years.

MA'INTOP, s. the top of the mainmast.

MA'INTOP-GALLANT-MAST, s. a mast half the length of the maintop-mast.

MA'INTOP-MAST, s. a mast half the length of the mainmast.

MA'INYARD, s. the yard of the mainmast.

MA'JOR, a. [the comparative of magnus, Lat.] greater in number, quantity, extent, equality, or dignity.

MA'JOR, s. in the army, an officer above the captain, and the lowest field-officer. In Logic, the first proposition in a syllogism. A person who is of age to manage his own affairs; the eldest of two.

MAJORATION, s. the act of making greater; increase; enlargement.

MAJORCA, an island of the Mediterranean Sea, lying between Ivica and Minorca, the largest of those anciently called Baleares, about 50 miles in length and 35 in breadth. It is mountainous in the N. and W. parts, one bill rising above 4000 feet; but fertile, producing corn, oil, honey, saffron, cattle, fish, horses, game, &c. It is temperate and wholesome, but the excessive heat frequently occasions a scarcity. It has no considerable rivers, though there are a great many fine fountains and wells, and several good harbours. It has some manufactures, and its trade is considerable for its extent and population. It belongs to Spain. Pop. about 150,000. Palma is its chief city, and port. It has several other towns.

MAJOR-DOMO, s. [Ital.] one who occasionally holds the place of the master of a house; a master of a family.

MAJOR-GENERAL, s. a general officer of the second rank, who receives the general's orders, gives them to the majors of brigades, and commands on the left when there are two attacks at a siege.

MAJORITY, s. the state of being greater; the greater number; full age; office of a major; ancestor.

MATTLAND, SIR RICHARD, one of the early Scottish poets. He was also a man of some note as a lawyer, being a lord of session, and, moreover, holding office as lord keeper of the privy-seal under Queen Mary. He died in 1586, aged 90 years. This name has been chosen as the designation of one of the antiquarian book-printing clubs of Scotland.

MAIZE, s. in Botany and Commerce, Indian corn, the principal grain produced by some of the United States, and largely imported by Europe.

To MAKE, v. a. preter. and past part. made; [macan, Sax.] to create; to form of materials; to sell with profit; to compose; to do, perform, practise, or use; to cause to have any quality, or bring into any state. To compel or force, followed by a verb. To make away, to kill or destroy; to transfer. To make amends, to recompense, or repay. To make free with, to treat without ceremony. To make good, to maintain, defend, justify, fulfil, or accomplish. To make light of, to consider as of no importance or consequence. To make love, to court. To make merry, to feast or partake of a jovial entertainment. To make over, to transfer; to settle in the hands of trustees. To make of, to produce from; to account, or esteem; to cherish, or foster. What to make of, is, how to understand. To make out, to clear up, explain, or solve a difficulty; to prove or evince. To make sure of, to look upon, or consider, as certain; to secure the possession of. To make way, to force a passage; to introduce; to proceed. To make up, to get together; to reconcile; to repair; to shape; to supply; to accomplish, conclude, or complete.

MAKE, s. form; shape; nature.

MAKEBATE, s. [from make and beat, or debate,] a person who excites quarrels.

MAKER, s. the CREATOR; one who produces any thing; one who sets a person or thing in an advantageous state.

MAKEPEACE, s. one that reconciles persons at variance; a peacemaker.

MAKEWEIGHT, s. any thing thrown in to make up weight.

MALABAR, a province of Hindustan, lying on the Indian Ocean, and bounded by Canara, Coimbatore, &c. &c. It lies under the range of mountains called the Ghauts, and the soil is far from being fertile, its chief produce being from its native forests and growths. It was here that a colony of Jews was formed, who seemed to be totally ignorant of the facts of Christianity. This people is still numerous here. Calicut is the chief place.

MALACCA, a town of the peninsula of Malay, or Malacca, in India beyond the Ganges, Asia. It is just now rising from the poverty and insignificance in which it lay for so long under the Dutch government, and under British sway seems likely to outvie its earliest commercial importance. It is situated on a river, and has a kind of natural harbour. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 2. 11. N. Long. 102. 16. E.

MALACCA, STRAITS OF, the narrow seas which divide the Malay or Malacca peninsula from the island of Sumatra.

MALACHI, (Malak) a Hebrew prophet, whose office was discharged when those who wrote the historical narrations had completed their labours, or who, else, is no other than Ezra himself, as some critics have conjectured. There is no ground for holding this opinion. His writings, like those of most of the prophets, expose and upbraid the sinfulness and ingratitude of the Jews, threaten judgments, and hold out brilliant hopes and promises to such as will repent. He seems to refer more clearly than any other prophet to the precursors of the coming of the Saviour, and is cited in the New Testament as having foretold the ministry of John Baptist. The most probable date assigned him is about 425 B. C.

MALACHITE, (malakite) s. [malache, Fr.] in Mineralogy, a green ore of copper.

MALACOLGY, s. [malakos and logos, Gr.] in Natural History, that branch which relates to those animals whose bodies are soft, and which live for the most part in shells. See CONCHOLOGY.

MAL-ADMINISTRATION, s. bad conduct or management of affairs.

MALADY, s. [maladie, Fr.] a disease; a disorder in the body; sickness.

MALAGA, a sea-port of Granada, Spain. It stands on the margin of a small bay, in the midst of a fine and fruitful plain, and has a noble harbour, protected by a mole. It is a neat and pretty place, and has a handsome cathedral. Near it is also a large and curious castle, built in the time of the dominion of the Moors. It has a few manufactures, but it is chiefly noted for its commerce, which is of great antiquity. Pop. about 60,000. Lat. 36. 44. N. Long. 4. 26. W.

MALANDERS, s. [mal andare, Ital.] a disease in horses, consisting of a dry scab above the pastern.

MALAPERT, a. saucy; quick in making replies, but impudent and saucy.

MALAPERTLY, ad. saucily.

MALAPERTNESS, s. liveliness or quickness in making reply, attended with sauciness.

MALATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with malic acid.

To MALAXATE, v. a. [malasso, Gr.] to soften, or make soft, any body.

MALAXATION, s. the act of softening.

MALAYS, a race of Asiatics, who occupy, and give their name to, the long and narrow peninsula, that runs out from the Burman Empire, nearly to the island of Sumatra. They are regarded by some physiologists as a distinct variety of the human family, and are exceedingly well defined in respect of the people near whom they live. They are of short stature, and stout in their appearance. The face somewhat resembles the Mongolian type, and somewhat the ultra-Genetic variety. Hair, long and wiry. Tribes of them occupy islands of the Indian Ocean, and are found even scattered throughout the groups of the Pacific Ocean. There are very many different languages amongst these tribes, and they have not been sufficiently studied, to be used other than generally as a proof of the identity of the stock.

MALCOLM, SIR JOHN, a distinguished military officer, during the war &c. in India, from the end of the last century, to within a few years of his death, with few interruptions. He was not only eminent in his own profession, but as a diplomatist in his intercourse with the native princes, and with Persia, he gained great applause; and as provincial governor, he was equally successful. He sat in the British parliament after his return, and died in 1833, aged 64 years.

MALDEN, (Malden) Essex. It is situated near the confluence of the Chelmer with the Blackwater. Vessels of 400 tons burden come up to the haven to unload; the colliers, however, lie in deep water below the town, and the coals are fetched up in lighters. Malden carries on a considerable trade in corn, coals, iron, wine, brandy, rum, deals, and chalk rubbish. The custom of Borough English is kept up here. It is 36 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3697.

MALDIVE ISLANDS, a chain of islands, said to be many thousands in number, S. W. of Cape Comorin, in the Indian Sea, above 500 miles in length. The principal of them, called Male, about a league and a half in circumference, is the most fertile, and the residence of the prince; it is situated nearly in the centre. These islands are small, and mostly uninhabited. They are precisely similar to the coral islands of the Pacific. The inhabitants are a mixture of Arabs and Indians of Malabar. They supply vessels with sails and cordage, cocoa-nuts, oil, honey, dry fish, tortoise-shell, and especially cowries.

MALE, a. [Fr.] belonging to the he sex, opposed to female.

MALE, s. the he of any species.

MALE, [malan, Lat.] in composition, implies ill.

MALABLANCHE, NICHOLAS, an eminent priest and philosopher of France in the 17th century. He belonged to the Congregation of the Oratory, and the only incidents of his life were his studies and his publications. He died in 1715, aged 77 years. His works are all based on the method of Descartes, and of them the Search after Truth is by far the most famous; the highest point of the long and lucid reasoning in which, is the well-known assertion that we see all things in God. His opinions awakened much controversy, but he never became the head of a school; although, both for his originality of thought, and for his personal character, he had many admirers. His other writings are of a metaphysico-religious cast, and all may be read with profit, by such as are intent on that search, which he conducted for himself in his principal treatise.

MALECONTENT, s. one dissatisfied with the measures of government; a fomentor of sedition in a state.

MALECONTENTED, a. discontented; dissatisfied.

MALECONTENTEDLY, ad. in a dissatisfied or discontented manner.

MALECONTENTEDNESS, s. discontentedness; disaffection to a government.

MALEDICTED, a. [male ann dico, Lat.] accursed; execrated.

MALEDICTION, s. a curse; execration; the act of denouncing or wishing evil to a person.

MALEFACTION, s. [male and facio, Lat.] a crime. Not in use.

MALEFACTOR, s. an evil-doer; offender against the law; criminal.

MALESHERBES, CHRISTIAN WILLIAM DE LAMOIGNON, DE, a statesman of France during the ante-revolutionary period, and one of those who perished in that convulsion. He was president of the Court of Aids, and was banished from court by Louis XV. when he suppressed it. He was restored by Louis XVI., and was in the Turgot ministry. He travelled in Europe afterwards, and made his appearance in public next as defender of his unfortunate sovereign before the Convention. For this service, as a flagrant proof of incivism, and for other alleged anti-national proceedings, he was guillotined in 1794, aged 73 years. His writings are chiefly the product of his leisure, and relate to natural history; but he also wrote on some political subjects.

MALEVOLENCE, s. [male and volo, Lat.] ill-will; an inclination to hurt.

MALEVOLENT, a. ill-disposed towards another; inclined to do another a mischief.

MALEVOLENTLY, ad. after the manner which shows an inclination to hurt.

MALIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to apples. The malic acid is that which exists in the juice of apples.

MALICE, s. [Fr. from malus, Lat.] deliberate mischief; a long-continued desire of hurting others.

MALICIOUS, (malicious) a. [malitiosus, Fr.] preserving a continued propensity and resolution towards revenge, or injuring others.

MALICIOUSLY, (maliciously) ad. in a manner which shows an habitual thirst of revenge, or a deliberate intention of doing mischief.

MALICIOUSNESS, (maliciousness) s. the quality of brooding long upon injuries; and being obstinately bent for some time to do a person a mischief.

MALIGN, (malin) s. [maligne, Fr.] ill-disposed towards any one; strongly and obstinately bent to do a person mischief. In Medicine, infectious, pestilential, or fatal to the body.

To MALIGN, (malin) v. a. to regard with envy or malice; to do a mischief; to revenge.

MALIGNANCY, s. malice; unfavourableness. In Medicine, a destructive tendency.

MALIGNANT, a. [Fr.] envious; unfavourable; malicious; revengeful. In Medicine, mortal, or endangering life.

MALIGNANTLY, ad. in a malicious or mischievous manner.

MALIGNER, (maliner) s. one who is obstinately bent to do another a mischief; a person who censures in a sarcastic manner.

MALIGNITY, (maliginité, Fr.) hurtfulness or evilness of nature; a disposition obstinately bad or malicious. In Physic, a quality which endangers and threatens life.

MALIGNELY, (malinly) ad. enviously; with malice or an obstinate inclination to do ill.

MALIKIN, (malikin) s. (from mal, a contraction of Mary, and kin, a kind of mop made of clouts, with which bakers clean their ovens. Figuratively, a figure made up of rags; a dirty wench.

MALL, (maul) s. [mallevs, Lat.] a stroke or blow; a mallet. — [moll, Isl.] a walk where they formerly used to play with mallets and balls, (and then pronounced mell), whence the Mall in St. James's Park, and Pall Mall near her Majesty's palace in St. James's.

To MALL, (maul) v. a. to beat or strike with a mallet. See MAUL.

MALLARD, (malart, Fr.) in Ornithology, the drake or male of the species of wild ducks.

MALLEABILITY, s. in metals, the quality of bearing to be beaten, and spreading under the strokes of the hammer.

MALLEABLE, a. [Fr.] in metals, capable of enduring the strokes of a hammer, and being variously formed thereby.

MALLEABLENESS, s. the quality of being hammered into various forms.

To MALLEATE, v. a. [mallevs, Lat.] to hammer; to forge or shape by the hammer.

MALLEET, s. [mallevs, Lat.] a wooden hammer.

MALLEET, DAVID, or MALLOCH, an English writer of the last century. After studying at Aberdeen and Edinburgh, he became tutor in the Duke of Montrose's family, and afterwards came to England, where he first published the well-known ballad of Margaret's Ghost. By other poetical pieces he gained the notice of Lord Bolingbroke, who gained him a place at court. He continued his writings, and some of his dramatic works were represented. He also lent or sold his pen to the government for the purpose of injuring the unfortunate Admiral Byng; but his chief work was the editing of his patron's works, which contained the frank avowal of the infidelity Lord Bolingbroke had but indifferently concealed during his life. It is this work and the ballad that first made his name known, which alone justify his introduction here. A man of more unblushing unprincipledness has rarely held so prominent a place amongst literary and great men. He died in 1765, aged 65 years.

MALLOWS, s. [maleeae, Sax.] in Botany, a common kind of plant; the small, dwarf, common, vervain, and musk mallows, are the only species native in England, properly so called. The sea tree-mallow, is the species of lavatera.

MALMESBURY, originally MAIDULPHSBURGH, and by corruption Malmesbury, in an ancient manuscript, however, called Adhelmsbirg, Wiltshire. It was long famous for its abbey, which flourished in great wealth, exceeding all in the county in extent, revenues, and honour. It is pleasantly situated on the river Avon, which almost surrounds it, and over which it has six bridges. It has a good manufacture of woollen cloths, and is 95 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2307.

MALMESBURY, WILLIAM OF, an old English historian of the 12th century. He was educated at Oxford, and becoming a monk at Malmesbury, was made librarian of the convent. He wrote several works, of which the History of the Saxon Kings, and the History of his own Times, are most generally valuable. He died in 1143.

MALMSEY, s. a luscious wine, made at Madeira.

MALO, ST., a sea-port in the department of Ille et Vilaine, on a small island, united to the main-land by a narrow mole or causeway, 6 or 700 yards in length: it has a large, well-frequented harbour, but difficult of access, on account of the rocks that surround it, and is a rich trading place, strong by nature and art towards the sea, and defended by a citadel. It has some manufactures, and a good trade, but its fisheries are its most valuable field of industry. It is 206 miles from Paris. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 48. 39. N. Long. 2. 1. W.

MALONE, EDMUND, a writer and dramatic critic of the last century. He was an Irishman, and studied at Dublin for the bar, but he followed the profession of literature instead. He edited Shakespeare, and wrote Lives of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Dryden, &c. He also exposed the forgeries of Ireland and the boy-poet Chatterton. His notes on the great bard are provokingly common-sense and common-place. He died in 1812, aged 71 years.

MALPRACTICE, s. any practice that is opposed to the laws, or to settled custom.

MALPIGHI, MARCELLUS, the great Italian anatomist of the 17th century, who discovered the existence of the mucous net-work under the skin, in which the colouring matter is lodged, which distinguishes one branch of the human family from the others. He made other valuable discoveries, and died in 1694, aged 66 years.

MALT, (mauld) s. [mealt, Sax.] barley steeped in water till it sprouts, and then dried in a kiln.

MALTA, (Malta) an island of the Mediterranean, between Africa and Sicily, 20 miles in length, and 12 in its greatest breadth. It was anciently little else than a barren rock; but such quantities of soil have been brought from Africa and Sicily, that it is now become fertile. It has excellent vines, lemons, fruits, cotton, plenty of honey, good pastures, considerable fisheries, sea-salt, and a profitable coral fishery. However, they sow but little corn, because they purchase it cheap in Sicily; and the island is deficient in wood. The inhabitants speak a corrupt Arabic, and, in the towns, Italian. Valetta is its chief town and sea-port. It belongs to Great Britain. Pop. about 125,000.

MALTA, THE ORDER OF KNIGHTS OF, a military monastic order, that was formed during the existence of the Christian kingdom of Jerusalem, and was called by the name of St. John of Jerusalem from the convent they occupied; and Knights Hospitaliers, from their duty of receiving pilgrims as guests. In the beginning of the 14th century, when Palestine was irretrievably lost to Christendom, they seized on the island of Rhodes, and took their designation from it; and being driven thence, they had Malta given them in the 16th century by Charles V. of Germany. It was extinguished by Buonaparte in 1798.

MALTHUS, THOMAS ROBERT, an English clergyman and political economist, whose name is the terror of persons about to marry. He studied at Cambridge, and partially undertook clerical duties, but speculations of a more terrene and arithmetical nature had greater charms for him than the duties of a country parson, and he devoted himself to solve the puzzling problem of Population. After travel and study he produced his solution, which was, that as food increased only in arithmetical proportion, and the race left to itself, without philosophy to guide it, would increase in geometrical proportion, it was the duty of all well-wishers to the human family, to put in practice themselves, and recommend to others, celibacy, or what would be as good as that, so as to keep down the population to the measure of the provisions at any time existent. Having made this known, he himself married, and became a professor at Haileybury College, in which situation he continued till his death in 1834, aged 69 years. He published many other works on political economy, beside his great anti-matrimonial Essay.

MALTMAN, MAL'TSTER, (māltman, māl'tster) s. one who makes or deals in malt.

MALTON, (Māltton) Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is seated on the Derwent, and is composed of two townships, the New and the Old, and is well inhabited. It is 216 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 5317.

MALVACEOUS, s. [malva, Lat.] relating to mallows.

MALVERSATION, s. [Fr.] a mean, base, wicked, and fraudulent trick or shift.

MALVERN HILLS, a range of English hills which attains its greatest height in Worcestershire, being about 1500 feet above the sea. This part is a mass of trap rock thrust up through the great plain of new red sandstone.

MALUS, STEPHEN LOUIS, a French natural philosopher and military engineer, who was professor of the polytechnic school, and served on the Rhine and in Egypt, under Buonaparte. His name is connected with one of the most remarkable optical discoveries—that of the polarization of light. He died in 1812, aged 37 years.

MAMA', or MAMMA', s. [This word is used as an address to a mother in almost all languages, and is almost the first word a child pronounces.] A mother.

MAMELUKES, a body of military organized in the 13th century, in Egypt, which, like the prætorian soldiers of the Roman emperors, turned against its masters, and took possession of the throne. They maintained their command there as a true military aristocracy till the invasion of Buonaparte; and since then, by various means, they have been almost completely annihilated.

MAMMEE-TREE, s. in Botany, a tree with a rosaceous flower, which afterwards becomes an almost spherical fleshy fruit, containing two or three seeds, enclosed in hard rough shells.

MAMMEATED, a. [mamma, Lat.] having paps or teats.

MAMMIFORM, a. [mammiforme, Fr.] having the shape of a breast.

MAMMILLARY, a. [mammilla, Lat.] belonging to the paps or teats.

MAMMOCK, s. a large, shapeless piece; an offal or fragment of meat.

To MAMMOCK, v. a. to tear; to pull into pieces in such a manner as to raise squeamishness in the beholder.

MAMMON, s. [Syr.] in ancient Syrian Mythology, the god of riches. Figuratively, riches.

MAMMOTH, s. in Natural History, an extinct animal, nearly allied to the elephant, but much larger; which lived in all parts of the known world.

MAN, s. plural men; [man, mon, Sax.] a human being. A male, opposed to a woman. A person full grown, opposed to a boy. A rational creature, opposed to a beast. It also signifies a male servant, or slave; and one of the pieces with which the games of chess and draughts are played. A man of war, is a ship of war.

To MAN, v. a. to furnish, supply, or guard with men. Figuratively, to fortify or strengthen.

MAN, an island of Great Britain, in the Irish Sea, about 30 miles in length, and from 8 to 15 in breadth. It is very hilly, and one of its heights exceeds 2000 feet. It has mines of lead, iron, and copper, and quarries of building stone and slate. The soil varies in different tracts, yet produces more corn than is sufficient to maintain the natives. The air, which is sharp and cold in winter, is healthy, and the inhabitants live to a very great age. The commodities of this island are small black cattle and horses, wool, fine and coarse linen, hides, skins, honey, tallow, and herrings. About the rocks of the island breeds an incredible number of all sorts of sea-fowl, and especially on the Calf of Man, a small island not far from its most southerly point. The language is a dialect of the Erse. In its civil government, which is peculiar to it, the island is divided into six sheedings, each having its proper coroner, who is intrusted with the peace of his district, and acts in the nature of a sheriff. The House of Keys is its elective legislature, &c. Castle Town is its chief place. Pop. 47,975.

To MAN'ACLE, v. n. to chain the hands; to shackle.

MAN'ACLES, s. [manicles, Fr.] chains for the hands; shackles.

To MAN'AGE, v. a. [ménager, Fr.] to conduct or carry on; to train a horse to graceful airs; to govern, to rule or make tractable; to husband, or make the best of.—v. n. to superintend or transact.

MAN'AGEABLE, a. easy to be used, wielded, or moved; submitting to government; tractable.

MAN'AGEABLENESS, s. the quality of being easily used or moved, or of submitting to instruction, government, or authority.

MAN'AGEMENT, s. [management, Fr.] conduct; the manner of transacting or conducting any thing; prudence. SYNON. Management respects private things trusted to the care of one, to be employed for the profit of another, to whom he is to render account. Direction relates to affairs, where a distribution either of money, office, &c., is committed to the care of one person, to preserve order. Administration refers to objects of greater consequence; such as those of justice, or the finances of a state. It supposes a pre-eminence of employ, which gives power, credit, and a kind of liberty, in the department in which the person is engaged. Conduct points out some knowledge and ability, with respect to things; and a subordination, with regard to persons. Government results from authority and dependence, and indicates a superiority of office, with a particular relation to policy.

MAN'AGER, s. one who has the direction, conduct, or government of any thing or person; a prudent or frugal person.

MAN'AGERY, s. [ménagerie, Fr.] conduct; direction; the manner in which any thing is transacted; frugality.

MANCHE, s. [Fr.] in Heraldry, a sleeve.

MANCHE, a department of France, lying on the Straits of Dover, which are called La Manche in French, and thence its name. It is bounded by the departments of Calvados, Orne, Mayenne, and Ille et Vilaine. It is about 90 miles long, by 35 broad. It is hilly, and has quarries of excellent and durable building stone, and a little iron. Its rivers are small. It produces abundance of corn, apples, flax, cattle, &c. &c. It has good fisheries, having such an extent of sea coast; along which are several islands. Its manufactures are tolerably extensive and various. St. Ló is its chief place. Pop. about 600,000.

MANCHESTER, (anciently a Roman station called Mancunium.) Lancashire. It is a place of great antiquity, and is now principally conspicuous as the centre of the cotton trade. The products of a very extensive and populous neighbourhood are collected here, whence they are sent to London, Liverpool, Hull, &c. These consist of a great variety of cotton, silk, linen, and mixed goods, fitted for every market, both at home and abroad. The manufacture of ticking, tapes, filleting, and other small wares, and of hats, is also carried on at Manchester; from which various sources of wealth it has attain-

THE ISLE OF MAN.

English Miles.
1 2 3 4 5

LONDON
PUBLISHED BY G. LEITCH,
15, CITY LANE, (JUNY 1883).

ed greater opulence than any other trading place in England. Though not a handsome city, its buildings (especially the more modern ones) are on a proportional scale of size and elegance. One of its chief ornaments is the collegiate church, a venerable pile, with a handsome tower, now to be termed the cathedral of the new bishopric. Contiguous to this is Chetham's Hospital, (commonly called the college,) for clothing, educating, and apprenticing 80 boys; to which is also attached a public library, containing 25,000 volumes. Here are also an Infirmary, Dispensary, Lunatic Hospital and Asylum, Lying-in Hospital, Fever Hospital, and other institutions of a similar character. Here is also a large prison, called the New Bailey. This town abounds with libraries, and literary and philosophical institutions, some of which have attained considerable celebrity. Here too are large and handsome colleges, belonging to the Dissenters. The churches and chapels of the Established Church, and the places for worship belonging to every denomination of Dissenters, are very numerous. By the river Irwell, over which it has a very ancient stone bridge, it has a communication with the Mersey, and all the various inland navigations. It is situated upon the rivers Irk, Medlock, and Irwell, about 7 miles from the junction of the latter with the Mersey, and 185 from London. Pop. of the parliamentary borough, 242,983; of the city, 163,856. See SALFORD.

MANCHET, s. a small loaf of fine bread.
 MANCHINEL, s. [manchinda, Span.] in Botany, a tree which is a native of the West Indies, and grows to the size of an oak; its wood is of a beautiful grain, will polish well, and last long; and is therefore much esteemed. The fruit is of the colour and size of the golden pippin, but it is not edible. The juices of this tree are so corrosive in their nature, that only goats are known to browse upon it.

To MANCIPATE, v. a. [manus and capio, Lat.] to enslave, bind, or tie, used with to. Seldom used.

MANCIPLE, s. [manus and capio, Lat.] the steward of a society; particularly used of the purveyor of a college.

MANDAMUS, s. [Lat.] a writ granted by the king, usually directed to the head of a corporation, college, &c., commanding a thing to be done, as the restoring of a deposed officer, &c.

MANDARIN, s. a name given to the state officers, both civil and military, of China. There are nine orders of them, in all supposed to amount to 33,000.

MANDATARY, s. [mandatarius, Fr.] he to whom the pope has, by his prerogative and proper right, given a mandate for his benefice.

MANDATE, s. [mando, Lat.] a command; a commission, charge, or precept.

MANDATOR, s. [Lat.] a director.

MANDATORY, a. containing a command, precept, or direction.

MANDEVILLE, SIR JOHN DE, an old English traveller, whose book, written about the time of Chaucer's poems, shows the first formation of the English language. His adventures were very strange, and his book is stranger still. He died in 1372.

MANDEVILLE, BERNARD, an immoral writer on moral questions, of the beginning of the last century. He was a Dutch physician, but settled in England. The work which made the greatest noise, on account of a prosecution which was founded on it, was his Fable of the Bees. He maintains, what all who deny the existence of what Butler called the moral sense ought, for consistency, to maintain, that all notions of right and wrong, &c. are the production of the laws of the state in which men are born. He died in 1733, aged 62 years.

MANDIBLE, a. [mando, Lat.] that may be chewed; eatable.

MANDINGOES, a race of negroes living near the rivers Senegal and Gambia in W. Africa. They differ in many respects from most of the other negro tribes. Attempts have lately been made to Christianize them. Their number cannot be ascertained.

MANDRAKE, s. [mandragora, Fr.] in Botany, a plant, the flower of which consists of one leaf in the shape of a bell, and is divided at the top into several parts; the root bears a rude resemblance to the human form.

MANDREL, s. [mandrin, Fr.] a kind of wooden pulley, making a part of a turner's lathe.

MANDRILL, s. in Natural History, a huge and horrid species of baboon.

MANDICHUS, the name of a Tatar race, which in the 17th century overturned the existing dynasty of the Chinese empire, and established their own princes in its stead. Their language differs considerably, except in the direction of writing it, from the Chinese. The Scriptures have lately been translated into it, for the sake of sending them to the imperial court, where that language alone is used.

MANDUCATION, s. [manducor, Lat.] eating; chewing, or the action of the lower jaw.

MANE, s. [mane, Belg.] the long hair which hangs down on the necks of horses or other animals.

MANEATER, s. one that eats human flesh; a cannibal; an anthropophagite.

MANEGE, s. the exercise of riding the great horse.

MANED, a. having a mane.

MANES, s. [Lat.] a ghost; or that which remains of a person after death.

MANETHO, the ancient Egyptian writer, who lived in about the end of the 4th century B.C. His writings are a history of Egypt, preserved partially in quotations, and some other books on the Egyptian religion, which are lost. There is also a poem on astrology which is ascribed to him.

MANFUL, a. bold; stout; daring.

MANFULLY, ad. in a bold, stout, or daring manner.

MANFULNESS, s. the quality of behaving in a manner that shows undaunted courage and invincible resolution.

MANGANESE, s. in Chemistry and Mineralogy, a brilliant metal, of a dark gray colour, of considerable hardness and difficult fusibility. It is very brittle, and when in powder is attracted by the magnet. It is found in Somersetshire and Devonshire, in America, and in various parts of the continent. Its oxides are used in bleaching, in purifying glass, and in glazing black earthenware.

MANGE, s. [mangeoien, Fr.] in Veterinary art, a cutaneous disease incident to cattle.

MANGER, s. [mangeoire, Fr.] a place or vessel in which the food of cattle is contained in a stable.

MANGINESS, s. the state of having the mange.

To MANGLE, v. a. [mangelen, Belg.] to cut and hack; to cut and tear piece-meal; to butcher.

MANGLER, s. one that hacks and destroys in a rude and butcherly manner.

MANGO, s. [mangostan, Fr.] in Botany, a fruit of the isle of Java, somewhat resembling a melon, brought pickled to Europe.

MANGOLD WURZEL, MANGEL WURZEL, s. [Germ.] in Farming, a kind of beet, whose root is larger, and more nutritious to stock, than the common beet; and at the same time does not exhaust the soil so much.

MANGY, a. infected with the mange.

MANHATER, s. one who hates mankind; a misanthropist.

MANHEIM, one of the most beautiful cities of Germany, in the Grand Duchy of Baden. The streets are all straight, and intersect each other at right angles. The town has three grand gates, adorned with basso-reliefs, very beautifully executed. It is almost entirely surrounded by the Neckar and the Rhine, over which are bridges of boats, and the country about it is flat. The palace is a magnificent structure, containing a gallery for paintings, cabinets of antiquities and natural history, a library, treasury, and menagerie. It has other very fine public buildings, and the streets and squares are proportionably noble. It has some manufactories, and a good trade, owing to its position. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 49. 29. N. Long. 8. 28. E.

MANHOOD, s. the state or condition of a man; human nature. The state of a male, opposed to womanhood. The state of a person full grown, opposed to childhood. Figuratively, courage; bravery; resolution.

MANIA, s. [mainomat, Gr.] madness; a violent delirium without a fever.

MANIAC, MANIACAL, a. raging with madness.

MANICHEES, or MANICHEANS, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect amongst the early Christians, who followed the teaching of a Persian, named Manes or Mani; who applied the tenets of the Zendish faith to the explanation of the Scriptures; and asserted the existence of two opposite supreme, eternal powers, or principles; one of darkness and evil, the other of light and goodness. To the former, he ascribed the Old Testament and Judaism; to the latter, the Gospel. He also represented our bodies as the work of the evil principle; and that it was to deliver our souls, the offspring of the good principle, from their bondage to our bodies, that Christ was sent, and the Spirit also. The substance and essence of the gospel he placed in the struggle after the light, and against the darkness; and the victory through Christ and the Comforter. His followers spread far and wide through Christendom; and in spite of anathemas, public and private, under one or other name maintained their ground. In these days, freed from the technicalities of the Magian creed, the things intended by Mani are revived and received as a true representation of the meaning of the gospel. The Manichæans are, of course, included in the list of heretics.

MANIFEST, a. [manifestus, Lat.] plain; open; publicly known.

MANIFEST, s. a declaration; a public protest; a manifesto.

To MANIFEST, v. a. to make appear; to make public; to show plainly; to discover. SYNON. Manifest means, to show incontestably; publish, simply to declare publicly; to proclaim, to make known by a formal and legal publication.

MANIFESTATION, s. [Fr.] a discovery; the act of publishing or making public; clear and undoubted evidence.

MANIFESTIBLE, a. easy to be proved or made evident.

MANIFESTLY, ad. clearly; plainly; evidently.

MANIFESTNESS, s. clearness of evidence; public notoriety.

MANIFESTO, s. [Ital.] a public protestation or declaration.

MANIFOLD, a. of different kinds; many in number; complicated.

MANIFOLDLY, ad. in many respects.

MANIGLIONS, in Guntery, two handles on the back of a piece of ordnance cast after the German form.

MANIKIN, s. [from man and kin, Teut.] a little man.

MANILLA, the capital of Luzon, and of the Philippine Islands, situated on a bay on the S. W. coast of that island. It consists of a double town, with numerous suburbs. The streets are broad, but frequent earthquakes have spoiled their uniformity. The citadel is in the shape of a triangle, having one bastion towards the sea, another towards the river, and a third at the W. point, to cover the port, which is only fit for small vessels, and there are good out-works. It has also a handsome residence for the governor, a fine bridge over the river, and a college, with other valuable institutions. The manufactures and trade of the town are very considerable. Pop. above 100,000, of whom the greatest part are Chinese, the Spaniards being comparatively few. Lat. 14. 38. N. Long. 120. 54. E. See PHILIPPINES.

MANIPLE, s. [manipulus, from manus, Lat.] a handful. Figuratively, a small band of soldiers.

MANIPULATION, s. [manipulus, Lat.] in Experimental Science, the act of performing the manual or mechanical part of any experiment. It is used particularly with reference to the exact and most successful modes of performing experiments in chemical science.

MANNTIS, s. in Zoology, a singular quadruped, which in its manners approaches the ant-eaters, and in its general appearance the lizards. It is covered with sharp scales, which are its defence against the most savage inhabitants of the forest.

MANKILLER, s. a murderer.

MANKIND, s. the human species.

MANLESS, a. without men; not manned.

MANLIKE, a. strong; vigorous; resembling a man full grown, and in his greatest perfection.

MANLINESS, s. the appearance of a man full grown, and arrived at years of discretion; bravery; stoutness; dignity.

MANLIUS, the name of one of the noble families of ancient Rome, the deeds of some of whose most famous men have evidently been handed down to us by the bard, and not by the sober historian. One Manlius alone hurled down the Gauls who were scaling the Capitoline rock, the last refuge of Rome, and was afterwards, by the envy of his fellow citizens, cast down from the Tarpeian rock. Another slew a huge Gaul, and carried off his golden collar as a spoil, bearing ever after the name of Torquatus; he also put to death his own son, for daring to engage an enemy in single combat, contrary to his general orders. All which tales, and others like them, are of such a stamp, or so often repeated in Roman story, as to be properly regarded as myths, or tales in the framing of which the invention of the bard had a greater share than the might of the hero.

MANLY, a. becoming a man; stout; brave; or with undaunted courage and resolution.

MANNA, s. [Heb.] in Sacred History, an extraordinary kind of food, which was miraculously supplied for the sustenance of the Israelites during their wanderings in the wilderness. In Medicine, a gum, which is a juice resembling honey that is concentered into a solid form, seldom so dry but it adheres more or less to the fingers in handling. Its colour is whitish, yellowish, or brownish; its taste is as sweet as sugar, with a sharpness that renders it very agreeable. It is the product of two different trees, but both the varieties of ash. The finest manna is that which oozes out of the leaves of that tree in August. It is a very mild purgative, and hence is used for very young children.

MANNER, s. [manier, Fr.] form; method; custom; habit; fashion. In Painting, it is a habit that a man acquires in some particular parts of painting, the management of colours, lights, and shadows; but the best painter is he who has no manner at all. In the plural, the general course of life a man leads, his morals or habits; ceremonious behaviour; studied civility.

MANNERLINESS, s. the quality of behaving with civility or complaisance.

MANNERLY, a. [manierlich, Belg.] civil; complaisant; well bred.—ad. in a civil or complaisant manner.

MANNISH, a. having the appearance of, or becoming, a man. Figuratively, bold; masculine.

MANOR, s. [manoir, old Fr.] in law, an estate, held originally from the king, but granted to tenants on condition of service, rent, &c. &c. A manor includes the lands held in freehold by the lord; the lands held in copyhold by others; and sometimes such additional advantages as the right of presentation to the living, the commonages, the rents for stalls, &c. set up on market-days and fairs, &c. &c. There are other privileges pertaining to manors; such as the holding of manor courts, or courts-baron; the sole possession of waste lands, &c. &c.; which are even more opposed to the spirit of the times than the foregoing are. But, as this whole chapter of Common Law belongs to sheer-feudalism, it were as well that it were abolished, with sundry other feudalities, equally and more unfitted for these days, or in themselves unjust.

MANORIAL, a. in Law, pertaining to a manor.

MANs, LE, capital of the department of Sarthe, France. It stands on the river Sarthe, and the new town, which stands on the ground rising from the river, is handsomely built. Here are several churches worthy of note,—the cathedral especially, and the one that has the public library. Beside these there are a theatre, and the usual municipal buildings. There is a considerable amount of manufacturing industry displayed here. It is 119 miles from Paris. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 48. 1. N. Long. 0. 12. E.

MANSE, s. [mansio, from maneo, Lat.] a parsonage house, farm, and land.

MANSFIELD, Nottinghamshire. It is seated on the edge of the forest of Sherwood, and has a great trade in corn and malt, and a considerable manufacture of stockings. It is 140 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 9758.

MANSFIELD, WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF, a celebrated lawyer and statesman of England, in the last century. After studying at Lincoln's Inn, he rose by his eminence as an orator in the House of Commons, and at the bar, to be successively solicitor-general, attorney-general, chief justice of the King's Bench, and lord chancellor. He gained the deep hatred of the people by the part he took in the prosecution of the printers of Junius's Letters, and of Wilkes; and in the No-popery riots of 1780, his house was attacked and burnt down, with his valuable library and paintings, for which he would accept no compensation from the government. He died in 1793, aged 88 years.

MAN'SION, (mánshon) s. [mansio, Lat.] a place of residence, an abode or house. In Law, the lord's chief dwelling-house within his fee or manor.

MANSLAUGHTER, (manláiter) s. in its primary signification, murder, or destruction of the human species. In Law, the killing a person without malice prepense, as in a sudden quarrel, &c. See HOMICIDE.

MANSLAYER, s. one that kills another.

MANSUETE, (mansuét) a. [mansuetus, Lat.] gentle; tractable; good-natured.

MANSUETUDE, (mánsuetude) s. gentleness, mildness; clemency.

MANTEGAR, s. in Zoology, the tufted ape, a species of monkey.

MANTEL, s. [old Fr.] work raised before a chimney to conceal it.

MANTELET, s. [Fr.] a short kind of a cloak worn by women. In Fortification, a kind of movable penthouse, made of pieces of timber sawed into planks, which being about three inches thick, are nailed one over another to the height of almost six feet; they are generally cased with tin, and set upon little wheels; so that in a siege they may be driven before the pioneers, and serve as blinds to shelter them from the enemy's small shot; there are other mantelets covered on the top, whereof the miners make use to approach the walls of a town or castle.

MANTIGER, s. in Zoology, a large monkey or baboon.

MANTIS, s. [Gr.] in Entomology, the name of a very peculiar genus of insects, found in all tropical and hot countries; and distinguished by their singular forms, and the postures they assume, which have caused one species to be called the praying Mantia.

MAN'TLE, s. [mantell, Brit.] a kind of cloak, or loose cloth or silk worn over the rest of the dress. It was formerly used by kings and military commanders, as one of the insignia of their rank.

To MAN'TLE, v. a. to cloak; to cover; to disguise.
To MAN'TLE, v. n. to spread the wing as a hawk in pleasure; to joy or revel; to be expanded, or spread luxuriantly. To froth or ferment, applied to liquors.

MAN'TLE-PIECE, s. in Carpentry, a frame of wood with a narrow shelf across the upper part, placed round a fire-place, as a finish and ornament to it. They are, often, for greater security and elegance, made of marble, with sculptures on the uprights and centre.

MAN'TLETREE, s. in Carpentry, the piece of timber running across the head of the opening of a chimney.

MAN'TON, THOMAS, an eminent Nonconformist and divine of England. He studied at Oxford, and held a distinguished place amongst the ministers of London during the reign of Cromwell, whose installation sermon he preached. He was offered a royal chaplaincy at the Restoration; but was ejected by the Act of Uniformity; and died in 1677, aged 57 years. His works, which include some well-known practical and devotional commentaries, form 5 folio volumes.

MAN'TUA, a famous city of Venetian Lombardy, Italy, seated on an island in the midst of a lake, and very strong by situation as well as art, as there is no coming at it except by two causeways which cross the lake. It is very large, having 8 gates, above 40 churches, with almshouses, oratories, convents, and nunneries. The streets are broad and straight, and the houses well built. It was greatly noted for its silk and other manufactures; but they are now inconsiderable, and the population is much lessened, because the air in the summer-time is unwholesome. It is seated on the river Mincio, and has a university; 220 miles from Rome. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 45. S. N. Long. 10. 46. E.

MAN'TUA, (mantô) s. [corrupted from manteau, Fr.] a woman's gown.

MAN'TUA-MAKER, (mantô-mâker) s. a person who makes gowns for women.

MAN'UAL, a. [manus, Lat.] performed by the hand; used by the hand.

MAN'UAL, s. a small book, such as may be easily carried in the hand.

MANUDU'CTION, s. [manus and duco, Lat.] the act of guiding or leading by the hand.

MANUFA'CTORY, s. [manus and facio, Lat.] a place wherein great numbers of people are assembled to work upon any particular sort of goods; a commodity, or any sort of work made by the hand.

MANUFA'CTURE, s. any sort of work made by the hand.

To MANUFA'CTURE, v. a. to produce or work upon any thing by the hands, or by art.

MANUFA'CTURER, s. one who performs any thing by labour of the hands, or keeps great numbers of men to work on any particular commodity.

MAN'UL, s. in Zoology, an animal of the cat kind, about the size of a fox, which inhabits Siberia, and preys upon the smaller quadrupeds.

MANUMISSION, s. [manus and mitto, Lat.] the act of giving liberty to slaves.

To MANUMI'ZE, MANUMI't, v. a. to set free or deliver from slavery.

MANURABLE, a. capable of being rendered better by cultivation.

To MANURE, v. a. [manouver, Fr.] to cultivate or improve ground by husbandry or manual labour; to dung or fatten land.

MANURE, s. the general name of substances used by farmers to renovate and increase the productive power of the soil, whether it be manure, lime, &c., or animal matter and excrement, or chemical compositions.

MANUREMENT, s. the improvement of land by manual labour, or covering it with manure.

MANURER, s. a person who enriches and improves land; a husbandman.

MANUSCRIPT, s. [manus and scribo, Lat.] a written book or copy, generally applied to such books as have never been printed.

MANUTIS, the name of three famous scholars and printers of Italy in the 16th century. Aldus Manutius established a printing office at Venice during the first glow of enthusiasm in classical study, when Italy was thronged with learned men, and to recover or discover a MS. of any classical author was greater glory than to found or conquer a kingdom. His editions were remarkable for the accuracy and care of their execution, and are equal in rank as authorities in recension to late MSS. He was intimate with all the scholars of the day, and wrote annotations, grammars, and dictionaries himself. He died in 1515, aged 68 years. His son Paul, and his grandson Aldus, continued the labours and maintained the celebrity of the Aldine press. The former died in 1574, aged 62 years, and the latter in 1597, aged 50 years; and with him expired the reputation of the family in this particular field of labour.

MAN'Y, a. comparat. more, superlat. most; [manig, Sax.] consisting of a great number; numerous; several. An indefinite number, preceded and followed by as; all that.

MAN'YCOLOURED, a. having various and different colours.

MAN'YHEADED, a. having several or a great number of heads.

MAN'YTIMES, ad. often or frequently.

MAP, s. [mappe, low Lat.] in Geography, a plan or representation of the globe of the earth, or any part of it, constructed so as to enable those that use them to know the figure of different countries, seas, rivers, &c., and the exact position of mountains, lakes, cities, &c. There are various modes of constructing them employed; for which see Gnomonic, Stereographic, Orthographic, Globular, and Mercator's Projection.

To MAP, v. a. to make a map; to delineate a country, &c. on paper, &c.

MAP'LE, s. [mapul, Sax.] in Botany, a tree whose wood is used for many purposes, especially for ornament.

MA'PURITO, s. in Zoology, a kind of weasel found in New Spain.

To MAR, v. a. [amyrrian, Sax.] to injure; to spoil, hurt, or damage.

MA'KANATHA, s. [Sr.] a form of threatening, cursing, and anathematizing, among the Jews.

MARANHÃO, a sea-port town of Brazil, S. America. It is seated on the N. coast of that country, on an island of the same name, and is divided into the New and Old Town. It has a good harbour, but difficult of access. It is one of the most important trading-places of Brazil, and receives vessels from all parts of the world. It is fortified, and though not well built, has some handsome edifices. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 3. 20. S. Long. 45. 0. W.

MA'RANON, a name of the river Amazon in S. America.

MARAS'MUS, s. [marasmos, from maraino, Gr.] in Medicine, extreme wasting or consumption of the whole body.

MARAT, JEAN PAUL, one of the prominent characters in the most revolting period of the French Revolution. He was a Swiss by birth, and became a sort of quack physician and horse doctor at Paris. He set up an atrocious paper called the Friend of the People, which was ever denouncing aristocrats, recommending assassinations, and bewailing the feebleness of all who did not long for blood as the editor did. He was such a favourite of the mob, that he was elected for the Convention, and took part in all its proceedings, especially in the overthrow of the Girondists. He was once arrested and tried, but, of course, acquitted, and became more popular than ever. He was in the Committee of Safety, and his zeal procured his death. He had caused the murder of a young soldier in Normandy: his affianced love, Charlotte Corday, during the attempt at a revolutionary movement in favour of the Girondists there, went privately to Paris, obtained access to Marat, and stabbed him to death as he sat in a bath, in 1793, aged 49 years. He was a pure fanatic. He had not 13 pence of his own in the world when he was killed. He was placed at first in the National Pantheon, but after the fall of Robespierre, cast out with ignominy. See CORDAY.

MARAVEDI, s. a small Spanish copper coin, worth about half a farthing English.

MARAU/DER, s. one who roves about for purposes of plunder.

MARAU/DING, a. ranging about for plunder.

MAR/BLE, s. [marbre, Fr.] in the Arts and Building, a kind of stone of so compact a substance, and so fine a grain, that it readily takes a beautiful polish, and is used in statues, chimney-pieces, &c. Small round stones played with by children. Figuratively, applied to sculpture. "The Arundelian marbles."

MAR/BLE, a. made of marble; variegated, or of different colours, like marble.

To MAR/BLE, v. a. [marbrer, Fr.] to paint with veins, clouds, or different colours, in resemblance of marble.

MAR/BLED, a. something veined or clouded in imitation of marble.

MARCELLUS, BENEDETTO, a Venetian senator, who cultivated with great success the science of music, and composed music to a version of the Psalms, which has received the admiration and praise of all judges of composition. He died in 1739, aged 53 years.

MARCELLUS, M. CLAUDIUS, the great Roman general who overcame Hannibal in the second Punic war, took Syracuse after the long defence conducted by Archimedes, whose life Marcellus sought vainly to preserve, and fell at length, near Venusia, in a battle with the Carthaginian army, in 209 B. C.

MARCH, s. [Mars, Lat.] the name of the third month of the year, reckoning January as the first. Till the alteration of style in 1564 among the French, and in 1752 in England, it was esteemed the first month, and the year began on the 25th, or Lady-day.

To MARCH, v. n. [marcher, Fr.] to journey, applied to an army. To walk in a grave, solemn, and deliberate manner.—v. a. to put in motion, or make an army advance; to bring on in regular procession.

MARCH, s. a motion, walk, or journey of soldiers; a grave and solemn walk; a tune played on instruments during the march or progress of an army; signals for an army to move. In the plural, the borders, limits, or confines of a country.

MAR/CHER, s. [marcheur, Fr.] a president of the marches or borders.

MAR/CHIONESS, (in pronunciation the i is mute,) s. the wife of a marquis.

MAR/CHPANE, s. [massepiane, Fr.] a kind of sweet-bread or biscuit.

MARCIA/NUS, one of the Byzantine emperors, who rose by courage and character, from the ranks of the army, to marry the emperor's sister, and to succeed him on the throne. He refused the tribute to Attila; and died in 457, after an honourable reign of 6 years.

MAR/CID, a. [marceo, Lat.] lean; pining. Withered, applied to plants.

MAR/CIONITES, in Ecclesiastical History, one of the Gnostic sects of the early church, who followed the doctrines of Marcion, a priest of Sinope, which were based on the theology of the Zendish religion. They spread much in the East, where their tenets were popular. Tertullian was one of the most eminent of their opponents. Marcion amended the Gospel of Luke and the first 10 Epistles of Paul, so as to make them agree with his doctrines, and rejected the other books of the New Testament. They were not much heard of after the 3rd century.

MAR/COUR, s. leanness; the state of withering; a consumption or waste of flesh.

MARE, s. [mare, Sax.] the female of a horse. The night-mare, or more properly night-mair, is an affection of the nervous system, occasioned by the state of the stomach; and as the sensation resembles that of being oppressed by an insupportable weight, and the dreams accompanying it are characterized by all imaginable horrors, it was personified by the northern nations, and represented as a fiend.

MARE/MMA, the general name by which the low marshy lands of S. Italy, bordering on the Mediterranean, are known.

MAR/ESCHAL, s. [Fr.] See MARSHAL.

MAR/ESTALL, s. in Botany, a plant with narrow leaves, growing in whorls round the joints, with flowers having only one stamen and one pistil, without blossom or impalement, and a straight stem. It is found in muddy ditches and ponds.

MAR/GARITE, s. [margarita, Lat.] a pearl.

MAR/GARTE, Kent. It stands on the N. side of the isle of Thanet, within a small bay in the breach of the cliff. It is a place of great resort for sea-bathing, the shore being level and covered with fine sand, well adapted for that purpose. Great quantities of corn are exported hence, and vessels are frequently passing to and from the coast of Flanders. It is built on an easy ascent, the principal street being near a mile in length. It is 72 miles from London. Pop. 11,050.

MARGE, MAR/AGENT, MAR/GIN, s. the last is most in use; [margo, Lat.] the border; a brink, edge, or verge; the border of paper in a book, which surrounds the page; the edge of a wound or sore.

MAR/GINAL, a. [Fr.] placed or written on the blank space or border of a book.

MAR/GINATED, a. [margo, Lat.] having a margin.

MAR/GRAVE, s. [mark and graff, Teut.] a title of sovereignty in Germany, which signifies literally a keeper of the marches or borders.

MARIA THERE/SA, the celebrated empress of Germany during the last century. She was by hereditary succession queen of Hungary, &c., and being attacked by the Elector of Bavaria, was supported by her nobles in a way worthy of her own daring and imperial spirit. After a series of wars, she was secured in her possessions by the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. She had however new wars with Frederick the Great, which ended in the loss of some parts of her dominions, and in the gain of part of Poland, which she shared with Russia and Prussia. Her reign was in respect of internal and domestic government as good as that of an absolute sovereign could be. She encouraged industry, learning, science; suppressed the Inquisition and the Jesuits, reformed the order of the convents, and gained a great name and deserved a good one. She died in 1780, aged 63 years. Her daughter, Marie Antoinette, was the queen of Louis XVI., and the sharer of his downfall and death. She was thoughtless and perverse during her prosperity; but appeared to great advantage during her deep and affecting calamities. She was guillotined in 1793, aged 38 years.

MARIA/NA, JUAN DE, a celebrated Spanish historian; studied at Alcalá, and joined the order of Jesuits. He was so distinguished for his attainments that he was made professor of theology at Rome, and afterwards at Paris, at a very early age. His History of Spain is a valuable work; and his tractate on Royalty, which advocates the right of a people to kill their king if tyrannical, excited some feeling in France, that it was publicly burnt. His other works show his learning, and also the fearlessness and generosity of his character. He died in 1624, aged 58 years.

MAR/GOLD, s. in Botany, a common yellow garden flower, so called from being devoted, perhaps, to the Virgin.

To MAR/INATE, v. a. [mariner, Fr.] to salt fish, and afterwards preserve it in oil or vinegar.

MAR/INE, (marinen) a. [mare, Lat.] belonging to the sea.

MAR/INE, (marinen) s. [la yarine, Fr.] sea affairs or forces; a soldier taken on board a ship to be employed in naval engagements, &c.

MAR/INER, s. a seaman or sailor.

MAR/INER'S COMPASS. See COMPASS.

MAR/JORAM, [marjorana, Lat.] in Botany, a well-known fragrant plant. There are two species of this plant native in England.

MAR/ITAL, s. [Fr. from maritus, Lat.] belonging or incident to a husband.

MAR/ITIMAL, MAR/ITIME, a. [maritimus, Lat.] performed at, or belonging to, the sea; bordering on the sea; naval.

MARI/US, CAIUS, a celebrated Roman general, and political partisan. He was a native of Arpinum, and was distinguished for his military skill, by Scipio, at the siege of Numantia. He defeated the Numidians, and conquered Jugurtha; for which he was honoured with a triumph. He similarly conquered the Cimbrians and Teutons, who had invaded Italy. In the Marston or social war he also distinguished himself;—and during all these events, he joined in the struggle that was then going on between the nobles and the knights, to which latter body he belonged. But when the command in the war against Mithridates of Pontus was given to Sylla, Marius used every effort to prevent his having that honour: Sylla, however, returned at the head of his army to Rome, and Marius was obliged to flee. After many wanderings and dangers, in the absence of Sylla in Asia, he returned, and proscribed and killed all the partisans of Sylla he could: but he died in the next year, 86 B. C., aged about 72 years.

MARK, one of the early converts to Christianity, and a companion of Paul and Barnabas, in their apostolic journeys and labours. Nothing certain is known of him, beyond what is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, and incidentally disclosed in the Epistles of Paul; but tradition says that he died in Egypt, whither he had gone as evangelist, in about 62 A. D. The Gospel according to Mark was written by him; and is the shortest of the 4 evangelical narratives. That it is an independently written history is evident; although in several parts it coincides, even to the words, with Matthew or Luke. This feature will be found to distinguish this record of the different incidents; they are always narrated with considerable graphic power: whereas in Matthew, the main point of the fact is brought into prominence, and the rest hastily related; and in Luke, there is all the diversity which would attend the work of a compiler. Tradition ascribes to Mark the aid of Peter in the composition of his Gospel, but that is far from credibly established. He appears to have written for the use of the church at Rome.

MARK, s. [mare, Brit. meare, Sax.] a token by which a thing is known and distinguished from another; an impression; a proof or evidence; any thing which a gun or other missile weapon is directed towards; the sign by which a horse's age may be discovered; a character made by those who cannot write their names.—[marc, Fr.] a piece of money valued at 13s. 4d.—[marque, Fr.] a letter of mark or marque, a licence given by a king or state, whereby private persons are authorized to fit out ships, and make reprisals on the subjects of another state.

TO MARK, v. [marquer, Fr.] to make an impression, character, or sign, by which a thing may be known or distinguished from others; to note, observe, or take notice of.—n. to observe, or take notice of; to work letters or figures on linen, &c.

MARKER, s. one who makes some sign, character, or impression on a thing; one that takes notice of a thing.

MARKET, s. anciently written mercat, [mercatus, Lat.] a public time or place wherein things are bought and sold; purchase or sale. Figuratively, price; rate.

TO MARKET, v. to deal at market either in buying or selling; to make bargains.

MARKETABLE, a. such as may be sold commonly in a market.

MARKET-CROSS, s. a cross formerly set up where a market was held.

MARKET-DAY, s. a day on which things are bought and sold in a market.

MARKET-DEE-PING. See DEEPING.

MARKET-DRAUGHTON. See DRAUGHTON.

MARKET-HARBOROUGH. See HARBOROUGH.

MARKET-MAN, s. a man that goes to the market to buy or sell; one that understands dealing at a market.

MARKET-PLACE, s. a place where a market is held.

MARKET-PRICE, MARKET-RATE, s. the price at which any thing is commonly sold in or out of a market.

MARKET-TOWN, s. a town that has the privilege of a stated market.

MARKSMAN, MARKSMAN, s. a person skilled in hitting a mark.

MARL, s. [marl, Brit.] a mixture of carbonate of lime and clay, which is of great use in agriculture.

TO MARL, v. a. to manure with marl.

TO MARL, v. a. [from marline.] to bind untwisted hemp dipped in pitch round a cable, in order to guard it from friction.

MARLBOROUGH, (Maulbörö) Wiltshire. It is seated on the Kennet, 74 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 3391.

MARLBOROUGH, JOHN CHURCHILL, DUKE OF, the great general and statesman of England, during the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th century. He commenced life as page to the Duke of York in the infamous court of Charles II. Tangier was the first scene of his military skill, but he learnt the art of strategy and war under Turenne in the campaigns preceding the peace of Nimegue. On his return, he married Sarah Jennings, one of the beauties of the court, and one not tainted by its corruption. He was distinguished in various ways by his early patron, especially after his accession to the throne as James II.; and he suppressed the insurrection raised by the Duke of Monmouth, and took the unfortunate author of it prisoner. The aristocratic revolution of 1688, and the reign of William III. are the blackest spot in the duke's history: it is a tissue of mean and inconsistent falsehood; and the successful competitor for the crown well understood the worth and the worthlessness of the great favourite of the last Stuart. With the reign of Anne, the period of his glory commenced: he was appointed to command the allied army against the French, and in that command, in spite of Dutch phlegm, he won the great battles of Blenheim, Ramilies, Oudenarde, and Malplaquet, and took innumerable places by siege and storm. The triumphant return of the great general was the first step in his fall; and how humiliating to him and to the nation it was the brief statement of it possibly will show. Anne was a Tory, the Duchess of Marlborough a Whig, and the alienation between these women, fomented by backstairs' schemers, was the sole reason for the command being withdrawn from him. He travelled on the continent with his duchess till the House of Hanover ascended the throne, when he was nominally restored to his honours, but not more: he died in 1722, aged 72 years. The greatness of Marlborough's intellect was not displayed in battles alone; as a statesman he was equally eminent; but the utter want of principle he showed himself to be characterized by, though common to the age, yet deprived him of all glory, save that of being in war and policy an accomplished, if not an original, strategist.

MARLINE, s. [meare, Sax.] a long wreath of untwisted hemp, dipped in pitch, with which the ends of cables are guarded, to preserve them from friction.

MARLINESPIKE, s. a small piece of iron, used in fastening ropes together, or in opening the bolt of a rope, when a sail is to be sewed to it.

MARLOW, GREAT, Buckinghamshire. It is seated on the river Thames, over which is a bridge into Berkshire. Its manufactures are, making bone-lace, paper, and thimbles, and there are several corn mills on the Loddon, between this town and High Wycombe. It is 31 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 4480.

MARLOWE, CHRISTOPHER, an English dramatist of the reign of Elizabeth. His plays which are preserved sustain the reputation he enjoyed; but beyond his dramatic power he had nothing to commend him, and he fell in a quarrel, that sufficiently shows the profligacy of his character, in 1593, aged about 30 years.

MARLPIT, s. a pit out of which marl is dug.

MARLY, a. abounding with marl.

MARMA LADE, MARMALET, s. [marmalade, Fr.] a confection of plums, oranges, quinces, &c. cut and boiled with sugar.

MARMONTEL, JEAN FRANÇOIS, an eminent French writer of the last century. He obtained considerable distinction during the reign of Louis XV., having the friendship of Voltaire and his associated infidels, and the patronage of Madame de Pompadour. The Revolution deprived him of his position and income, but he did not feel its heaviest blows. He transiently appeared on the public stage as a statesman, when the Revolution was getting settled, but the greater part of his time was spent in literary retirement. He died in 1799, aged 76 years. His Moral Tales, and Bedeuilles are well known in England, and are a good specimen of his writings.

MARMORA, THE SEA OF, between Europe and Asia, which communicates with the Straits of Gallipoli and the Strait of Constantinople. It is 90 miles in length, and 44 in breadth, and was anciently called the Propontis.

MARMOSET, s. [marmonset, Fr.] in Zoology, a small monkey. MARMIOT, MARMOÛTO, s. [Ital.] in Zoology, an animal which bears some resemblance to the rat. They live in companies, and make themselves habitations on the sides of mountains, where they pass the winter months in a state of insensibility.

MARNE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Aube, Haute Marne, Meuse, Ardennes, Aisne, and Seine et Marne. It is about 70 miles in length, by 60 in breadth. It is a tolerably level region, its hills not being abrupt, and being not more than about 1000 feet in height. It is watered by various feeders of the Seine, from one of which it is named. It yields building-stone, limestone, and grit for mill-stones; and produces corn of all kinds, fruits, herbs, Champagne wine, timber of good quality and various kinds; sheep, cattle, &c. &c. It has also some valuable manufactories. Châlons sur Marne is the capital. Pop. about 350,000.

MARNE, HAUTE, a département of France, surrounded by the departments of Marne, Aube, Côte d'Or, Haute Saône, Vosges, and Meuse. It is about 75 miles long, and 45 broad. The chain of the Cevennes crosses this département, but it does not attain any very considerable height. The Marne is its chief river; others flow into the Seine, or feed the Marne. This district yields iron in plenty, good building-stone, &c.; corn, walnuts, wine, cattle, &c. Iron-works are its principal scenes of manufacturing industry. Its chief town is Chaumont. Pop. about 260,000.

MARONITES, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect of eastern Christians, who follow the Syrian rite, and are subject to the pope; their principal habitation being on Mount Lebanon. They are about 250,000 in number, and are of a very warlike disposition, and trained to arms.

MAROONS, a name given to those negroes who, on the conquest of Jamaica in the time of Cromwell, deserted their Spanish masters, and betook themselves to the mountains, and maintained themselves in independence. This was afterwards confirmed to them by treaty, and a distinct portion of land allowed them for their residence; but on occasion of a revolt the greater part of them were destroyed and transported. Slaves who run away from their owners, and live in the bush, are usually, now, called Maroons.

MARQUESAS, a set of islands in the South Sea, thirteen in number, and divided into two groups. The islands, though mountainous, have many valleys, which widen towards the sea, and are covered with fine forests to the summits of the interior mountains. The products of these islands are, bread-fruit, bananas, plantains, cocoa-nuts, scarlet-beans, paper-mulberries, of the bark of which their cloth is made, with other tropical plants and trees; and hogs and fowls, left there by visitors. They have also plenty of fish. The natives are of a tawny complexion, but look almost black, from being punctured over the whole body. They go almost naked, having only a small piece of cloth round their waist and loins. Their beard and hair are of a fine jet black, like those of the other natives of the torrid zone. They are strong, tall, well-limbed, and active in the highest degree, and their arms were clubs and spears; their government monarchical. The drink of the Marquesans is purely water, cocoa-nuts being rather scarce. Their music, musical instruments, dances, and canoes, resemble those of Otaheite. These have lately been taken possession of by the French. Lat. 9. 55. S. Long. 130. 9. W.

MARQUETRY, s. [marqueterie, Fr.] chequered work; work inlaid with various colours.

MARQUIS, s. [Fr.] a title of honour next to a duke. MARQUISATE, s. [marquisat, Fr.] the rank, seigniority, or province of a marquis.

MARRER, s. [mar, Fr.] one who spoils, damages, or hurts any thing or person.

MARRIAGE, s. [marriage, Fr.] the act or ceremony, ordained by any government, by which a man and a woman are lawfully united for life. This word is very often joined with others in composition, and then takes the nature of an adjective.

MARRIAGEABLE, (marriageable) a. fit for marriage; of an age to be married.

MARRIED, part. a. conjugal; connubial.

MARROW, (marrô, the w is mute at the end of this word and its derivatives,) s. [mero, Sax.] an oleaginous or fat substance contained in the hollow of a bone. Figuratively, the quintessence or best part of any thing.

MARROWBONE, s. any hollow bone of an animal containing marrow.

MARROWFEAT, s. in Horticulture, a large kind of pea.

MARROWLESS, a. without marrow.

TO MARRY, v. a. [marier, Fr.] to join a man and a woman together in marriage; to dispose of in marriage; to take for a husband or wife.—v. n. to enter into the state of marriage.

MAIRS, s. in Astronomy, one of the superior planets, whose orbit lies next beyond that of the earth. Diameter, about 4100 miles; time of rotation on his axis, or length of day, 24 hours and rather more than a half; time of revolution in his orbit, or length of year, nearly 687 days; mean distance from the sun, 145,000,000 miles. The appearance of this planet through a telescope is very remarkable, as presenting so near an analogy to the condition of our globe. Round the poles are observed two spots of a white colour which contrast strongly with the dusky red and the dark spots of the other parts, and it is known that the spot which surrounds the pole farthest from the sun, is always much greater in extent than the one surrounding the pole nearest to the sun; which is the exact representation of the appearance of the ice-fields round the poles of our own planet. It has no satellite. In Roman mythology, the god of war.

MAIRS, MARSH, MAS, [marse, Sax.] in the names of places, a fen or watery place.

MARSDEN, DR. WILLIAM, an eminent antiquary and orientalist. He went to Bencoolen, in Sumatra, at an early age, and stayed there till he was about 25, when he returned to England; and after a time spent in literary labour, he obtained the post of secretary to the admiralty, which he relinquished, for a retiring pension, after 12 years. He then continued his oriental labours and publications. He gave up his pension of his own accord in 1831; and died in 1836, aged 81 years. His works relate chiefly to the languages of the Malay Peninsula and Archipelago; but he also wrote a History of Sumatra, and a work on the coins of the Eastern nations. He left his coins, &c. to the British Museum; and to King's College, London, his library.

MARSEILLES, a flourishing sea-port in the département of Bouches du Rhône, France. It is seated on the Mediterranean, at the upper end of a gulf, covered and defended by many small islands, and is divided into the Old Town or the City, and the New Town. The armoury here is one of the finest, and contains arms for 40,000 men. Here is also a large arsenal, well stored with all the implements for building and fitting out the galleys. The harbour is not deep enough for men of war. With respect to commerce, Marseilles has been eminent since the days of antiquity, and it is now sometimes called Europe in Miniature, on account of the variety of dresses and languages. Its manufactures are numerous, and embrace a great variety of useful and costly commodities. Marseilles is 450 miles from Paris. Pop. about 130,000. Lat. 43. 18. N. Long. 5. 22. E.

MARSH, s. [marse, Sax.] a fen, bog, swamp, or tract of land abounding in water.

MARSHAL, s. [mareschal, Fr.] the chief officer of an army. An officer who regulates combats in the lists; any one who regulates the rank or order at a feast or other assembly; one who puts things or persons in proper order; an harbinging, or one who goes before a prince, to give notice of his coming, and prepare for his reception.

TO MARSHAL, v. a. to place in proper ranks or order; to lead as an harbinging.

MARSHALLER, s. a person that puts things in order.

MARSHALSEA, s. a prison in Southwark, belonging to the marshal of the king's household.

MARSHALSHIP, s. the office of a marshal.

MARSH CISTUS, s. in Botany, the wild rosemary.

MARSHFIELD, Gloucestershire. It has a manufactory of broad-cloth, and a considerable trade in malt. It is seated on the Cotswold Hills, 105 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1674.

MARSHLOCKS, s. in Botany, an herb, the same with the purple marsh cinque-foil.

MARSHMALLOWS, s. in Botany, a plant with simple downy leaves, and purplish white blossoms; found in flower, in salt marshes, in August.

MARSHWORT, s. in Botany, a plant with oblong egg-shaped leaves, and white blossoms; called also the round-leaved water-pimpernel.

MARSHY, a. boggy; wet; produced in marshes.

MART, s. [contracted from market.] a place of public traffic, or trade. Figuratively, a bargain, whether purchase or sale.

To MART, v. a. to trade; to buy or sell.

MARTELO TOWER, a kind of fort, consisting simply of a strongly built circular tower, not often more than two stories high, and having guns mounted on swivels on the flat roof. A few men in one of these towers are capable of making a desperate resistance; but that is the whole benefit of them.

M'ARTEN, M'ARTERN, s. [marle, Fr.] in Zoology, a large kind of weasel, whose skin or fur is much valued.—[marlete, Fr.] a kind of swallow that builds in houses.

MARTIAL, (márshal) a. [martialis, Lat.] warlike; brave; given to war; having a warlike show; used in war. Martial Law, is the superseding of the civil authorities by the military, in case of tumult or insurrection.

MARTIALIS, M. VALERIUS, or MARTIAL, a Latin poet of the 1st century A. D., whose works consist of 14 books of epigrams, some of which are admirable for poetry of expression and thought, others dull or incomprehensible, and many filthy beyond belief. The facts of his life are recorded only by his own pen, and all that can be certainly made out is, that he left his native town in Spain in early manhood, and afterwards returned there, having been enriched by the favour of several successive emperors. He died in about 104 A. D., aged 60 years.

MARTIALIST, s. a warrior; a fighter.

MARTIN, ST., one of the W. India islands, between Anguilla and St. Bartholomew. It is above 10 miles long, and 4 broad on the average. It is hilly, and not very fertile, yet it yields the usual products of those islands. It belongs to the Dutch. Near its only town, Philipsburg, is a good harbour. Pop. about 150,000.

MARTINET, M'RTLET, s. [martinet, Fr.] a kind of swallow. In Heraldry, they are represented without feet, and used as a difference or mark of distinction for younger brothers.

MARTINETS, s. in Shipping, small lines fastened to the leech of a sail, to bring that part of the leech next to the yard-arm close up to the yard, when the sail is to be furled.

MARTINGALE, s. [Fr.] a broad leather thong or strap, fastened at one end to the girth, under the belly of a horse, from whence it passes between his fore legs, and is fastened at the other end to the nose-band of the bridle, to prevent a horse from rearing.

MARTINICO, a considerable island of the West Indies, about 50 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. There are 3 high mountains, with numerous hills of a conical form, and several rivers and fertile valleys, but they will not bear either wheat or vines. It possesses many natural advantages, and, in particular, its harbours afford a certain shelter from the hurricanes. It exports sugar, cocoa, cassia, ginger, cotton, indigo, chocolate, aloes, pimento, tobacco, yarn, plantains, molasses, preserved fruits, &c., and has several safe and commodious harbours. The principal places are Fort Royal, Fort St. Peter, Fort Trinity, and Fort de Moulillage. It belongs to the French. Pop. about 120,000. Fort Royal is in Lat. 14. 44. N. Long. 61. 11. W.

MARTINMAS, s. in the Church Calendar, the feast of St. Martin. Nov. 11th.

MARTYN, HENRY, an eminent and devoted missionary to the East Indies. He studied at Cambridge, and with such zeal as to obtain the highest university honours. He was intimate with the equally well-known and esteemed Simeon, and determined to undertake the work of a missionary here he left Cambridge. Having reached India as chaplain of the Company, he studied the languages so successfully as to translate the New Testament into Hindustanee, and afterwards into Persian. Finding his health fail, he resolved to return home by land, but he proceeded no further than Tokat, where he died in 1812, aged but 31 years. The more private facts of his life, as disclosed by his letters and journals, make his history one of the most affecting that can be read. It is a gratifying fact that repeated instances of the effects of his preaching, conversations, and evangelical labours generally, have come to light under most unexpected circumstances.

MARTYR, s. [Gr.] in its primary sense, a witness; in its secondary sense, a witness of the truth of Christianity; and now applied to those only who die in attesting the truth of any doctrine. Also, generally, any one who suffers much pain.

To MARTYR, v. e. to put to death for resolutely maintaining any opinion.

MARTYRDOM, s. the act of putting to death for resolutely and immovably maintaining any opinion; the act of enduring death for the sake of one's religion.

MARTYROLOGIST, s. a writer of martyrology.

MARTYROLOGY, s. [martyr and logos, Gr.] a register or catalogue of martyrs; a history of martyrs.

MARVEL, s. [marveille, Fr.] a wonder; any thing that raises wonder or astonishment.

To MARVEL, v. n. to wonder or be astonished.

MARVELL, ANDREW, a writer and eminent public character of the times of the restored Stuarts, whose conduct seemed to indicate that not all the ancient spirit was dead, or driven into obscurity and exile. He studied at Cambridge; and after travelling on the continent, and being employed by the Puritan government at Constantinople, and as assistant to Milton, was elected for Hull at the Restoration. His writings did some service to the cause of truth and liberty; and he might have been a court favourite and pensioner, but he preferred his garret and his integrity to such honours. He was afterwards secretary to an embassy; and after his return, engaged in a controversy with the celebrated Parker. He died in 1678, aged 58 years. Some of his poetry is known yet; but his claim to remembrance is himself, and that conduct by which he vindicated and represented the principles he avowed, and which ought to have been his as the companion of the bard and prophet of religion and liberty.

MARVELLOUS, a. [marveilleux, Fr.] capable of exciting wonder or astonishment; strange; surpassing credit;—to express any thing exceeding natural power, opposed to probable.

MARVELLOUSLY, ad. in a strange, extraordinary, and wonderful manner.

MARVELOUSNESS, s. the quality which excites wonder and astonishment.

MARY, (commonly designated the FIRST, to distinguish her from the wife of William III., queen of England, and successor to Edward VI., the brief sovereignty of the unfortunate Lady Jane Grey not being reckoned. She was daughter of Henry VIII. by Catherine of Aragon, and was trained in the Romish religion, although, as most persons, she outwardly conformed to the changeable profession of her arbitrary father. Her first act as queen was the punishment of her unsuccessful and guiltless rival, with her friends; and her next, the retracing of the steps which had been taken during her brother's reign in the direction of Protestantism. The Romanist prelates were restored, the Reformed prelates deposed and imprisoned; and all the acts and statutes of the preceding period of change repealed. The sincerity of her attachment to popery she evinced by re-endowing as far as she could the churches and conventual establishments; by marrying the son of the emperor Charles V., Philip, who, as king of Spain, became afterwards the very type of a Romanist prince of those days; and by burning for their heresy some 200 persons, including Cranmer, Ridley, Latimer, Hooper, Dr. Taylor, and several women. Her ministers were worthy of her;—being Gardiner, who maintained the character he had acquired in Henry VIII.'s reign, Cardinal Pole, Bonner, who rivalled the zeal of the holy office itself, &c. The only event of a political character which showed that England during this reign was a European state, was the feeble and hesitating alliance with Spain against France, which lost the country Calais, the only step of French territory that remained to justify the title of king of France, worn at the time by the English monarchs. She died in 1558, aged 42 years, and having reigned 6. The verdict of history on her reign and character, if coincident in phrase with that by which she is commonly characterized, would by no means omit to state that she does not deserve that bad pre-eminence assigned her by those who framed that epithet,—the bloody queen: from the days of Wicliffe to the revolution of 1688, men were persecuted and killed for their religious opinions, with the exception of the too brief period of Cromwell's supremacy; and if the number of sufferers indicates the ferocity of the persecutor, some of the most Protestant monarchs would stand far deeper down in the annals of infamy than the daughter of Henry VIII.

MARY STUART, QUEEN OF SCOTS, was crowned shortly after her birth, as successor to her father, who died then. During her infancy she was sought by Henry VIII. for his son, but the French king obtained her for the dauphin, and she was conveyed to France and educated there, Scotland being left to regents, and so being a prey to all discontents and troubles. After her marriage, the throne of England on the death of Mary was claimed as hers, but fruitlessly, save that it made the politic and powerful Elizabeth the deadly foe of the gentle and beautiful Stuart. Her husband ascended the throne after his father's death, but after about a year died, and Mary returned to her own land. She found all changed from what she had heard or remembered;—the fiercely earnest Knox was the presiding spirit of the nation. Mary's Romanism, however unpopular; her conduct, however defiant of the nation; produced, it seems, but transient displeasure, and she made her handsome and insipid cousin Darnley king-consort, and maintained the faith and the rites of the Romish Church, and the people said but little against it. But soon a change occurred, and then her course was one of almost unbroken gloom and sorrow—not without crime. She had been trained in a court where profligacy was regarded as no wrong; and she permitted persons, whose qualifications as poets or musicians made them welcome at court, to an intimacy, which wore to the stern morality of the nation, and to the jealousy of her husband, all the features of sin. Chateaufort was formally tried, and executed; Rizzio was assassinated before her face. Darnley, to whom Mary shortly afterwards gave a son, who, as James I. reigned over the united kingdom, was apparently reconciled to her; but before long he sickened, and then was by Bothwell's contrivance murdered. For this he was tried, but acquitted; and his next step was to seize Mary's person, divorce his own wife, and marry the dishonoured queen. An insurrection followed this insult to the nation, and she was compelled to abdicate in favour of her infant son, and was imprisoned in the castle of Loch Leven, abandoning Bothwell to his fate. She escaped thence, after a year, raised an army sufficient to make an effort to regain her throne, was defeated, and fled to England, to try the mercy of her cousin and opponent Elizabeth. She was imprisoned, and, after 19 years' duration, tried on a baseless and infamously-maintained charge of conspiring against Elizabeth, and beheaded in 1586, aged 45 years.

MARY II. See WILLIAM III.

MARYBOROUGH, Queen's County, in Leinster, Ireland. It is only considerable for its woollen manufactures; being a small borough, although the county town. It is 43 miles from Dublin. Pop. 3653.

MARYLAND, one of the United States, N. America. It lies on the Atlantic, and is bounded by Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Virginia. It is 196 miles long, and 120 broad; and is divided into 20 counties. The state is divided into two portions, called the E. shore and the W. shore, by the wide river, the Chesapeake. The features of both shores are alike near the sea, being level and marshy, but fertile withal; but in the W., after this region comes a hilly and mountainous region, several ranges of the Alleghanies crossing it. The Potomac and Susquehanna are the chief rivers after the Chesapeake. Iron and coal are found here; and the state produces wheat, tobacco, flax, hemp, fruits, timber, &c. &c., and a little coarse cotton. Its manufactures are considerable; and its trade, both with the other States and with foreign countries, very great; its port, Baltimore, being one of the principal commercial places of the Union. It has two universities, to which several colleges are attached. It has also 13 banks. Annapolis is the seat of government. Pop. 469,232, of whom 89,495 are slaves. Coloured persons have no political rights in this State.

MARYPORT, Cumberland. It is situated at the mouth of the Ellen. Its shipping are engaged in the Baltic and coasting trade; ship-building is carried on pretty extensively. Here are iron works, a very fine glass-house, and a cotton factory. It is 307 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 5311.

MASCULINE, a. [mas, Lat.] male; resembling a man; bold. In Grammar, the gender appropriated to the male kind, though not always expressing sex.

MASCULINELY, ad. like a man; boldly.

MASCULINENESS, s. the quality by which a person resembles a man, applied by way of reproach to women. The figure or behaviour of a man.

MASH, s. [masche, Belg.] the space between the threads of a net; a flat needle used in netting; generally written mesh.—[mischen, Belg.] any thing mingled or confused together; a mixture for a horse.

To MASH, v. a. [mascher, Fr.] to beat or bruise into a confused mass; to mix water and malt together in brewing.

MASHAM, Yorkshire, N. Riding. Here is a considerable cotton manufactory. It is seated on the river Ure, 218 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 2974.

MASK, s. [masque, Fr.] a cover over the face to disguise it; a pretext, or subterfuge. A dramatic piece in a tragic style, without attention either to rule or probability.

To MASK, v. a. [masquer, Fr.] to disguise or cover with a mask. Figuratively, to cover or hide under some pretence.

MASKED, a. covered or concealed.

MASKELYNE, DR. NEVIL, an English mathematician and astronomer, of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and entered the church; but his contemplations and instructions related to the visible heavens; and he did great service to mankind by the skill with which he conducted his observations and calculations. He was sent by the Royal Society to St. Helena, to observe the transit of Venus; he determined the method of finding the longitude by lunar observations; was made Astronomer Royal; and commenced the Nautical Almanac. His writings and other treatises are all devoted to astronomy; and he died in 1811, aged 79 years.

MASKER, s. one who exhibits in a mask.

MASON, s. [maçon, Fr.] one who builds in stone. Freemasons, the members of a fraternity of considerable antiquity, and which used to study the practice of ecclesiastical architecture; but which now seems to be no more than a large and respectable club, remarkable for their pretensions to be something more, and for their grand dinners in London.

MASONRY, s. [maçonnerie, Fr.] the craft or performance of a mason.

MASORA, s. a term in the Jewish theology, signifying a work on the Bible, performed by several learned rabbins, called Masorites; and which consisted in such invaluable services, as counting the letters; preserving rigidly all the spaces between the paragraphs, just as their copy had them; refusing to alter the size of a letter, where fancy or error put one larger or smaller than was fitting; and indicating all these matters in notes, which are retained in all Hebrew Bibles to this day. The insertion of the vowel points and accents, which are partly to aid in reading the text aloud, partly to elucidate the syntax, and partly to fix their meaning on the words, is attributed also to them.

MASQUERADE, s. [mascara, Arab.] a diversion or public assembly, wherein the company is masked and disguised; a disguise.

To MASQUERADE, v. n. to go in disguise; to assemble in masks and other disguises.

MASQUELADDER, s. a person in a mask.

MASS, s. [masse, Fr.] a body; a lump; a large quantity; bulk; a vast body; an assemblage of several things, forming one confused and distinct body; a gross body; the general. In the Roman Church, the name of the church service in which the eucharist is celebrated. Low mass is the ordinary service said by one priest. High mass is the more solemn observance, reserved for special occasions, in which several priests take part.

To MASS, v. n. to celebrate mass.—v. a. to thicken; to strengthen.

MASSA, a duchy of Italy, lying on the Mediterranean, between Tuscany and Carrara. It is about 6 miles in each direction. The town is pretty and pleasantly situated, having a fine cathedral, and a very handsome bridge over the small stream which flows by it. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 41. 1. N. Long. 10. 10. E. It belongs to Modena.

MASSACHUSETTS, one of the United States, N. America; lying on the Atlantic; and bounded by Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. It is 190 miles long, and 90 broad; and is divided into 14 counties. The W. part is mountainous, and the coast region poor in soil; but the greater part of the surface is very fertile. The Connecticut and the Merrimack are the chief rivers. It yields iron, copper, slate, marble, and granite. Agriculture is carefully attended to, and corn of different kinds, cattle and sheep, and fruits are abundantly produced. It is in possession also of valuable fisheries.

Mary smothering

Her brother

Mary Queen of Scots

But its manufactures and its commerce are the chief sources of its wealth; and in both departments it stands near the head amongst the States. It has 118 banks, and canals and railroads in plenty. In learning and religion, the "Granite State," as its citizens call it, stands pre-eminent; it has 3 colleges, and 2 theological seminaries; and it has never forgotten, if it has not always followed, its founders, the Pilgrim Fathers of the Mayflower. Boston is its capital. Pop. 737,699.

MASSACRE, v. [Fr.] the act of killing great numbers of persons without any distinction, and not in a condition to defend themselves; carnage; murder.

To MASSACRE, v. a. [massacrer, Fr.] to butcher; to destroy great multitudes.

MASSÉNA, André, one of Napoleon's generals. He was a private soldier before the Revolution, and by it had the opportunity of rising to the rank his courage and military skill deserved. In the first campaign of Buonaparte in Italy, he took part in all the great engagements, and was left in command of Rome. His next command was in Switzerland, where he gained the great battle of Zurich. He held Genoa, in the next campaign, till reduced to the last extremity of famine, and forced to capitulate. But he recovered his character in 1805 and 1806, in Naples and Poland. In Germany he was equally successful, and was created, from one victory which he shared, Prince of Essling. Spain was not the theatre of his glory, for there he had to cope with a greater general, and the lines of Torres Vedras were the boundaries of his power, though there he showed a power rarely displayed, of conducting a retreat with equal skill as an advance. He did not appear in public again till after Waterloo, when he was made commandant of the Parisian national guard. He died in 1817, aged 59 years.

MASSICOT, s. [Fr.] ceruse calcined by a moderate degree of fire; of this there are three sorts, arising from the different degrees applied in the operation. White massicot is of a yellowish white, and is that which has received the least calcination; yellow massicot has received more; and gold-coloured massicot still more.

MASSILLON, JOHN BAPTIST, an eminent French preacher, of the Congregation of the Oratory. His eloquence led to his appointments to preach at Paris and Versailles, and to his being named bishop of Clermont. He died in 1742, aged 79 years. His published discourses are admirable studies in sacred oratory.

MASSINESS, s. weight, bulk, or solidity.

MASSINGER, PHILIP, one of the early English dramatists. He studied at Oxford, and is believed to have become a Romanist whilst there. He appears to have been intimate with the writers of his day, and to have died in 1639, aged 54 years. Of his plays only 18 remain.

MASSIVE, a. [massif, Fr.] heavy; bulky; solid.

MASSIVENESS, s. the quality of being weighty, bulky, and solid.

MASSY, a. weighty; bulky; solid.

MAST, s. [mast, Sax.] the post standing upright in a ship or vessel, to which the yards and sails are affixed; the fruit of the oak or beech tree.

MASTED, a. carrying a mast.

MASTER, s. [magister, Lat.] a person who has servants under him; a ruler; a chief or head; a possessor; the commander of a trading vessel; an officer on board a ship of war; a person subject to no control; a teacher, or instructor; a young gentleman; a title of respect; a person eminently skilled in any trade or science; a title of dignity at the universities.

To MASTER, v. a. to rule, govern, or keep in subjection; to conquer; to perform with skill; to overcome any difficulty, or accomplish any design.

MASTERDOM, s. dominion or rule.

MASTER-HAND, s. one eminently skilled in any profession.

MASTER-JEST, s. a principal jest.

MASTER-KEY, s. a key which can open many locks that have different wards.

MASTERLESS, a. wanting a master or owner; not to be governed; unsubdued.

MASTERLINESS, s. eminent skill.

MASTERLY, a. suitable to or becoming a master; artful; showing great skill; imperious; with the sway of a master.—ad. with the skill of a master.

MASTERPIECE, s. a capital performance; a chief or eminent excellence.

MASTERSHIP, s. dominion; rule; power; a perfect work; a curious and capital performance; skill; knowledge; superiority, or pre-eminence.

MASTER-STROKE, s. a stroke or performance that shows great skill.

MASTERY, s. dominion; rule; superiority, or pre-eminence; skill.

MASTFUL, a. abounding in mast or fruit, applied to the oak or beech trees.

MASTICATION, s. [mastio, low Lat.] the act of chewing.

MASTICATORY, a. [masticoire, Fr.] related to mastication.

MASTICH, (mástik) s. [mastio, Fr.] in the Materia Medica, is a resin, of a pale yellowish white colour, brought principally from the island of Chios, in drops, as it naturally forms itself in exuding from the tree, about the bigness of a pea. It is chiefly used for making varnish, but was esteemed for its stomachic qualities.

MASTIFF, s. [mastin, Fr.] a large-sized dog, generally used as a guard in houses and yards.

MASTLESS, a. without masts.

MASTLIN, s. [mesler, Fr.] mixed corn, consisting of wheat and rye.

MAT, s. [matte, Sax.] a texture of sedge, flags, rushes, &c. In a ship, mats made of fine nets and thrums, to keep the cordage fast.

To MAT, v. a. to cover with mats; to twist, interweave, or join together like a mat.

MATACHIN, s. [Fr.] an old dance.

MATADORE, s. [matador, Span.] a murderer; the three chief cards at quadrille, so called from the advantage they have over the contrary party, and winning such a number of pieces out of the pack, which on that account are called matadores likewise.

MATCH, s. [meche, Fr.] a small piece of deal dip in brimstone; any thing that catches fire, particularly applied to a kind of rope slightly twisted, and prepared to retain fire, used in discharging guns, &c.—[meche, Gr.] a game; any mutual contest; one equal to contest or fight with another.—[maca, Sax.] one that suits or tallies with another; a marriage; one to be married.

To MATCH, v. a. to equal; to show any thing equal or like to; to suit or proportion; to marry, or give in marriage.—v. n. to be married; to suit; to tally.

MATCHABLE, a. suitable; resembling perfectly; fit to be joined.

MATCHLESS, a. without an equal; not admitting comparison.

MATCHLESSLY, ad. in a manner not to be equalled.

MATCHLESSNESS, s. the quality of not admitting an equal, or a comparison.

MATCHMAKER, s. one who busies herself in getting up marriages amongst her acquaintances; one who makes matches to burn.

MATE, s. [maat, Belg.] a husband or wife; a companion, whether male or female; the male or female of animals; one that sits in the same ship; one that eats at the same table; one that is the second in rank.

To MATE, v. a. to match or marry; to be equal to.—[matter, Fr. or mator, Span.] to crush; to confound.

MATERIA-MEDICA, s. in Medical Science, the description of the various drugs and chemicals employed in the art of healing, and the mode of their operation, as far as it can be discovered.

MATERIAL, a. [matériel, Fr. from materia, Lat.] consisting of matter, opposed to spiritual. Important; momentous; essential.

MATERIALISM, s. in Philosophy, a system which denies the existence of any soul in man apart from the body, and generally of any existence that cannot be discovered by the exercise of the human senses. If logically carried out, as in the System of Nature, published under the name of Mirabaud, it leads to blank Atheism, and to making personal and immediate gratification the only rule of right for man.

MATERIALIST, s. one who denies the existence of spirit.

MATERIALITY, s. [matérialité, Fr.] corporeity; material existence, opposed to spirituality.

MATERIALLY, ad. in the state of matter; essentially, or importantly.

MATERIALNESS, s. the state of consisting of matter. Figuratively, the quality of being important or essential.

MATERIALS, s. not used in the singular; [matériaux, Fr.] the substance of which any thing is made.

MATERIATE, MATERIATED, a. consisting of matter.

MATERIATION, s. the act of forming matter.

MATERIALLY, a. [mater, Lat.] motherly; becoming or belonging to a mother.

MATERINITY, s. [maternité, Fr.] the character or relation of a mother.

MATFELON, s. in Botany, the great knapweed.

MATGRASS, s. in Botany, the small matweed; a kind of grass.

MATHEMATIC, MATHEMATICAL, a. [mathématique, from mathano, Gr.] according to the rules of mathematics; belonging to mathematics.

MATHEMATICALLY, ad. according to the rules of mathematics.

MATHEMATICIAN, s. [mathématicien, Fr.] a person skilled in the mathematics.

MATHEMATICS, s. in Pure Science, that branch which treats of number, quantity, extension, and the like, and is usually taught under the heads of Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, and the higher Mathematics, which comprise the calculus and all that is necessary for its study. In Natural Philosophy, the application of pure mathematics to the problems presented in the various departments of physics. The name given to this wide and profound study intimates one great benefit to be derived from it, which, for the young, is one of the most desirable attainments, and most needful for success in any pursuit,—the discipline of the mind to patient, connected, and accurate habits of thought.

MATHER, the name of two eminent divines of New England. Dr. Increase Mather was president of Harvard College, and repeatedly employed as agent for the colony in England. He wrote some works, and died in 1723, aged 84 years. Dr. Cotton Mather, his son, has connected his name too intimately for his fair reputation with belief in witchcraft, and the prosecution of alleged witches. He wrote on that and other subjects, and was in other respects a pious and enlightened man. He died in 1728, aged 65 years.

MATHESSIS, s. [mathano, Gr.] the doctrine or science of mathematics.

MATHEWS, CHARLES, a distinguished comic performer, who both in this country and in America gained such applause as genuine ability alone can. His most successful performances were what he called Entertainments, and At Homes, in which he had full scope for his peculiar powers. He was acquainted with a large circle of literary men, and he died in 1835, aged 50 years.

MATIN, a. [matine, Fr.] used in, or belonging to, the morning.

MATIN, s. [Fr.] the morning. In the plural, the prayers used at morning worship, in the Churches of England and Rome.

MATLOCK, Derbyshire. It is an extensive, straggling place, built in a very romantic style, on the steep side of a mountain, the houses rising regularly one above another, from the bottom to nearly the summit. It is a place of great resort on account of its warm baths, which are greatly recommended for some complaints. Notwithstanding the rockiness of the soil, the cliffs of the rocks produce an immense number of trees, whose foliage adds greatly to the beauty of the place. It is 142 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3782.

MATRASS, a. [matras, Fr.] in Chemistry, a glass vessel for digestion, or distillation, sometimes bellied, and sometimes rising gradually taper into a conical figure.

MATRICE, s. [mater, Lat.] the womb; a mould giving form to something enclosed.

MATRICIDE, s. [mater and cædo, Lat.] the crime of murdering a mother; a person who kills a mother.

TO MATRICULATE, v. a. to enter as a member at a university; to enlist; to enter into a society by setting down a person's name.

MATRICULATE, s. a person entered in a university.

MATRICULATION, s. the act of entering a person as a member of a university.

MATRIMONIAL, a. [Fr. matrimonium, Lat.] suitable to marriage; belonging to marriage.

MATRIMONIALLY, ad. according to the manner or laws of marriage.

MATRIMONY, s. [matrimonium, Lat.] marriage; the solemn contract between a man and woman to be faithful to each other during life; the state of a married person.

MATRIX, s. [Lat.] the womb; a place where any thing is generated or formed.

MATRON, s. [matrona, from mater, Lat.] an elderly lady, or old woman.

MATRONAL, a. suitable to a matron; constituting a matron.

MATRONLY, a. suitable to a matron; elderly; ancient.

MATROSS, s. in the train of artillery, a soldier next below a gunner, who assists in traversing, spunging, loading, and firing the guns; they carry firelocks, and march along with the store waggons, both as a guard and to assist in case of accidents.

MATSY, QUENTIN, a Dutch painter, who was originally a blacksmith. His paintings are not numerous, and that of the Mower, at Windsor, is about the best known. It is said that he loved him an artist; his lady's father having resolved that none but a painter should have his daughter. He died in 1529, aged 69 years.

MATT, s. in Metallurgy, that mass of metal which separates from the scoriae in smelting ores without previous roasting.

MATTED, a. in Botany, is applied to those parts of plants that are thickly interwoven together, as the fibres in turf bogs.

MATTER, s. [materia, Lat.] in Philosophy, that of which we are informed by means of our senses; the actual substratum of the properties and qualities we perceive by our senses. Body, opposed to spirit. The materials of which any thing is composed; a subject or thing treated of; an affair or business; the cause of any disturbance. Import; consequence; moment; or importance, generally preceded by no. The thing or object which is under particular relation.

TO MATTER, v. n. used impersonally, to signify; to import, or be of importance. In Surgery, to generate or produce.—v. a. to regard; to look upon or consider as of any importance.

MATTHEW, one of our Lord's apostles, and the author of one of the Gospels. He was originally a publican, or revenue-farmer at Capernaum, where he was called by Jesus to attend his ministry, and re-proclaim his message. He is alluded to once in the Acts of the Apostles, and after that no more of his history is known. His Gospel has been the occasion of an unended controversy; some critics maintaining that we have only the translation from the Hebrew or Chaldaeo-Syriac in which Matthew actually wrote. None can dispute the value of it as we have it; and it is as good as the alleged original for us. It is arranged with a greater attempt at preserving the order of time, than the other synoptic evangelists have shown; and there is in all that is recorded, whether incident or address, a directness and attention to the point and principal matter of the recorded affair that makes the whole very clear, although it gives an air of want of interest to some parts.

MATTHEW OF WESTMINSTER, an English historian of the 14th century. He was a Benedictine monk, and his work is reckoned valuable.

MATTOCK, s. [matte, Sax.] a kind of toothed instrument, used to grub up trees and weeds, and to pull up wood.

MATRESS, s. [matras, Fr.] a hard bed, of hair, wool, or other similar material, usually placed beneath a feather-bed.

MATURATION, s. [Fr. from maturo, Lat.] the act of ripening; the state of growing ripe. In Medicine, the process of suppuration.

MATURATIVE, a. ripening, or conducing to ripeness. In Surgery, promoting suppuration.

MATURE, a. [maturus, Lat.] ripe; perfected by time; brought near to completion; fit for execution; well digested; arrived at full age, or years of discretion.

TO MATURE, v. a. [maturo, Lat.] to ripen.

MATURELY, ad. ripely; completely; with deliberation, or in a well-digested manner.

MATURIN, ROBERT CHARLES, an Irish clergyman, whose tragedy, entitled Bertram, excited considerable sensation at the time, but which is almost unknown now. He wrote several other dramas, and some novels, which are yet read. He was led into difficulties by his imprudence in after life, and died in 1824. His six sermons are said to show considerable power of thought and reasoning.

MATURITY, s. ripeness; completion.

MATWEED, s. in Botany, two plants go under this name; the small matweed is a kind of grass; the sea matweed a kind of reed.

MAUDLIN, a. drunk; intoxicated with liquor; squeamishly sensitive in giving way to and expressing any feeling.

MAUGRE, (maîgrer) a. [malgré, Fr.] in spite of; notwithstanding.

To MAUL, v. a. to beat. See MALL.

MAUND, s. [maunde, Fr.] a hand-basket. In Scotland, it is the name of the plaids worn by shepherds and drovers.

To MAUNDER, v. n. [maudière, Fr.] to grumble; to murmur; to talk prolixly and foolishly about a subject.

MAUNDERER, s. one that uses murmuring and provoking words; or that talks long, and dully, to no purpose.

MAUNDY-THURSDAY, s. [maunde, Sax.] in the Church Calendar, the Thursday before Good-Friday.

MAUPERTUIS, PIERRE LOUIS MOREAU DE, an eminent French mathematician and astronomer, who was one of the party sent to measure an arc of the meridian in Lapland, and afterwards settled at Berlin. He was engaged in a quarrel with Voltaire in the latter part of his life, and he died in 1759, aged 61 years. His works are numerous, and his great service was the defence of Newton's philosophy against the followers of Descartes.

MARCE OF NASSAU, PRINCE OF ORANGE, a very famous general during the religious wars of the 16th century. He was elected stadtholder very early in life, and was called into action by the opposition to the Reformation, on the part of Philip II. of Spain, which led to the war in the Netherlands. He possessed all the qualities of a great strategist and statesman, and his success was such as only such a one can secure. After a life spent in such labours and such triumphs, he died in 1625, aged 58 years.

MAURITIUS, an island of the Indian Ocean, to the east of Madagascar, about 35 miles long, and 20 miles broad. The interior is very mountainous, and some points exceed 3000 feet in height, and show evident traces of volcanic nature. Sugar, and the usual native tropical fruits, are its chief products, with coffee, cotton, and rice. Port Louis is its capital and its port, which has a good harbour. Pop. about 100,000. It was called Isle of France, when taken by them from the Dutch. It now belongs to England, who restored the ancient name.

MAUSOLEUM, s. [Lat.] a pompous tomb or monument, erected in honour of a person that is dead.

MAW, s. [maga, Sax.] the stomach of beasts, applied with contempt to that of mankind; the craw or first stomach of birds.

MAWS, ST., Cornwall. It consists of only one street, and has a castle, with a governor and a deputy governor, two gunners, and a platform of guns. It is built under a hill, fronting the sea on the E. side of Falmouth haven. It is 250 miles from London. Pop. 940.

MAWKISH, a. [perhaps from maw,] apt to produce satiety or loathing.

MAWKISHNESS, s. the quality of cloying, or producing satiety and loathing.

MAWMET, s. [corrupted from Mahomet, used in the general signification of a false object of worship, or an idol,] a puppet or doll; formerly an idol.

MAWMISH, a. foolish; nauseous.

MAXILLAR, MAXILLARY, a. [maxilla, Lat.] belonging to the jawbone.

MAXIM, s. [maxime, Fr. from maximus, Lat.] an axiom; a general principle; a leading truth.

MAXIMIANUS, M. VALERIUS, HERCULIUS, the colleague of Diocletian in the empire of Rome. He was one of the many who rose in those days from deepest obscurity in the army, to be at the head of affairs. He was a reluctant participant in his partner's abdication. His son Maxentius, availing himself of the troubled state of the empire, and the unpopularity of Severus, made himself Augustus at Rome, and associated his father with him. In the wars which followed, Maximian endeavoured to supplant his son, and at last abandoned his party, and joined Constantine's. By this prince he was afterwards put to death for a conspiracy, in 310. He reigned with Diocletian about 19 years.

MAXIMINUS, C. JULIUS, one of the emperors of Rome during its decline. He was by birth a Thracian peasant, who by his great strength and ferocity had gained such power in the army, as enabled him to procure the death of Alexander Severus, and to place himself upon the throne. He carried on the German war with success, but gained general hatred by his savage manners. Two opponents having been set up by the senate, he marched towards Rome, but was killed by his troops before he reached the city, in 238, having reigned about 3 years.

MAY, auxil. v. preter. might, [mag, Goth.] to be possible; to have power. It is the regular auxiliary to the potential or subjunctive mood, and is used to express a wish also. May be, used adverbially, implies, perhaps, or it is possible.

MAY, s. [so called from Maia, Lat.] the fifth month in the year, which, in this country, is usually the most spring-like and delightful. Figuratively, the early, gay, and most pleasant part of life.

To MAY, v. n. to gather flowers on the first of May.

MAYBUG, s. in Entomology, a name of the chafer.

MAYENNE, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Sarthe, Maine et Loire, Ile et Vilaine, Manche, and Orne. It is about 50 miles long, by almost 35 broad. It is very mountainous, though none of its peaks attain any great elevation; and the river (whence it is named) Mayenne, with its tributaries, waters it. It yields coal, iron, slate, building-stone, &c. Corn of different kinds, fruits, wine, &c., with cattle and sheep, are also produced. It has in some of its towns manufactures of some value. Its capital is Laval. Pop. about 395,000.

MAYGAME, s. a diversion or sport; the object of ridicule.

MAYLILY, s. in Botany, a name of the lily of the valley.

MAYNOOTH, Kildare, in Leinster, Ireland. It stands on the Ryewater, and is a neatly built town, with remains of the ancient castle of the earls of Kildare. Near the ruins is the Roman Catholic college, which is a considerable institution, being the chief seminary for priests in Ireland. The course of study extends over 5 years, and embraces all the subjects of a good theological education, but, of course, is mainly devoted to the theology of the Church of Rome. It receives an annual grant from the imperial parliament. It is about 20 miles from Dublin. Pop. 2129.

MAYO, a county of Connaught, Ireland. It lies on the Atlantic, and is bounded by the counties of Galway, Roscommon, and Sligo. It is about 70 miles in length, and 55 in breadth. It is in some parts exceedingly mountainous, some points being above 2000 feet in height. Other parts are almost level. Its rivers are, the Moy, which is navigable, and divides it from Sligo, near the sea; and the numerous streams running from its mountains, and joining the large lakes named Conn, Mask, Nallenore, Carran, &c. The bogs are very numerous and extensive. It has many deep bays, that of Killala being the best as a harbour; and small rocky islands are numerous off the coast. The mineral productions are but partially explored, and agriculture is in a very backward state. The fisheries and linen manufactures are the chief support of the people. There is some trade at Killala, Westport, &c. The chief town is Castlebar. Pop. 388,887. It sends 2 members to parliament.

MAYPOLE, s. a long pole adorned with flowers, which used to be set up in towns and villages, and round which the festival and dances used to be held on the first day of May.

MAYOR, s. [maer, Brit.] the chief magistrate of a corporate town. In London and York, he is called Lord Mayor.

MAYORALTY, s. the office of a mayor.

MAYORESS, s. the wife of a mayor.

MAYWEED, s. in Botany, a kind of camomile.

MAZARIN, JULIUS, CARDINAL, an Italian by birth, whose first public appearance was in the service of Cardinal Sacchetti, in Lombardy. Some diplomatic engagements brought him under the notice of Cardinal Richelieu, and he was sent as papal nuncio to the court of France. Having received the purple, on Richelieu's death he became prime minister of France. His name is inseparably united with the first part of the reign of Louis XIV. He was at first popular, but afterwards, through the machinations of Cardinal de Retz, he became so obnoxious to the nobles, that the war of the Fronde followed, and he was compelled to flee; but he eventually returned and triumphed. He brought about the peace of the Pyrenees, and soon after died, in 1661, aged 59 years. He was master in the diplomacy and political science or art of the age, and met with only one opponent who, not only by superior force, but also through his nobler character, could bend him to his purposes,—Oliver Cromwell.

MAZE, s. [missen, Belg.] a labyrinth, or place whose passages are so intricate that it is not easy to get out of them. Figuratively, perplexity, confusion, applied to the mind.

To MAZE, v. a. to perplex, bewilder, or confuse.

MAZER, s. [maeser, Belg.] a maple cup.

MAZY, a. having winding and intricate passages; perplexed; confused.

M. A., an abbreviation for magister artium, or master of arts.

M. B., an abbreviation for medicina bacularius, or baccalaureus, or bachelor of physic.

M. D., an abbreviation for medicina doctor, or doctor of physic.

ME, the objective case of the pronoun I.

MEAD, (meed) s. [meid, Brit.] a fermented liquor made of honey, called likewise methelin.

MEAD, MEADOW, (meed, meido) s. [meade, Sax.] ground used constantly for pasture; a field permanently laid down with grass.

MEAD, DR. RICHARD, a celebrated English physician, who, after studying at the best universities of the time, received an appointment at St. Thomas's Hospital, and eventually rose to be physician to George II. He accumulated a fine library and museum, greater part of which is now in the hands of the College of Physicians. He aided in introducing and vindicating vaccination, and wrote several works, which were of value, and are not yet wholly superseded. He died in 1754, aged 79 years.

MEADOWBOUTS, s. in Botany, a plant, called also marsh marigold.

MEADOWGRASS, s. in Botany, the grass that grows in meadows; the reed meadowgrass is found in marshes, and on the banks of rivers.

MEADOWPINK, s. in Botany, a name for the campion cuckoo flower.

MEADOWLAURE, s. in Botany, a common plant, of which three species are found in England.

MEADOWSWEET, s. in Botany, a name of the dropwort or queen of the meadow.

MEAGRE, (meïgre, with the g hard), a. [maigre, Fr.] lean; wanting flesh. Thin, poor, or hungry, applied to ground. SYNON. Meagre, lean. In that sense in which these two words are reputed synonymous, meagre signifies want of flesh; lean, want of fat. Meagreness supposes a waste of body, owing either to a bad constitution, or a scarcity of food; leanness, supposes no want of flesh, being opposed only to corpulency or fatness.

MEAGRENESS, (meïgerness) s. leanness; want of flesh; scantiness; smallness.

MEAK, s. a hook with a long handle.

MEAL, (meel) s. [male, Sax.] the act of eating at a certain time; a repast; a part or fragment; the flour of corn; the milk produced by a cow, or by several at one milking.

To MEAL, (meel) v. a. [mêler, Fr.] to sprinkle, mingle, or spot.

MEALMAN, (meelman) s. one that deals in flour or meal.

MEALTREE, s. in Botany, a common name of the wayfaring-tree or water-elder.

MEALY, (meely) a. having the taste or other qualities of meal; besprinkled or spotted as with meal. Mealy-mouthed, implies unable to speak through bashfulness, or using affected words, &c.

MEAN, (meen) a. [maene, Sax.] wanting dignity; of low birth or rank; low-minded; contemptible, or despicable; middle.—[moyen, Fr.] moderate, or without excess; intervening; intermediate; coming or happening between any two periods of time. In Astronomy, when applied to the motion of the earth, moon, or planets, signifies that which would take place if they moved at a uniform rate in their orbits. Mean time is that which is kept by chronometers, and differs from apparent time, according as the motion of the earth varies in rate.

MEAN, (meen) s. [moyen, Fr.] mediocrity; a middle state between two extremes; a medium; an interval; any thing used to effect an end. In Arithmetic, a quantity having a certain relation to two other quantities; an arithmetical mean being one that differs from each by half the difference between them; and a geometrical mean, one the square of which is in the same relation to the squares of the other two numbers.

To MEAN, (meen) v. n. preter. and participle meant; (mênt) [meenen, Belg.] to have in the mind.—v. a. to intend; to design; to hint at.

To MEANDER, v. n. See MEANDER.

MEANDROUS, a. having many turnings or windings.

ME/ANING, (meëning) s. purpose or intention; the sense, or thing understood by any expression.

ME/ANLY, (meënly) ad. moderately; in a low degree; in a poor or base manner; without wealth, dignity, or respect.

ME/ANNESS, (meëness) s. want of perfection or excellence; defect; want of dignity, birth, or fortune; sordidness; lowness of mind.

ME/ANS, s. used only in the plural, [moyens, Fr.] manner, or instrument, or method. By all means, without doubt, or certainly. By no means, not at all. Figuratively, put for income, or source of income, or means of subsistence.

ME/ANT, (mênt) the perfect and past participle of To MEAN.

ME/ANWHILE, ad. in the mean, or intervening time.

ME/ASLED, (mêzled) a. infected with the measles.

ME/ASLES, (mêzles) s. [messelen, Belg.] in Medicine, a contagious disease which chiefly affects children, the external symptoms of which are eruptions resembling flea-bites, with considerable fever, diarrhoea, and cough. It is often fatal, and it is very seldom experienced a second time.

ME/ASLY, (meëly) a. infected with the measles.

ME/ASURABLE, (mêzurable) a. such as may be measured or computed. Figuratively, moderate, or in small quantity.

ME/ASURABLENESS, (mêzurableness) s. the quality of being capable of measure.

ME/ASURABLY, (mêzurably) ad. in such a manner as may be measured; moderately.

ME/ASURE, (mêzshure) s. [mesure, Fr.] that by which the quantity or extent of any thing is found; the rule by which any thing is adjusted or proportioned; proportion, or settled quantity; a sufficient quantity; motion regulated by musical time; the cadence or time observed in poetry, or dancing; syllables limited to certain numbers composing a verse; metre; a tune. To have hard measure, is to be hardly dealt by.

To ME/ASURE, (mêzshure) v. a. [mesurer, Fr.] to compute the quantity or extent of any thing by some settled rule; to adjust or proportion; to allot or distribute.

ME/ASURELESS, (mêzshureless) a. not to be measured or comprehended.

ME/ASUREMENT, (mêzshurement) s. the act of finding the quantity or extent of any thing.

ME/ASURER, (mêzshurer) s. one that distributes things in proper quantities.

MEAT, (meel) s. [mete, Sax.] flesh to be eaten; food in general. SYNON. By meat is understood any kind of food; but flesh signifies only the natural composition of an animal.

ME/ATED, (mêted) a. fed; foddered; applied to cattle.

MEATH, or EAST MEATH, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It lies on the Irish Sea, and is bounded by Louth, Monaghan, Cavan, West Meath, King's County, Kildare, and Dublin. It is about 45 miles long, and 35 broad. It is, in good part, hilly, and is watered by the Boyne and its tributaries, and by some tributaries of the Liffey. There are also several lakes, but all of insignificant extent. It yields slates, limestone, &c. &c. Agriculture is attended to with some diligence, and the richness of the soil renders the county rich in corn, &c., and cattle. Trin is the county town. Pop. 183,828. It sends 2 members to the imperial parliament.

MEATH, WEST, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It is surrounded by Meath, King's County, Roscommon, Longford, and Cavan. It is nearly 45 miles long, by 25 broad. There are no hills of any considerable height here. It is watered by streams which flow partly W. to the Shannon, and partly E. to the Boyne. It has also some considerable lakes, as Loughs Rea, Shillin, Keinal, Hoyle, Ennel, &c. It is not deficient in bogs. Limestone and coarse building-stone are its chief mineral products. Its soil is good, but agriculture is little attended to; nor are the manufactures in a very flourishing condition. It has some trade by means of the Shannon and the Royal Canal. Mullingar is the county town. Pop. 141,390. It sends 3 representatives to the imperial parliament.

MEATH, a diocese of the Established Church of Ireland, whose bishop ranks next after the archbishops. Ardbreacan is the cathedral town.

MECCA, a city of Arabia, in the province of Hedjaz. It stands on a barren spot, in a valley surrounded by low hills, about a spring, named Zemern, held sacred by the Mussulmans, being looked upon as the very spring which appeared to save the lives of Hagar and Ishmael. It is the most sacred spot in the regards of all Mohammedans, not only because the prophet was born there, but also because of the Kaaba, which was, long before Mohammed's time, a temple of the greatest sanctity in the eyes of all Arabians, and was built over a meteoric stone of no great size, which was an object of divine adoration amongst them, and receives divine honours to this day. The temple is not large, but the piazzas and outbuildings are of considerable extent, and are enriched with all the ornament that wealthy piety can bestow. The whole territory of Mecca is held to be sacred, and annually immense crowds of pilgrims resort to it, as an infallible means of obtaining the Divine favour. The whole support of the town is the trade arising from these pilgrimages. Lat. 21. 33. N. Long. 40. 4. E. It is connected with a port on the Red Sea, named Jidda.

MECHANIC, MECHANICAL, (mekhánik, mekhníkal) a. [mechane, Gr.] constructed by the laws of mechanics; skilled in mechanics. Figuratively, acting and working without any insight into principles; formal, in opposition to vital. Mechanical Powers, in Natural Philosophy, are machines of very simple construction, by which a small amount of force is enabled to overcome considerable resistance; the reason and laws of which are treated of in the science of mechanics. They are, the lever, the wheel and axis, the inclined plane, the wedge, the screw, and the pulley:—which see.

MECHANIC, (mekhánik) s. a manufacturer, or person engaged in handicraft employments.

MECHANICALLY, (mekhníkal) ad. according to the laws of mechanism.

MECHANICALNESS, (mekhníkalness) s. agreeableness to the laws of mechanism.

MECHANICS, (mekhániks) s. in Natural Philosophy, that branch which treats of the laws of solid bodies in regard to rest and motion, and is divided into statics, or the laws of equilibrium, kine-matics, or dynamics, or the laws of force as displayed in motion. To no part of natural philosophy has mathematical science been so fully applied; and it is to this that all the greatest discoveries of late ages in astronomy are owing. See DYNAMICS, &c.

MECHANISM, (mekhánism) s. action according to mechanic laws; the construction of the parts depending on each other in any engine, or complicated machine.

SCHLESBURG, the name of two grand-duchies of Germany, distinguished by the additional names of Schwarzin and Strelitz. Mecklenburg lies on the Baltic, and is bounded by Prussia, Brandenburg, Hanover, Lauenburg, and Lübeck. It is about 125 miles long, and nearly 100 broad. It has a range of hills running through it, but none are of any considerable height. It is watered by the Elbe and its tributaries, and by some smaller streams, which run direct to the sea. There are also very many lakes, but none of great extent. It is a very fertile country, yielding abundance of corn, timber, cattle, sheep, &c. &c. Game and fish are also abundant. It has some manufactures, but relies most on its agriculture. The two duchies take their titles from their chief towns. Pop. Mecklenburg-Schwerin, about 470,000. Mecklenburg-Strelitz, about 100,000.

MECHORACAN, s. [from the place,] in Materia Medica, a large root, twelve or fourteen inches long; the plant which affords it is a species of bindweed, and its stalks are angular: the pulverized root is a gentle and mild purgative.

MECONIUM, s. [mekon, Gr.] expressed juice of poppy: the first excrement of children.

MÉDAL, s. [médaille, Fr.] an ancient coin; a coin stamped in honour of some extraordinary action or person, and not intended to be used as money.

MÉDALLIC, a. belonging to medals.

MÉDALLION, s. [médailon, Fr.] a large antique stamp or medal; any carving or engraving brought within a circle, so as to resemble a medal.

MÉDAILLIST, s. [médailiste, Fr.] a man skilled or curious in collecting medals.

TO MÉDLE, v. n. [middelen, Belg.] to have to do; to concern oneself about; to interpose or interfere officiously.

MÉDGLER, s. one who interposes, or busies himself with things that he does not concern him.

MÉDGLISOME, a. officiously interposing in affairs that do not concern one; intermeddling.

MEDE, JOSEPH, a learned English divine, of the 17th century, who studied at Cambridge, and deservedly obtained considerable reputation for his attainments. He rejected all invitations to leave his studious retirement, and died in 1638, aged 51 years. His works were not numerous; and amongst them his work on the interpretation of the Book of Revelation has held the highest place.

MÉDEA. See JASON.

MÉDIA, in Ancient Geography, a country lying above the district named Persis, very extensive and fruitful. Towards the N. it was mountainous, and was watered by the rivers Araxes, Mardus, &c. It abounded in grapes, oranges, and other fruits. Its drugs were held in great esteem, and its breed of horses was famed through all Asia. Ecbatana was its chief city, and in splendour rivalled Babylon itself. In connexion with Persia, this was the seat of the second great world empire, which was founded by Cyrus the Great.

MÉDIATINE, s. [Fr.] in Anatomy, the fimbriated membrane, round which the bowels are arranged.

TO MÉDIATE, v. n. [medius, Lat.] to interpose as an equal friend between two parties; to be between two.—v. a. to limit by something in the middle; to effect by mediation.

MÉDIATE, a. [mediat, Fr.] interposed; coming between; placed between two extremes.

MÉDIATELY, ad. by a secondary, or intervening, cause.

MÉDIATION, s. [Fr.] interposition or intervention; agency, or a power of acting between; intercession or entreaty for another.

MÉDIATOR, s. [médiateur, Fr.] one who acts between two parties, in order to procure a reconciliation; an intercessor for another.

MÉDIATO'RIAL, MÉDIATO'RY, a. belonging to a mediator.

MÉDIATORSHIP, s. the office of mediator.

MÉDIATRIX, s. a female mediator.

MÉDICAL, a. [medeo, Lat.] relating to medicine, or the art of healing.

MÉDICALLY, ad. after the manner of medicine; according to the art of physic.

MÉDICAMENT, s. any thing used in healing; generally applied to external remedies.

MÉDICAMENTAL, a. relating to medicines.

MÉDICAMENTALLY, ad. after the manner, or with the power, of medicine.

TO MÉDICATE, v. a. to tincture, or impregnate, by infusion of medicines.

MÉDICATION, s. the act of tincturing, or impregnating with medical ingredients.

MÉDICI, the name of one of the noblest families of Italy, which raised the city of Florence to its highest point of wealth and splendour, and eventually overthrew its liberties; furnished more than one pontiff to the Roman see; and, by intermarriages, was connected with the principal kingdoms of Europe. The following members of this family are the most illustrious, or the best known in modern history. Giovanni de' Medici was one of the greatest of the merchant princes of Florence, who, by his wealth acquired through commerce, and by his wisdom, rose to the possession of the greatest power in that state. He laid the foundation for all the subsequent honours of his house, and in the exercise of his power in the republic, confirmed the security of the citizens, and made it respected universally. He died in 1428. Cosmo de' Medici, his son, carried on the work his father had begun, and attained to yet greater honour. He had yet greater difficulties to contend with, in the older families of Florentine nobles, who at one time obtained sufficient influence to banish him. On his return, he immediately resumed his station in the republic, and devoted himself, with fresh energy, to his endeavours to raise and instruct it. It was during the great revival of letters; and he was indefatigable in collecting MSS. and works of art, and in inducing artists and scholars to take up their abode in Florence. The splendour of his administration prevented the citizens from perceiving the inroads that he made upon their freedom, and they honoured him with the title of Pater Patriæ. He died in 1464, aged 75 years. Lorenzo de' Medici, grandson of Cosmo, surnamed the Magnificent, succeeded, whilst yet a young man, to his grandfather's wealth and power. He had already been distinguished in the state, and from the commencement to the close of his long reign, (for he wielded almost absolute power in Florence,) he steadily pursued the track of his ancestors in adorning and ennobling his native city, and in preserving for himself its chief power. He had powerful enemies to contend with, and unscrupulous in their means of opposing him. He nearly fell a victim to the conspiracy of Pazzi; he was excommunicated by the pope, who had encouraged the conspirators; he freed himself and the state from the hostility of the king of Naples, only by the perilous experiment of throwing himself, personally, on the generosity of his enemy. The accession of Innocent VIII. to the see of Rome, at length relieved him from fear, and gave him the means of carrying out his schemes. As a statesman, he was unsurpassed in his generation. He wielded the destinies of Italy, and by his consummate skill preserved the balance of power amongst its numerous and hostile principalities. At home, he changed the whole aspect of the state, and broke the power of the democracy. He laid aside the commercial engagements of his family, and adopted other means of securing and extending his wealth. In his patronage of literature, philosophy, and the arts, he excelled his father, and contributed in no small degree to the overturn of the dominion of the schoolmen. To him also must be attributed the greatest share in that paganizing of the Church of Rome, which was amongst the chief causes of the rapid spread of the Lutheran Reformation. He numbered amongst his personal friends and attendants some of the brightest ornaments of Italy; and, amongst his opponents, stands conspicuous the martyr-priest of Florence, Girolamo Savonarola. It was by him that the Medici family was first raised to a level with the royal families of Europe. He died in 1492, aged 44 years. Piero de' Medici, who succeeded his father Lorenzo, was remarkable only for his weakness and incapacity to maintain the position he held by his birth and fortune. Under his administration the family was expelled from Florence, and the city was spoiled by the French. He was drowned in 1504. Cosmo de' Medici, collaterally related to the foregoing, after the assassination of Alessandro de' Medici, obtained the title of Chief of the Republic, and by proceeding cautiously, succeeded in obliterating the last traces of freedom, and converting the state into a grand-duchy, with himself at the head. He, like the rest of the family, was a strenuous patron of learning and art, and maintained the splendour of Florence in those respects, when its true greatness had left it for ever. He died in 1574, aged 55 years, having reigned 34. See LEO X., and CATHARINE DE' MEDICI.

MEDICINABLE, a. having the power of physic.

MEDICINAL, a. [medicinalis, Lat.] having the power of healing; belonging to physic.

MEDICINALLY, ad. after the manner, or with the power, of medicine.

MEDICINE, (usually pron. médisin), s. [medeo, Lat.] physic; any drug given to cure a disorder; the art of healing.

MEDICK, s. in Botany, a plant with yellow flowers, called by some butterjags.

MEDINA, a city of Arabia, in the province of Hedjaz, esteemed by Mussulmans as next in sanctity to Mecca, being the burial-place of Mohammed. It stands in a plain, which is sufficiently well watered to be productive in some parts of fruits, &c. It is defended by a wall and a strong castle, and is now somewhat decayed both as to its trade and splendour. The only temple is the mosque containing the remains of the prophet, which falls short of the Kaaba of Mecca in its wealth and decorations. The pilgrims to this place are not so numerous as those to Mecca. Lat. 25. 28. N. Long. 39. 44. E.

MEDIOCRITY, s. [mediocritas, Fr.] a small degree; a middle rate or state; moderation.

TO MEDITATE, v. a. [meditor, Lat.] to plan, scheme, or contrive; to think on or revolve in the mind.—v. n. to think or contemplate with intense thought.

MEDITATION, s. deep thought; intense application of the mind.

MEDITATIVE, a. addicted to intense thought; expressing any intention.

MEDITERRANEAN, MEDITERRANEAN, MEDITERRANEAN, a. [medius and terra, Lat.] surrounded with land; inland; remote from the sea.

MEDITERRANEAN, the name of the great inland sea which separates Europe from Africa. It is about 2000 miles in length, but varies greatly in breadth. The eastern part is named the Levant; the part between Greece and Asia Minor is called the Ægean Sea; the gulf that divides Italy from Greece is called the Adriatic Sea, or the G. of Venice; W. of Italy is the G. of Genoa. It abounds with islands, of which Candia, or Crete, Cyprus, Sicily, Sardinia, and Corsica, are the largest. The capes and promontories are very numerous. By the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus it is connected with the Black Sea; and by the Straits of Gibraltar, with the Atlantic Ocean. There have been many attempts made to open a communication from it to the Indian Ocean, by means of a canal to the Red Sea. In its physical peculiarities it differs greatly from seas which have more open communication with the ocean. The tides are obscurely perceptible, and there is a double current in it, which produces the famous whirlpool in the Straits of Messina, called Charybdis. It is also subject to a very deadly wind from the Great Desert of Africa; and being so confined, there are often very destructive whirlwinds, which take place with great suddenness. The countries on the shores of this sea have been the scenes of the events which have most largely affected the human race. By means of it the civilization of Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, Carthage, and Rome, spread to other nations. Near it sprang up Judaism, Christianity, the beautiful paganism of Greece, the cruel priestism of Egypt, the polluting worship of the Syrians, the domineering, all-embracing superstitions of pagan and of papal Rome, the stern and savage fanaticism of the Mohammedan reformation. Here, too, has every form of political tyranny, royal, sacerdotal, theocratic, oligarchical, military, and democratical, had its field for display; and here has it been proved, by Phœnicia and its colonies, by Greece and its colonies, and by the free cities of Italy in later days, how inseparable is the true national prosperity from the truest and fullest political freedom. The trade of the British islands with the Mediterranean is very considerable both for exports and imports.

MEDIUM, s. [Lat.] any thing that intervenes or comes between; the middle place or degree. In Mechanical Philosophy, that space or region which a body passes in its motion towards any point. In Arithmetic, a number equally distant from each extreme. In Logic, the middle term in an argument, by which propositions are connected.

MEDLAR, s. in Horticulture, the fruit of a tree allied to the apple, and to the whitethorn, which is not fit for eating till it begins to decay.

MEDLEY, MEDLY, s. a mixture; a miscellany; a confused mass.

MEDLEY, a. mixed, confused.

MEDULLAR, MEDULLARY, a. [medullaire, Fr.] belonging to the marrow.

MEDUSA, in Heathen Mythology, one of the Gorgons, whose head turned men who looked on it to stone. It was placed in the ægis of Pallas.

MEDWAY, the principal river of Kent, in England. It rises in Tilgate Forest, and enters the sea just at the mouth of the Thames, near the Isle of Sheppey. Tunbridge, Maidstone, and Chatham, with Rochester, stand on it.

MEDY, s. [med, Sax.] an old word for reward, recompence, present, gift.

MEEK, a. [melek, Slav.] not easily provoked to anger; bearing insults without resentment; not having an overweening opinion of oneself.

MEEKLY, ad. in a mild or gentle manner.

MEEKNESS, s. a temper of mind not easily provoked to resentment; mildness; absence of self-importance.

MEER, s. See MERE.

MEERESCHAUM, s. [Dutch, Jm Mineralogy, a kind of steatite, or French chalk. It is found in modules in various places near the Ægean and the Black Sea. The larger pieces are made into bowls for tobacco-pipes, by being cut into form and soaked in wax, and the refuse is used as pipe-clay for the same purpose: when burnt it is of a rich vermilion red.

MEET, a. proper; qualified; adapted to any use.

TO MEET, v. a. pret. and participle met; [metan, Sax.] to light on; to close or touch; to come face to face; to encounter; to join another in the same place from different parts; to find.—v. n. to encounter, or come face to face; to assemble; to join. Synon. We find things unknown, or which we sought after; we meet with things that are in our way, or which present themselves to us unsought for.

MEETER, s. one that accosts, finds accidentally, or comes up to a person face to face.

MEE-TING, s. an assembly; a congress; a congregation for public worship.

MEE-TING-HOUSE, s. a place where persons assemble for public worship.

MEE-TLY, ad. in a fit or proper manner.

MEE-TNESS, s. fitness or propriety.

ME/GALOSAURUS, s. [megas and saurus, Gr.] in Paleontology, the name of a huge animal of the crocodile kind, whose remains are found in some of the oolitic strata of England.

MEGA/RIS, a state of ancient Greece, close to the isthmus of Corinth. It was the smallest of the Grecian countries, and was named from Megara, which stood a little way from the Gulf of Salamis, having one port, Nisea, on that gulf, and another, Pegæe, on the Corinthian Gulf. This state was crushed in the contest between oligarchy and democracy, usually named the Peloponnesian war.

MEGATHERIUM, s. [megas and ther, Gr.] in Paleontology, a huge kind of sloth, whose fossil remains occur in America, amongst the most recent formations. There are several different genera, one of which seems to have been covered with a kind of armour, like the recent armadillo.

ME/GRIM, s. [meigrain, Fr.] a disorder of the head, with a sensation of turning round; nausea.

ME/LA, POMPONIUS, a Roman geographer of the 1st century A. D. His work is valuable, although it appears to be altogether a compilation from the writings of others.

MELANCHOLIC, (melankölik) a. afflicted with melancholy; fanciful, gloomy, or sad.

MELANCHOLY, (melanköly) s. [melancolie, Fr. from melas and chöle, Gr.] a gloomy state of mind; dejection; despondency. This very frequently arises from the person's bodily condition, but may be occasioned by other causes.

MELANCHOLY, (melanköly) a. gloomy; dismal; habitually pensive and dejected.

MELANCTHON, PHILIP, properly Schwarzertdt, the celebrated coadjutor of Luther in effecting the German Reformation. He studied at Pfortsheim and Heidelberg, and afterwards at Tübingen, and he early obtained the friendship of the great scholar and herald of the Reformation, John Reuchlin. It was through him that he was appointed Greek professor at Wittenberg, where he met with Luther. He was amongst the first who embraced his views, and he was connected with Luther in his earliest defence of them against Dr. Eck, at Leipzig. He shared the great reformer's cares and labours, and gave powerful aid by his learning and literary skill. He was once hurried away by the fiery zeal of Carlstadt, but it was for a very short time. The Confession of Augsburg was his writing; and he engaged with his old opponent, Eck, in a second disputation before Charles V., at Worms and Ratisbon. After the loss of Luther, he was carried by his fearful disposition almost to a compromise with Romanism, and was opposed to all the other friends and helpers of the Reformation. He died in 1560, aged 63 years. He was admirably qualified by his scholarship and taste to aid Luther; and his temper, which was so different from Melancthon's, was oftentimes restrained and improved by his friend's mildness. But, without Luther, Melancthon would have taken no such place as he has taken amongst the friends of the human race. His works are numerous, and to theological scholars and divines of some value.

ME/LCOMB-REGIS, Dorsetshire. It is situated at the mouth of the river Wey, and joined to Weymouth by a timber bridge, which was erected in 1770, and has a drawbridge in the middle to admit the passage of ships into the western part of the harbour. It is further united to Weymouth as a port, a corporation, and a market town, and is 129 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Friday. Pop. 5039.

MELICERIS, (meliceris) a. [melis, Gr.] in Surgery, a tumour enclosed in a cystis or bag, consisting of matter like honey, whence it derives its name.

MELILOT, s. [Fr.] in Agriculture and Botany, a species of trefoil, which grows naturally among corn in many parts of England, and is difficult to be separated from it.

TO MELIORATE, v. a. [meliorer, Fr.] to make better or improve.

MELIORATION, s. [Fr.] the act of rendering a thing better.

MELIORITY, s. [melior, Lat.] the state of being better.

MELKSHAM, Wilts. It has a considerable manufactory of fine broad-cloth, and is situated on the river Avon, 95 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 6236.

MELLI/FICATION, s. [mel and facio, Lat.] the act of making honey; production of honey.

MELLI/FUENCE, s. [mel and fluo, Lat.] a honied flow; a flow of sweetness.

MELLI/FUENT, MELLI/FUOUS, a. flowing with honey; flowing with sweetness.

MEL/LOW, (melö) a. soft with ripeness; soft in sound. Fat, applied to ground. Figuratively, partly drunk.

TO MEL/LOW, (melö) v. a. to ripen; to soften by ripeness; to ripen by age; to bring to maturity.—v. n. to grow ripe; to be matured.

MEL/LOWNESS, (meliness) s. the state of fruits made soft by ripeness or time; maturity; full age.

MEL/MOTH, WILLIAM, a lawyer, who is well known by some of his literary productions, the chief of them being translations of the letters of Cicero and Pliny. He died in 1799, aged 89 years.

MEL/OUDIOUS, a. sounding grateful to the ear; harmonious; musical.

MEL/OUDIOUSLY, ad. musically; harmoniously.

MEL/ODI/OUNESS, s. harmoniousness; sweetness of sound.

MEL/ODRAMA, s. a species of play, in which the musical part is not merely an addition and ornament, but an essential part of the representation.

MEL/ODY, s. [mel and ode, Gr.] the agreeable effect of different musical sounds ranged or disposed in a proper succession, and caused only by one single part, voice, or instrument; whence it is distinguished from harmony; though both words are used in discourse and writing as if they were synonymous. Music; an agreeableness of sound that raises pleasure in the mind.

MEL/ON, s. [Gr.] in Horticulture, a plant which runs along the ground, and produces a fruit of some size, and very luscious to the taste.

MEL/PO/MENE, in Heathen Mythology, one of the nine muses, to whom the invention of tragedy is ascribed.

MEL/ROSE, Roxburghshire, Scotland. This town stands on the Tweed, and is chiefly remarkable for the ruins of a very magnificent abbey, dedicated to St. Mary, built by David I. It is 35 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1902.

TO MELT, v. a. [melan, Sax.] to dissolve and make liquid, either by fire or heat; to dissolve or break in pieces. Figuratively, to soften to love or tenderness.—v. n. to become liquid, or to be made fluid. Figuratively, to be softened to pity; to grow tender, mild, or gentle; to be dissolved.

MEL/TER, s. one that dissolves metals or other solid substances by heat.

MEL/TINGLY, ad. in a tender or affectionate manner.

MEL/TON-MOWBRAY, Leicestershire. It is seated on, and almost encompassed with, the little river Eye, over which are two handsome stone bridges. The houses are well built. It is a large town, with a considerable market for provisions, cattle, &c. It is 106 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Fairs, on the first Tuesday after January 17th, Whitsun-Tuesday, and August 21st. Pop. 3937.

MEL/VILLE, ANDREW, one of the most eminent of the early divines of the Scottish Church, for learning, courage, and purity of purpose. After having studied at St. Andrews, he went to France, and studied at Paris and Poitiers, and obtained such reputation there, that he received a scholastic appointment. But he was compelled to leave France, and, retiring to Geneva, was made professor of general literature there. He subsequently returned to Scotland, and took the headship of Glasgow University; whence he, after a while, removed to St. Mary's College, St. Andrews. In these situations he displayed the great amount of his biblical and oriental erudition, and aided greatly in establishing the Presbyterian Kirk. He was not agreeable to the rulers from his fearlessness, and he was once obliged to leave Scotland for about a year to preserve his life. After the Union, James, who had his own reasons for endeavouring to show his zeal for Episcopacy, decoyed him to London, and had him imprisoned. He was released on condition of his leaving the kingdom; and he retired, by his liberator's desire, to Sedan, where he died in 1622, aged 76 years. George Herbert has directed some of his Latin poems against him.

MEMBER, s. [membrum, Lat.] a limb or joint of an animal body; a part of a discourse; a head; a clause; a single person belonging to a society or community.

MEMBRANE, s. [Fr. membrana, Lat.] a fibrous web, serving to wrap up some parts in the fabric of an animal.

MEMBRANACEOUS, MEMBRANEOUS, MEMBRANOUS, a. [membraneus, Fr.] consisting of membranes.

MEMEL, a town of Prussia, on the river Dange. It is not badly built, but being devoted to trade, has had little care bestowed on its ornament. It is one of the chief seats of Prussian commerce. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 55. 43. N. Long. 21. 6. E.

MEMENTO, s. [Lat.] a hint or notice to recall a thing into the memory.

MEMNON, one of the early Egyptian kings, who fought at the defence of Troy, and fell there. He was fabled to be a child of the sun; and it was believed, that when the sun's rays at his rising first touched the lips of his statue, it uttered melodious sounds. To account for this, innumerable theories have been devised.

MEMOIR, s. [mémoire, Fr.] an account of some transactions written in a familiar manner; a hint, notice, or account of any thing; the history of any person's life, written in a compendious form.

MEMORABLE, a. [memorabilis, Lat.] worthy to be remembered.

MEMORABLY, ad. in a manner worthy of being remembered.

MEMORANDUM, s. [Lat.] a note to assist the memory.

MEMORIAL, a. [Fr. memorialis, Lat.] preserving the memory or remembrance of a thing; contained in the memory.

MEMORIAL, s. a monument, or something erected to preserve the memory of some great person or action; a hint to assist the memory; the representation of a transaction, by way of remembrance or complaint from one prince, or his ambassador, to another; an address, complaining of some grievance, made by subjects to the sovereign or the ministers of the crown.

MEMORIALIST, s. one who makes remonstrances, or sets forth any particular circumstance.

MEMORY, s. [memoria, Lat. mémoire, Fr.] the power of recalling mental impressions, which have disappeared, or have been laid aside for a time; the act of recollecting things past; the time or period of a person's knowledge.

MEN, s. the plural of MAN.

TO MENACE, v. a. [menacer, Fr.] to threaten.

MENACE, s. a threat or positive assurance of mischief on certain conditions.

MENACER, s. one who threatens or denounces mischief to another.

MENAGERIE, s. [Fr.] a collection of animals.

MENAGOGUE, s. [menes and ago, Gr.] a medicine that promotes the flux of the menses.

MENAI STRAIT, the narrow sea that runs between the Isle of Anglesa and Caernarvonshire. Across it has been constructed a suspension-bridge 100 feet above high-water mark, which is a great triumph of art.

MENANDER, a Greek comedian of the 3rd century B. C., of whose verses only fragments remain, and of whose plays we can form only a very indistinct conception, from the avowed imitations of Terence. He died in about 290 B. C.

TO MEND, v. a. [emendo, Lat.] to repair or make good any breach or decay; to correct or alter for the better; to help or advance; to improve or increase.—v. n. to grow better; to be changed for the better.

MENDA CITY, s. [mendax, Lat.] falsehood.

MENDELSSOHN, MOSES, a celebrated Jewish philosopher of Germany, in the last century. He was carefully instructed in Jewish learning by his father, and he came to be a partner in a factory. He now commenced his literary career, and published works illustrating his views of Judaism. His Phædon is the work by which his name will be longest known. He was the friend of Lessing, Nicolai, and other philosophical deists of his time. He died in 1786, aged 57 years.

MENDER, s. one that repairs breaches or decays; one that alters for the better.

MENDICANT, a. [mendico, Lat.] begging.

MENDICANT, s. [Fr.] a beggar. In Ecclesiastical History, a religious order subsisting by alms acquired by begging.

MENDIP HILLS, a range of hills in Somersetshire, being at its highest points about 10,000 feet above the sea. They consist of mountain limestone and old red sandstone chiefly, and abound in combs, or narrow chasms, and caverns, in which many singular fossils have been found. Coal, copper, lead, galena, zinc, &c. &c. are found in abundance. There is good pasturage for sheep and cattle on the sides of these hills.

MENDOZA, DON DIEGO HURTADO DE, a Spanish poet, military commander, and statesman, during the 16th century. He was educated for the church at Salamanca, and whilst yet a student, invented the comic romance or novel. He was soon appointed envoy from Charles V. to Venice, and there formed an acquaintance with the most eminent Italian poets' writings. His successful diplomacy procured his appointment as delegate to the Council of Trent, and he discharged this difficult embassy to the emperor's satisfaction. This led to his being made imperial ambassador at Rome, with powers in Tuscany and elsewhere that made him the terror of the French party in Italy. He humbled the pope in his own court, braved all dangers, put down conspiracies; and after the death of Paul, and the election of Julius III., was made gonfalonier to the church. Returning to Spain, he lived the life of a literary man and courtier, and died in 1575, aged 70. He wrote many poems, and a history of the Moorish wars. He collected a very valuable library, with a great number of Arabic MSS., which forms one of the most valuable parts of the library of the Escorial. His influence on the literature of Spain was very great, and especially for the poetry, into which he introduced new forms borrowed from Italy.

MENGES, ANTONY RAPHAEL, a great German painter of the last century. He studied at Rome, and successfully imitated the style of Raffæle and Correggio. He painted in fresco, as well as on canvas. Amongst his greatest works must be numbered his paintings in the palaces of the king of Spain. He died in Rome in 1779, aged 51 years. He wrote on the theory of his art, and expounded the principles on which he had constructed and coloured his grand historic paintings.

MENIAL, a. [from meiny or many; meni, Sax. or mesnie, old Fr.] belonging to the number of servants; of a low or base employ.

MENIAL, s. one of the train of servants.

MENINGES, s. [meninges, Gr.] in Anatomy, the two membranes that envelop the brains, which are called the pia mater and dura mater; the latter being the exterior involucrem, is, from its thickness, so denominated.

MENISCUS, s. in Optics, a lens, one surface of which is convex, and the other concave, but so constructed that it is a magnifying glass.

MENSTRUAL, a. [mensis, Lat.] monthly; happening every month; lasting a month; belonging to a menstruum.

MENSTRUOUS, a. having a monthly flux.

MENSTRUUM, s. a liquor used to dissolve any thing, or to extract the virtues of any ingredients by infusion or boiling.

MENSURABILITY, s. [mensurabilité, Fr.] capacity of being measured.

MENSURABLE, a. [mensura, Lat.] capable of being measured.

MENSURAL, a. relating to measure.

TO MENSURATE, v. a. to measure or take the dimensions of any thing.

MENSURATION, s. the act or practice of measuring; the dimensions or quantity found by means of a measure.

MENTAL, a. [mentale, Fr.] existing in the mind; belonging to the mind; internal.

MENTALLY, ad. in the mind; in thought and meditation.

MENTION, (menshon) s. [mentio, Lat.] a hint; an expression in writing or speaking; a recital of a thing.

TO MENTION, (menshon) v. a. [mentiommer, Fr.] to express in words or writing.

MENTZ, a large city of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. It is finely situated, but is built in an irregular manner, with narrow streets and old-fashioned houses, and containing, besides the parish churches, 6 monasteries, 5 nunneries, and 6 hospitals. The cathedral is a gloomy fabric. Here are manufactures of stockings and stuffs. Its fortifications are very strong. Mentz is seated on the Rhine, (soon after its confluence with the Maine,) over which is a bridge communicating with Cassel. Population, 35,000. Lat. 49. 50. N. Long. 8. 11. E. It is called also Mainz, and Mayence.

MENU', (Sanskrit,) in Hindu Mythology, a descendant of Brahma, to whom is traditionally ascribed the authorship of a work on religion and law, which is the authority for the whole social and religious state of the Hindus. It contains some singular and wild statements respecting the origin and the consummation of all things, and respecting the future state of man; and amongst much that is absurd and puerile, is to be found much also of genuine value for its excellent morality and wisdom.

MEPHITIC, MEPHITICAL, (mephitis, mephical) a. [mephitis, Lat.] ill-favoured; stinking; poisonous. Mephitic air is carbonic acid gas, which is deadly poison when received into the respiratory system.

MERCANTILE, a. belonging to trade; belonging to a merchant; commercial.

MERCATOR, GERARD, a geographer and mathematician of the 16th century, who first constructed maps of the world resembling those now used for nautical purposes, and called by his name. Another mathematician of the same name investigated the laws for drawing the parallels, and they were finally settled by an English geographer named Wright. In Mercator's Projection the parallels gradually increase in distance from each other as they recede from the equator, and the poles are infinitely removed from it. The advantage of this projection is, that the directest course for a ship from one point to another on the surface of the globe, is represented by a straight line drawn between the points in the map. Gerard Mercator died in 1594; Nicholas Mercator, in about 1685.

MERCENARINESS, s. a low and sordid respect to gain or lure.

MERCENARY, a. [mercenarius, from merces, Lat.] acting only for hire, or from a low and sordid prospect of gain; hired; sold for money.

MERCENARY, s. [mercenaire, Fr.] a hireling; one retained or serving for pay.

MERCER, s. [mercier, Fr.] one who sells silks and stuffs.

MERCERY, s. [mercerie, Fr.] the trade of selling silks and stuffs.

MERCHANTISE, (the s. in this and next word is usually pronounced like z.) [Fr.] traffic, commerce, or trade; wares; any thing bought or sold.

To MERCHANTISE, v. n. to trade or traffic.

MERCHANT, s. [marchand, Fr.] one who trades with persons in foreign countries.

MERCHANTABLE, a. fit or likely to be bought or sold.

MERCHANT-MAN, s. a trading ship.

MERCIA, one of the original kingdoms of Anglo-Saxon Britain. It occupied the centre of the country, being bounded by Wales and the other kingdoms of the heptarchy.

MERCIFUL, a. willing to pity, spare, or pardon an offence, or offender; unwilling to punish.

MERCIFULLY, ad. with pity, or an inclination to spare an offender.

MERCIFULNESS, s. the quality of pitying or sparing offenders.

MERCILESS, a. without compassion; cruel; severe.

MERCILESSLY, ad. in such a manner as neither to pity nor spare an offender.

MERCILESSNESS, s. the quality of punishing without pity or pardon.

MERCURIAL, a. [mercurialis, from Mercurius, Lat.] active; sprightly; volatile. In Medicine, consisting of quicksilver.

MERCURIFICATION, s. the act of mixing or incorporating with quicksilver.

MERCURY, s. [Mercurius, Lat.] in Astronomy, the nearest planet of our system to the sun. From his proximity to the sun he is seldom seen, but when visible he shines with a very bright white light. His mean distance from the sun is about 37 millions of miles. His periodic, sidereal, and synodic revolutions are 87d. 23h. 14m. 25s. 9-10ths; 87d. 23h. 15m. 37s.; and 115d. 21h. 3m. 22s. respectively. His rotation round his axis, and consequently the length of his day, is about 24 hours. His diameter is 3264 miles, and therefore his solid contents about 7-100ths of the earth's. Mercury changes his phases, like the moon, except only that he never appears quite full. He is sometimes seen to cross the sun's disk, which is called his transit, when he appears like a little black spot, eclipsing a small part of the sun's body, only observable with the telescope. This phenomenon can only happen when the planet is in or near one of his nodes, which is about the beginning of May and November; for the sun's place in the ecliptic must be the same, or nearly the same, with the planet's ascending or descending node. The following tables give the particulars of these transits to A. D. 2003.

Table of Transits at the Ascending Node, in November.

Year.	Time of the Middle.			Dist. of centres.	Semidur.
	DAY.	H.	M.
 1848	9	at 1	59 aft.	1 53 N.	2 43½
* 1861	12	7	32 mor.	9 55 N.	2 11
* 1868	5	7	40 mor.	12 52 S.	1 41
1881	8	1	12 mor.	4 49 S.	2 37
 1894	10	6	45 aft.	3 13 N.	2 41
 1907	14	12	17 noon.	11 15 N.	1 57
 1914	7	12	26 noon.	11 32 S.	1 59
* 1927	10	5	58 noon.	3 29 S.	2 40½
1940	11	11	30 aft.	4 33 N.	2 38
* 1953	14	5	3 aft.	12 36 N.	1 46
* 1960	7	5	11 aft.	10 12 S.	2 8½
 1973	10	10	44 mor.	2 9 S.	2 42½
1986	13	4	17 mor.	5 53 N.	2 33½
1999	15	9	49 aft.	13 56 N.	1 25

Table of Transits at the Descending Node, in May.

Year.	Time of the Middle.			Dist. of centres.	Semidur.
	DAY.	H.	M.
* 1878	6	at 7	27 aft.	6 7 N.	3 43
* 1891	10	3	0 mor.	10 47 S.	2 56
* 1924	8	2	33 mor.	3 16 N.	3 56
 1937	11	10	9 mor.	13 38 S.	2 6
 1970	9	9	43 mor.	0 25 N.	4 0½
 2003	7	9	16 mor.	14 28 N.	1 39

Those transits that may be seen from beginning to end, in London, are marked with two asterisks, but those that may be seen only in part are marked with one. The third column of the tables denotes the distance of the planet's centre from the sun's, either N. or S. at the time of the middle; and the last, the semiduration of Mercury's centre upon the sun's disk. If you subtract the semiduration of any particular transit noted in the table, from its middle time, the remainder will give the time of the planet's central ingress; and by adding it you will have that of his central egress.—In Mythology, a deity, held to be the messenger of the other gods, to preside over eloquence and trade, to be the inventor of music, the interpreter of the will of the other deities, and the son of Jupiter by Maia. In Chemistry, quicksilver. This metal, in the temperature of our atmosphere, is a fluid having the appearance of melted silver. It is the heaviest of all metals except platinum and gold. Mercury is used in large quantities for silvering mirrors; for gilding; for making barometers and thermometers; and in the manufacture of vermilion. It has also various and important uses in medicine. In Heraldry, purple. In Botany, a genus of plants, of which two kinds are native in England: there is also a kind of blight that goes by this name. Figuratively, sprightliness; a newspaper; a carrier of newspapers.

MERCY, s. [merci, Fr.] the act of passing by crimes without punishing them; unwillingness to punish; the act of pitying and pardoning offenders; pardon.

MERCY-SEAT, s. in the Jewish Tabernacle and Temple, was the covering of the chest in which the tables of the law were deposited, called the ark of the covenant; it was of gold, and at its two ends were fixed two cherubim of the same metal, with their wings extended; between which appeared the Glory that betokened the presence of God.

MERE, a. [merus, Lat.] entire; only; exclusive of all other persons or things; simple.

MERE, s. [Sax.] in the beginning, middle, or end of the names of places, a pool or lake.

MERE, s. a large pool or lake; a boundary.

MEREELY, ad. simply; only; barely; exclusive of any other thing.

MERETRICIOUS, a. [meretrix, Lat.] used by or belonging to harlots; seducing or alluring by false shows.

MERETRICIOUSLY, ad. after the manner of a harlot, with false allurements.

MERETRICIOUSNESS, s. the quality of using false allurements, like those of harlots.

MERIDIAN, s. [Meridien, Fr.] noon, or mid-day. In Astronomy, an imaginary line from the N. pole to the S.; which the sun crosses at noon. Figuratively, the highest point of glory or power. In globes and maps, the lines drawn from N. to S.; also the brazen circle within which the globe revolves.

MERIDIAN, a. at the point of noon; extended from the N. to the S. Figuratively, raised to the highest point.

MERIDIONAL, a. [meridional, Fr.] southern; situated towards the S.; looking towards the S. This and the two following words have the assigned significations only in the N. hemisphere. In the S. the meaning is the reverse.

MERIDIONALITY, s. situation in the S.; position of a place so as to look towards the S.

MERIDIONALLY, ad. with a southern aspect.

MERIONETHSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, lying on the Irish Sea, and bounded by Caernarvonshire, Denbighshire, Montgomeryshire, and Cardiganshire. It extends 30 miles in length, and is 34 wide in its broadest part. The soil is as bad as any in Wales, being very rocky and mountainous; however, large flocks of sheep and goats, and large herds of horned cattle, find pretty good pastures in the valleys. The face of the country is most romantic, and it is well clothed with wood. The principal rivers are the Dee and Dwy; and it has a great mountain, the Cader Idris, which is nearly 3000 feet high. Merionethshire contains 5 hundreds, 5 market towns, and 37 parishes. Harlech is the capital. Pop. 39,332. It returns one member to parliament.

MERIT, s. [mérite, Fr.] desert; excellence deserving honour or reward.

TO MERIT, v. a. [mériter, Fr.] to deserve; to have a right to claim somewhat, on account of one's excellences; to earn.

MERITORIOUS, a. [méritoire, Fr.] deserving reward; having great desert.

MERITORIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to deserve reward.

MERITORIOUSNESS, s. the quality of a thing, action, or person, which gives them a right to approbation and reward.

MERLIN, s. in Ornithology, a kind of hawk.

MERLIN, a fabulous person, who figures largely in elsh poetry and tradition, and especially in the legends relating to Prince Arthur, as a prophet and magician.

MERMAID, s. [from mer, Fr. and maid,] a fabulous creature, represented as half a woman and half a fish, inhabiting the sea. See SYRENS.

MERMAID'S TRUMPET, s. in Zoology, a kind of shell-fish. MERNS, or MEARNS. See KINCARDINESHIRE.

MEROVINGIANS, the earliest royal dynasty of France, which held the throne from 481 A. D. to 751, when they were supplanted by Pepin, who founded the Carolingian dynasty.

MERRICK, JAMES, an English clergyman and poet, whose metrical version of the Psalms is much admired, though not remarkable for its fidelity to the simplicity of the originals. He published a volume of poems, and some brief comments on the Psalms and on John's Gospel. He died in 1769, aged 49 years.

MERRILY, ad. in a gay, joyous, or mirthful manner.

MERRIMAKE, s. a festival; a meeting to be joyous.

TO MERRIMAKE, v. a. to feast; to be merry.

MERRIMENT, s. gaiety; sport that causes laughter.

MERRINESS, s. the quality of being cheerful, or promoting mirth among others.

MERRY, a. [mîrig, Sax.] full of mirth, joy, and laughter; causing laughter; prosperous, or making cheerful. To make merry, to junket, drink, and give a loose to laughter and joy with a friend.

MERRY-ANDREW, s. a buffoon, or person who endeavours to raise laughter in others by odd gestures and comical expressions.

MERRY-THOUGHT, (merry-thaut) s. the common name for the clavicular bone of fowls, given to it from its jocular employment in domestic vaticinations, about weddings, and such things.

MERSE-NE, MARIN, a French philosopher and mathematician, of the 17th century. He studied at La Flèche, joined the order of Minims, and became a professor of theology, &c. at Nevers. He was an intimate acquaintance of Descartes, and his work on the theory of Music is esteemed very highly. He published other works, and was a warm advocate of the philosophical system of his friend. He died in 1648, aged 60 years.

MERSEY, a considerable river of England, separating Lancashire from Cheshire, whicsee seo.

MERSON, (mérshon) s. [mercio, from mergo, Lat.] the act of sinking or plunging over-head.

MERTHYR-TYDFIL, Glamorganshire, S. Wales. It stands near the river Taff, and is a very extensive and irregularly built place. It has arisen about the large iron-mines and iron-works erected there, and retained sufficient importance to have a parliamentary representation assigned to it. It is 176 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 34,977.

MERTON COLLEGE, OXFORD, was founded in the 13th century. Its buildings are of a later date, and have nothing very remarkable about them.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM, s. [mesos, temera, and anthos, Gr.] in Botany, a very large genus of succulent plants, with handsome composite flowers, very abundant in the S. parts of Africa.

MESENTERIC, a. [mésentérique, Fr.] belonging to the mesentery.

MESENTERY, s. [mesos and enteron, Gr.] in Anatomy, a fat membrane placed in the middle of the abdomen, almost of a circular figure, with a narrow projection, to which the end of the colon and beginning of the rectum are attached. The intestines are fastened like a border on its circumference.

MESERIC, a. [meserique, Fr.] belonging to the mesentery.

MESIL, s. [maesche, Belg.] the space or interstice between the threads of a net. See MASH.

TO MESH, v. a. to catch in a net; to insnare.

MESHY, a. made of net-work.

MESLIN, s. [mesler, Fr.] mixed corn, consisting of wheat and rye.

MESMERISM, s. [from the name of the reviver of the practice, Dr. F. A. Mesmer, who made considerable stir in France just before the Revolution, and died in 1815.] called also Animal Magnetism, Hypnotism, Neurhypnology, &c. by different writers and practitioners; the term most generally employed to designate the hypothesis of a subtle nervous influence which men and animals exert on each other, in various ways, but chiefly by means of light and rapid motions with the hands, and by the steady gaze of the eyes; the effects of which vary both with the patient, the operator, and the degree of habituation to the treatment; being in some cases only a profounder natural sleep; in others, a state resembling somnambulism; in others, and under other conditions, catalepsy; the most remarkable of all being that intensifying of the senses, called clairvoyance. The beneficial application of this influence in nervous diseases, deemed incurable, has been shown in too many cases to leave any room for doubt. As an anæsthetic agency, or means of rendering the frame insensible to the pain of surgical operations, it has been proved in innumerable instances, before ether or chloroform was thought of. As opening the way for totally new inquiries and discoveries respecting both the bodily and mental nature of man, and particularly respecting the relation or connexion of these natures, it has engaged the attention of the scientific. As yet, no satisfactory theory has been suggested, though several, widely different and even contradictory, are maintained; and the prejudices of the age, and of the faculty most interested in such inquiries, are, unhappily, so strong as to resist the demand made for careful attention and study, both by the facts of mesmerism, and by philosophy itself.

MESNE, (mine) s. in Law, signifies him who is lord of a manor, and so hath tenants holding of him, yet himself holding of a superior lord.

MESOLEUCYCS, s. [mesos and leukos, Gr.] a kind of agate, black with a streak of white in the middle.

MESOLOGARITHMS, s. [mesos, logos, and arithmos, Gr.] the logarithms of the cosines and tangents, so denominated by Kepler.

MESOMELAS, s. [mesos and melas, Gr.] a kind of agate, with a black vein parting every colour in the middle.

MESOPOTAMIA, in Ancient Geography, a district lying between the Tigris and the Euphrates, extending from Armenia to Babylonia. It was in the interior a sterile table-land, which was wholly occupied by nomad hordes; the mountains on the N. were held by warlike and fierce tribes, quite independent of the Persian king; on the Euphrates, were the cities Thapsacus, Cunaxa, and Carchemish or Circesium, with Nisibis and Edessa in other parts.

MESS, s. [mes, old Fr.] a dish; a quantity of food sent to table at once.

To MESS, v. n. to eat or feed.

MESSAGE, s. [Fr.] an errand; any thing told to another to be related to a third person.

MESSSENGER, s. [messenger, Fr.] one who is sent on an errand; one who is sent to a third person; a person paid by government to carry despatches relating to affairs of state, and is likewise employed by the secretary's warrants to apprehend and keep in custody persons suspected of high-treason; a forerunner or harbinger.

MESSSENE, in Ancient Geography, a country of the Peloponneseus in Greece, lying to the W. of Laconia, and subjected by the Spartans at an early period. It was tolerably level, with one beautiful valley in particular, called the Happy Valley. The chief river was the Panisus. It was very fertile, and its chief cities were Messene, Ithome, Ira, Pylus, &c.

MESSIAH, s. [Heb.] the title given in the Old Testament to all persons who were designated to any sacred office by anointing, and therefore used by some of the prophets in reference to the great Prophet, King, and Priest who was universally expected to raise Israel to the highest pitch of glory. Translated into Greek, as Christ, or the Christ, it is employed in the New Testament as the peculiar designation of our Lord, who was the expected and predicted Saviour.

MESSIEURS, s. [plural of monsieur, Fr.] sirs, or gentlemen. MESSINA, a city of Sicily, in the valley of Demona, about five miles in circumference, with four large suburbs. The public buildings and monasteries, which are very numerous, are magnificent, and well endowed. The harbour, whose quay is above a mile in length, is one of the safest in the Mediterranean, and in the form of a half moon. It is five miles in circumference, extremely deep, and defended by a citadel and other works. It is a place of great trade in silk, oil, fruit, corn, and excellent wine. It is 104 miles from Palermo. Pop. above 50,000. Lat. 38. 11. N. Long. 15. 49. E.

MESSMATE, s. one that eats at the same table.

MESSUAGE, s. [messagium, law Lat.] in Law, a dwelling-house, with lands adjoining.

MET, the pret. and part. of To MEET.

METABASIS, s. [metabaino, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure by which the orator passes from one thing to another.

METABOLA, s. [metaballo, Gr.] in Medicine, a change of time, air, or disease.

METACARPAL, a. [meta and karpos, Gr.] in Anatomy, belonging to the metacarpus.

METACARPUS, s. in Anatomy, the wrist, or that part behind the hand and the fingers.

METAGRAMMATISM, s. [meta and grammata, Gr.] See ANAGRAM.

METAL, s. [metallum, Lat.] in Mineralogy and Chemistry, a large class of substances as yet indecomposable, and therefore regarded as elementary substances. They are all conductors of heat and electricity, opaque, good reflectors of light, and possessed of a peculiar lustre, called the metallic lustre. Some of them are highly malleable and ductile, most of them are very heavy, and are in fluid at the usual temperature of the atmosphere. There are in all 42 metals, which are divided into those which are the bases of alkalies and earths, by oxidation, viz. potassium, sodium, lithium, barium, strontium, calcium, magnesium, aluminium, glucinum, yttrium, thorium, and zirconium; and those which are not, viz. manganese, tin, cobalt, zinc, cadmium, nickel, iron, arsenic, columbium, bismuth, chromium, antimony, titanium, vanadium, uranium, tellurium, molybdenum, cerium, copper, tungsten, tantalum, lead, mercury, platinum, osmium, silver, palladium, iridium, gold, rhodium: see these names. Figuratively, genuine worth and excellence.

METALEPTIS, s. [metaleptano, Gr.] a continuation of a trope in one word through a succession of significations.

METALLIC, METALLICAL, a. [metallique, Fr.] partaking, consisting of, or containing metal; made of metal.

METALLINE, a. impregnated with or containing metal; consisting or made of metal.

METALLIST, s. a worker in metals; a person skilled in metals.

METALLOIDS, s. in Chemistry, substances related to the metals.

METALLURGIST, s. [metallon and ergon, Gr.] a worker in metals.

METALLURGY, s. the act of working metals, and separating them from their ores.

To METAMORPHOSE, (metamorphose) v. a. [meta and morphe, Gr.] to change the form or shape of any thing; to change into a different shape or animal.

METAMORPHOSIS, (metamorphosis) s. change of shape; the change an animal undergoes both in its formation and growth; the various shapes some insects assume in the different stages of their existence, as the silkworm, &c. In Animal and Vegetable Physiology, it means the changes by which a simple organ is developed, so as to form other organs greatly differing in all external appearances. Thus all the various organs of the flowers of plants, sepals, petals, nectaries, stamens, pistilla, &c. are found to be metamorphosed leaves: the different plates that form the skulls of animals, are metamorphosed vertebrae, as is seen in the case of the tortoise's shell.

METAPHOR, (metaphor) s. [meta and phero, Gr.] in Rhetoric, the application of a word to a use, to which, in its original import, it cannot be put: as, he bridles his anger; he deadens the sound; the spring awakes the flowers. A metaphor is a simile comprised in a word.

METAPHORIC, METAPHORICAL, (metaphorik, metaphoral) a. belonging to a metaphor. Figuratively, not according to the primary and literal sense.

METAPHRASE, (metaphrase) s. [meta and phrasis, Gr.] a close and verbal translation from one language into another.

METAPHRAST, (metaphrast) s. one who translates literally, or word for word, out of one language into another.

METAPHYSIC, METAPHYSICAL, (metaphysik, metaphysikal) a. versed in metaphysics; abstracted.

METAPHYSICS, (metaphysiks) s. [meta and phusis, Gr.] ontology, or the science of being in the abstract; mental science, in opposition to natural history and philosophy, which is physical science; the science of supersensual truths, or of ideas.

METAPLASM, s. [meta and plasso, Gr.] in Grammar, the changing or transposing a letter or syllable in a word. In Rhetoric, the placing of words, syllables, or letters, contrary to the natural order.

METASTASIO, PIETRO, whose father's name was Trappasi, the great Italian lyrical dramatic poet, was early distinguished for his extemporaneous verses, which led to his adoption by the great lawyer of Rome, Gravina, and the change of his name. He was carefully instructed by his adopted father, and trained for the legal profession; but after his death, having continued to study law very diligently, the success of one of his operatic poems, and the notice bestowed on him by the famous singer Romanina, made him relinquish his professional pursuits and devote himself to his genius. After some years, his fame procured for him the appointment of poet laureate at the imperial court of Vienna, where he continued till his death in 1782, aged 84 years. He wrote above 25 operas, with several sacred dramas, and translations from Latin and Greek poets, with annotations. His poetry is remarkable for its elegance, purity of style, smoothness of versification, and for the pathos and noble sentiment that pervades it. It lacks greatness and tragic power; but it was the expression of Metastasio's own character, which every one loved and admired, and which deserved all their esteem.

METATARSUS, s. [meta and tarsos, Gr.] in Anatomy, that part of a human skeleton, which consists of five bones, and reaches from the heel to the toes, containing the middle of the foot.

METATHESES, s. [meta and thesis, Gr.] in Grammar, the transposition of the letters or syllables of a word; as Evaradre for Evaradr.

To METE, v. a. [metan, Sax.] to measure; to reduce to measure.

METELLUS, the name of a famous family of ancient Rome, one of the most celebrated members of which was Q. Cæcilius Metellus, who overcame Jugurtha, the Numidian king, who, after the conquest of Carthage, valiantly opposed the Romans; and was surnamed Numidicus, with the honour of a triumph for his victories. The final conquest of Jugurtha was accomplished by Marius; and the jealousy of Metellus occasioned him some trouble at Rome, and a banishment for a year, through the means he adopted for showing it. He died in about 90 B. C.

METEMPSYCHOSIS, (metempsychōsis) s. [metē and empsychō, Gr.] the transmigration of souls after death to other bodies.

METEOR, (metēora, Gr.) in Natural Philosophy, a general and ill-defined name given to phenomena connected with the atmosphere, and not classed with the phenomena treated of under the other and definite branches of physical science; such as, clouds, rain, hail, &c., dew, falling stars, the weather, &c.; but popularly including other phenomena, such as rainbows, thunderstorms, halos, parhelia, aurora borealis, &c.

METEOROLOGICAL, a. belonging to meteorology.

METEOROLOGIST, s. a person skilled in meteorology.

METEOROLOGY, s. [metēora and logos, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, the term under which are classed the inquiries into the laws of the weather, of dew, frost, rain, hail, snow, and of the state of the atmosphere generally. Notwithstanding the long-continued and numberless observations recorded, and the wide application of other sciences, this is in a most unsatisfactory state.

METER, s. a measurer.

METHEGLIN, s. [meddyglyn, Brit.] the old name of mead, or honey-wine.

METHINKS, v. [me and think,] I think, imagine, or suppose.

METHOD, s. [méthode, Fr. methodos, Gr.] the performing of several separate operations, in such an order as is most convenient and proper to attain some end; the manner in which a thing is done. In Philosophy, it is the science of scientific investigation; the scientia prima of Lord Bacon; which teaches the use of hypotheses in the formation of theories, and how to adopt such a one as shall serve as a safe guide in the collection, comparison, and arrangement of facts and phenomena; shall direct experiments, &c. &c. It prescribes especially such arrangements as shall involve continuity and progression; and applies to rhetoric and poetry, and to common life and thinking, as well as to scientific reflection and inquiry.

METHODICAL, a. [methodique, Fr.] ranged or placed in proper or just order, performing things according to a method.

METHODICALLY, ad. in a manner consistent with regularity and order.

METHODISM, s. in Ecclesiastical History, the system of doctrine and church government maintained by the Wesleyan Methodists. See that name.

METHODISTS, s. in Ecclesiastical History, the followers of John Wesley. There are several separate bodies of Methodists, who have separated from the Wesleyans on various points of discipline; as the Primitive Methodists, the New Connexion Methodists, &c. But they hold by the general principles of Methodism, both in doctrine and government. See WESLEYAN METHODISM.

To METHODIZE, v. a. to regulate, or dispose in just and proper order.

METONIC CYCLE, s. in the Ecclesiastical Calendar, a cycle of 19 years, invented by Meton, an astronomer of Athens; who supposed that the period of 235 lunations was exactly equal to 19 solar years; and that, therefore, in every such period, the new and full moons would regularly recur at the same seasons. The use of this cycle began in 432 B. C.; and it was adopted in the Western Churches for the calculation of the full moon that regulated the observance of the festival of Easter. The calculation was inaccurate, because 235 lunations are more than 19 solar years. It was not used in Greece for more than a century; and it was superseded in the 6th century A. D. in Christendom, by the introduction of the Dionysian Cycle. See CALENDAR, CYCLE, EASTER, &c.

METONYMY, s. [metē and onyma, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure, wherein a word is used instead of another, as the effect for the cause, the thing containing for the thing contained.

METOPE, s. [metē and ōpē, Gr.] in Architecture, the spaces between the triglyphs in the Doric frieze; which were usually occupied by sculptures, in basso-relievo. In the Parthenon of Athens the story of the battle of the Centaurs and Lapithæ was represented on the metopes, and some of these marbles are now in the Elgin salon of the British Museum.

METRE, (metēr) s. [metrum, Lat. metron, Gr.] a collection of words disposed in lines, of a certain number of syllables, so as to appear harmonious to the ear; measure; verse.

METRICAL, a. confined to metre; measured or limited to a certain number of syllables.

METRONOME, s. [metron and nomos, Gr.] in Music, an instrument so constructed that, by means of the beats of a pendulum, the exact time, in which any composition should be sung or played, is marked.

METROPOLIS, s. [metēr and polis, Gr.] the mother city or chief city of any country.

METROPOLITAN, s. [metropolitānus, Lat.] a bishop of the mother church, or of the chief church in the chief city; an archbishop.

METROPOLITAN, METROPOLITICAL, a. belonging to, or situated in, the metropolis.

METTL, s. [from metel,] spirit; sprightliness; courage.

METTLED, a. sprightly; courageous; full of spirits or fire.

METTLESOME, a. sprightly; lively; gay; courageous;

full of spirits; fiery.

METTLESOMELY, ad. with sprightliness, vigour, ardour, or courage.

METZ, capital of the department of Moselle, France. The cathedral is one of the finest in Europe, and the square called Coslin, and the house of the governor, are elegant. The Jews live in a part of the town by themselves, where they have a synagogue. The sweetmeats they make here are in high esteem. The gates, and public buildings generally, the barracks, and the public library, are very fine. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Moselle and Scille. It is 190 miles from Paris. Pop. about 45,000. Lat. 49. 7. N. Long. 6. 10. E.

MEU, s. in Botany, another name for the common spignel.

MEULEN, ANTHONY FRANCIS VANDER, a famous Dutch battle painter, who accompanied Louis XIV. in his repeated wars, and represented the most celebrated scenes of his military success. He died in 1690, aged 66 years.

MEURSIUS, JOHN, a learned Dutch historian, &c., who was tutor of Barneveldt's sons, and travelled with them, and afterwards was made Greek professor of Leyden, and historiographer of the states-general. Subsequently he held similar appointments in Denmark. His works are chiefly critical editions of classic authors, and essays on Athenian history, &c. He also wrote on Dutch and Danish history. He died in 1639, aged 50 years.

MEURTHE, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Vosges, Bas Rhin, Moselle, and Meuse. It is 70 miles long, and 45 broad. The Vosges mountains cross it, and attain the height of 3000 feet in some parts. The Moselle, with its tributaries, the Meurthe, (whence it is named,) the Madon, &c. are the chief rivers of this department. It yields building-stone and marble, with great quantities of excellent rock salt. Corn, fruits, and wine are produced abundantly. Sheep and cattle also abound. In the forests is much game, and wolves are too numerous. Its manufactures are of some importance. Nancy is its capital. Pop. about 430,000.

MEUSE, a department of France, lying next to Belgium, and bounded by the departments of Ardennes, Marne, Haute Marne, Vosges, Meurthe, and Moselle. It is above 80 miles in length, and more than 40 in breadth. In this department are the hills called the Heights of Argonne. Its rivers are the Meuse, from which it is named, and several streams which flow into the Seine on the W. and the Rhine on the E. Iron, building and limestone, &c. are found abundantly. Corn of all kinds, fruits, and excellent wine, are also produced most plentifully. The forests yield choice timber; and cattle of all sorts, game, &c. &c. are abundant. It has some valuable manufactures. Bar-le-duc is its principal place. Pop. about 320,000.

MEW, s. [meu, Fr.] a cage; an enclosure; a place wherein any thing is confined.

To MEW, v. a. to enclose in a cage; to shut up; to confine or imprison. [meur, Fr.] to shed the feathers; to moult. [meuler, Fr.] to make a noise like a cat.

MEWS, s. a prince's or nobleman's stables.

MEXICO, the name of a vast territory of N. America, reaching from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific Ocean, and bounded on the N. by the territory of the United States, and on the S. by the States of Central America, occupied by the federal republic, called the United Mexican States. Along the W. part of this region runs the vast chain of mountains called the Rocky Mountains, several parts of which approach to 20,000 feet in elevation, and in which are 6 active volcanoes, Jorullo and Popocatepetl being the most remarkable. To the W. of this mountain chain is a plain, which gradually narrows as it approaches the S., watered by several considerable rivers. On the E. side is a similar plain, growing narrow in like manner, and then expanding into the peninsula of Yucatan, which forms the W. shore of the Bay of Honduras. In the N. part of this vast plain are several great rivers, the chief being Rio Bravo del Norte. The S. part of Mexico is within the N. tropic, and the climate there is very hot and unhealthy, but it becomes more temperate as it expands into the body of the N. American continent. The productions of Mexico vary greatly with the latitude and the elevation. Corn, rice, aloes, sugar, cotton, tobacco, cocoa, maize, indigo, and a great number of fruits and drugs, are abundantly produced, and with comparatively slight cultivation. It has also plenty of cattle, sheep, and horses, for which it is indebted to its original Spanish conquerors and colonists. The wild animals are chiefly buffaloes, pumas, jaguars, and the various and beautiful species of humming-birds and parrots. In fishes, insects, &c. it also abounds, and many kinds are highly beautiful and singular. But the great source of Mexican wealth is its metals. It has mines of gold, silver, copper, lead, and iron, all of which are worked, and all of which yield plentifully. Of its manufactures it cannot boast. Its trade consists principally of its native productions, and the fruits of its agriculture, fisheries, hunting-grounds, &c., as exports; and as imports, of the manufactures of England, and other nations, whose wealth lies in the industry and skill of their people. The people are very mixed in their character, and very various in their origin. Very few of the aborigines were suffered to remain by the first conquerors, and the present population is made up of Spaniards, and settlers from different countries of Europe, Indians, and negroes, and the various cross-breeds that sprang up in process of time amongst them. The United Mexican States are 19 in number, each of which is independent of the rest in the management of its own affairs; but for the common welfare, there is a congress, which sits at Mexico, and is controlled by a senate and a president, after the model of the United States of N. America. The chief city is Mexico, which stands in a wide plain surrounded by mountains, in which are four lakes. It stands on the side of one of these lakes, and is a fine city, although most of the houses are only of one story in height. It is adorned by several noble squares, and public buildings, such as those connected with government, the prisons, the churches, the schools, &c. &c. The soil on which it is built is little better than a partially recovered morass, which is the reason for the peculiar style of its architecture. Its population is about 150,000. The other notable cities of Mexico, are Vera Cruz, Tampico, Monterey, Acapulco, Campeachy, Tehuantepec, &c. Pop. about 7,000,000. Mexico is at this very time engaged in a losing contest with the United States, and its ultimate destination is most uncertain. It has already lost Texas and California, which have been added to the States and the territories of the Union, and it is not unlikely that it may be altogether incorporated with that growing country. Its history has been one of calamities from the first glimpses we can obtain of it. The magnificent ruins of cities, and traces of civilization, long anterior to the Spanish conquest, are scattered throughout it; the savage suppressors of that antique glory fell before the bands of Cortes; the mistakes of Spanish rule were lost sight of in the revolutionary panic and struggle which passed over almost the whole of the American continents in the last generation; with the forms of a republic of the 19th century, there have co-existed the turbulence, the lawlessness, and the everlasting change of the most barbarous ages; and now the passage of its history it is going through, for bloodshed and spoliation, feeble rivalries and treasuries, and all that indicates the struggle in behalf of a desperate cause, seem to surpass all that has been before. See AZTECS.

MEXICO, GULF OF, the name of the sea between Mexico and the United States, whose entrance from the Atlantic Ocean and the Caribbean Sea is narrowed by the peninsulas of Florida and Yucatan, and almost closed by the island of Cuba. It is about 1000 miles in length, and 700 in breadth. It has only small rocky or sandy islands and shoals in it; and it receives the waters of the Mississippi, the Rio del Norte, and several other large streams. It is from this gulf that the great oceanic current that flows quite to the Northern Ocean, derives its name of Gulf-stream, although it has been traced from the coast of Africa, entering this gulf by its S. opening before it leaves it by the Bahamas and Florida.

MEZEOREON, s. in Botany, the garden shrub called also daphne.

MEZZOTINTO, s. [Ital.] a kind of graving upon copper, said to be invented by Prince Rapert, which receives its name from resembling painting, and is performed by marking the plate in furrows or cross lines; after which they are rubbed down with a burnisher or scraper, according to the depth or lightness of the shades required.

MIASM, s. [miasmos, from miaino, Gr.] an atmospheric poison, consisting of the effluvia from putrifying vegetable or animal substances.

MICA, s. in Mineralogy, a peculiar kind of laminated transparent stone, found in crystalline and in irregular forms; and also in separate laminae, in the early slate rocks, in granite, &c. Mica slate, or schist, in Geology, one of the earliest sedimentary formations. It usually rests on a formation called gneiss. It is slaty in its structure, and universally characterized by the presence of detached laminae of mica. It has sometimes, also, fragments of quartz, and other parts of the components of granite. There are no organic remains in any part of these beds. It is best developed on the flanks of mountain chains, where the edges of the formation have been laid bare by the fracture of the beds through the upheaval of the granite mass which composed their summits.

MICAH, one of the prophets of the Hebrews, who discharged his office during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. His ministry extended to Israel as well as to Judah, but no other facts respecting him are known. He flourished in and about 725 B.C. The book which contains the record of his prophecies is very brief, and relates to the captivity of the Jews, and the destruction of Jerusalem, with clear hopes of the restoration afterwards brought about by Cyrus. He pointedly refers to Bethlehem as the birth-place of Christ, and intimates with these themes the usual exhortations, warnings, and promises respecting the national sins of the chosen people. His style is in the highest degree poetical and animated, though it does not approach the sublimity and force of some of the other prophets.

MICE, s. the plural of Mouse.

MICHAELMAS, (Mikelmás) s. the festival of the archangel Michael, celebrated on the 29th of September.

MICHAEL'S MOUNT ST. See CORNWALL.

MICHAEL'S ST., one of the Azores, or Western Isles, which lie in the Atlantic Ocean, off the N.W. coast of Africa. It is mountainous, and plainly of volcanic origin. The highest point is more than 3500 feet above the sea. It is abundantly supplied with water, and yields corn and fruits, especially a fine kind of orange, in great plenty. It is well wooded in the higher parts, and has almost a uniform temperature throughout the year. Ponte Delgada is its chief place, but it has a bad harbour. The island belongs to Portugal. Pop. about 80,000.

MICHAELIS, JOHN DAVID, a distinguished Hebrew scholar and divine of Germany in the last century. He was educated at Halle, and became preacher at the German chapel, St. James's Palace, London, whence he removed to be theological professor at Göttingen. He received from the king of Sweden, and from other continental governments, great marks of respect. And he gained great fame by his works, of which the Commentaries on the Law of Moses, and his Introduction to the New Testament, were the most renowned. He died in 1791, aged 74 years.

To MICHE, (niké) v. n. to be secret; to lie hid.

MICHER, (mikér) s. a lazy loiterer, who skulks about in corners and by-places, out of sight.

MICHIGAN, one of the great group of lakes in the centre of N. America. It is the largest that lies wholly in the territory of the United States, being 330 miles long, and 60 broad. Its E. coast is sandy, and there are a few bays. It is deep, and yields excellent fish. There are several islands in the N. part.

MICHIGAN, one of the United States, N. America. It lies on the lakes Erie, Michigan, Huron, and Superior, which divide it from Canada, and is bounded by Ohio and Indiana. It consists of 2 peninsulas, the larger of which is 288 miles long, and 190 broad; and the smaller, 320 long, and about 80 broad. It has 32 counties.

It is in general level, and in the interior has some fine table-land covered with prairies and forests. The rivers Huron, Raisin, Rouge, Clinton, &c. are the largest. It is chiefly devoted to agriculture, and yields well for the time that has elapsed since its first clearings. Its trade consists chiefly in timber, agricultural and pastoral produce, skins, &c. But it has some small and rising manufactories. There are 3 colleges already, and 9 banks. Detroit is the largest and most commercial place, and is also the seat of government. Pop. 212,267. Slavery is prohibited, but coloured people are not politically free.

MICROCOSM, s. [mikros and kosmos, Gr.] the little world. Figuratively, man.

MICROGRAPHY, (mikrográphy) s. [mikros and grapho, Gr.] the description of the parts of such objects as are visible only by means of a microscope.

MICROMETER, s. [mikros and metreo, Gr.] an instrument applied to telescopes and microscopes for the purpose of enabling the observer to measure and compare extremely small spaces and distances.

MICROSCOPE, s. [mikros and scopos, Gr.] in Optics, an instrument constructed for the purpose of examining small objects. There are many different kinds. The single microscope is only one magnifying lens. The compound microscope is a combination of two or more lenses, so as to increase the magnifying power very greatly. The solar or oxyhydrogen microscope is one in which, by means of a strong light thrown upon a concave mirror, a magnified image of any object is thrown on a screen placed opposite to it, by an apparatus resembling part of a magic lantern. The recent studies of opticians have greatly improved this most valuable instrument, and every contrivance that ingenuity could suggest, or skill accomplish, has been introduced into the structure of the instrument, and into its fitting up. The power, and the convenience for use, of the best instruments of the present day, are quite incredible to such as have not had the opportunity of testing them by frequent and continued use. And the wonderful discoveries, especially in physiology, which have by means of them been made, sufficiently approve their excellence.

MICROSCOPIC, MICROSCOPICAL, a. made by a microscope; assisted by a microscope; resembling a microscope.

MID, a. [contracted from middle, Sax.] middle; equally between two extremes.

MIDDAY, s. noon.

MIDDLE, a. [midde, Sax.] in the centre; equally distant from the two extremes. In Greek Grammar, the name in old writers and their followers, given to the reflexive forms of the verb. SYNTAX. A thing is in the middle, when it stands at an equal distance from the two extremes: it is in the midst, when it stands in the centre of a great many.

MIDDLE, s. the centre, or part equally distant from two extremes; any thing between two extremes.

MIDDLE-AGED, a. of a moderate age; arrived to an equal distance between childhood and old age.

MIDDELBURG, a large commercial town of Zealand, Holland, capital of the province, and of the island of Walcheren. The squares, town-house, and other public buildings, are magnificent. It has a communication with the sea by a canal, which will bear the largest vessels, and is seated in the centre of the island. It is 72 miles from Amsterdam. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 51. 30. N. Long. 3. 41. E.

MIDDLEHAM, or MIDLAM, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is seated on the river Ure, and is noted for its woollen manufactory. It is 255 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 930.

MIDLEMOST, a. superlative of middle; most near to the middle or centre.

MIDLESEX, a county of England, bounded by Hertfordshire, Essex, Surrey, Kent, and Buckinghamshire. It is one of the least counties in England, being only about 22 miles in length, and 14 in breadth. It contains 7 market towns, and about 98 parishes, without including those in London and Westminster. The air is healthy; but the soil in general being a lean gravel, it is naturally a district of little fertility, though, by means of the vicinity to the metropolis, many parts of it are converted into rich beds of manure, clothed with almost perpetual verdure. Besides the Thames, the Lea, and the Coln, Middlesex is watered by several small streams, one of which, called the New River, is artificially brought from Amwell, in Herts, for the purpose of supplying London with water. Indeed, the whole county may be considered as a demesne to the metropolis, the land being laid out in gardens, pastures, and enclosures of all sorts, for its convenience and support. London is its chief place, and county town. Pop. 1,576,636.

MIDDLETON, SIR HUGH, the enterprising projector and constructor of the New River, by which great part of London is supplied with spring water. He was a London goldsmith; but was related to a Welsh family of respectability. His share in his own success was, like that of most genuine philanthropists, somewhat stinted. He died in 1637, aged about 60 years.

MIDDLETON, DR. CONYERS, a celebrated divine and critic of the beginning of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and was early involved in a litigation with Bentley, about his diploma, which ended in a law-suit, and in Middleton's triumph. He visited Italy; and returning, became Woodwardian Professor at Alma Mater. He died in 1750, aged 67. His greatest work is his Life of Cicero. His Free Inquiry into the Miraculous Powers of the Church, caused a great outcry against his piety to be raised, as though he had shaken, or could have shaken Christianity, by impugning what was scarcely ever believed as a fact, and had nothing whatever to do with that trust which is the means of salvation. In his Letter from Rome, he showed the real origin of most of the ceremonies of the Roman Church. He published many other works of less import.

MIDDLETON, DR. THOMAS FANSHAW, the first bishop of Calcutta, in connexion with the Church of England, was a man of great erudition, and by his Essay on the Greek Article, not only cleared up some difficult questions of classical interpretation, but swept away a whole host of Socinian cavils, based on pretended grammatical accuracy in rendering various passages of the Greek Testament. He was indefatigable in the discharge of the duties of his see, and died in 1822, aged 53 years.

MIDDLEWICH, Cheshire. It is seated near the conflux of the rivers Croke and Dan, and communicating with all the inland navigations. Here are two rich salt-water springs, the brine of which is so strong as to produce a full fourth part salt. A cotton manufactory has been established here. It is 107 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 4755.

MIDDLEING, a. [midlen, Sax.] of the middle rank; of moderate size, or qualities.

MIDGE, s. [miege, Sax.] in Entomology, a very small kind of gnat.

MIDIANTES, a nomadic tribe residing in the deserts of Arabia near Egypt and Syria; related to the Israelites by descent, and often mentioned in sacred History.

MIDLAND, a. remote or at a distance from the sea-coasts; in the midst of the land.

MIDNIGHT, (midnit) s. the depth of night; twelve at night.

MIDNIGHT, a. being in the middle of the night.

MIDRIFF, s. [midhrife, Sax.] in Anatomy, a name of the diaphragm.

MID SEA, the Mediterranean Sea.

MIDSHIPMAN, s. in the Navy, the lowest commissioned officer on board a ship, whose station is on the quarter-deck; his business is to mind the braces, look out, give the word of command from the captain and superior officers, and assist on all occasions in sailing the ship, &c.

MIDST, s. the middle.

MIDST, a. [contracted from middest, the superlative of mid,] midstmost; situated in the middle, or nearest to the centre.

MIDSTREAM, s. the middle of the stream.

MIDSUMMER, s. the summer solstice, generally reckoned to fall on the 24th of June; the festival of St. John the Baptist.

MIDWAY, s. the part of a way which is equally distant from the beginning and ending.

MIDWAY, a. in the middle of the way.

MIDWIFE, s. a woman who assists women in child-bed.

MIDWIFERY, s. an assistance given in child-birth; that department of surgery which relates to the assistance of women in child-bed.

MIDWINTER, s. the winter solstice, or depth of winter, reckoned to fall on the 21st of December.

MIEN, (neen) s. [mine, Fr.] air; look; manner.

MIGHT, (mit) s. [might, Sax.] power; strength; force.

MIGHTILY, (mitlily) ad. with great power; powerfully; with efficacy; violently; vigorously; in a great degree.

REFERENCE TO THE NUMBERS
1. Education of
2. Education of
3. Education of
4. Education of
5. Education of
6. Education of

RAILWAY STATIONS, SHOWING THEIR RELATIVE POSITIONS TO THE RIVER THAMES & TO EACH OTHER

Scale of Miles
0 1 2 3 4 5 6

MIGHTINESS, (mitness) s. the quality of possessing or exercising power, greatness, or dignity; a title given to princes, and formerly applied to the states of Holland.

MIGHTY, (mitly) a. [mitig, Sax.] powerful; strong; excellent, or powerful in any act.

MIGHTY, (mitly) ad. in a great degree.

MIGRATION, s. [migratio, from migro, Lat.] the act of changing places of abode.

MILAN, the capital of Lombardy, in Austrian Italy. It is seated in a pleasant plain, between the river Adda and Tesin. It is about 10 miles in circumference, and is called by the Italians, Milan the Great. Here are 22 gates, 230 churches, 90 convents, 100 religious fraternities, and 120 schools. Broad and straight streets are but few in comparison to the narrow and crooked; and the many paper windows, or glass and paper panes intermixed, even in the finest palaces, have a mean appearance. The governor's palace, or the old regency-house, is the most stately and spacious. The cathedral is a grand structure, built of solid white marble, being 490 feet long, 298 broad, and 260 high. It stands in the centre of the city, and next to St. Peter's at Rome, is the largest in Italy. The college of St. Ambrose has a library, which, beside some thousands of manuscripts, contains 45,000 printed volumes. In it is an academy of painting. The most considerable commerce of the inhabitants is in grain, (especially rice), cattle, and cheese, which they export; and they have manufactures of silk and velvet stuffs, stockings, handkerchiefs, ribbands, gold and silver lace, and embroideries, woollen and linen cloths, glass, and earthenware in imitation of China. Here are several rivers, and many canals. It is 280 miles from Rome. Pop. about 140,000. Lat. 45. 28. N. Long. 9. 12. E.

MILCH, a. [milch, Teut.] giving milk.

MILD, a. [mild, Sax.] kind; tender; indulgent; compassionate; not easily provoked to anger; gentle; void of acrimony; free from sharpness or acidity.

MILDEHALL, Suffolk. It is seated on the river Lark, a branch of the Ouse, with a harbour for boats, 69 miles from London. Market, Friday, especially for fish and wild-fowl. Pop. 3731.

MILDEW, s. [mildeew, Sax.] in Botany, is the popular name for a great variety of minute fungi, which grow on other plants, even when living, and greatly injure their health and strength. Their growth is promoted by some kinds of weather more than by other. This name is also applied to spots in linen, on metals, &c., which arise from very different causes.

To MILDEW, v. a. to spot or infect with mildew.

MILDLY, ad. with tenderness and gentleness.

MILDNESS, s. gentleness, tenderness, or clemency, applied to persons. Softness or mellowness, applied to taste.

MILE, s. [meil, Sax.] an English measure of length, containing 1760 yards, or 5280 feet. In other countries the mile contains a different number of feet or yards. In Ireland it contains 2240 yards.

MILESTONE, s. a stone set up on the road, marked with the number of miles from any chief town.

MILFOIL, s. [milfo and Jolium, Lat.] in Botany, the name of several English plants; as, the spiked water and verticillated water milfoil; also the common yarrow. The common and lesser hooded milfoil are species of bladder-wort.

MILFORD, Pembrokeshire. It is situated on the N. coast of Milford Haven, and has a good quay. It has a considerable amount of trade. It is 256 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 2577.

MILFORD-HAVEN, a deep inlet of the Irish Sea, off the coast of Pembrokeshire, S. Wales. It is the best harbour in Great Britain, and as safe and spacious as any in Europe. It has 16 deep and safe creeks, 5 bays, and 3 roads, all distinguished by their several names, in which 1000 sail of ships may ride in perfect security, and at sufficient distance from each other. There is no danger in sailing in or out with the tide, by day or night, from whatever point the wind may happen to blow. The spring tide rises in this harbour 36 feet, so that ships may at any time be laid ashore. The breadth of the entrance between rock and rock, is but 200 yards at high water, and 112 at low water.

MILLYARY, a. [millium, Lat.] small; resembling a millet-seed. Military fever, in Medicine, is a malignant fever, receiving its name from the skin being then sprinkled all over with little purple spots, resembling grains of millet-seed.

MILITANT, a. [miles, Lat.] fighting or acting in the character of a soldier.

MILITARY, a. [militaris, from miles, Lat.] professed or engaged in the life of a soldier; belonging to the army; becoming a soldier; warlike.

MILITIA, (milishia) s. [Lat.] in England, the infantry force which is raised in times of war, by lot, from the whole number of efficient male subjects, with a few exceptions, for the defence of the country.

MILK, s. [meale, Sax.] in Animal Physiology, a white fluid secreted by the glands composing the teats, by which the young are sustained until they are able to digest solid food. The milk of the cow is used generally as an article of food, both simple, and prepared in various ways, and made into butter, curd, and cheese. The milk of goats and asses is used by invalids. In other countries, camels' and mares' milk is used as cows' is with us. Any white fluid or liquor resembling milk; an emulsion made by almonds blanched, and bruised in a mortar.

To MILK, v. a. [meolere, Sax.] to draw milk from the teats of a cow, &c. with the hand; to give suck.

MILKEN, a. consisting of milk.

MILKER, s. one that draws milk from animals.

MILKINESS, s. the quality of a thing in which it resembles milk.

MILKLIVERED, a. cowardly or timorous.

MILKMAID, s. a woman employed in milking cattle.

MILKPAIL, s. a vessel into which cattle are milked.

MILKPOTTAGE, s. a kind of food made by boiling milk with water and oatmeal.

MILKSOP, s. a soft, effeminate, or timorous person.

MILKTEETH, s. in Anatomy, the first set of teeth in all mammalian animals.

MILKWHITE, a. white as milk.

MILKWOMAN, s. a woman who sells milk.

MILKWOIT, s. in Botany, a pretty little plant found in pastures, whose flowers are of many various colours, but mostly resemble drops of milk.

MILKY, a. made of or resembling milk; yielding milk. Figuratively, soft; gentle; timorous.

MILKMAID, s. See GADSKY.

MILL, s. [myln, Sax.] a machine in which corn or any other substance is ground; any machine whose action depends on a circular motion; or a machine which, being put in motion, gives a violent impression on things. Also, a silk or cotton factory, where the looms, &c. are not moved by hand.

To MILL, v. a. to divide into small particles; to grind or divide into small particles in a mill; to beat up or make chocolate froth, by putting its particles into a circular motion with a stick rubbed between the hands; to full, scour, and cleanse woollen stuffs in a mill. In Coinage, to stamp the rim of money to prevent the clipping it.

MILL, JAMES, a political economist and metaphysician of Scotland, whose works have had a wide circulation in England. His great work is his History of British India, which led to his appointment in the India House, London. His Analysis of the Phenomena of the Human Mind, has had admirers; but it is most distinctly sensuous in its whole tone and scope, and has found favour, therefore, chiefly with the ultra-Lockists. In Political Economy he was a great admirer of Jeremy Bentham, but did not confine himself by his theories and principles. He died in 1836, aged 62 years.

MILL, JOHN, a learned critic of the New Testament, and Anglican divine, of the latter part of the 17th century. He was an Oxford man, and was the first English critical student of the Greek Testament. He adopted Stephens's text; but added in notes the greatest mass of various readings which had, at that time, ever been made, and greatly facilitated the labours of subsequent scholars. He did not long survive the publication of his work, dying in 1707, aged 62 years.

MILL-COG, s. the teeth on the edges of the wheels belonging to a mill, by means of which they lock into each other.

MILL-DAM, s. the mound, or bank, by which water is kept to a proper height for working a mill.

MILLENA'RIAN, s. [millenarius, from mile and annus, Lat.] one who believes or expects the millennium.

MILLENA'RIANISM, s. in Ecclesiastical History, the belief in an expected millennium, which has usually been looked forward to as a personal reign of Christ, which has at different times arisen amongst Christians; at which times, amongst its believers, all kinds of Christian instruction and devotion are superseded by enthusiastic announcements of, and supplications for, his speedy Advent.

MILLENARY, a. [millenaire, Fr.] consisting of a thousand.

MILLENIST, s. [milite, Lat.] one who holds the millennium.

MILLENNIUM, s. [Lat.] with theological writers, a period of 1000 years, expected to occur immediately before the consummation of the history of the world; when our Lord will, according to some, reign personally amongst men; but, according to others, spiritually, by the universal and entire submission of mankind to the principles of the Gospel.

MILLENNIAL, a. belonging to the millennium.

MILLEPEDE, s. in Entomology, a well-known insect, thus denominated from the great number of its feet.

MILLEPORE, s. [milite, Lat. and poros, Gr.] in Zoology, a large family of corals, distinguished by the great number of cells, which were inhabited by the zoophytes.

MILLER, s. one who looks after a mill.

MILLERS-THUMB, in Ichthyology, an English name for the fish called also the bull-head.

MILLE/SIMAL, a. [milite, Lat.] thousandth; consisting of a thousandth part.

MILLET, s. [milium, probably from milite, Lat.] in Botany, a plant brought originally from the East, which produces a very small grain, used in puddings. The millet cyprus-grass is a kind of bulrush.

MILLINER, s. [perhaps from Milaner, an inhabitant of Milan,] one who sells ribands, caps, and other coverings belonging to a woman's dress.

MILLINERY, a. belonging to or sold by a milliner. Used substantively, for goods or dress sold by a milliner.

MILLION, s. [millio, Fr.] the number of a hundred myriads, or ten hundred thousand. Proverbially, any very great number.

MILLIONTH, a. the ten hundred thousandth.

MILL-REE, s. [Port.] a Portuguese gold coin, in value 6s. 8d.

MILLSTONE, s. [mylenstan, Sax.] the stone of a mill by which corn is ground.

MILLSTONE-GRIT, s. in Geology, one member of the great coal formation, occurring usually between the coal measures and the mountain limestone; but often intercalated in seams with seams of those beds near the junction. It is generally a coarse, gritty, sandy, and pebbly rock, united by a kind of felspathic clay; and it contains traces of coal plants, &c. It is best developed in the northern coal-fields.

MILNER, the name of two brothers, distinguished divines in the English Church. Joseph Milner studied at Cambridge, and was afterwards head-master of Hull grammar-school; and eventually vicar of the church of the Holy Trinity in Hull. He embraced the views of the evangelical school, in the middle of his life, and this change, which at first occasioned him much opposition and discomfort, in the end proved the foundation of his distinction. He wrote several works, the most celebrated of which is his History of the Church of Christ, which has been the text book of ecclesiastical history for the school of divines to which he belonged; and is, as a history of evangelical opinions and persons, a very valuable production. He died in 1797, aged 53 years. Isaac Milner, his younger brother, was first taught by him, and afterwards studied at Cambridge; where he gained considerable distinction in mathematics, holding successively the Jacksonian and Lucasian professorships. He was promoted in the end to be dean of Carlisle. He wrote several philosophical works, and defended the evangelical school in other writings. He also continued his brother's Church History, and died in 1820, aged 69 years.

MILNER, JOHN, an eminent English Romanist divine; whose chief work was the End of Religious Controversy, in which he defended the dogmas of his church with considerable ability. His other works relate chiefly to ecclesiastical antiquities. He was appointed to a bishopric in England, and died in 1826, aged 74 years.

MILT, s. [militt, Sax.] in Natural History, the soft roe in fish, so called because it yields a white or milky juice when pressed.

MILTIADES, a celebrated Athenian eupatrid, or noble; who, in the first invasion of Greece by the Persians, commanded and won at the battle of Marathon, by which the whole scheme of conquest was overturned. This splendid victory, which preserved the freedom of Greece, has occasioned a total misapprehension of the character and politics of this general; who was a strenuous maintainer, if not of absolute, yet certainly of oligarchical power. Falling in an attack on Paros, which he had suggested, he was fined and imprisoned; where he died in 490 B.C.

MILTON, or MILTON ROYAL, Kent. It is seated on the E. Swale, a branch of the river Medway; and is famous for its excellent oysters. It is 42 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2538.

MILTON, JOHN, one of the chief poets and greatest men of England. He studied at Cambridge, where he acquired some celebrity for his Latin poems, and received some punishment for his too great freedom of thought. After a long residence at his father's house, where he continued his studies, and wrote some of his most beautiful minor poems, he travelled in Italy, and became acquainted with some of her greatest men; amongst whom was Galileo. At the beginning of the troubles which led to the Puritan revolution, he returned, and published several of his political tracts directed against Prelacy. During the war, he wrote his magnificent defence of the liberty of the press; and after the execution of Charles, defended that act. He was busied on his History of England, when the provisional government made him their foreign secretary, in which office he exposed the forgery of the Eikon Basilike, and answered the attacks of Salmasius, "in liberty's defence, his glorious task," by his two Defences of the People of England. This task totally destroyed his already impaired vision, but did not abate one jot the clearness and courage of his mind. The Restoration, which speedily followed, wholly overthrew the bright hopes he had indulged respecting the destinies of England, exposed him to the persecutions of his enemies, deprived him for ever of one means of labouring for his country's good; but not all this, even, prostrated him. Having, through some friend, been released from custody and pardoned, he returned to his History, and soon after fulfilled the prediction he had uttered in one of his former books, by bringing out the great English epic, Paradise Lost. The cool reception of this did not damp his ardour. He carried out his original thought one step further, and wrote Paradise Regained. Samson Agonistes was his last poem. After some years, during which he wrote a school book or two, and his Treatise on Christian Doctrine; he died in 1674, aged 66 years. In his domestic life, Milton endured much trouble. Deserted for a while by his first wife, he saw no relief but in divorce, and vindicated his opinions in several powerful, but unsatisfactory treatises. His daughters, in his age and blindness, treated him with notorious want of love. His universal fame now rests on his poems, which were hardly known, and not at all appreciated in his own day. His prose writings, which are amongst the most majestically eloquent productions in the language, and which were the foundations of his living fame, are now almost forgotten. Yet higher and more glorious than either poetry or prose does his personal character tower. His profound religious feeling and principle, his unstained purity, his unblenching courage, his genuine humility, his never shaken faithfulness to truth, tried in prosperity and fame, tried in adversity and obloquy, have made him shine forth before the eyes of men of every party and church in England, as one of the most illustrious of her greatest sons, and have shown him to be not merely in advance of his own generation, but so far beyond them that the fewest, even of these later ages, have been those who have approached his position.

MIME, s. [mimœamai, Gr.] a buffoon, who by mimicking the action or manner of some other person endeavours to create mirth.

To MIMÉ, v. n. to mimic the gestures or manners of another, so as to cause laughter.

MIMIC, Mr MICAL, a. [mimicus, Lat. from mimœamai, Gr.] imitating or copying the actions of a person, so as to render them ridiculous, and to excite laughter.

MIMIC, s. a person who imitates the actions or manner of another, so as to excite laughter. Figuratively, a servile imitator.

To MIMIC, v. a. to imitate the actions of another, so as to make them ridiculous, and to excite laughter; to imitate.

MIMICALLY, ad. in imitation; in a mimical manner.

MINICRY, s. the quality or art of assuming the air, looks, manner of expression, and action, of another.

MINNERMUS, a. Greek poet of the 6th century B. C., whose elegiac poems have wholly perished, with the exception of a few fragments.

To him is ascribed by some critics the introduction of the meter called pentameter.

MINOGRAPHER, s. [minos and grapho, Gr.] a writer of fables.

MINARET, s. a turret, or slender and lofty steeple, connected with a mosque, having one or more projecting galleries round it; whence the crier summons the worshippers to prayers.

MINATORY, a. [minor, Lat.] containing threats.

To MINCE, v. a. [mincer, Fr.] to cut into very small bits or pieces; to mention any thing scrupulously, or by a little at a time; to palliate or extenuate.—v. n. to walk with short steps in an affected manner; to speak with effeminacy, or so as to omit syllables.

MINCINGLY, ad. in small parts; not fully; with palliation or extenuation.

MIND, s. [gemin, Sax.] the rational soul; the understanding; affection; choice; thoughts or sentiments; opinion; memory; remembrance.

To MIND, v. a. to take notice of, or observe; to regard; to excite in the mind; to recall to a person's mind, or revive in his memory; to admonish.—v. n. to incline or be disposed to.

MINDANAO, the second in size, and the most southerly of the Philippine Islands; which see.

MINDÉD, a. disposed; inclined; affected.

MINDFUL, a. attentive; heeding; retaining in the memory.

MINDFULLY, ad. attentively.

MINDFULNESS, s. attention; heed, or regard.

MINDLESS, a. inattentive; regardless; inanimate; not endowed with a rational soul.

MINDORO, one of the Philippine Islands; which see.

MIND, *pron. poss. [my, Sax.] belonging to me.

MINE, s. [Fr.] a place or cavern in the earth containing metals, stone, or coal; a hollow dug under any fortification, that it may sink for want of support, or that powder may be lodged in it, by means of which every thing upon it may be blown up.

To MINE, v. n. to dig mines; to form any hollows or cavities under ground by digging.—v. a. to sap; to ruin by mines; to destroy by secret means or slow degrees.

MINEHEAD, Somersetshire. Here is a safe and commodious harbour for ships of large burden, formed by a pier and quay. It carries on a considerable trade to Ireland and the West Indies, and is 161 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1489.

MINER, s. [mineur, Fr.] one that digs in caverns for metals, stones, or coals; one who is a maker of military mines.

MINERAL, a. [minérale, low Lat.] any body dug out of the earth. It is a general term, and includes metals, earths, rocks, crystals, &c. &c.

MINERAL, a. consisting of or related to any of the substances which are classed under this name.

MINERALIST, s. one skilled or employed in extracting ores in minerals.

MINERALIZERS, s. in Chemistry, those substances which are combined with metals in their ores; such as sulphur, arsenic, oxygen, carbonic acid, &c.

MINERALOGIST, s. [minéralogie, Fr.] one who writes upon minerals.

MINERALOGY, s. [minéralogie, Fr.] the science of minerals.

MINERAL WATERS, s. waters which hold some metal, earth, or salt, in solution. They are frequently termed medicinal waters.

MINERVA, s. in Mythology, the goddess of wisdom and the arts. She is represented with the helmet on her head, a spear in her right hand, and a shield in her left, and was fabled to have been produced out of the head of Jupiter.

MINEVER, s. a skin with specks of white.

To MINGLE, v. a. [mingelen, Teut.] to mix; to join; to unite with something else; to compound.—v. n. to be mixed or united with.

MINGLE, s. a mixture; a medley or confused mass.

MINGLER, s. one who mixes different things together.

MINGRELIA, a province of Georgia, in Asia, situated along the E. coast of the Black Sea. The principality is hereditary, and is governed by a prince who takes the title of Dadian, or chief of justice. The tribute exacted by the Turks, is a quantity of linen cloth made in the country. The face of this country, its products, and the customs and manners of the inhabitants, are similar to those of Georgia; which see.

MINIATURE, s. [Fr.] the representation of a thing in a very small size.

MINIKIN, a. small; diminutive. Used in contempt.

MINIM, s. [minimus, Lat.] a small being or person. In Music, a note equal to two crotchets, or half a semibreve.

MINIMES, in Ecclesiastical History, a religious order, which sprang up in the 15th century; and adopted this name by way of showing their superlative devotion, and especially their superiority over the Minor Friars. They did not thrive nor extend greatly.

MINIMUS, s. [Lat.] a being of the least size.

MINION, s. [mignon, Fr.] a favourite or darling. Generally applied to a person who has the chief place in a prince's or great man's favour, on account of his servile compliances and flattery. With printers, a small sort of printing-letter.

MINIOUS, a. [minium, Lat.] of the colour of red lead or vermilion.

To MINISH, v. a. [a contraction from diminish,] to lessen; to lop or impair.

MINISTER, s. [Lat.] any person employed as an agent, or to transact affairs for another; one employed by a sovereign in the administration of public affairs; an instrument or means applied to accomplish any end; a person who performs the public service in divine worship; an agent from a foreign power, who has not the dignity or credentials of an ambassador.

To MINISTER, v. a. [Lat.] to serve or attend on any one.

MINISTERIAL, a. attendant; acting under superior authority; connected with the ministry of religion.

MINISTERIALLY, ad. in a ministerial manner.

MINISTRY, MINISTRY, s. office; service; the discharge of any office or performance of the orders and employment of another; persons employed in any ministrations.

MINISTRAL, a. See MINISTERIAL.

MINISTRANT, a. [ministrans, Lat.] attending upon; acting as subordinate, dependent, or at command.

MINISTRATION, s. [ministratio, Lat.] the office of a person commissioned by, or acting at the command of, another; attendance; intervention; service; office; the employ of a public religious teacher.

MINIUM, s. [Lat.] lead calcined in a reverberatory furnace till it is of a red colour.

MININOCK, s. [perhaps from mignon, Fr.] a favourite, or darling.

MINNOW, s. [menue, Fr.] in Ichthyology, a small fresh-water fish.

MINOR, a. [Lat.] petty or inconsiderable; less; smaller.

MINOR, s. one not arrived at full age; one under age; one younger than another, when used comparatively. In Logic, the least term in a proposition, or the second proposition in a regular syllogism.

To MINORATE, v. a. [minor, Lat.] to lessen or diminish.

MINORICA, a considerable island in the Mediterranean, belonging to the Balearic group. It is about 39 miles in length and 12 in breadth, and chiefly valuable for the excellent harbour of Port Mahon. It is a mountainous country, with some fruitful valleys, where there are excellent nules. Rabbits are in great plenty, and here are plantations of palm-trees which bear no fruit, vines, olives, cotton, and capers. Citadella is the capital, beside which there are Port Mahon, Labor, and Mercadal. Pop. about 40,000. It belongs to Spain.

MINORITY, s. [minorité, Fr.] the state of a person who is under age, or not arrived to years of discretion and maturity; the state of being less; the smaller number, opposed to majority.

MINORS, in Ecclesiastical History, a name assumed in proof or token of humility by St. Francis of Assisi, and his religious order. See FRANCISCANS.

MINOS, in Ancient History and Mythology, a lawgiver of Crete, who was so inflexibly just, that he was promoted to be one of the judges in Hades.

MINOTAUR, s. [from Minos, an ancient king of Crete, who was supposed to keep the Minotaur, and taurus, Lat.] in Heathen Mythology, a monster supposed to be half man and half beast.

MINSK, a government of Russia, surrounded by the governments of Grodno, Wilna, Witepsk, Mohilev, Tschernigov, and Kiev. It is a vast plain, watered by the Dnieper and the Dwina; and though solely agricultural, is in a most wretched condition of barbarism and poverty. Its chief town, of the same name, stands on a small stream that runs into the Beresina; and is a place of trade, with a fine cathedral and some other public buildings. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 53. 16. N. Long. 27. 33. E. Pop. of the province, above 1,000,000.

MINSTER, s. [minsterre, Sax.] a monastery; a cathedral church.

MINSTREL, s. [menestril, Span.] a musician; one that plays upon musical instruments.

MINSTRÉLSY, s. instrumental music; a band or number of persons playing on musical instruments.

MINT, s. [mint, Sax.] in Botany, a kind of plant very well known.—[mint, Dan.] a place where money is coined.

To MINT, v. a. (see the noun,) to coin or stamp money. Figuratively, to invent or forge.

MINTAGE, s. that which is coined or stamped; the duty paid for coinage.

MINTER, s. a coiner or stamper of money.

MINTMAN, s. one skilled in coinage.

MINTMASTER, s. a person who has the management and care of the coinage. Figuratively, one who invents.

MINUET, s. [menuet, Fr.] a stately regular dance, performed generally by two persons, now completely out of fashion.

MINUTE, a. [minutus, from minuo, Lat.] small, either in bulk or quantity; little; slender.

MINUTE, s. [minutum, Lat.] in Geometry, the 60th part of a degree of a circle. Minutes are denoted by one accent, thus ('); as the second, or 60th part of a minute, is by two accents, thus ("); and the third by three ("). sc. Minute, in Time, is the 60th part of an hour. In Architecture, it usually denotes the 60th, sometimes the 30th part of a module. In Writing, it is used for a short memoir, or sketch of a thing.

To MINUTE, v. a. [minuter, Fr.] to set down in short hints.

MINUTE-BOOK, s. a book of short hints, or memoranda.

MINUTE-GLASS, s. a glass of which the sand measures a minute.

MINUTELY, ad. with great exactness; without omission of the least circumstance.

MINUTENESS, s. excessive smallness; extreme accuracy or circumstantialness; inconsiderableness.

MINX, s. a young, pert, wanton, or affected girl.

MIRABAUD, JEAN BAPTISTE DE, a French writer of the last century, who was for a time secretary to the French Academy. He translated Tasso and Ariosto, and wrote several other works. But he did not write the atheistical and sensual book, called the System of Nature, which has his name attached to it: that was the product of the Baron D'Holbach. Mirabaud died in 1760, aged 85 years.

MIRABEAU, HONORÉ GABRIEL DE RIQUETTI, COMTE DE, one of the most distinguished actors in the early part of the French Revolution. His early years were characterized by ceaseless troubles and imprisonments, on account of his licentiousness, which ought to be ascribed in some degree, at least, to the foolish pedantry and severity of the plan pursued by his father in his education. In the course of these scandalous adventures, and in his imprisonments and his attempts to avoid the lettres de cachet, he visited Holland and England, formed acquaintances amongst some of the most famous literary men of the movement party in those countries, lived on the paltry pay of a garret-scribbler, and sometimes had not even that means of subsistence; and was an inmate of almost all the great state prisons of France. He was once sent to Berlin by Calonne on an official errand; and he was connected with the Notables, the convocation of whom, it was hoped, would save the country. Being rejected by the Provençal noblesse as a representative in the states-general, he entered the popular order, and sat for Aix and Marseilles. This was the brightest portion of his career: his overwhelming eloquence, his terrible sarcasm, his consummate self-possession, and undoubted power of will, made him, in fact, the king in that assembly. It was his proposal that brought the noblesse and the clergy at the feet of the representatives of the people, and gave a meaning to the otherwise inarticulate resolve of the nation. Over and over again he swept all resistance before him, and carried resolutions that the majority of the house were most hostile to. In all his speeches he invariably showed that he saw what the things before the Assembly actually were, and also that he could make them seem to be what he pleased, to effect his own purposes. During the latter part of his course, he was earnest in his attempts to check the headlong hosts with which affairs were rushing to ruin, in the hands of a host of little, pedantic, fanatic, and bad men; and he did succeed in some things, on which he might have reared a constitutional monarchy. He was at last appointed president of the Assembly, and filled this office to the astonishment of even his admirers. But it was for a short time. A rapid illness carried him off in 1791, aged 42 years, and left the public welfare to the mercy of those whom he alone could have controlled. During the greater part of his representative engagement, he edited a public paper, and beside it, published occasionally pamphlets on the questions of the day as they arose. Not only in his licentiousness, which he never curbed to the last, did he display his utter want of principle. He was at the service of any party in his political character, who could and would purchase him; and it is undoubtedly the fact, that he was in the pay of the court at the time of his death, as he had been in the pay of the Duke of Orleans. Yet the French nation might well mourn his death as it did, for all the evils which his penetration foresaw, and his royal eloquence and power kept off, fell with unbroken weight upon it.

MIRACLE, s. [miraculum, from miror, Lat.] a phenomenon, either in itself or its circumstances supernatural; or that which, being of most rare occurrence, and apparently quite unsuitable as a consequent, to whatever is, in our view, its immediate antecedent, must be ascribed to the direct interposition of God himself. In the Evidences of Christianity, the question of miracles has always been made to take a place which in the facts of Christianity it does not, and an advantage has often been conceded to infidel objectors unnecessarily. The adaptation of the principles and declarations of the Gospel to the spirit and the circumstances of man is its only proper evidence, and it is full and satisfactory. But that on occasion of so great an event for man, as a new revelation from God, miracles should be wrought, the universal expectation of man, and the concurrent testimony of mankind respecting all promulgations of new faiths, are the evidence. If miracles were not recorded in the Gospel History, we should have good reason to suspect the veracity of the historians. The place they fill in that history is just the one they can fill,—they call attention to the Teacher and to the doctrine, but have no stress laid on them which the truth of the doctrine, proved by experience, alone could bear. The arguments against miracles, from the first to the last, are therefore, if satisfactory, incapable of damaging the Christian faith. But they are not satisfactory; and are capable, as has often been shown, of the completest reductio ad absurdum. The whole force of most of these arguments has arisen from the unhappy definition of a miracle as a violation of the laws of nature; which not only assumes that all these laws are known, but also that they are some, quite other than what they are known to be, mere general expressions of God's usual way of working in what we call Nature. With a more correct definition it will be seen that human testimony is quite as adequate to prove a miracle, as it is any thing else beyond the experience of those to whom the proof is addressed.

MIRACULOUS, a. [miraculeux, Fr.] resembling a miracle; effected by power more than natural.

MIRACULOUSLY, ad. beyond the known powers or laws of nature.

MIRACULOUSNESS, s. the state of being effected beyond the ordinary powers or laws of nature.

MIRAGE, s. [Fr.] in Optics, a phenomenon arising from the unequal or irregular refraction of light, through strata of air of various densities, by which objects considerably beyond the visible horizon are seemingly brought within it, and oftentimes exhibited reversed, and in very peculiar combinations.

MIRANDA, SA DE, an early poet of Portugal, whose productions, consisting of dramas, letters, &c. &c., are not so well known as their poetic worth, and their fidelity in depicting the manners of his times, deserve. He died in 1558, aged about 60 years.

MIRANDOLA. See PICA DELLA MIRANDOLA.

MIRE, s. [moer, Belg.] mud; dirt moistened with rain or water.

To MIRE, v. a. to daub with mud; to whelm in the mud.

MIRINESS, s. the quality of being muddy.

MIRROR, s. [miroir, Fr.] a looking-glass, or any thing which represents objects by reflection; a pattern or exemplar, as being that on which the eye ought to be fixed to transcribe its perfections.

MIRTH, s. [myrthe, Sax.] merriment; gaiety; laughter; a jest which excites laughter.

MIRTHFUL, a. full of joy and gaiety.

MIRTHLESS, a. sorrowful.

MIRY, a. deep in mud; consisting of mud.

MIS, [Sax.] is an inseparable particle, and in composition denotes defect, error, deprivation, corruption, &c.

MISACCEPTATION, s. the act of taking any thing in a wrong sense.

MISADVENTURE, s. [mesaventure, Fr.] ill-luck; bad fortune. In Law, manslaughter.

MISADVENTURED, a. unfortunate.

MISADVICE, s. wrong or mistaken advice; bad counsel.

MISADVISED, (misadvised) a. wrongfully counselled.

MISAMED, a. not aimed rightly.

MISANTHROPIST, s. [misos and anthropos, Gr.] a hater of mankind; one that flies the society of mankind from a principle of discontent.

MISANTHROPY, s. the act of hating or avoiding the society of mankind.

MISAPPLICATION, s. an improper application; the act of applying a thing to a wrong use.

TO MISAPPLY, v. a. to apply improperly, or to wrong purposes.

TO MISAPPREHEND, v. a. to mistake a person's meaning; to understand a thing in a wrong sense.

MISAPPREHENSION, s. a mistake.

TO MISASCRIBE, v. a. to ascribe falsely.

TO MISASSIGN, v. a. to assign erroneously.

TO MISBECOME, v. a. preter. misbecame; to be inconsistent with a person's character; to disgrace; to be unsuitable.

MISBEGOT, MISBEGOTTEN, a. unlawfully begotten.

TO MISBEHAVE, v. n. to act ill, or inconsistent with a person's character.

MISBEHAVED, a. ill-bred; uncivil.

MISBEHAVIOUR, s. want of decency to others; ill conduct; want of civility or breeding.

MISBELIEF, (misbelief) s. an erroneous or wrong belief.

TO MISBELIEVE, (misbelieve) v. n. to distrust.

MISBELIEVER, (misbeliever) s. one that holds a false religion, or believes wrongly.

TO MISCALL, (miscall) v. a. to call by a wrong name.

TO MISCALCULATE, v. a. to be wrong in a computation or reckoning; to reckon wrong.

MISCARRIAGE, (misckdrivg) s. want of success; ill conduct; abortion, or the act of bringing forth before due time.

TO MISCHARRY, v. n. to fail; to fail of success in an undertaking; to be brought to bed before due time.

TO MISCAST, v. a. to add up or compute wrong.

MISCELLANEOUS, a. [miscellaneous, Lat.] mingled; consisting of different kinds.

MISCELLANY, s. (sometimes accented on the second syllable,) a book containing a collection of different pieces, sometimes containing the works of different authors.

MISCHANCE, s. ill luck; a thing happening amiss, but neither intended nor foreseen.

MISCHIEF, (mischeef) s. [mescheef, old Fr.] any thing done to harm or injure another; an ill consequence, or vexatious affair.

MISCHIEF-MAKER, s. one who promotes quarrels between others, and causes mischief.

MISCHIEVOUS, (mischevovs) a. (sometimes accented on the second syllable,) hurtful; injurious; spiteful; malicious.

MISCHIEVOUSLY, (mischevovsly) ad. maliciously; spitefully; hurtfully.

MISCHIEVOUSNESS, (mischevovsness) s. the quality of delighting in doing harm and injury to others.

MISCIBLE, a. [miscos, Lat.] capable of being mixed.

MISCITATION, s. a wrong quotation.

TO MISQUOTE, v. a. to quote words of an author wrong.

MISCLAIM, a. an erroneous or mistaken claim.

MISCOMPUTATION, s. false reckoning.

TO MISCONCEIVE, (misconseeve) v. a. to have a wrong idea of.

MISCONCEPTION, s. a false notion.

MISCOINDUCT, s. ill behaviour.

MISCONJECTURE, s. a wrong guess.

TO MISCONJECTURE, v. a. to guess wrong.

MISCONSTRUCTION, s. the act of ascribing a wrong sense to words or actions.

TO MISCONSTRUE, v. a. to interpret wrong.

TO MISCONSEI, v. a. to advise wrong.

TO MISCOUNT, v. a. [miconter, Fr.] to reckon wrong.

MISCREANCE, MISCREANCY, s. [mescreance, Fr.] adherence to a false religion; false faith.

MISCREANT, s. [mescreant, Fr.] in its primary sense, one that holds a false faith, or believes in false gods. Secondly, a vile and wicked wretch.

MISDEED, s. a vile action.

TO MISDEMEAN, (misdemean) v. a. to behave ill.

MISDEMEANOR, (misdemeanor) s. a slight offence; something less than a crime.

MISDEVOTION, s. mistaken piety.

TO MISDO, v. a. preter. I have misdore; to do wrong, or commit a crime.—v. n. to commit faults.

MISDOER, v. n. an offender.

MISDOING, s. offence; deviation from right.

TO MISDOUBT, (misdoit) v. a. to suspect of deceit or danger.

MISDOUBT, (misdoit) s. suspicion of crime or danger; irresolution.

TO MISEMPLY, v. a. to apply to a wrong use.

MISEMPLOYMENT, s. the act of applying to an improper use.

MISER, (mizer) s. [Lat.] formerly used for a person in wretchedness or calamity, or for a base and mean person; but at present to one who, though possessed of riches, endures all the hardships of indigence, either to increase or avoid spending them.

MISERABLE, (mizerable) a. [miserabilis, Lat.] unhappy; calamitous, or wretched; very bad.

MISERABLENESS, (mizerableness) s. the quality which denominates a person wretched, or an object of pity.

MISERABLY, (mizerably) ad. in such a manner as to become an object of compassion; desperately; shockingly.

MISERLY, a. like a miser; in a mean, penurious, or covetous manner.

MISERY, (mizery) s. [miseria, Lat.] such a state of wretchedness, unhappiness, or calamity, as renders a person an object of compassion.

MISFORTUNE, s. want of success; calamity; ill-luck, or poverty, not happening by a person's own fault.

TO MISGIVE, v. a. to suspect; to presage something ill; to suspect something amiss.

TO MISGOVERN, v. a. to govern ill.

MISGOVERNED, a. under no restraint; rude; ill-bred.

MISGOVERNMENT, s. ill administration of affairs; ill management; irregularity, or immodest behaviour.

MISGUIDANCE, s. a false direction.

TO MISGUIDE, v. a. to direct wrong; to guide the wrong way.

MISHAP, (mis-hap) s. any evil that happens unexpectedly.

MISHMASH, (mischin, Belg.) a hodgepodge; a low word.

MISHNA, or MISCHNA, s. [Rabbin. Heb.] the name of the first division or part of the Rabbinical Talmuds. See TALMUD.

TO MISINFER, v. a. to draw a wrong inference.

TO MISINFORM, v. a. to deceive by false accounts.

MISINFORMATION, s. a false intelligence, or account.

TO MISINTERPRET, v. a. to explain in a wrong sense.

MISINTERPRETATION, s. explanation in a wrong sense.

TO MISJOIN, v. a. to join in an improper manner.

TO MISJUDGE, v. n. to form false opinions.—v. a. to mistake; to judge ill of.

TO MISLAY, v. a. to lay in a wrong place; to put away so as not to be able to find again.

MISLAYER, s. one who puts things in a wrong place.

TO MISLE. See TO MIZZLE.

TO MISLEAD, (mislead) v. a. preter. and past part. misled; to guide in a wrong way; to betray to mischief, or mistake, under a pretence of guiding.

MISLEADER, (misleader) s. one who seduces or leads to ill.
MISLETOE. See MISTLETOE.

MISMANAGE, v. a. to conduct or manage wrongly.
MISMANAGEMENT, s. defect of conduct or behaviour.

MISMARRK, v. a. to mark or distinguish wrong.
MISMATCH, v. a. to mistake in matching.

MISNAME, v. a. to call by a wrong name.

MISNOMER, s. [Fr.] in Law, the mistaking a man's name, or the using of one name for another, which is the cause of abatements of writs. An erroneous name.

MISOSERVE, (misobérvé) v. a. to make a wrong remark.
MISO GAMIST, s. [miséo and gamos, Gr.] one that hates marriage.

MISOGYNY, s. [miséo and gyné, Gr.] hatred against women.

MISORDER, v. a. to conduct or manage ill.

MISPEL, MISPEL, v. a. pret. and past part. mispeled; to spell wrongly.

MISPEND, MISPE'ND, v. a. pret. and past part. mispend; to spend ill; waste to no purpose, or throw away.

MISPENDER, s. one who applies to a wrong purpose.

MISPERVASION, (mispevashion) s. a wrong notion, or false opinion.

MISPLACE, v. a. to put in a wrong place.

MISPOINT, v. a. to set a wrong point or stop after a sentence.

MISPRISION, (misprishon) s. [Fr.] scorn, slight, or contempt. In Common Law, a neglect or oversight; as where a person is privy to some treason or felony committed by another, and neglects to reveal it to the king or his council, or to a magistrate, but entirely conceals it. This is called Misprision of those crimes. In cases of Misprision of treason, the offender is to be imprisoned during the king's pleasure, and to forfeit his goods and chattels, with the profits of his lands, &c. But in Misprision of felony, the offender is only to be punished with fine and imprisonment, and to remain in prison till the fine is paid.

MISPROPORTION, v. a. to join in an unsuitable proportion.

MISQUOTE, v. a. to cite an author's words wrong.

MISRECITE, v. a. to quote or recite wrong.

MISRECKON, v. a. to reckon wrong; to compute wrong.

MISREPORT, v. a. to give a false account of; to give an account which is both disadvantageous and false.

MISREPORT, s. a false account; a false and malicious representation.

MISREPRESENT, (the last s is pron. like z), v. a. to represent falsely.

MISREPRESENTATION, s. the act of wilfully representing a thing otherwise than it is.

MISRULE, v. tumult; confusion.

MISS, s. [contracted from unmarried] a term of compliment used in addressing a young and unmarried lady.

MISS, v. a. pret. and past part. misséd, or mist; to mistake; to fail hitting a mark; to fail of obtaining; to discover something unexpectedly wanting; to omit; to perceive the want of;—v. n. to fly wide from; not to hit a mark; to prove unsuccessful; to fail or mistake; to be lost or wanting.

MISSAL, s. [missa, Lat.] the mass-book.

MISSEEM, v. n. to make a false appearance.

MISSEL-BIRD, Mr'ssel-Traush, in Ornithology, the common English name of the larger species of thrush.

MISSEERVE, v. a. to serve unfaithfully.

MISSHAPE, v. a. part. misshaped, or misshapen; to shape or form ill; to deform.

MISPILE, s. [missilis, from mitto, Lat.] thrown by the hand or from an engine. Striking at a distance, applied to weapons.

MISSION, (mission) s. [missio, Lat.] commission; the state of a person employed by another; persons sent on any account, usually applied to those sent to propagate the gospel in foreign parts; dismission or discharge.

MISIONARY, MISIONER, (mishonary, mishoner) s. [missionaire, Fr.] one sent to propagate religion in foreign parts.

MISSISSIPPI, the largest river of North America. Its source is the Itasca lake, near Lake Winnipeg, and after a varied course, interpreted often by falls, receiving the waters of the Ohio, Missouri, Arkansas, and other great streams, by means of which, and its other tributaries, it drains a surface of more than 1,000,000 square miles in extent, it enters the Gulf of Mexico, by several months. Its length considerably exceeds 3000 miles. It is navigable for a great part of its course; but eddies, and trees carried down by its waters and half buried in the mud, make it very dangerous. In some places the whole width is covered by rafts of trees, over which has accumulated soil sufficient for vegetation; and the stream is completely concealed.

MISSISSIPPI, one of the United States, N. America. It is bounded by Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, and Arkansas; and lies on the Gulf of Mexico. It is 339 miles long, and 150 broad, and is divided into 56 counties. The S. part of the State is low and level, covered with swamps, prairies, &c. This ground gradually rises to the slight elevations, called bluffs, which occur before the table land of the N. part. The Mississippi is its great river; the others are, for the most part, its tributaries. It produces timber, corn, fruits, and chiefly cotton and sugar. Its manufactures are valuable, and it has a good share of trade. It has 38 banks; and there are 3 colleges. Natchez is its chief place of trade; but Jackson is the seat of government. Pop. 375,651, of which 195,211 are slaves.

MISSIVE, a. such as may be sent; such as may be flung to a distance by the hand, &c.—s. a despatch or letter sent from one party or person to another.

MISSOURI, one of the greatest rivers of N. America, and a tributary of the Mississippi. It rises in the Rocky Mountains, and after a course, varied by falls, rapids, and every kind of scenery, 3000 miles long, joins the Mississippi. It receives the waters of many large tributaries; and is navigable, except where the falls break the continuity of the course. If it were looked upon as the stream which deserved to give name to the embouchure in the Gulf of Mexico, it would be upwards of 4000 miles in length.

MISSOURI, one of the United States, N. America. It is bounded by Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Arkansas; and by the Indian and the Iowa territories. It is 287 miles in length, and 230 in breadth; and is divided into 62 counties. It is almost one unbroken extent of prairie, with few hills of any height. It has noble forests, which make it one of the most enchanting regions of America. The Mississippi and the Missouri are its great streams. It yields lead, iron, zinc, and other metals; coal; lime and building stone, &c. &c. There are two mountains of oxide of iron, yielding about 80 per cent. of pure metal; being about 300 feet in height, and pyramidal in form. Timber, cotton, corn, tobacco, &c. are its chief productions. It has some rising manufactures, and a good trade for the time it has been in being. There are 3 banks, and 6 collegiate institutions. St. Louis is its great place of trade; and Jefferson City its seat of government. Pop. 389,702, of which 58,240 are slaves.

MISPEAK, (misspéek) v. a. pret. misspoke, part. misspoken; to speak wrong or amiss.

MIST, s. [Sax.] in Meteorology, a low thin cloud, or small rain, whose drops are not to be distinguished. Figuratively, anything that darkens, or obscures, applied to the understanding.

TO MIST, v. a. to cloud; to cover with a steam or moist vapour.

TO MISTAKE, v. a. to conceive a wrong idea of; to take a thing for that which it is not, or to take one thing for another.—v. n. to err; to form a false judgment or idea.

MISTAKE, s. the act of forming a wrong idea, or taking a thing for what it is not.

MISTAKEABLE, a. liable to be mistaken.

TO MISTAKE, v. n. to err, or to form a wrong opinion or judgment.

MISTAKINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to form a wrong judgment or idea.

TO MISTATE, v. a. to state wrong; to represent in a false light.

TO MISTEACH, v. a. to teach wrong.

TO MISTELL, v. a. to relate falsely; to reckon wrong.

TO MISTERM, v. a. to call by a wrong name.

MYSTERY. See MYSTERY.

TO MISTHINK, v. a. to think ill; to think wrong.

TO MISTIME, v. a. to do unseasonably.

MISTINESS, s. cloudiness; the state of being overcast, applied to the sky.

MISTION, (pron. as spelt), s. [mistus, Lat.] the state of being mixed.

MISTLETOE, Mr'sLETOE, Mr'sSELTOE, s. in Botany, a plant of which there is only one kind in Europe, growing not on the ground, but on other trees, as the oak, apple-tree, pear-tree, white thorn, &c. It was regarded with religious veneration by the Druids.

MISTLIKE, a. resembling a mist; like a mist.

MISTO'LD, the past part of MISTELL.

MISTOOK, the past part of MISTAKE.

MISTRESS, s. [maîtresse, Fr.] a woman who manages a house, and keeps servants; a woman skilled in any thing; a woman teacher; a woman who is the object of a person's love, in a good sense, and in a bad one.

MISTRUST, s. suspicion; diffidence.

To MISTRUST, v. a. to doubt.

MISTRUSTFUL, a. suspicious.

MISTRUSTFULLY, ad. in such a manner as betrays a suspicion.

MISTRUSTFULNESS, s. the quality of suspecting the fidelity of another.

MISTRUSTLESS, a. confident.

MISTY, a. cloudy; overcast, applied to the sky; obscure; dark.

To MISUNDERSTAND, v. a. preter, and part. misunderstood; to take any person's meaning wrong; to mistake.

MISUNDERSTANDING, s. a difference, or disagreement, implying that the parties do not understand each other; an error; a false judgment or conception of the meaning of words or sentences.

MISUSAGE, (misusage) s. abuse, or bad treatment.

To MISUSE, (misuse) v. a. [meuser, Fr.] to treat or use in an improper manner; to abuse.

MISUSE, s. a bad use or treatment.

MITE, s. [Fr.] in Natural History, a very small insect which breeds in cheese. In Weights, a 20th part of a grain. In Money, the third part of a farthing. Proverbially, any thing very small; a very small particle or atom.

MITHRAS, [Pers.] in Zendish Mythology or Theogony, one of the inferior spirits which were created by Ormuz, the great spirit of goodness. It seems to have been originally a name of the sun, and this Sabian worship to have become thus transfigured by the glow of Oriental imagination. Later speculators attempted to identify this lower deity with Jesus; and many tenets of faith and rites of worship were introduced into Christendom by them, from the Mithraic mysteries.

MITHRIDATE, s. [Fr.] in Medicine, a kind of electuary; one of the capital medicines of the shops, consisting of a great number of ingredients. In Botany, a genus of plants, of which six are British species.

MITHRIDATES THE GREAT, or EUPATOR, the 6th king of Pontus in Asia, of that name. His reign was one constant struggle against Rome, which was then at its culminating period of glory. Rome attacked him before he was fairly established on the throne, but he was soon enabled to show this republic that he could defend his own. He seized on several kingdoms, whose kings appealed to Rome, without being able to obtain redress by that means. He defeated the armies sent against him; and in 25 years he was master of Asia Minor. After that he was engaged in three distinct wars with Rome, in which he fought with various success, and was opposed by Sylla, Lucullus, and Pompey; but the end of all was, his defeat, through the defection of his own son, and his suicide, in 63 B. C., having been king for 57 years. With him fell his kingdom, and Pontus was united with the empire of Rome.

MITIGANT, part. [mitigo, Lat.] lenient, or lenitive.

To MITIGATE, v. a. [mitis, Lat. mitiger, Fr.] to abate, to lessen, applied to rigour or severity. To soften, lessen, or make less, applied to pain. To assuage or calm, applied to the heat and turbulence of factions.

MITIGATION, s. [mitigatio, Lat.] the act of lessening any punishment, severity, or pain.

MITRE, (mître) s. [mitre, Fr. mitra, Lat.] a round cap, pointed and cleft a-top, with two pendants hanging down on the shoulders, worn on the head by bishops and abbots on solemn occasions, and in heraldry borne as a crest by a bishop and archbishop.

MITTENS, s. [mitains, Fr.] gloves that cover the arms, but not the fingers.

MITTIMUS, s. [Lat.] in Law, a writ for transferring records from one court to another. Likewise a writ under the hand and seal of a justice of the peace, directed to the gaoler or keeper of a prison, for receiving and safe keeping an offender, till he be delivered by due course of law.

To MIX, v. a. [mischen, Belg.] to unite different bodies into one mass, to compose of different things.

MIX'EN, s. [mizen, Sax.] a dunghill; a laystall.

MIXTION, (pron. as spelt,) s. [Fr.] mixture; confusion of one body with another.

MIXTLY, ad. in a mixed manner.

MIXTURE, s. [mixtura, from misceo, Lat.] the act of joining or adding several things together; the state of different things united or added together; a mass or liquor formed by uniting different ingredients; any thing added or mixed.

MIZMAZE, s. [formed by the reduplication of maze,] a maze; a labyrinth.

MIZZEN, s. [mezen, Belg.] in the sea language, is a particular mast or sail. The mizzen-mast stands in the sternmost part of a ship. The sail which belongs to the mizzen-mast, is called the mizzen-sail; and whenever the word mizzen is used at sea, it always means the sail.

To MIZZLE, v. a. [from mist,] to rain in small drops, like a thick mist.

MIZZYS, s. a bog; a quagmire.

MNEMONICS, (mnemoniké) s. [mnemai, Gr.] the art of memory.

MOAB, the name of a half-nomade people who lived E. of the Dead Sea, and were remotely related to the Israelites. During the march of this nation for Canaan, the king of the Moabites attempted to oppose them, and hired Balaam to curse them, but the prophet failed to imprecate a curse on a nation blessed by God; yet he introduced fornication and idolatry amongst them, and gained a deserved name of evil for his deed. Scattered notices of this people occur in the Old Testament, even to the time of the captivity.

To MOAN, (mōn) v. a. [moan, Sax.] to lament; deplore.—v. n. to show sorrow by the looks, a mournful tone of voice, and dismal complaints.

MOAN, (mōn) s. lamentation; sorrow expressed by words and actions.

MOAT, (mōt) s. [moite, Fr.] a canal, or collection of water, which runs in a ditch or channel round a building.

To MOAT, (mōt) v. a. [motter, Fr.] to surround any building with a canal or water.

MOB, s. [contracted from mobile, Fr.] the crowd; the vulgar; a tumultuous rout or multitude. In Dress, a woman's cap.

To MOB, v. a. to harass or overbear by a mob or tumult.

MOBILE, (mobile) s. [Fr.] the populace or vulgar; a tumultuous assembly of the common and lower order of people.

MOBILE, a city and port of Alabama, U. States. It stands on the river of the same name, near the bay also called Mobile. It is beautifully situated; and has several handsome public buildings. There are 46 wharfs, and next to New Orleans, it has the greatest trade in cotton in the S. of the Union. The harbour is defended by a fort. It is 1013 miles from Washington. Pop. 12,672, of whom 3869 are slaves.

MOBILITY, s. [mobilité, Fr. mobilitas, from moveo, Lat.] the power of being moved. Figuratively, quickness of motion; the vulgar or populace. Fickleness or inconstancy, applied to the mind.

MOCHA, a port of Yemen in Arabia. It is the chief seat of the trade with Africa, by which it communicates across the Red Sea. Coffee is a great article of export. Lat. 13. 27. N. Long. 43. 27. E.

To MOCK, v. a. [moquer, Fr.] to deride, scoff, or laugh at; to defeat; to elude; to disappoint a person's expectations; to beguile or delude with words.—v. n. to scoff or jest at.

MOCK, s. ridicule; a sneer; an act of contempt; an object of ridicule; a contemptuous imitation or mimicry.

MOCK, a. counterfeit; false; not real.

MOCKABLE, a. exposed to derision.

MOCKER, s. one that ridicules another; a deceiver; an impostor.

MOCKERY, s. derision; scorn; ridicule; contemptuous mimicry of a person's actions or words; sport; a vain show or counterfeit appearance; disappointment.

MOCKING-BIRD, s. in Ornithology, an American bird, which imitates the notes of other birds.

MOCKINGLY, ad. insultingly.

MOCKING-STOCK, s. the subject of derision, or object of ridicule.

MODAL, (mōdal) a. [modus, Lat.] relating to the form only, opposed to essence.

MODALITY, s. an accidental difference; the quality of an accident.

MODE, s. [modus, Lat.] form. In Logic, that which cannot subsist in and of itself, but is always esteemed as belonging to, and subsisting by the help of, some substance, which, for that reason, is called its subject. Gradation or degree; manner or method; state or appearance; fashion or custom. See MOOD.

MODEL, s. [modele, Fr.] a representation in miniature of some buildings, &c.; a copy to be imitated; a mould; a standard by which any thing is measured. See MODULE. SYNON. Model is used for relief; copy, for painting. A copy ought to be faithful; a model, just.

To MODEL, v. a. [modeler, Fr.] to plan; to shape; to form, mould, or delineate.

MODELLER, s. a planner or schemer.

MODENA, a duchy of Italy, bounded by Austrian Italy, the Papal States, and Tuscany. It reaches from the Apennines nearly to the river Po; and is about 90 miles long, and 30 broad. The Apennine mountains here exceed 6000 feet in height. It is watered by the Secchia and other rivers. Agricultural produce is abundant; and there are some manufactures. Its capital is Modena, which stands between the Secchia and the Panaro; and is not remarkable for its beauty, nor for its public buildings. The ducal palace is, however, large and splendid, and has a fine gallery of paintings. The ridiculously famous Secchia rapita, a mere household paln, is religiously preserved in the cathedral; to show what the states of Italy used to go to war about, and how rich the spoils of battle were. Pop. above 20,000. Lat. 44. 35. N. Long. 10. 56. E. Pop. of duchy, about 350,000.

MODERATE, a. [moderator, from moderor, Lat.] temperate, or between the two extremes. Not hot, applied to temper. Not extravagant, applied to expense.

To MODERATE, v. a. [moderor, Lat.] to keep within due bounds and limits; to repress, regulate, or restrain.

MODERATELY, ad. temperately; mildly; in a middle degree.

MODERATENESS, s. the quality of keeping within any two extremes.

MODERATION, s. [moderatio, Lat.] the state of keeping a due mean between extremes; calmness, temperance, or equanimity.

MODERATOR, s. [moderator, Lat.] a person or thing which calms, or keeps from flying into excess; a person who presides at a disputation, to restrain the contending parties from indecency, confine them to the point in question, and show the conclusiveness or inconclusiveness of their arguments and responses.

MODERN, (mōdern) a. [moderne, Fr.] late; not long done or existing.

MODERNISM, s. any thing formed according to the taste of the present age, opposed to that of the ancients.

MODERNS, s. those who have lived lately, opposed to the ancients.

To MODERNIZE, v. a. to form any thing according to the taste of the present age; to translate or alter any thing ancient to the present taste.

MODERNNESS, s. novelty.

MODEST, a. [modeste, Fr. modestus, Lat.] humble in opinion of one's own excellencies; free from boasting; reserved or backward in doing any thing for fear of incurring censure; chaste; avoiding every appearance of vice, without being carried to excess; moderate.

MODESTLY, ad. in an humble, chaste, and moderate manner; without excess, forwardness, boasting, or impudence.

MODESTY, s. [modestia, Fr.] a virtue which includes an humble opinion of one's own abilities, an utter abhorrence of the least appearance of vice, and a fear of doing any thing which either has or may incur censure; chastity.

MODESTY-PIECE, s. a narrow lace or border, which runs along the upper part of the stays before, and is part of a woman's tucker.

MODICUM, s. [Lat.] a small portion or pittance.

MODIFIABLE, a. capable of receiving a difference with respect to all its modes or accidents.

MODIFICATION, s. [modification, Fr.] the act of giving a thing new accidental differences of form or mode; that which gives to any particular manner of being.

To MODIFY, v. a. [modifio, Fr.] to change the form, accidents, or qualities, of a thing.

MODILLION, s. [Fr.] in Architecture, an ornament in the cornice of Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite orders, consisting of little inverted consoles or brackets in form of an S, seeming to support the projecture of the larmier.

MODISH, (mōdish) a. agreeable to the fashion or reigning custom.

MODISHLY, ad. fashionably.

MODISHNESS, s. a strict observance of the fashion.

To MODULATE, v. a. [modular, from modulus, Lat.] in Music, to change the key, and to return to it again, without giving offence to the ear.

MODULATION, s. [Fr. modulatio, Lat.] in Music, the art of keeping in, and on occasion changing, the key, and returning to it again, without offence to the ear; sound modulated; agreeable harmony.

MODULATOR, s. [Lat.] one that forms sounds to a certain key.

MODULE, s. [modulus, Lat.] a model; an empty representation, or mere shadow. In Architecture, a certain measure, taken at pleasure, for regulating the proportion of columns, and the symmetry or distribution of the whole building.

MODUS, s. [Lat.] in Law, the giving money or land to a minister, instead of his tithes in kind. See TITHES, RENT-CHARGE.

MOGUL, the name of a great empire of Asia, founded by the descendants of Timour, the Tatar conqueror, in India, in the 16th century. It endured, with various fortunes, till the beginning of the present century, when it fell into the hands of Britain.

MOHAIR, s. [mohere, Fr.] thread or stuff made of camels' or other hair.

MOHAMMED, the Arabian prophet, and the founder of the great empire, now divided into numerous kingdoms, &c., under Mohammedan rulers, whose legitimate successor is the sultan porte at Constantinople. Mohammed belonged to the tribe of Koreishites, one of the most eminent amongst the Arabs, the hereditary guardians of the Kaaba at Mecca. He was engaged in various mercantile journeys, and distinguished himself in his youth in an attempt to suppress the armed robbers who often plundered the caravans. At the beginning of manhood he was agent for a rich merchant's widow, named Khadija, and so won her favour that she married him. His family connexion and his journeys had brought before him the degrading idolatry of his nation; and the religious dissensions amongst the Christians of the East, had also come under his notice. After much reflection, and much communication with the most learned Jews and Christians he could find, he, in his 40th year, announced himself privately as a prophet of the true God, and gained his wife, his uncle, his cousin, and a few others, as his converts. He continued quietly winning his way, but very slowly, for about 10 years, and then the adherents of the old faith rose against him, and he with difficulty escaped from Mecca to Medina. This was his famous Hegira, the era in Mussulman chronology. A new era it was to Mohammed. He now began to make loftier claims, and to assert that the sword was the instrument of suasion which he should employ. The 10 years that intervened between his flight and his death, were marked by military enterprises of constantly progressive magnitude and results. He gained all the most warlike chiefs and tribes to his banner; he changed the whole national character of the effeminate; his whole army, or armies, were animated with the most absorbing fanaticism, and they were every where successful. Partial defeats only led to more terrible victories. He won his way slowly from Arabia to Palestine, took Jerusalem, attacked Chosroes of Persia on one hand, and Heraclius, the Byzantine emperor, on the other, and prepared for and threatened the invasion of Egypt. In these 10 years the foundation of the mighty empire, that one generation afterwards menaced Europe at each extremity, was laid. Mohammed himself did not, in the latter part of his career, head his forces, but every one of his chiefs was a Mohammed in earnestness for his creed. The prophet continued to carry on his religious mission, being a pattern of abstemiousness and outward humiliation, preaching constantly, and announcing from time to time new revelations as received from heaven. At last, in 632, he died, aged 63 years, 11 years after the Hegira. There can be no doubt that the whole of the extraordinary force that Mohammed possessed, and by which he created his wonderful sovereignty, arose from the truth of what he taught, and the adaptation of the forms he wrapped it in to the people he had to deal with. And there can be as little doubt that, as a religious reformation, the change he produced in most of the countries he overcame was highly beneficial. But there is as little doubt that the truth he saw was so imperfect and clouded, that, except in political and military combinations, it never could have maintained its ground, but must have passed on to some better and nobler developments, that did not need the sword either to prove or to defend them. That Mohammed was thoroughly in earnest,—believed in himself,—there can be no question, amongst such as inquire with the remembrance of the totally different circumstances, manners, habits, &c. of his age, and his nation, and our own. Respecting the legends connected with him, it remains only to be said, that he must not be judged and condemned for the fables committed by his followers. He told no such tales. His famous journey to heaven was in all probability an outrageous allegory; or it may even have been a delusion on his part, for similar delusions have been proved in other cases. The sensuality of Mohammed, which has been condemned as fiercely as if no such monster had ever been known before, is of a very extraordinary kind. As long as his Khadija lived, he did not look upon another woman. And when she had died, he multiplied his wives, it is almost unquestionable, in the desperate hope of male offspring. Regarded in connexion with his parsimonious abstinence from other sensual indulgences, his national habits and feelings, which remain in all great features the same that they were in the days of Abraham, to this very hour, this charge ought to fall to the ground. There is no fear now, that in doing justice to the name and the deeds of Mohammed, any slight or harm should arise to the truth as it is in Jesus. Turning away from Mohammedanism to the Gospel, as is as though one should turn from earth, and all that is of earth, to heaven. And the Divinity of this revelation stands too confessed, to make any who have seen it fear that aught can cast a doubt on it.

MOHAMMEDAN, a. relating to, or believing in, Mohammed. MOHAMMEDISM, MOHAMMEDANISM, the system of religious faith, and ritual and ecclesiastical forms, taught by Mohammed, expounded and developed by his successors, and maintained in the whole Mussulman world. Its sacred book is the Korân (which see); but, like all other religious communities, it is broken up into parties, which hold by tenets partly religious and partly political, or ecclesiastical, held or propounded by different eminent, early followers of the prophet. See ISLAM.

MOHAWKS, a tribe of N. American Indians, now confounded with the Iroquois.

MOHILEF, a government of the Russian empire, bounded by Vitepsk, Smolensk, Tschernigov, and Minsk. It is almost wholly agricultural. Its capital is Mohilef, a populous and well-built town, seated on the Dnieper. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 53. 30. N. Long. 31. 2. E. Pop. about 1,000,000.

MOJDERED, part. a. crazed.

MOIDORE, s. [Port.] a Portugal gold coin, valued at 27s. sterling.

MOÏETÉ, s. [moïété, Fr.] one of two equal parts; a part or portion.

To MOIL, v. a. [mouiller, Fr.] to daub with dirt; to fatigue or weary.—v. n. to labour in the mire; to toil, drudge, or labour hard.

MOIST, a. [moïste, Fr.] wet in a small degree, so as not to be liquid; juicy.

To MOIST, MOISTEN, v. a. to make wet in a small degree.

MOISTENER, s. the person or thing which moistens.

MOISTNESS, s. the quality of being wet in a small degree.

MOISTURE, s. [moïeur, Fr.] a small quantity of water or liquid; dampness.

MOLASSES, s. in Commerce, &c., the syrup of sugar; or that part of the extract of the sugar cane which will not crystallize; and which is left after refining, or which drains from the sugar whilst drying.

MOLDAVIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded by Russia, Bessarabia, Austria, and by the provinces of Walachia and Transylvania, being 180 miles in its greatest length, and somewhat less in breadth. The principal rivers are the Pruth, Moldau, Bardalach, and Sereth. The soil is rich, and it abounds in good pastures, which feed a great number of horses, oxen, and sheep; it also produces corn, pulse, honey, wax, fruits, with plenty of game, fish, and fowls. The inhabitants are Christians of the Greek Church. The Turks oblige the hospodar, or waiwode, to pay an annual tribute, and to raise a large body of troops at his own expense, in time of war. Jassy is the capital. Lat. 47. 58. N. Long. 27. 5. E. Pop. about 500,000.

MOLE, s. [mol, Sax.] a natural spot on the skin, sometimes having hair in it. In Natural History, a common English quadruped, which burrows in the ground with its broad, strong feet, and lives on worms and grubs. Its eyes are very minute. The hillocks it throws up do great harm in pastures.—[moles, Lat.] a dyke or embankment carried out to sea for the formation or protection of a harbour.

MOLECULAR, a. relating to the theory of ultimate molecules, or connected with such atoms.

MOLECULE, s. in Chemistry, one of those ultimate particles of matter which cannot be decomposed by any chemical means.

MOLEHILL, s. a hillock thrown up by a mole.

To MOLEST, v. a. [molester, Fr. from molestus, Lat.] to disturb, trouble, or vex.

MOLESTATION, s. disturbance; uneasiness caused by vexation.

MOLESTER, s. one who disturbs.

MOLIÈRE, JEAN BAPTISTE (POQUELIN), the great French comedist. He was at first in the royal household; but he left it for the stage; and having produced a comedy, and obtained the patronage of the Prince de Conti, he settled at Paris. His remaining life was distinguished by the dramas he produced; in which he held up to merited ridicule the follies and vices of the day; and which are yet so far from being merely satires, that, excepting Shakspeare and Hudibras, few works are more faithful representations of man. His works are very numerous, and the more distinguished are well known to students. He died in 1673, aged 51 years.

MOLINISTS, s. a sect in the Romish Church who follow the doctrines of the Jesuit Molina, relative to sufficient and efficacious grace. Their great antagonists were the Jansenists.

MOLLIENT, part. [molliens, from mollio, Lat.] softening or making soft.

MOLLIFIABLE, a. capable of being softened or appeased.

MOLLIFICATION, s. the act of making soft. Mitigation or pacification, applied to anger.

MOLLIFIER, s. that which makes soft or calm.

To MOLLIFY, v. a. [mollio, from mollio, Lat.] to soften. To appease, applied to anger. To moderate, applied to any thing harsh or rigorous.

MOLYEN, part. part. of To MELT.

MOLYBDATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the molybdic acid.

MOLYBDENUM, s. in Mineralogy, a metal which was at first mistaken for black lead, in its ore. It is brittle and white, and has hitherto been only partly fused. It is employed in Germany in dyeing.

MOLYBDIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to molybdenum.

MOLUCCAS, or SPICE ISLANDS, a cluster of small but valuable islands in the Indian Archipelago. The principal are Ternate, Amboyna, Tydore, Machiau, Timor or Muiyr, Bachian, Bourso, and Ceram. They are situated to the E. and S. of Celebes. Their coasts are rendered very dangerous by sands and shelves. They produce neither corn, rice, nor cattle, except goats; but they have oranges, lemons, coarse tobacco, and, above all, nutmegs, cloves, and other spices. Here are parrots of extraordinary beauty, and many birds of paradise. They have large snakes which are not venomous, but very dangerous lizards, or land crocodiles. The natives are Pagans, but there are many Mohammedans. All the particular kings of these islands are subject to the king of Ternate, who is in alliance with the Dutch. They are either independent, or else belong to Holland.

MOME, s. a dull, stupid, dronish fellow.

MOMENT, s. [momentum, Lat.] consequence, importance, or weight; force, or acting power; an indivisible particle of time.

MOMENTALLY, ad. for a moment.

MOMENTANEOUS, a. [momentum, Lat.] lasting but a moment.

MOMENTARY, a. done in, or lasting, a moment.

MOMENTLY, ad. every moment; moment by moment.

MOMENTOUS, a. of weight, consequence, or importance.

MOMENTUM, s. [Lat.] in Mechanics, that force which a moving body possesses, which results from its weight combined with the velocity at which it is moving, and which is known by observing what force, or power, is needful to be applied to bring it to a state of rest.

MONACHAL, (mónakal) s. [monachalis, Lat. monachos, Gr.] monastic; relating to monks.

MONACHISM, (mónakizm) s. [monachisme, Fr.] the state of monks; a monastic life.

MONACO, a small but handsome town of Italy, capital of a territory of the same name, with a good harbour. It is very strong by nature, seated on a craggy hill, and had its own prince, under the protection of France. The rock stretches out into the sea. Pop. about 6000. Lat. 43. 48. N. Long. 7. 36. E.

MONAD, MONADE, s. [monas, Gr.] in Metaphysics, an indivisible atom; an ultimate particle; a centre of force contemplated as a distinct existence.

MONAGHAN, a county of Ulster, Ireland, 30 miles in length, and from 10 to 20 in breadth, bounded by Fermanagh, Tyrone, Armagh, Louth, and Cavan. The Blackwater, Glyde, Finn, &c. are its chief rivers, and it has some lagoons, or lakes. It contains 21 parishes. It yields iron, lead, building and limestone, &c. &c. The soil is, in general, deep and fertile; wet and damp in some places, and hilly in others. The linen manufacture flourishes in the N. and W. parts. Monaghan, its county town, is an ancient place, but has many handsome modern public buildings. It has a great agricultural market. It is 70 miles from Dublin. Pop. 4130. Pop. of county, 200,442. It sends 2 members to the imperial parliament.

MONARCH, (mónark) s. [monos and arche, Gr.] a king; a governor invested with absolute authority; any thing superior to others of the same kind.

MONARCHAL, (mónarkhal) a. governed by a single person or king; suiting a king.

MONARCHICAL, (mónarkhikal) a. belonging to a single ruler or king.

MONARCHY, (mónarky) s. the government of a single person; a kingdom.

MONASTERY, s. [monasterium, Lat.] a house for persons to retire to on a religious account; a convent.

MONASTIC, MONASTICAL, a. [monasticus, Lat.] religiously seclude; belonging to a monk.

MONASTICALLY, ad. after the manner of a monk.

MONODDO, JAMES BURNETT, (LORD.) s. an eminent Scottish judge in the last century. He is more widely known by his classical monomania, and his speculations respecting the origin of the human race, in which he anticipated Lamarck, somewhat ludicrously. He was intimately acquainted with the scientific circle of that day resident in the northern metropolis, and he died in 1799, aged 85 years. His books are not much read.

MONDAY, (Ménday) s. [monandæg, Sax.] the second day of the week, so called because formerly dedicated to the moon.

MONETARY, a. [moneta, Lat.] relating to money.

MONEY, (the o is pron. like u in this word and its following compounds and derivatives; as mónny, mónneyed, &c.) s. it has properly no plural, except when money is taken for a single piece; but monies was formerly used for sums; [monai, Brit.] a piece of metal stamped with some mark or image, whose value is fixed by public authority. In Political Economy, it is any representative of wealth, whether metallic or of paper, issued by government, and sustained by their credit. See COINS. Money of account, is a term used to designate those terms used in commerce, &c. that are not the names of particular coins, but of particular sums made up of several coins; such as the sestertium and talent, of ancient Rome; and the guinea, noble, and mark, with us.

MONEYBAG, s. a large purse.

MONEYBOX, s. a till; a repository of ready coin.

MONEYCHANGER, s. a broker in money; one who changes one piece of coin for more of less value, or several pieces for one of more value.

MONEYED, a. rich in coin, opposed to wealth in lands.

MONEYLESS, a. wanting money; penniless.

MONEYMATTER, s. account of debtor and creditor.

MONEYSCRIVENER, s. one who raises money for others.

MO NEYSWORTH, s. something worth money; something that will bring money.

MO NEYWORT, s. in Botany, the name of several pretty English plants. The bastard moneywort is a plant with pale red blossoms, found in rivulets and springs; the purple moneywort is a species of loosestrife.

MONGE, GASPAR, a distinguished mathematician and natural philosopher of France, who, during the revolutionary struggle in that country, was of the highest service, as Minister of the Marine; and in devising means for meeting the armies of the coalized kings, at a time when France was shut up to her own resources. He founded the Polytechnic School; and accompanied the army of Napoleon in Italy and to Egypt. He was distinguished by many marks of Napoleon's favour, and was, in consequence, marked for disgrace at the Bourbon restoration. He died in 1818, aged 72 years. His works on the higher branches of mathematics, and particularly on geometry, are exceedingly valuable.

MONGER, (mínger) s. [mangere, Sax.] in compound words, after the name of any commodity, it implies a person who deals in it, or sells it; thus, fishmonger is one who sells or deals in fish.

MONGREL, (míngrel) a. [mong, Sax.] of a mixed breed.

MONGULS, a people who inhabit one of the vast plains in the interior of Asia. Their country is very little known, except that part of it which the caravans pass through in travelling from Russia to China. They dwell in tents, or little movable houses, and live entirely on the produce of their cattle, which are horses, camels, cows, and sheep. They exchange their commodities for rice, sugar, tea, tobacco, cotton cloth, and several sorts of household utensils; not knowing the use of money. The religion of the Monguls of the W. is that of the Dalai-Lama, which is full of ceremonies not unlike Popery. Others are Mohammedans. In number they are estimated at some millions; and they are divided into several distinct tribes.

MONITION, s. [monito, from monere, Lat.] an information or hint; instruction or advice.

MONITOR, s. [Lat.] one who warns of faults, or informs of duty; one who gives useful hints. In Schools, applied to a scholar commissioned by the master to take notice of the behaviour of his school-fellows.

MONITORIAL, a. relating to the duties or work of a monitor. Monitorial System, in Popular Education, is the scheme by which, though the employment of monitors, picked from the more advanced pupils, and specially instructed, one teacher is able to preside over a very large school. This system is chiefly used by the two rival establishments, the National, and the British School Societies.

MONITORY, a. [monitorius, Lat.] conveying useful instructions or admonitions.

MONITORY, s. an admonition.

MONK, (the o pron. like u in this and its derivatives; as múnk, múnkish, &c.) s. [monachus, Lat. monachos, from monos, Gr.] a person who retires from the world to give himself wholly up to devotion, and to live in abstinence and solitude.

MONK, GEORGE, (GENERAL,) afterwards Duke of Albe-marle, one of the prominent parties in the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century. He served first in the Netherlands, and on his return to England was employed in the first Scotch war, on the side of Charles I. He was much honoured by the king, and was once made governor of Dublin. Being taken by Fairfax at Nantwich, he was sent to the Tower, and remained there more than two years; when he was won by bribes and other influence to change sides. He was employed in Ireland by the victorious parliament, and afterwards served under Cromwell in Scotland, where his conduct so far pleased the lord-general, that he was left in command of the country, and acquitted himself to his superior's satisfaction. After Cromwell's death, he seems to have begun to deal with the exiled party, and eventually, by means of his army, he effected the restoration of Charles II. He was ennobled and otherwise honoured by the king, and gained, as admiral, a great victory over the Dutch. He died in 1666, aged 58 years.

MONKERY, s. a monastic life.

MONKEY, (mónkey) s. [mon and kín, Teut.] in Natural History, an animal which much resembles the human species. The monkey race consists of many different species, and are divided into apes, that are destitute of a tail; baboons, which have short

TINTERN ABBEY

Scale of Miles.

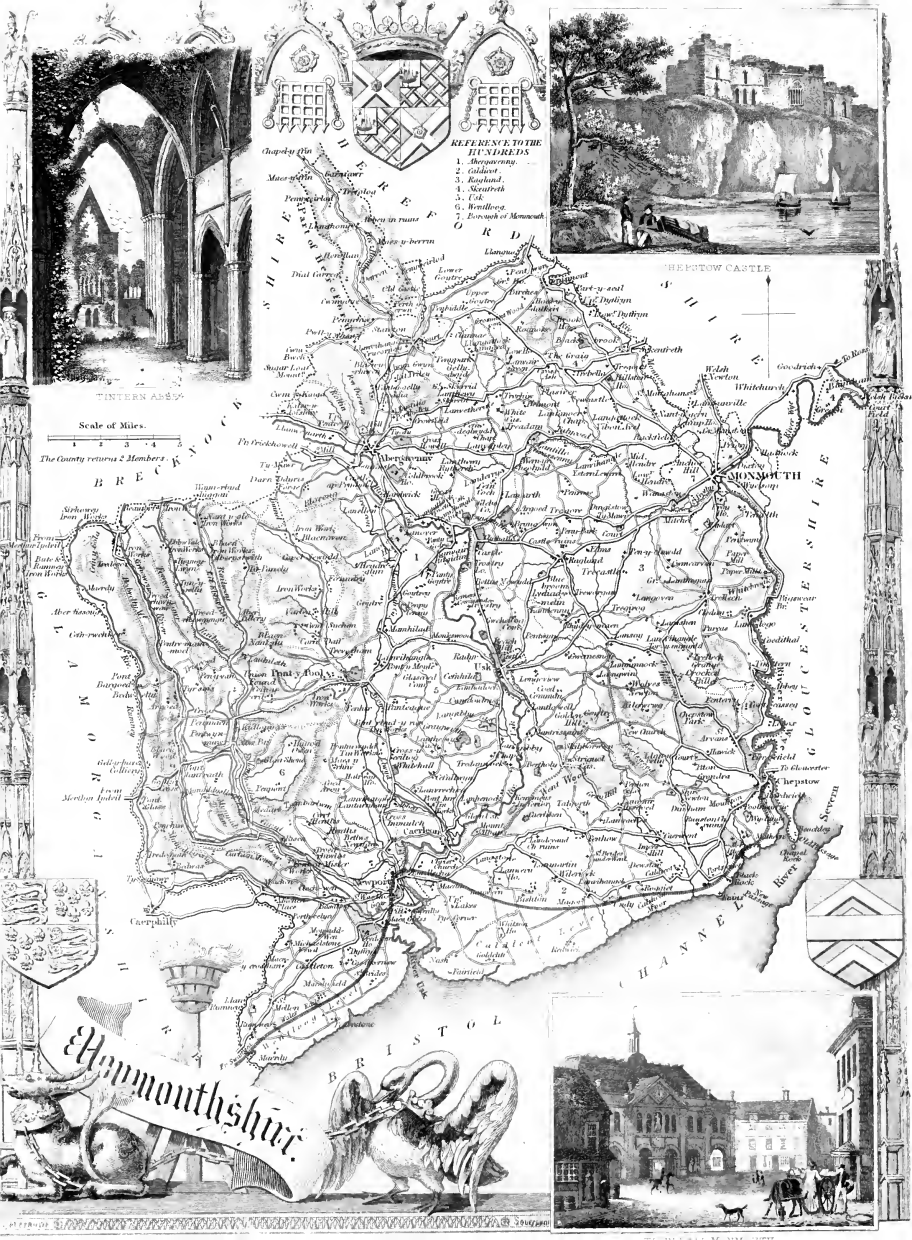

The County returns 2 Members.

- REFERENCE TO THE TOWNARDS
1. Abington.
  2. Ashford.
  3. Basildon.
  4. Beaulieu.
  5. Chichester.
  6. Haverhill.
  7. Portmouth of Monmouth.

STRETTON CASTLE

Shropshire

tails and muscular bodies; monkeys, whose tails are generally long; and sapajous, which have prehensile tails.

MONKHOOD, s. the condition, state, or profession of a monk.

MONKISH, a. taught or professed by monks.

MONKSHOOD, s. in Botany, a plant which is of a very poisonous nature, though it is common in gardens.

MONKS-RHU/BARB, s. in Botany, a species of dock. Its roots are used in medicine.

MONMOUTH, JAMES, DUKE OF, son of Charles II., by Lucy Walters, was born before the Restoration. Being acknowledged after his father gained his crown, he became a great favourite with the people; chiefly owing to the agreeable contrast he formed to the sullen and fanatical Duke of York, afterwards James II. After that king's accession, the Duke of Monmouth, invading England, was defeated at Sedgemoor, taken, and executed as a traitor. He fell in 1685, aged 36 years.

MONMOUTH, Monmouthshire. It is pleasantly seated at the confluence of the rivers Wye, Munnow, and Trothy, which almost surround it. It is a large handsome town, and carries on a considerable trade with Bristol by the Wye. It had once a stately castle, the remains of which show it to have been very strong. It is 128 miles from London. Market for corn and provisions, Saturday. Fairs on Whitson-Tuesday, September 4th, and November 22nd. Pop. 5446.

MONMOUTHSHIRE, a county of England, lying on the Bristol Channel, and bounded by Herefordshire, Brecknockshire, Gloucestershire, and Glamorganshire. Its length is about 24 miles, and its breadth 21. It is divided into 6 hundreds, and contains 7 market towns, and 127 parishes. The air is temperate and healthy, and the soil fruitful, though mountainous and woody. The hills feed sheep, goats, and horned cattle, and the valleys produce plenty of grass and corn. Beside the Wye, the Munnow, and the Rhynney, or Rymney, this county has almost peculiar to itself the river Usk, which divides it into two unequal portions, the eastern and largest part of which is a tract fertile, on the whole, in corn and pastures, and well wooded. It abounds with limestone, which is burnt on the spot, for the general manure of the country. The smaller western portion is mountainous, and in great part unfavourable for cultivation; whence it is devoted to the feeding of sheep. It has several long narrow valleys, watered by streams that fall into the Bristol Channel. All the rivers above-mentioned, particularly the Wye and Usk, abound with fish, especially salmon and trout. Monmouthshire was formerly reckoned one of the counties of Wales, but since the reign of Charles II. it has been considered as an English county. The people use the Welsh language, but the English tongue is coming into use. The manufacture of this county is flannels. Monmouth is its county town. Pop. 134,355. It sends 4 members to parliament.

MONOCEROS, (Unicorn), s. in Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

MONOCHORD, (monokord), s. [monos and chorde, Gr.] an instrument having but one string.

MONOCULAR, MONOCULOUS, a. [monos, Gr. and oculus, Lat.] one-eyed.

MONODY, s. [monos and ode, Gr.] a poem or song sung by a single person, and expressive of grief.

MONOGAMIST, s. [monos and gameo, Gr.] one who disallows of second marriages.

MONOGAMY, s. marriage of but one wife.

MONOGRAM, s. [monos and gramma, Gr.] a cipher or character compounded of several letters; a sentence in one line; an epigram in one verse.

MONOLOGUE, (monology) s. [monos and logos, Gr.] a soliloquy.

MONOMACHY, s. [monos and machomai, Gr.] a duel; a single combat.

MONOPETALOUS, a. [monos and petalon, Gr.] in Botany, having but one flower-leaf.

MONOPHYTES, MONOTHEITES, s. [monos and physis, and monos and theos, Gr.] in Ecclesiastical History, names of the Eutychians; whicq. see.

MONOPOLIST, s. [monos and poleo, Gr.] one who by engrossing or patent has the sole power of vending any commodity.

To MONOPOLIZE, v. a. to have the sole power of making or selling any commodity. Figuratively, to engross favour. &c. to oneself.

MONOPOLY, s. the sole privilege of making or selling any thing.

MONOPTOTE, s. [monos and ptosis, Gr.] in Grammar, a noun having no inflexions.

MONOPYRENEOUS, a. [monos and pyren, Gr.] in Botany, such fruits as contain only one seed or kernel.

MONOSTICK, (monistick) s. [monos and stichos, Gr.] a composition consisting of a single verse.

MONOSYLLABICAL, a. consisting of but one syllable.

MONOSYLLABLE, s. [monos and syllabe, Gr.] a word of only one syllable.

MONOSYLLABLE, a. consisting of words of one syllable.

MONOTONY, s. [monos and tonos, Gr.] a fault in pronunciation, wherein a long series of words are delivered with one unvaried tone, and without any cadence. Figuratively, wearisome sameness in discourse, &c.

MONROE, JAMES, twice president of the United States. He was personally engaged in the war of Independence, and was sent as a representative to congress on the peace. He was sent to France and to England on embassies, and afterwards became secretary of state. He was president from 1817 to 1825, and died in 1831, on the anniversary of the declaration of Independence, aged 73 years.

MONS, capital of the province of Hainault, Belgium. It stands on the Trouille, and is strongly fortified. The streets are handsome, and it has some fine churches and public buildings. There are some manufactures of importance here, and it has a fine trade. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 50. 26. N. Long. 3. 59. E.

MONSOON, s. [monsoon, Fr.] a species of trade-wind, in the Indian Ocean, which for six months blows constantly the same way, and the contrary way the other six months.

MONSTER, s. [monstrum, Lat.] a production or birth, wherein the parts differ from the general figure or form of its species; something horrible for deformity or mischief.

MONSTER, v. a. to represent as monstrous.

MONSTRELET, ENGERRAND DE, a French chronicler of the 15th century. His work extends from 1400 to 1453, in which year he died, aged 63 years.

MONSTROSITY, s. the state of being out of the common order of nature.

MONSTROUS, a. [monstrum, Lat.] deviating from the stated order of nature; strange or wonderful, including dislike; irregular or enormous; shocking; hateful.

MONSTROUSLY, ad. in a manner that is out of the common order of nature; terribly; horribly; to a great degree.

MONSTROUSNESS, s. the quality which renders any thing or action shocking, irregular, or enormous.

MONTAGU, LADY MARY WORTLEY, an English writer of the last century, whose letters are the most perfect models of unaffected grace in that style of composition that can be imagined. She was well instructed under the care of Bishop Burnet, and knew Latin, if not Greek. She accompanied her husband in his embassy to Constantinople; and amongst other services rendered to her country, introduced the practice of inoculation for the small-pox, as she had seen it practised in Turkey. After a tour in Italy, unaccompanied by her husband, on her return to England she died, in 1702, aged about 70 years. She had the friendship of the brilliant writers of that day, and her works embrace satires and other poems, as well as her famous letters.

MONTAIGNE, MICHEL DE, the celebrated French essayist, was most carefully, though singularly, educated, and intended for the higher walks of the legal profession. He did not, however, carry out his father's purpose. France was a terrible scene of treachery and bloodshed at the time, and he resorted to philosophy, and literature, and travel for consolation. After his return, he found matters scarcely better, and the plague added to the horrors of the civil war. He resided for some time in Paris, and died in 1592, aged 59 years. His best known productions are his Essays, which abound in wisdom, but all of the earthly and intellectual order. The frequent references to them for refutation, or correction, by the great and pious Pascal, will best characterize them. Montaigne was one of the earlier school of infidels, whose unbelief did not arise from their grossly sensual and material philosophy.

MONTANISM, in Ecclesiastical History, the name of the creed, or system of dogmas and rites, held by the followers of Montanus of Phrygia, who, in the end of the 2nd century, caused great alarm to the Catholics. They seem to have been simply of an enthusiastic and ascetic character; except that Montanus himself was esteemed the promised Paraclete. Tertullian, whose general orthodoxy is not impugned, joined them. It gradually died out, lacking vitality, or not being persecuted into importance.

MONTEFANT, s. [Fr.] a term in Fencing.
MONTEAUCULL, RAYMOND DE, the famous imperialist general during the thirty years' war, whose career was one full of profound studies for strategists, in spite of his reverse at Prague, and the paucity of his victories. He was opposed by Turenne and Condé, and surpassed them and defeated them by some of the most splendid manoeuvres ever seen in war. He did gain several victories, over the Swedes and Turks, &c. He wrote on the subject of strategy; and the book, and his own illustrations in action, obtained the praise of Napoleon Buonaparte. He died in 1680, aged 72 years.

MONTE DI PIETA, [Ital.] establishments which were first set up in Italy, and have since been copied in Spain, Holland, &c., in which loans of money at moderate interest are obtained on pledges left, in the manner practised by pawnbrokers. They have been of great service to the poor.

MONTERO, s. [Span.] a horseman's cap.
MONTEQUEU, CHARLES DE SECONDAT, BARON DE, one of the great French writers of the last century. He was engaged in the legal profession, and spent his time in his professional occupations, varied by his studies and writings, and finally laid aside for travelling in Europe, and the composition of his chief works. His Persian Letters gained him a place in the Academy; but works on the Spirit of Laws, and the Greatness and Fall of the Romans, have raised him to the higher rank of a classic for the world. He died in 1753, aged 66 years.

MONTEVIDEO, the capital of the republic of Uruguay, S. America. It stands on the La Plata, and is well built, with a good harbour. Its trade consists in the export of the productions of the interior, and the import of European goods. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 34. 53. S. Long. 56. 15. W.

MONTFAUCON, BERNARD DE, a French ecclesiastic and antiquary, whose great work is a repository of illustrations of the writings, and of the manners and customs, of the classical ages. He was a soldier before he joined the Benedictine order; and he died in 1741, aged 86 years.

MONTFORT, SIMON DE, EARL OF LEICESTER, the leader of the rebellious barons in their attacks on Henry III. which led to the victory of Lewes. He subsequently summoned the representatives of the freeholders and burgesses, in such a way as to lay the foundation for the existence and the authority of our House of Commons. He fell in the same year, 1265, in battle at Evesham, when Prince Edward was conqueror, and Henry III. was delivered from captivity.

MONTGOMERY, Montgomeryshire. It is a small neat town, with a rich soil, but little trade. The relics of its castle, which stand on a projecting ridge of a great height and steepness, and towards the end are quite precipitous, impend in a picturesque manner over the town, but are now very small. It is pleasantly seated on a rocky hill, near the Severn, 161 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1208.

MONTGOMERYSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, bounded by Merionethshire, Denbighshire, Shropshire, Radnorshire, and Cardiganshire. It extends 33 miles in length, and about 24 in breadth, and is divided into 9 hundreds, which contain 7 market towns and 47 parishes. The air is pleasant and salubrious; and the country in general mountainous, but fertile, (the S. S. E. and N. E. parts are extremely so, being much more level), and agreeably interspersed with valleys, hills, meadows, and cornfields. The hilly tracts are almost entirely sheep-walks; and the flocks, like those of Spain, are driven from distant parts to feed on them during summer. This county also affords mineral treasures, particularly lead; and it abounds with slate and lime; but there is no coal. Its principal rivers are the Severn, Yrnew, and Tannat, which are remarkable for their great variety of fish, and for salmon in particular. Montgomery is its chief town. Pop. 69,219. It sends two members to parliament.

MONTH, (month), s. [mona, Sax.] a space of time measured by the revolution of the sun or moon, and reckoned the 12th part of the year. A lunar month, is the space between two conjunctions of the moon with the sun, or between two moons. A solar month, the space of time wherein the sun revolves through one entire sign of the ecliptic. The calendar months are artificial divisions of the civil year, and consist unequally of thirty and thirty-one days, except February, which in leap-years has twenty-nine, but in other years twenty-eight days.

MONTHLY, (monthly), a. continuing or performed in a month; happening every month.

MONTHLY, (monthly) ad. once in a month.
MONTI, VICENZO, a great Italian poet of the last generation. He was secretary to the pope's nephew, and poet to the see; afterwards he espoused the Gallican side, was professor at Padua, historiographer to the king of Italy, and laureate also. His poems are formed on the model of Dante's, and are full of the most vivid and graphic description. His works are numerous, and include some tragedies. He died in 1828, aged 75 years.

MONTTOIR, s. [Fr.] in Horsemanship, a stone as high as the stirrups, which Italian riding-masters mount their horses from, without putting their foot in the stirrup.

MONTPELLIER, a large, rich, and beautiful city in the department of Herault, France. The town-house is remarkable for its halls, which are embellished with fine paintings. It has many fine houses, and several stately edifices, but the streets are very narrow. The trade lies in verdigris, which is the principal manufacture, wool, wine, aqua-vite, Hungary-water, cinnamon-water, capillaire, essence of bergamot, lemons; also in woollen carpets, dimities, fustians, and silk stockings. These commodities are sent, by the canal, to Certe, which is the seaport of Montpellier. The air is extremely healthy, and a great number of persons flock thither, from all parts, to recover their health. Montpellier is pleasantly seated upon a hill, by the river Lez. It is 212 miles from Paris. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 43. 36. N. Long. 3. 52. E.

MONTREAL, a city of lower Canada, N. America, situated on an island (of the same name) in the river St. Lawrence, is chief place in a district called after it. It is well built, and has some fine public edifices. It has a small harbour; but its trade is very considerable. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 45. 33. N. Long. 73. 31. W.

MONTROSE, Forfarshire, Scotland. At high water it is almost surrounded by the sea. The harbour is a fine semicircular basin, with a handsome stone pier; and a great number of trading vessels belong to this port. The buildings are neat, and many of them in the modern taste. The most remarkable are the town-house, the Presbyterian church, and an elegant Episcopal chapel. A great quantity of malt is made here; and there are manufactures of sail-cloth, linen, coloured and white thread, brown sheeting, Osnaburghs, and cotton stockings, as also a tannery and rope-works. The salmon fisheries on the N. and S. Esk form a valuable branch of commerce. Montrose is seated on a gentle eminence, in a peninsula, formed by the estuary of S. Esk (over which is a bridge) and the German Ocean, 48 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 13,402.

MONTROSE, JAMES (GRAHAM), MARQUIS OF, a distinguished royalist leader in Scotland, during the troubles of Charles I. He was first on the popular or Covenanters' side; and left it because older and more tried men were set above him. When the war fairly broke out, after various fortunes, he was made chief of the king's Scottish troops; and in this character he won several considerable battles against the Covenanters. But he was thoroughly defeated at last, and left the country. Returning, after the king's execution, to see if any thing could be done to retrieve the Stuarts' cause, he was taken and hung as a traitor, in 1650, aged 38 years.

MONTERRAT, one of the W. Indian islands, lying between Antigua and Guadaloupe. It is about 9 miles in length, and as much in breadth, and is divided into two parishes. The mountains, which are lofty and very precipitous, are covered with cedar, cypress, the iron-tree, with other woods, and some odoriferous shrubs. As to soil, animals, and commerce, Montserrat is much the same as the other Caribbee islands. It is possessed by the English. Pop. about 10,000. Plymouth, its chief place, is in Lat. 16. 45. N. Long. 61. 6. W.

MONTUCLA, JEAN ETIENNE, a very eminent French mathematician of the last century. He studied for the legal profession; but afterwards renounced it, and adopted that by which he has become so widely known. He was sent once as astronomer, &c. to an expedition to Cayenne. His great work is his History of Mathematics. He died in 1799, aged 74 years.

MONUMENT, s. [monumentum, Lat.] anything by which the memory of persons or things is preserved.

MONUMENTAL, a. preserving the memory or remembrance; belonging to a tomb raised in honour of the dead.

MOOD, s. [modus, Lat.] in Logic, the character of a syllogism, determined by the quantity and quality of its propositions. In Music, manner or style. In Grammar, the inflexions or changes by which the assertion made by a verb is distinguished as simply made, or as conditionally made, or as necessary. The common moods are the indicative; the conjunctive, or subjunctive; and the imperative. There are also the conditional, the optative, the jussive, and the hortative.—[mod, Sax.] temper of mind; state of the mind as affected by passion; anger; rage; an habitual temper of the mind.

MOODY, a. angry, or out of humour; mental; intellectual; belonging to the mind.

MOON, s. [luna, Sax.] in the Solar System, is a satellite or secondary planet. It is peculiarly given to the satellite belonging to our earth; which is distant from it about 240,000 miles; and revolves round it, and round its own axis also, in the space of about 29½ days. It is above 2100 miles in diameter. The mean inclination of its orbit to the ecliptic, 5° 8' 46". The appearance of the moon through a telescope is that of a very diversified surface, with large and lofty mountains and volcanic craters; but even by the aid of Lord Rosse's immense telescope, by which any thing of 100 yards in length would have been seen, no traces of the works or habitations of rational beings could be perceived. It is also much questioned if there is any atmosphere resembling our own surrounding it; or if there is any water on its surface. The same hemisphere of the moon is always presented to us; the variation effected by her libration being too small to be worthy of notice. And in this hemisphere most of the hollows, plains, and mountains have been very carefully examined and measured. Some observers have recorded the appearance of what seemed to be volcanic eruptions actually taking place. See ECLIPSES, TIDES, PHASES, LIBRATION, EJECTION, OCCULTATION, &c. &c. Figuratively, a month. In Fortification, something resembling a crescent or half-moon: this word is generally used in composition, either in the last sense, or for something belonging to the moon.

MOON-BEAM, s. a ray of light darting from the moon.

MOON-CALF, s. a monster; a false conception; a dolt; a stupid fellow.

MOONEYED, a. having eyes affected by the revolutions of the moon. Figuratively, dim-sighted; purblind.

MOON-FERN, s. in Botany, a kind of fern.

MOON-FISH, s. in Natural History, a kind of fish, so called because the tan-fin is shaped like a half-moon, by which, and his odd-trussed shape, he is sufficiently distinguished.

MOONLESS, a. not enlightened by the moon.

MOONLIGHT, (moonlit) s. the light afforded by the moon.

MOONLIGHT, (moonlit) a. enlightened by the moon.

MOONSHINE, s. the light or lustre of the moon. Figuratively, a delusion.

MOONSHINE, MOONSHINY, a. [both from a corruption of moon-shining] during the shining of the moon; by means of moonlight.

MOONSTONE, s. in Mineralogy, a kind of stone.

MOONSTRUCK, a. lunatic; affected by the moon.

MOON-TREFOIL, s. in Botany, a plant so called on account of the shape of its fruit.

MOONWORT, s. in Botany, a kind of fern.

MOOK, s. [moer, Belg.] a marsh, fen, or tract of barren heathy land.—[maurs, Lat.] a negro, or native of Africa.

To MOOR, v. a. [morer, Fr.] to fasten a vessel by anchors or other means.—v. n. to be fixed or stationed.

MOORCOCK, s. in Ornithology, the red grouse.

MOORE, EDWARD, an English poet and play writer, whose Poems for the Female Sex, and editorship of the World, a weekly paper on the plan of the Spectator, have preserved his name from utter oblivion. He died in 1757, aged 45 years. He was acquainted with Lord Lyttleton, Walpole, and others of the literary cognoscenti of the day; and was helped by them in the World.

MOORE, DR. JOHN, an English writer, who was travelling in France during the Revolution, and was present at some of its most frightful scenes. He published accounts of his travels; and the results of his observations on the causes of that Revolution. He also wrote some works of fiction, and died in 1802, aged 72 years.

MOORE, SIR JOHN, son of the above, a distinguished military commander during the late continental war. He began active service in Corsica, and afterwards was engaged in the W. Indies; in Ireland, during the Rebellion; in Holland, and in Egypt. He was subsequently employed as ambassador to Sweden, and gave the greatest satisfaction. Being sent into Spain, he was obliged to retreat before an overwhelming numerical majority; and at last, under the walls of Corunna, whilst the troops beat back the French on all sides, Sir John Moore fell, mortally wounded by a cannon-ball. He died in 1809, aged 48 years.

MOOTHEN, s. in Ornithology, the water-hen, also the hen of the red grouse.

MOORISH, a. fenny; marshy; watery.

MOORLAND, s. a marsh, or watery ground.

MOORSTONE, s. in Mineralogy, a species of granite.

MOORY, a. marshy; fenny; watery.

MOOSE, (moos) s. in Natural History, the large American deer.

To MOOT, v. a. [motian, Sax.] in Law, to plead a mock cause; to state a point of law, or argue a case, by way of exercise, for a degree of barrister in the Inns of court, called to argue a moot. A moot case, or point, such as may admit dispute.

MOOTER, s. one that argues a moot.

MOP, s. [moppa, Brit.] pieces of cloth, or locks of wool, fixed to a long handle, used in washing floors.

To MOP, v. a. to rub with a mop.

To MOPE, v. n. to be stupid; to be drowsy, spiritless, inactive, or dull.—v. a. to make one spiritless or delirious.

MOPE-EYED, a. blind of one eye.

MOPPET, MO'PSEY, s. a doll made of rags; a fond name for a child.

MOPUS, s. [a cant word from mope] a drone; a dull or inactive person.

MORAL, a. [Fr. from mores, Lat.] relating to the character of the actions or conduct of life, as good or bad; constructed or composed to promote or instruct in right-doing. A moral impossibility, is a very great or insuperable difficulty, opposed to a natural impossibility. A moral certainty or assurance, implies a very strong probability, and is used in contradistinction to mathematical probability. Moral science, usually means metaphysics. Moral sense, is an incorrect name for the conscience. Moral philosophy, is the scientific and practical development of ethics.

MORAL, s. morality, or the practice of the duties of life; doctrine, or instruction, drawn as a corollary from a fable.

To MORAL, v. n. to moralize; to make moral reflections.

MORALIST, s. one who teaches the duties of life.

MORALITY, s. [moralité, Fr.] the doctrine of morals, or right doing; ethics reduced to rules for practice.

MORALITY, s. the name of a kind of dramatic representation, in which the virtues and vices were personified; employed by the Romanist clergy and monks in the middle ages, to instruct and to amuse the people. See MYSTERY.

To MORALIZE, v. a. [moraliser, Fr.] to apply to the conduct or regulation of our actions; to explain in such a manner as to convey some practical truths.—v. n. to speak or write on moral subjects.

MORALIZER, s. one who moralizes.

MORALLY, ad. in the ethical sense; according to the common occurrences of life; according with the right.

MORALS, s. (without a singular.) the practice of the duties of life; behaviour with respect to others.

MORASS, s. [morais, Fr.] a fen; a bog or tract of land abounding in water.

MORATIN, the name of two Spanish dramatists of the last century, by whose exertions a considerable improvement in the theatrical performances was effected. Nicholas Fernandez Moratin was a comic writer; and apart from the character he acquired by his plays, gained well-deserved praise, and nothing more, for his noble simplicity and independence. He died in 1780, aged 43 years. Leandro F. Moratin, his son, excelled in tragic composition; and died in 1828, aged 68 years.

MORAVIA, a province of Austria, surrounded by Bohemia, and other provinces of Austria, and bordering on Prussia. It is surrounded on three sides by mountains, the loftiest of which are the Carpathians, which divide it from Hungary. It was watered by the river Morawa, (from which it is named,) which flows into the Danube. It yields iron and other metals, coals, marble, &c. It is fertile, and produces corn, timber, and cattle in great abundance. There are here also manufactories of clothing stuffs, which are very valuable. It is from this province that the church founded by the Hussites, called the Unitas Fratrum, takes the title of Moravian Brethren. Olmutz is the capital. Pop. about 2,000,000.

MORAVIANS, in Ecclesiastical History, a church which was founded by the Hussites in Bohemia; it is episcopal in its form of government, and somewhat communitarian in its discipline, many of its regulations being remarkably like those of the Society of Friends, or Quakers. They also resemble that communion in some of the more spiritual of their tenets. Being driven from Moravia by the disasters attendant on the thirty years' war, they settled at Herrnhut, whence they were for a long time called Herrnhutters. They are now to be found throughout Germany, in England, and in America, in considerable numbers. The most distinguished deeds of missionary enterprise have been performed by members sent forth from this church; which still supports similar efforts in some of the most unpromising fields, and that species of evangelical labour. The name by which they call themselves, and have been called from their first foundation, is Unitas Fratrum, or the United Brethren. See ZINZENDORF, BOHEMIAN BRETHREN, HUSS, &c.

MORAY, or MURRAY. See ELGIN.

MORBID, a. [morbidus, from morbus, Lat.] diseased, opposed to healthy. Figuratively, unreasonable; absurd.

MORBIDNESS, s. the state or quality of being diseased.

MORBIFFIC, a. [morbificus, Fr.] causing diseases; injurious to health.

MORBIHAN, a department of France, lying on the Atlantic Ocean, and bounded by the departments of Finistère, Côtes du Nord, Ille et Vilaine, and Loire Inférieure. It is about 80 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is somewhat rocky and mountainous in its general character; and along its coast are several small islands. It yields iron abundantly; and there are slate quarries, &c. &c. The Vilaine is its chief river; and the Oust and others are of considerable size. It produces corn, fruit, timber, and cattle; and has good manufactories and fisheries. Vannes is the capital of the department. Population, about 450,000.

MORBOSE, (morböse) a. [morbosus, Lat.] proceeding from disease, unhealthy.

MORDACITY, s. [mordacis, Fr. mordacitas, from mordax, Lat.] of a biting, stinging quality.

MORDANTS, s. in Chemistry, substances which have a chemical affinity for particular colours; they are employed by dyers as a bond to unite the colour with the cloth intended to be dyed. Alum is of this class.

MORDICANT, a. [Fr.] biting; acrid.

MORDICATION, s. the act of corroding or biting.

MORE, a. the comparative of some, many, or much, whose superlative is most; greater in number, quantity, or degree.

MORE, ad. to a greater degree. Longer, applied to time. Again, or a second time. It is also used to form the comparative degree of adjectives, which, from any cause, do not admit the affix er.

MORE, SIR THOMAS, chancellor of England after Cardinal Wolsey, in the reign of Henry VIII., and celebrated for his piety, learning, and wit. He was the son of a judge, and studied at Oxford and Lincoln's Inn; and took a conspicuous part in parliament in the reign of Henry VII. He rose in his profession, and in general consideration, continually, and obtained by Wolsey's influence several dignities. This favour, however, did not pervert him. As speaker of the Commons, he resisted some breach of privilege committed by the lordly cardinal, with a firmness that was a foreshadowing of the triumphs of Charles I.'s parliaments. On Wolsey's fall he was raised to the wool-sack; but the king found him not a whit more compliant to his sensual conscientiousness than the cardinal had been. Sir Thomas was a staunch but enlightened Romanist, and he refused to acknowledge Henry's lay-papacy; wherefore he was imprisoned, and on the ground of some tenderness shown to that silly impostor the Holy Maid of Kent, was condemned and beheaded in 1535, aged 55 years. Sir Thomas More was an intimate friend of Erasmus, who rivalled him in his wit, and dedicated to him, for the sake of the pun upon his name, his Eulogy of Folly (in Greek, Moria). More wrote several works, of which his Utopia is most famous.

MORE, HENRY, one of the brilliant scholars and philosophers of the "Latitude-men about Cambridge," in the time of Charles II., and a most eloquent vindicator and exponent of Platonism. He was in orders, but declined preferment, and carried on his studies with no further distraction than the occasional publication of his writings. These works, which are too little known now, contain the germs of the philosophy which is now depreciatingly termed Transcendentalism, and will abundantly repay the careful student. His poetical writings, with all their quaintness, evince no small share of true inspiration. He died in 1687, aged 83 years.

MORE, HANNAH, a very popular and agreeable writer of the latter part of the last century and the beginning of this, is one of the most striking examples of the successful pursuit of literature under difficulties. Her father was a village school-master, and she and her four sisters had no better instruction than he could impart, or they could gain by their own efforts. She began at the age of 18 her literary career, and her first publications were dramas, which, through the influence of Garrick, Dr. Johnson, Reynolds, and the distinguished circle she was introduced to in London, were brought out on the stage with most gratifying success. After a while, her opinions on the propriety of dramatic representations as an amusement for a Christian, led to the total abandonment of that branch of literature and art. Her sisters having about the same time realized a competency by their school at Bristol, they purchased Barley-Wood, and resided there together. Hannah More now began to write works of higher pretensions, and she met with the same success. She was introduced by some of these writings to the notice of royalty, and the government purchased and distributed her Cheap Repository Tracts in the disturbed districts, with most noticeable effects. The last years of her life were spent at Clifton, where she died in 1833, aged 88 years. Of her numerous works, the Sacred Dramas are most popular with the young; and Practical Piety, Catechisms in Search of a Wife, and her works on Manners and Education, most generally known and approved. Amongst her many tracts, the Shepherd of Salisbury Plain has been read by every one.

MOREA, formerly called PELOPONNESUS, the peninsula forming the southern part of Greece, to which it is joined by the Isthmus of Corinth. It is 180 miles in length, and 130 in breadth. The air is temperate, and the soil fertile, excepting the middle, where there are many mountains. It is watered by several rivers, of which the Alpheus, the Vasilis, Potamo, and the Stromio, are the chief. See GREECE, and PELOPONNESUS.

MOREAU, JEAN VICTOR, one of the celebrated French generals during the last great war. He rose from the ranks, having engaged as a volunteer, and his first command was on the Rhine, where his splendid retreat before a vastly superior force raised him to the summit of fame at once. He was intrusted with an army in Germany during Buonaparte's absence in Egypt, and he then won the battle of Hohenlinden. Being implicated in Pichegru's treason, he was exiled, and went to N. America. He returned thence to serve Russia against his native country, and fell before Dresden, by a cannon-ball, in 1813, aged 50 years.

MOREL, s. in Botany, an eatable kind of fungus, used in soups; likewise a species of large cherry.

MORELAND, MOORLAND, s. [morland, Sax.] a barren, heathy country.

MOREOVER, ad. besides or beyond what has been mentioned. SYNON. Furthermore is properly used, when there is need only to add one more reason to those before mentioned. Its intent is to multiply, and it has no relation but to number. Moreover is in its right place, when used to add a reason of a different kind to those that went before. Its chief office is to add, with a particular respect to diversity. Besides is used with propriety, when we would strengthen, by a new reason, the force of those that were sufficient of themselves. Its principal office is to enhance by abundance.

MORESK-WORK, s. in Carving or Painting, consisting of several pieces in which there is no perfect figure, but a wild representation of birds, beasts, &c.

MORETON-HAMSTEAD, Devonshire. It has a considerable woollen manufacture; and is seated on a hill near Dartmoor. It is 185 miles from London. Market for yarn, Saturday. Pop. 2037.

MORIAH, the hill within the walls of Jerusalem, on which the Temple was built; and where the mosque of Omar now stands. On it the patriarch Abraham was directed to offer up his son, for the trial of his faith.

MORIGEROUS, a. [morigerus, Lat.] dutiful; obedient; compliant.

MORION, s. [Fr.] a helmet, or armour for the head.

MORKIN, s. in Hunting, a wild beast that has died through sickness or mischance.

MORLAIX, a considerable sea-port in the department of Finistère, France, with a tide harbour. The Notre-Dame church is a singular structure, and the hospital is very handsome; the inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in linen, hemp, and tobacco. It is seated on a river of the same name, 330 miles from Paris. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 48. 34. N. Long. 3. 50. W.

MORLAND, SIR SAMUEL, an English statesman of the 17th century, who was first in the employ of Cromwell, and afterwards of Charles II., in whose restoration he aided considerably. He was an able practical mechanic, and spent a great fortune in making and attempting inventions. The speaking-trumpet, the fire engine, and some other common and useful machines are attributed to him. He died in 1696, aged about 70 years.

MORLAND, GEORGE, an English painter, who, with Dutch fidelity and lack of idealism, has painted pigs, and farmyards, and tavern-tap company; and whose life was as low and coarse as his genius. He died in 1804, aged 40 years.

MORLEY, THOMAS, an eminent English composer of the 16th century. His works are madrigals, canzonets, anthems, and lessons for the voice and for instruments. He died in 1604, aged about 50 years.

MORMO, s. [Gr.] a bugbear, or something used to frighten persons.

MORMONITES, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect of enthusiasts who sprang up in America, in the beginning of the second quarter of the present century, who call themselves  Latter-day Saints, practise immersion for baptism, and hold by a book which they call the Book of Mormon, (for no known reason,) as well as the Bible, esteeming it a divine revelation. It is known to have been composed by a gentleman during a period of infirm health, many years before, as a kind of philosophico-religious romance; and falling by some means into the hands of the founder of the sect, proved in a garbled and imperfect condition a very available instrument of pious fraud. The Mormonites are very numerous in the United States, and are gaining ground amongst the ignorant in England and Wales.

MORN, Mo'ring, s. [marne, Sax. morgen, Teut.] the first part of the day, from the appearance of light till twelve o'clock at noon. Used in composition for any thing belonging to, or used in, the morning.

MORNING-GOWN, s. a loose gown worn before one is formally dressed.

MORNING-STAR, s. the planets Venus and Jupiter, when they appear before sunrise.

MORNINGTON, GARRETT, EARL OF, an English composer of some name, was distinguished as a child for his love of music, and for his ready acquisition of skill in performing on various instruments. He was eventually professor of music at Dublin, and died in 1781, aged 60 years. His glee, Here in cool grove, is universally known and admired, and a chant that is called by his name is equally popular; these are fair specimens of his musical skill and taste.

MOROCCO, an empire of Africa, lying on the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea, and bounded by Algeria and the Great Desert of Sahara. Its greatest length is about 450 miles; and where widest, about 390. The Atlas range runs along the interior; and the sea-coast is for the most part very rocky. It has several considerable rivers, which rise in the Atlas mountains, and flow part into the Atlantic and part into the Mediterranean Sea. The soil, though sandy and dry on the western coast, is exceeding fertile, the land containing within itself salts sufficient to make it fruitful. The increase of corn is often as sixty to one. The fruits, such as vines, figs, melons, apricots, apples, pears, olives, and the prickly pear, or Barbary fig, the palm-tree, as well as the pastures, are excellent, but dates ripen with difficulty; and indeed the country, &c. is not properly cultivated, as two-thirds at least of it lie waste. Acorns which taste like chestnuts, salt, and wax, abound here. It has some few manufactures, but they are of no great value. The inhabitants are Mohammedans, of a tawny complexion, robust, and very skillful in managing a horse and wielding a lance. The inhabitants are chiefly of two races, the Arabs, who dwell in movable villages, and the Berbers, who are the ancient inhabitants, and dwell in cities and towns. There are a great number of Christian slaves, and some merchants, upon the coast, besides a multitude of Jews, who carry on almost all the trade, especially by land, with the negroes of the interior, by caravans, which cross the Great Desert by certain routes. There are also great numbers of negro slaves and freed-men. The emperor is absolute, his will being law. Mogadore, Mequinez, and Fez are places of considerable importance. Morocco, the capital, is seated in a beautiful plain, planted with palm-trees, formed by a chain of mountains on the N., having Mount Atlas, from which it is distant about 20 miles, on the S. and E. It has nothing to recommend it but its great extent, and the royal palace. It is enclosed by remarkably strong walls, which have 2 gates, and are flanked by square towers, and surrounded by a wide and deep ditch. The mosques are more numerous than magnificent. The streets are narrow, dirty, and irregular, and many of the houses uninhabited and falling to ruin. The Jews, who are pretty numerous here, have a separate town, walled in, and under the charge of an alcade, appointed by the emperor; they have a market of their own. The palace is a very extensive and solid building, with gates composed of Gothic arches, embellished with ornaments in the Arabian taste. Within the walls are various courts and gardens elegantly laid out by European gardeners. Pop. about 70,000. Lat. 31. 37. N. Long. 7. 37. W. Pop. of the empire, about 9,000,000. See FEZ.

MOROCCO, MARMO'QUIN, s. the skin of a goat, or some animal resembling it, dressed in sumac or gail, and coloured of any colour at pleasure, much used in book-binding. The name derived from the kingdom of Morocco; but Morocco skins are brought from the Levant, Barbary, Spain, Flanders, and France, in all different colours.

MOROSE, a. [morosus, Lat.] sour of temper; not easily pleased, and soon disgusted.

MOROSELY, ad. sourly; peevishly.

MOROSENESS, s. sourness; peevishness.

MOROSITY, s. sourness or peevishness.

MORPETH, Northumberland. It is seated on the Wansbeck. It is 287 miles from London. Markets, Saturday, for corn, cattle, and provisions; and Wednesday, for live cattle. Fairs on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday before Whit-Sunday; and the Wednesday before July 22nd. Pop. 4237.

MORPHEW, (môrfeus) s. [morpheus, Fr. morpheus, Ital.] a scurf on the face.

MORPHIA, s. [Morpheus, Lat.] in Organic Chemistry, and Materia Medica, the chief active principle of opium. The hydrochlorate is most commonly used in medicine. It is also called morphine.

MORRIS, MORRIS-DANCE, s. [for Moorish or Morisco dance,] a kind of dance in which the person jingles bells sewed to his clothes; used now only in rustic wakes and sports.

MORRISON, DR. ROBERT, the distinguished Chinese missionary. His parents were respectable persons, but in lowly circumstances; and he having commenced a course of study for the purpose of being prepared for the ministry, was induced to undertake the mission to China proposed by the London Society, in which he was afterwards joined by Dr. Milne. In the discharge of his work in China, he composed a grammar, and compiled a dictionary of the language, and translated, either by the aid of partial older versions, or for the first time, the whole Scriptures into that tongue. He was appointed by the East India Company their interpreter and correspondent, and he accompanied Lord Amherst on his embassy to Peking. He succeeded in establishing a very valuable institution, the Anglo-Chinese college at Malacca; and he died in 1834, aged 52 years. His library was bequeathed to University College, London, with the condition that a Chinese professorship should be founded; which has been done.

MORROW, (quérro) s. [morgen, Sax.] the day after the present day. See TO-MORROW.

MORSE, s. in Zoology, a large amphibious animal which inhabits the northern regions, and is very improperly called the sea-horse.

MORSEL, s. [morsellus, low Lat. from mordeo, Lat.] a small piece; a piece fit for the mouth; a mouthful; a meal; a small quantity.

MORSURE, s. [morura, from mordeo, Lat.] the act of biting.

MORT, s. [morie, Fr. from mors, Lat.] in Hunting, a tune sounded at the death of game.

MORTAL, a. [mortalis, from mors, Lat.] subject to death; destructive, or causing death; human, or belonging to man. Figuratively, as an intensive, excessive; violent.

MORTALITY, s. subjection to death; the state of a being subject to death. Figuratively, death; human nature.

MORTALLY, ad. irrevocably; so as to be doomed to death; extremely; excessively.

MORTAR, s. [mortier, Fr.] a strong vessel, in which things are pounded with a pestle. In Gunnery, a short piece of ordnance, out of which bombs or carcasses are thrown. In Architecture, [morter, Belg.] a preparation of lime and sand with water, used as a cement in building walls, &c.

MORTGAGE, (the t is usually not pronounced in this word and its derivatives, and the last g is soft.) s. [mort and gage, Fr.] a pledge or pawn of lands, &c. for money borrowed.

TO MORTGAGE, v. a. to pledge, pawn, or make over to a creditor, as a security.

MORTGAGEE, s. the person who receives lands, &c. as a pawn for money lent.

MORTGAGER, s. a person who mortgages or pawns his lands.

MORTIFEROUS, a. [mortifer, Fr. from mors and fero, Lat.] destructive.

MORTIFICATION, s. [Fr. from mors and facio, Lat.] in Surgery, the death and decomposition of any part of the body, occasioned in various ways, and often fatal; a gangrene; a destruction of active qualities. The act of keeping in a state of subjection, applied to the passions. The act of subduing the body by ascetic exercises, to abate the strength of appetite or passion. Any thing or occurrence that fills the mind with vexation or uneasiness.

TO MORTIFY, v. a. [mortifier, Fr.] to rob of the vital qualities. In Surgery, to destroy or lose the vitality of any part; to destroy active powers; to subdue inordinate passions; to keep the body low by labour and abstinence; to humble, deject, or vex; to be subdued; to die away.

MORTISE, (mórtiss) s. [mortaise, Fr.] in Carpentry, a hole cut in wood for another piece to be let into it, and form a joint.

TO MORTISE, (mórtiss) v. a. to cut or join with a mortise.

MORTMAIN, s. [morte and main, Fr.] in Law, such a state of possession as makes it unalienable, and therefore said to be in dead hand, because it cannot be restored to the donor, or to any common or temporal use; the word is generally applied to such lands as are given to any religious house, corporation, &c.

MORTRESS, s. a dish composed of meats of various kinds pounded together.

MORTUARY, s. [mortuaire, Fr. from mortuus, Lat.] in Law, a gift by a person at his death to his parish church, in lieu of personal tithes neglected to be paid in his life-time; in some places a beest, or other movable chattel, as are, by custom, due on the death of a person, and styled by his name.

MOSAIC, Musa'ic, s. [mosaïque, Fr.] an assemblage of little pieces of glass, marble, or precious stones of various colours, cemented on a ground of stucco, and imitating pictures in form, natural colours, and the shades used in paintings.

MOSAMBIQUE, the name of the coast of Africa opposite to the island of Madagascar, called so from a settlement of the Portuguese of that name. It is a place of great trade, and the whole region, excepting the parts covered with jungle, is very fertile, and yields all tropical productions abundantly. It is a very unhealthy place for Europeans. Lat. 14. 50. S. Long. 40. 50. E. The adjoining sea is called the Straits of Mosambique.

MOSCHATTELL, s. [moschattellina, Lat.] in Botany, a plant with green blossoms, and reddish berries, found in woods and shady places, flowering in April and May.

MOSCHUS, a Greek poet of the 3rd century B. C., of whose writings a few idylls alone remain. They are usually published together with those of Bion and Theocritus, the former of whom seems to have been a friend of Moschus.

MOSCOW, a government of European Russia, surrounded by the governments of Tula, Riasan, Vladimir, Smolensk, and Kaluga. It is generally level, and is well cultivated, yielding corn, fruits, &c. &c. It has also great numbers of manufactories, and a very considerable trade. Its capital is of the same name. Pop. about one million and a half.

MOSCOW, a large city of the Russian empire, capital of the government of Moscow, and formerly of the whole empire. It may be considered as a town built upon the Asiatic model; but gradually becoming more and more European, it exhibits in its present state a motley mixture of discordant architecture. It is distributed into five divisions, viz. 1. The Kremlin; 2. The Khitainogorod, or the Chinese Town; 3. The Bielgorod, or White Town; 4. Smeleinogorod; 5. The Sloboda, or suburbs, which form a vast exterior circle round all the other parts, and are invested by a low rampart and ditch. The streets, in general, are very long and broad. Some of them are paved; others, particularly in the suburbs, are formed with trunks of trees, or are boarded with planks like the floor of a room. Wretched hovels are blended with large palaces; cottages of one story stand next to the most stately mansions; many brick structures are covered with wooden tops; some of the wooden houses are painted; others have iron doors and roofs. Numerous churches appear in every quarter, built in a peculiar style of architecture; some with domes of copper, others of tin, gilt, or painted green, and many roofed with wood. The places of public worship in Moscow, including chapels, amount to above 1000. Some of their bells are of a stupendous size; one of them weighs above 300,000 pounds, and is the largest in the known world. Among the public institutions in Moscow, is the Foundling Hospital, which is very richly endowed. The gardens hereabout, yield the famous transparent apple, called by the Russians Nalivi, with variety of other fruits. Moscow is the centre of the inland commerce of Russia, particularly connecting the trade between Europe and Siberia. The navigation to this city is formed solely by the Moskva, which communicates, by that river, with the Volga. But as it is navigable in the spring only, upon the melting of the snows, the principal merchandise is conveyed upon sledges in winter: these are the only conveyances used either for pleasure or business. The Kremlin is a hill which was formerly surrounded by marshes on all sides. It contains a royal palace, and the Divitchy Monastery, or Ladies' Convent, and is surrounded by a strong wall. The suburbs contain, besides buildings of all kinds, corn-fields, gardens, and much open pasture. This city is 460 miles from St. Petersburg. Pop. about 400,000. Lat. 55. 42. N. Long. 37. 35. E.

MOSELE, a department of France, bordering on Luxemburg and Prussia, and bounded by the departments of Meuse, Meurthe, and Bas Rhin. It is 100 miles long and 40 broad. It consists of a wide valley, through which runs the Moselle, (whence it takes its name,) with the smaller streams that feed it; between the heights of Ardennes and the Vosges. It yields iron, coal, salt, building-stone, &c. &c. Corn, fruits, and wine are abundantly produced. It has also extensive and valuable forests, abounding with game; and some considerable manufactories. Metz is its capital. Pop. about 450,000.

MOSES, the great Hebrew legislator, was born during the cruel slavery of the Israelites in Egypt, and saved from the operation of the Pharaoh's edict for infanticide, by the loving art of his mother, and the providential intervention of the king's own daughter, who adopted the child, and trained it as her own. Being grown up to manhood, his spirit was deeply affected by the bondage of his race, and he began to feel within him the Divine call to attempt their deliverance. But imprudently yielding to resentment, in killing one of the Egyptian task-masters, he was forced to flee the country; and he remained as a herdman in the family of the priest of one of the nomadic tribes of Arabia for 40 years. He was then sent by the express command of God to free his people. After many delays, and the exercise of his miraculous power in the infliction of ten terrible plagues on Egypt, he was successful, and brought them out. At Mount Sinai in the desert he delivered the law to them, accompanied by circumstances calculated to impress the half-savage and de-based horde with the awful sanctions under which it was to be administered. But then, and on repeated occasions, Moses found the Israelites a rebellious and imbruted race; and, for 40 years, he with them remained leading a wandering life between Canaan and the Red Sea. He was forbidden to hope to enter the land himself, for a rash act of disobedience to God; and having appointed Joshua, one of the two men who remained out of all the multitudes that had left Egypt, his successor, he died on Mount Nebo, as he was there contemplating the promised land, to which all his affections and thoughts had so long been directed, and which he might never tread. This was in 1451 B.C., according to the received chronology, when Moses was 120 years old. There are few persons in the history of humanity, who have achieved so great a work in the world as the Jewish lawgiver, historian, poet, and prophet. And his greatness is enhanced, not lessened, by the knowledge that we have of the instruction and aid afforded him in it by God. His laws, which relate to every department of government, and which always presuppose the nation to be under a Theocracy, are not only suited to the low condition of spiritual and intellectual development, in which they were, when they were first given, but are also calculated to raise them continually, until a nobler and more spiritual rule should be introduced amongst men. It must, however, be observed, that the distinctively religious culture of the people was always left to the individual, unofficial efforts of men raised up for that special purpose by God, and called prophets. The law contemplated the nation, and was, as the theocratic code, thoroughly imbued with the spirit of religion; yet could never, except by the very mistake which the Jewish people constantly made, be regarded as the source of religious instruction, which must always be addressed to the individual, and can relate, essentially, only to his personal relation to God. Accordingly, we find in the law itself little that conduces to the cultivation of spiritual religion, except by a process invented by the Church of Rome, and repugnant alike to common honesty and common sense,—the interpretation of its precepts, &c. as if they were the symbols, or types, (as they are called,) of spiritual truths; which plan effectually destroys the whole historic value of the institution, and introduces unutterable confusion into the whole of the sacred Scriptures. But in the prophetic writings, the Psalms, and the other poetical books, we find the loftiest and most spiritual instruction, most simply and affectingly expressed; and agreeing in particulars with that which is the sum and essence of the New Testament. The use made by the writers of the Epistles of the New Testament of some prominent parts of the legal ritual of the Jews, in illustration of the teaching of Jesus Christ, will be found, if candidly and carefully examined, to be not at all opposed to the representation of the scope and nature of the law of Moses given above. The study of this law, as a national law, is not only indispensable for the correct understanding of the whole of the other Scriptures, but is also replete with light as to the true relation in which nations, and governments, and laws ought to stand in to God and his truth; though no one of the rules or precepts may be applicable to other ages and other people.

MOSHEIM, JOHN LAURENCE VON, the ecclesiastical historian and divine of the last century in Germany. He was theological professor at Helinstedt and Göttingen, successively; and was as greatly distinguished for his eloquence, as for the wide range of his scholarship. He died in 1755, aged 61 years. His great work is his Ecclesiastical History, with which all English students are familiar. He also wrote a fuller History of the Affairs of Christendom before Constantine, and translated Cudworth's great work. As a manual, but as nothing more, his work is about the best in Church History; but all readers should ascertain that they have Murdock's translation, as that by MacLaine is garbled and incorrect.

MOSQUE, (mosk) s. [moschil, Turk.] the name of Mohammedan places of religious worship and instruction.

MOSQUITO, (moskito) s. in Natural History, a small kind of gnät common in hot countries, which sucks the blood of men as well as of animals, and causes great annoyance by the inflammation of the wounds it makes.

MOSQUITO COAST, a district of Central America, lying on the Caribbean Sea, and now governed by an independent king. The trade of the country is monopolized by the British.

MOSS, s. [moos, Sax.] in Botany, the name of a large class of small plants, which produce seed, but have no flowers. Popularly, it includes many lichens, as well as the true mosses.

To MOSS, v. a. to cover with moss.

MOSSBERRIES, s. in Botany, the fruit of the craneberry whortle; called by some moor-berries.

MOSSINESS, s. the state of being covered or overgrown with moss.

MOSSY, a. overgrown with moss; covered with moss.

MOST, a. the superlative of some, many, much; consisting of the greatest number, quantity, or degree. It is used to form the superlative of adjectives which do not admit the use of the affix est.

MOST, ad. [maest, Sax.] in the greatest degree. Sometimes used as a substantive, and is either singular or plural. Followed by of, and used partitively, signifies the greater number, and is plural. Used with more, it signifies the greatest value, or advantage, and is singular. When preceded by at, it signifies the greatest degree or quantity.

MOSTIC, s. [mohlen, Teut.] a painter's stick, on which he leans his hand when he paints.

MOSTLY, a. for the greatest part; generally.

MOTE, s. [mot, Sax.] a small particle of matter; an atom; any thing very small. In Law-books, it signifies a court or convention, as a ward-mote, burgh-mote, swan-mote, &c.

MOTET, s. [Ital.] in Music, a composition very much resembling an anthem, and similarly used in cathedrals, &c.

MOTH, s. in Natural History, the name of the full-developed insects of one division of the order Lepidoptera. They have four wings, are much more thickly covered with scales or plumes than the butterflies, and are almost all nocturnal in their habits. Some of the genus hawk-moth are very beautiful insects, with transparent wings; they fly in the day-time, and have more the appearance of bees than moths. In some instances, as the twenty-plumed moth, the two pairs of wings are only obscurely traceable. Several species are very large, but none have such brilliant colours as many of the butterflies have. The silkworm is the caterpillar of a very plain-looking moth. See CATERPILLAR, CHRYSALIS, BUTTERFLY, &c.

MOTHER, (the o is pron, like u in this word and its derivatives and compounds; as mother, motherly.) s. [mothor, Sax.] a term of relation, denoting a woman who has borne a child. Figuratively, it denotes whatever gives origin to other things of the same kind: thus we say, a Mother-church, a Mother-tongue or language, &c. Also, [from moeder, Belg.] a thick substance concreting in liquors, or the scum.

MOTHER, a. native; that which a person receives at his birth.

MOTHER-IN-LAW, s. the mother of a husband or wife.

MOTHER OF PEARL, s. a kind of coarse pearl made of the shell of such fishes as generate pearls.

MOTHER OF THYME, s. in Botany, a plant with trailing branches, which are not so woody and hard as those of thyme, but in every other respect the same.

MOTHERHOOD, s. the office, condition, state, or quality of a mother.

MOTHERLESS, a. having no mother; orphan of a mother.

MOTHERLY, a. belonging to or becoming a mother.

MOTHERLY, ad. after the manner of a mother.

MOTHER-WATERS, MOTHERS, s. in Chemistry, the liquors which are left after the crystallization of any salts.

MOTHERWORT, s. in Botany, a plant with purplish blossoms, and stem leaves spear-shaped, found amongst rubbish. A plant called also mugwort.

MOTHERY, a. full of dregs; having white concretions, applied to liquors.

MOTHY, a. full of moths.

MOTION, (móshan) s. [motio, from moveo, Lat.] the act of changing place; the manner of moving the body; gait; change of posture, or action; thought or tendency of mind; a proposal; an impulse communicated. Laws of Motion, in Mechanics, are the following, and are partly the result of observation and experiment, and partly axiomatic truths:—1st, A body, not acted upon by any force from without, would continue for ever in motion, if it is a moving body; at rest, if it is not. 2nd, If a body in motion is acted on by an external force so as to experience any change in its motion, the amount of that change is proportioned to the amount of the force, and takes place in the direction of it. 3rd, The actions of two bodies on each other are equal, and in opposite directions. Proper Motion, in Astronomy, is a slow but gradual change of place observed in several different stars, which is referred now to the slow revolution of the whole stellar system, with which we are associated, round a fixed point near the Pleiades. In Botany, it is sometimes used to express a motion observed in parts of plants, or in the whole plant, by change of place, which resembles much some of the ordinary phenomena of the animal kingdom.

MOTIONLESS, (inertness), a. without motion.

MOTIVE, a. [motius, Lat.] causing motion; having the power to move or change place.

MOTIVE, a. [motif, Fr.] that which fixes the choice, or incites to action; a. mover.

MOTLEY, a. [supposed to be corrupted from medley,] of various colours.

MOTOR, s. [Lat.] a mover.

MOTORY, a. [motorius, Lat.] causing motion.

MOTTO, s. [Ital.] a sentence added to a device, or any writing.

To MOVE, (the o in this word and its derivatives and compounds is pronounced like oo; as move, moveables, moiver, moving, &c.) v. a. [moveo, Lat.] to put out of one place into another; to put in motion; to give an impulse to; to propose; to recommend; to persuade, or prevail on; to affect; to excite tenderness, or any passion; to make angry; to put into commotion, applied to the mind.—v. n. to go from one place to another; to walk; to forward; to march as an army; to change the posture of the body in ceremony.

MOVEABLE, a. capable of being moved or carried from one place to another. Changing, or not always happening on the same day of the month or year, applied to the feasts observed by the church.

MOVEABLES, s. it has no singular; [meubles, Fr.] goods or furniture; distinguished from lands, or other hereditary possessions.

MOVEABLENESS, s. the quality of being possible to be moved.

MOVEABLY, ad. so as it may be moved.

MOVELESS, a. unmoved; not to be put out of its place.

MOVEMENT, s. [movement, Fr.] the manner of moving; motion; any thing which moves; generally applied to the parts of a watch, or other machine.

MOVENT, part. [moventes, Lat.] in motion.

MOV'ENT, s. that which puts any thing into motion.

MOVER, s. the person or thing that gives motion; something in motion; a proposer.

MOVING, part. in motion. Figuratively, pathetic, or causing pity and compassion.

MOVINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to cause pity and compassion.

MOULD, (the ou in this word and its following derivatives is usually pronounced like o in cold; as mold, molder, moldy, &c.) s. [mogel, Swed.] a minute species of fungous plants, that grows on animal and vegetable substances, when exposed to cold and wet.—[mold, Sax.] earth in which any thing grows.—[moule, Fr.] matter of which any thing is made; the matrix in which any thing is cast or shaped. Cast, form, or disposition. Also, the suture of the skull, wherein the several bones meet.

To MOULD, v. n. to gather mould.—v. a. to cover with mould; to corrupt by mould.

To MOULD, v. a. to form; to shape; to model.

MOUL'DABLE, a. capable of being formed or shaped; liable to be mouldy.

MOULDER, s. one that shapes or fashions.

To MOULDER, v. n. [mölde, Sax.] to be turned to dust; to waste away.—v. a. to turn to dust, or crumble.

MOULDINESS, s. the state of being mouldy, on account of being in a damp place.

MOULDINGS, s. ornamental cavities cut in wood or stone. In Architecture, the jettings or projections beyond the level of a wall, &c., the assemblage of which forms cornices, door-cases, and other decorations.

MOUL'DY, a. covered with mould from standing in a moist place.

To MOULT, (mölt) v. n. [muyten, Belg.] to shed or change feathers, applied to birds.

MOULT'N, a province of Hindustan Proper, bounded on the N. by Lahore, on the E. by Delhi and Agimere, on the S. by Guzerat, and on the W. by Persia and Candahar. Its products are cotton, wine, sugar, opium, galls, brimstone, &c. Its capital, of the same name, is seated on a branch of the river Indus. Lat. 30. 12. N. Long. 71. 30. E.

MOULTON, SOUTH, Devonshire. It is seated on the river Moul, 179 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Both N. and S. Moulton are considerably engaged in the manufacture of serges, shallons, felts, &c. Pop. 4274. N. Moulton, 2121.

MOUND, s. [mundian, Sax.] a bank, rampart, or other fence of earth.—[monde, Fr.] in Heraldry, a globe with a cross upon it.

To MOUND, v. a. to fortify or defend with a rampart or bank of earth.

MOUNT, s. [mont, Fr.] a mountain, or small hill; an artificial hill in a garden; the painted paper or leather glued to the sticks of a fan.

To MOUNT, v. n. [monter, Fr.] to ascend or rise upwards; to tower, or be built to a great height; to get on horseback.—v. a. to raise in the air; to lift or force upwards; to ascend or climb; to place on horseback; to ornament. To mount guard, to do duty; to watch at any particular place. To mount cannon, to set a piece on its wooden frame.

MOUNTAIN, s. [montagne, Fr. from mons, Lat.] a part of the earth rising to a considerable height above its surface. For the general and particular features of mountains, see the names of the different chains, and of the countries through which they run.

MOUNTAIN, a. built on a mountain; growing or situated on mountains; belonging to a mountain.

MOUNTAINEER, s. one who lives on a mountain; a savage rustic or free-booter.

MOUNTAINOUS, a. hilly, or full of mountains. Figuratively, large; huge; in bulk as big as a mountain.

MOUNTAINOUSNESS, s. the quality of being full of mountains.

MOUNTAIN-PARSLEY, s. in Botany, a kind of spiguel; an umbelliferous plant.

MOUNTANT, a. [montant, Fr.] rising or swelling upwards.

MOUNTEBANK, s. [montare in banco, Ital.] a person who vends medicines in public places, and harangues the mob from a bench or stage; a buffoon. Figuratively, any vain pretender.

MOUNTEER, s. one that mounts.

MOUNTING, s. in Mechanics, is something that serves to raise or set off a work;—thus the frame and its dependencies make the mounting of a looking-glass; the hilt, the mounting of a sword; the stock or butt, the mounting of a gun.

MOUNT-SORREL, Leicestershire, so named from a high mount, or solid rock, adjoining to the town. The town is built of rough stones hewn out of this rock. It is seated on the river Stour, or Soare, 105 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 1536.

MOUNTY, s. [montée, Fr.] the ascent of a hawk.

To MOURN, (the diphthong ou in this word and its derivatives is pron. like o in hold, as mörner, mörning, &c.) v. n. [mur-nai, Sax.] to grieve or be sorrowful; to wear the dress of sorrow; to preserve an appearance of grief.—v. a. to grieve for or lament.

MOURNE, s. [morne, Fr.] the round end of a staff; the part of a lance to which the steel part is fixed, or where it is taken off.

MOURNEFUL, a. one that shows grief or sorrow; one that follows a funeral in black.

MOURNFUL, a. causing sorrow; feeling sorrow; having the appearance of sorrow; dismal, or expressive of grief.

MOURNFULLY, ad. in a sorrowful manner.

MOURNFULNESS, s. sorrow; the appearance of sorrow.

MOURNING, s. sorrow; grief; a dress worn by persons when they have lost a relation, &c. by death. Mourning, among the ancients, was expressed by very different signs, as by tearing their clothes, wearing sackcloth, laying aside crowns and the ensigns of honour, &c. The colours of the mourning dress are different in different countries. In Europe, the ordinary colour for mourning is black; in China, it is white; in Turkey, blue or violet; in Ethiopia, brown; in Egypt, it is yellow; and kings and cardinals mourn in purple.

MOURNINGLY, ad. in a sorrowful manner.

MOURZOOK, the capital of Fezzan, in Africa, situated on a small river, and supplied with water from a multitude of springs and wells. The vast ruins of ancient stone buildings, erected by its early Christian inhabitants, and the humble cottages of earth and sand that form the dwellings of its present Arab inhabitants, present a singularly grotesque contrast. It is surrounded by a high wall, which enables the government to collect, at its three gates, a tax on all goods (provisions excepted) that are brought for the supply of its people. A caravan sets out annually from Mesurata to this place; and hence, the Fezzaners themselves despatch, every year, a caravan to Cashna, and another to Bornou. Mourzook is 262 miles S. of Mesurata, 650 N. W. of Bornou, and 710 N. by E. of Cashna. Lat. 25. 53. N. Long. 14. 10. E.

MOUSE, s. [mus, Lat. mause, Germ.] in Natural History, the name of a family of small quadrupeds, the most common species of which is too well known as a domestic pest. The species that frequent fields and woods are very elegant creatures, and of very interesting habits. White mice are an albino variety of the common mouse, and are petted by persons of peculiar taste.

TO MOUSE, (mouse) v. n. to catch mice; to be sly, insidious, or upon the catch.

MOUSE-EAR, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which the English species are seven; the best known being the Forget-me-not.

MOUSEHOLE, s. a small hole.

MOUSER, s. (moizer) one that catches mice.

MOUSETAIL, s. in Botany, a plant with a simple stem, narrow, strap-shaped root leaves, and greenish blossoms; found in gravelly meadows.

MOUSETRAP, s. a trap for mice.

MOUTH, s. [mith, Sax.] in Anatomy, that part of the face which consists of the lips, gums, and the inside of the cheek, at which the food is received. An opening, or that part of a vessel by which it is filled or emptied; that part of a river by which it is entered from the sea. In Botany, the upper part of the tube of blossoms consisting of a single petal, as borraghe, hounds-tongue, deadnettle, &c. Figuratively, a speaker or orator.—To make mouths, is a distortion of the features; a very face made in contempt. Down in the mouth, implies dejected.

TO MOUTH, (th is pron. harder in this and the next word than in the substantive), v. a. to utter with a voice affectively big, applied to speech. To chew or grind in the mouth, applied to eating. To seize in or with the mouth; to form by the mouth.

MOUTHED, a. having a mouth; delivered with an affected bigness of voice. In Composition, foul-mouthed, implies using abusive language; mealy-mouthed, bashful.

MOUTHFUL, s. as much as the mouth can contain; any small quantity.

MOUTHLESS, a. without a mouth.

MOW, (ow in this and the next word is pron. as in now), s. a loft or chamber where hay or corn is laid up. Hay in mow, properly signifies hay laid in a house. Hay in rack, that which is heaped together in a field.

TO MOW, v. a. to heap together, or put in a mow.—v. n. to gather the harvest.

TO MOW, (mō) v. a. preter. mowed, participle passive mown; [mawen, Sax.] to cut with a scythe. Figuratively, to cut down with speed or violence.

MO'WER, (mōer) s. one who cuts with a scythe.

MOXA, s. an Indian moss, used in the cure of some local diseases, by burning it on the part aggrieved.

MOYLE, s. a mule.

MOZART, JOHN CHRYSOSTOM WOLFGANG AMADEUS, the great musical composer, who lived in the last century, was the son of a musician, and displayed in his earliest years most extraordinary musical talent. Before he was eight years old he had exhibited his skill in several European courts, including the British; had performed at sight some of the most difficult compositions of Handel, Bach, and other great masters, and published several sonatas of his own composition which excited the astonishment of the whole musical world. The remainder of his life was spent in journeying from one capital to another, and in an occasional residence of some time where there was a greater demand for the productions of his genius, chiefly at Vienna. He composed every kind of instrumental and vocal music, and his operas, particularly the Magic Flute, Don Giovanni, the Marriage of Figaro, are universally admired. In the service of the Roman Catholic Church the magnificent Masses he wrote are constantly employed. But the crowning work of this most remarkable man was his last. He had engaged to write a Requiem for a stranger. His own failing strength gave a character of reality to what else must have been imagined alone. He laboured at it incessantly, completed it, and died. It was first performed at his own funeral. He died in 1792, aged 36 years.

MUCH, a. [mucho, Span.] large, applied to quantity; long, applied to time; many, applied to number.

MUCH, ad. in a great degree; by far; to a certain degree. Often or long, applied to time.

MUCH, s. a great deal. Multitude, applied to number; abundance, applied to quantity. Something strange, uncommon, or deserving notice. To make much of, signifies to treat with great respect, fondness, or tenderness. Much at one, means of equal value; of equal influence.

MUCID, a. [muicus, Lat.] slimy; musty.

MUCIDNESS, s. sliminess or mustiness.

MUCILAGE, s. [Fr.] a slimy or viscous matter.

MUCILAGINOUS, s. [mucilaginosus, Fr.] slimy; viscous. Mucilaginous glands, are of two sorts; some are small, and, in a manner, military glands; the other sort are conglomerated, or many glandules collected and planted one upon another.

MUCILAGINOUSNESS, s. the quality of being slimy or viscous.

MUCITES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the mucous acid.

MUCK, s. [moor, Sax.] dung used for improving lands; any thing mean or base. As wet as muck, or to be muck-wet, implies being wet with water or rain. To run a muck, to attack all in the way.

TO MUCK, v. a. to dung; to manure with muck.

MUCKENDER, s. [mocadero, Span.] a handkerchief.

MUCKINESS, s. nastiness; filth.

MUCKSWEAT, (micksweat) s. a profuse sweat.

MUCKWORM, s. a worm that lives in dung; a miser; a curmudgeon.

MUCKY, a. nasty or filthy.

MUCOUS, a. [muicus, Lat.] slimy or viscous.

MUCOUSNESS, s. the quality of being slimy or viscous.

MUCRO, s. [Lat.] a point.

MUCRONATED, a. [muero, Lat.] pointed.

MUCUS, s. [Lat.] in Physiology, a mucilaginous fluid, secreted by the mucous glands; it is likewise used for any other slimy liquor or moisture.

MUD, s. [mucl, Brit.] the slime or moist earth at the bottom of water; the dust or dirt of roads made wet with rain or water.

TO MUD, v. a. to bury in slime or mud; to make the water foul by disturbing the mud; to dash or daub with mud.

MUD'DLY, ad. with foulness, or disturbed mud and sediment.

MUD'DINESS, s. foulness caused by mud; dregs or sediment.

TO MUD'DLE, v. a. to make muddy or foul; to make half drunk; to cloud or stupefy; to put things in disorder.

MUD'DY, a. soiled or daubed with mud; dark; cloudy, or drunk.

TO MUD'DY, v. a. to make muddy; to cloud; to disturb.

MUD'SUCKER, s. in Ornithology, a sea-fowl, with two toes joined; so called from its manner of life.

MUDWALL, s. a wall built without mortar, by throwing up mud, and suffering it to dry.

MUDWEEED, s. in Botany, a plant common in places liable to be flooded; called also bastard plantain.

TO MUE, v. a. [muere, Fr.] to moult or change the feathers.

MUEZZIN, the crier who summons the Mussulmans to their prayers, bells not being allowed in Islam.

MUFF, s. [muff, Swed.] a covering of hair or feathers, to keep the hands warm in winter; a glove without divisions for the fingers.

MUFFETEE, s. [diminutive of muff] a kind of short muff, worn upon the wrist to keep that part of the shirt clean.

MUFFIN, s. a kind of light cake, made of the best flour, mixed with milk, &c., partly baked, to be toasted and eaten hot with butter.

MUFFLE, s. a semi-cylindrical utensil, resembling the tilt of a boat, made of baked clay; its use is that of a cover to cupels in the assay furnace, to prevent the charcoal from falling upon the metal, or whatever is the subject of experiment. Also, a padded glove used in boxing.

TO MU'FFLE, v. a. [mufler, Fr.] to cover from the weather; to blindfold; to fasten up the mouth of a dog with leathern thongs, to prevent his biting; to hide, conceal, or involve.

TO MU'FFLE, v. n. [mufleren, Belg.] to speak inwardly; to speak inarticulately.

MUFFLER, s. a cover for the face; a cover made of thongs, put over a dog's mouth to prevent his biting.

MU'FTI, s. [Turk.] the name given the chief teachers of Mohammedan law, who are the principal exponents of the Kôran.

MUG, s. a vessel to drink in.

MUGGLETONIANS, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect which arose in England during the commotions of the 17th century. They claimed for Ludovic Muggleton, and John Reeve, his associate, the title and office of the two prophets mentioned in the Book of Revelation, and held very strange and absurd tenets. They were persecuted into notoriety, and have a few followers to the present day.

MUGGY, a. moist; dampish; mouldy; gloomy.

MUGIENT, part. [muigio, Lat.] bellowing.

MUGWORT, s. in Botany, a plant which grows naturally on banks and the sides of foot-paths, in most parts of England. The common wormwood.

MULATTO, [Span.] a name given in the Indies to those who are born of a Negro and an Indian.

MULBERRY-TREE, s. [morberig, Sax.] in Botany, a tree bearing a fruit, raspberry in form, and affording a delicious juice.

MULCT, s. [multa, Lat.] a fine, or sum of money, which a person is sentenced to pay.

TO MULCT, v. a. [multo, Lat.] to sentence a person to pay or forfeit a sum of money.

MULE, s. [mula, Lat.] a hybrid animal from the horse and the ass.

MULETEER, s. [muletier, Fr.] one that drives mules.

MULHAUSEN, a city of Prussia, seated in a fertile country, on the river Ustruth, with flourishing trade and manufactures. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 51. 13. N. Long. 10. 49. E. There is a town of the same name in the department Haut Rhin, France.

MULIEBRITY, s. [mulier, Lat.] womanhood; the condition of a woman.

MULIER, s. [Lat.] in Law, a person begotten before, but born after, marriage, and reckoned lawful or legitimate.

MULL, one of the Western Islands of Scotland, about 25 miles in length, and in some places of an equal breadth. There are many good natural harbours, but there is only one village, which is called Tobermory. The soil is unfavourable for corn, being, for the most part, rocky and barren. The mountains, however, abound with springs, and are covered with cattle, of which a great number are annually exported. These, with fish, and a considerable quantity of kelp, are the only articles of commerce. Pop. 10,754.

TO MULL, v. a. [mollio, Lat.] to soften or dispirit, as wine is when heated or sweetened; to warm any liquor, but especially wine, &c.

MULLAR, s. [mouleur, Fr.] a stone flat at the bottom, and roundish at the top, with which any powder is ground on a marble.

MULLEIN, s. in Botany, a somewhat fine-looking plant, of which there are four species native in England; the great, hoary, black, and yellow moth mullein.

MÜLLER, JOHN, a learned astronomer and mechanic, of the 15th century. He studied at Leipsic and Vienna, and was associated with Purbach in some of his great works. He lived at Buda, Nürnberg, and at Rome, which he visited twice, to translate the Almagest of Ptolemy, and to aid in the reformation of the calendar under Sixtus IV. He constructed several very curious automata, and wrote some works respecting his favourite study. He died in 1476, aged 40 years. He is usually called Regiomontanus, from the Latin name of Königsberg, where he was born.

MÜLLER, JOHN VOX, the celebrated Swiss historian, studied at Göttingen and Berlin; and was afterwards professor of history at Schaffhausen and Cassel; and held several responsible and honourable offices under the emperor of Germany. His great work is his Universal History, but he wrote others, one of which was a History of the Swiss Confederation. He died in 1809, aged 57 years.

MÜLLER, KARL OTTFRIED, the celebrated scholar of Germany, of the beginning of the present century. He studied at Breslau and Berlin, and early in life attracted great attention by the vast amount of his scholarship, and by his learned writings. He was appointed to a chair at Göttingen, and devoted himself to the subject of classical antiquities, with great success, and most remarkable effects throughout the world of letters. He travelled in Germany, France, and England, with this object in view; and carried out his original purpose in the books so well known amongst scholars, the Dorians, the Etruscans, &c. &c. He also wrote on Mythology, Ancient Art, Greek Literature, &c. He was engaged in investigating and exploring the ruined temples and cities of Greece at the time of his premature death, in 1841, aged 44 years.

MU'LLET, s. [mulet, Fr.] in Ichthyology, a sea-fish reckoned very fine eating. In Heraldry, a bearing in form of a flat-rowel spur, having five points.

MULINGAR, Westmeath, in Leinster, Ireland. It is the county town, holds a great wool mart, is a place of good trade, and is seated on the river Foyle, 39 miles W. of Dublin. Pop. 4508.

MULLION, s. in Architecture, the upright that divides the opening of a window into several parts. It is best exhibited in church windows.

MULSE, s. [mulseo, Lat.] a liquor made of wine, or water and honey boiled together.

MULT, [multus, Lat.] a syllable used in composition, signifying much, or many.

MULTANGULAR, a. [multus and angulus, Lat.] having many angles or corners.

MULTANGULARLY, ad. with many corners or angles.

MULTANGULARNESS, s. the quality of having many angles or corners.

MULTICAPSULAR, a. [multus and capsula, Lat.] having many capsules or cells.

MULTICA'VOUS, a. [multus and cavus, Lat.] full of holes.

MULTIFA'RIOUS, a. [multifarius, low Lat.] various; complicate; having great diversity in itself.

MULTIFA'RIOUSLY, ad. in a complicate manner.

MULTIFA'RIOUSNESS, s. multiplied diversity, or variety.

MULTIFID, MU'LTIFIDUS, a. [multifidus, from multus and fido, Lat.] having many partitions; divided into many branches.

MULTIFORM, a. [multus and forma, Lat.] having various shapes, forms, or appearances.

MULTILA'TERAL, a. [multus and latus, Lat.] having many sides.

MULTINO'MIAL, MU'LTINO'MINAL, a. [multus and nomen, Lat.] having many names.

MULTIPAROUS, a. [multus and pario, Lat.] bringing many at a birth.

MULTIPARTITE, a. [multus and partio, Lat.] divided into many parts.

MULTIPEDE, s. [multus and pes, Lat.] in Entomology, an insect with many feet; a sow, or woodlouse.

MULTIPLE, MU'LTIPLE, a. [Lat.] manifold. In Arithmetic, applied to a number which contains another several times; thus six is the multiple of two, containing it three times.

MULTIPLI'ABLE, a. [Fr.] capable of being multiplied.

MULTIPLI'ABLENESS, s. the quality of being capable of being multiplied.

MULTIPLICABLE, a. [multiplicio, Lat.] in Arithmetic, capable of being multiplied.

MULTIPLICAND, s. [multiplicandus, Lat.] the number given to be multiplied.

MULTIPLICATE, a. [multiplicatus, Lat.] multiplied; consisting of more than one.

MULTIPLICATION, s. [multiplicatio, Lat.] the act of increasing any number by adding more of the same kind. In Arithmetic, the process by which the result of the repeated addition of any number to itself is obtained. Multiplication Table, in Arithmetic, is a table, usually carried up to 12, (and which ought to be learnt as high as 20,) in which the products of all processes of multiplication below 12 times 12, or 20 times 20, are set down in order to be learnt by rote. Compound Multiplication is usually performed by the aid of the rules called, in common arithmetic, Practice.

MULTIPLICATOR, s. [Lat.] the number given to multiply another by.

MULTIPLICIOUS, a. [multiplex, Lat.] manifold.

MULTIPLICITY, s. [multiplicitas, Fr.] more than one of the same kind; state of being many.

MULTIPLY, v. a. [multiplico, Lat.] to increase a number by the addition of more of the same kind; to work a sum in multiplication.—v. n. to propagate or increase in number.

MULTIPOTENT, a. [multus and potens, Lat.] having a manifold power, or power to perform many different things.

MULTIPRESENCE, s. [multus and presentia, Lat.] the power or act of being in several places at one and the same time.

MULTISCIOUS, a. [multus and scio, Lat.] having a variety of knowledge.

MULTISILIQUEOUS, a. [multus and siliqua, Lat.] having many pods. In Botany, applied to such plants as have, after each flower, many distinct pods or seed-vessels.

MULTISONOUS, a. [multus and sonus, Lat.] having many sounds.

MULTITUDE, s. [multitudo, from multus, Lat.] a great number; a crowd or throng of several persons assembled together; the vulgar.

MULTITUDINOUS, a. having the appearance of a great number or multitude; manifold.

MULTIVAGANT, MULTIVAGOUS, a. [multus and vagor, Lat.] that wanders or strays much abroad.

MULTIVIOUS, a. [multus and via, Lat.] having many ways.

MULTOCULAR, a. [multus and oculus, Lat.] having many eyes.

MUM, interj. [inarticulate sound, written so,] silence! hush! It is not elegant.

MUM, s. [munne, Teut.] a strong pleasant liquor, brewed from wheat, oats, and ground beans.

TO MUMBLE, v. n. [monipelen, Belg.] to speak inwardly; to mutter; to chew in an awkward manner, for want of teeth; to bite softly; to eat with the lips closed.—v. a. to mutter with a low, indistinct voice.

MUMBLER, s. one that chews awkwardly for want of teeth; one that grumbles or mutters.

MUMBLINGLY, ad. in an inarticulate or muttering manner.

TO MUMM, v. a. [munne, Dan.] to mask; to frolic or play tricks in masquerade.

MUMMER, s. a masker; one who performs tricks in masquerade.

MUMMERY, s. [monerie, Fr.] masquerade; frolic at a masquerade; foolery; mimicry.

MUMMY, s. [mumie, Fr.] a dead body embalmed and preserved after the Egyptian manner. In Medicine, the flesh of a body that has been embalmed, or the liquor running from embalmed bodies when newly prepared. Among gardeners, a sort of wax used in the planting and grafting of trees. To beat to a mummy, is to beat so as the flesh shall appear much bruised.

TO MUMP, v. a. [monipelen, Belg.] to nibble, bite quick, or to chew with a continued motion; to talk low and quick.

MUMPS, s. [monipelen, Belg.] sullenness; silent anger, or discontent. In Medicine, the suppurancy, or inflammation of the parotid gland in the fauces.

TO MUNCH, v. a. [manger, Fr.] to chew by great mouthfuls.—v. n. to chew ravenously.

MUNCHER, s. one that eats greedily.

MUND, [mundi, Sax.] in proper names, signifies peace; thus, Edmund, now written Edmond, signifies happy peace; from ead, Sax. happy, and mund, Sax. peace.

MUNDANE, a. [mundus, Lat.] belonging to the world.

MUNDATORY, a. [mundus, Lat.] having the power to cleanse.

MUNDIFICATION, s. [mundus and facio, Lat.] the act of cleansing any body from dross.

MUNDIFICATIVE, a. having the power to cleanse.

TO MUNDIFY, v. a. to cleanse, purify, or make clean.

MUNDIVAGANT, a. [mundus and vagor, Lat.] wandering through the world.

TO MUNERATE, v. a. [munus, Lat.] to reward.

MUNERATION, s. a reward.

MUNGREL, a. See MONGREL.

MUNICH, (Münich), capital of the kingdom of Bavaria, in Germany. It is a very handsome city, and the houses are high, and the streets large and spacious, with canals in many of them.

The palace of the late electors of Bavaria is a stupendous structure, magnificently adorned. The cabinet of curiosities, in which are many marble statues, busts, and other antiques, mostly brought from Italy; the museum, the library, and the ducal gardens, attract the attention of travellers. The cathedral contains 25 chapels and 30 altars; but the two steeples, and the tomb of one of the emperors, of black marble, adorned with statues of bronze, are the most remarkable things belonging to it. There are many other fine buildings, both ecclesiastical and civil, in this city, and the streets are straight and broad. The marketplace is very beautiful; and here are manufactures of silk, velvet, woollen cloth, and tapestry. It is seated on the river Isar. Pop. about 100,000. Lat. 48. 9. N. Long. 11. 36. E.

MUNICIPAL, a. [munus and capio, Lat.] in the Roman Civil Law, is an epithet which signifies invested with the rights and privileges of Roman citizens. Thus the municipal cities were those whose inhabitants were capable of enjoying civil offices in the city of Rome. Among us, it is applied to the laws that obtain in any city or province. And those are called municipal officers, who are elected to defend the interests of cities, to maintain their rights and privileges, and to preserve order and harmony among the citizens.

MUNIFICENCE, s. [munus and facio, Lat.] the act of giving money and presents, or doing acts of liberality.

MUNIFICENT, a. liberal; generous.

MUNIFICENTLY, ad. liberally.

MUNIMENT, s. [munio, Lat.] a fortification or strong hold, support, or defence. In Law, the title-deeds of an estate.

TO MUNTTE, v. a. [munio, Lat.] to fortify; to strengthen; to defend.

MUNITION, s. a fortification, or strong hold; ammunition, or stores for carrying on a war.

MUNSTER, the capital city of Westphalia, in Prussia. The cathedral is a stately fabric, and the houses, in general, are of freestone, and well-built. It has some noble institutions for educational, scientific, and charitable purposes. It is seated on the river Aa. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 51. 58. N. Long. 7. 38. E.

MUNSTER, one of the four provinces of Ireland; bounded by Leinster, Connaught, and the ocean. It is about 135 miles in length and 120 in breadth. The chief rivers are the Suir, the Audliffe, the Lee, the Bande, the Leane, and the Cashon. There are a great many bays and harbours, and many rich towns, and the air is mild and temperate. Some places are mountainous, but the valleys are embellished with corn-fields. The most general commodities are corn, cattle, wood, wool, and fish. It contains the counties of Clare, Tipperary, Waterford, Cork, Limerick, and Kerry. Pop. 2,396,161.

MURAGE, s. [murus, Lat.] money paid for keeping walls in repair.

MURAL, a. belonging to a wall. Mural crown, was an honorary reward given by the ancient Romans to the soldiers who first scaled the walls of an enemy's city.

MURAT, JOACHIM, the bold dragoon, who by his sabre won his way under Napoleon to a field-marshalship first, and to the throne of the kingdom of Naples subsequently. He was in the army before the Revolution, but not at its outbreak. He joined the national guards first; and rose gradually, but rapidly, so as to be Buonaparte's aide, in his first Italian campaign. He was afterwards always by Napoleon's side; and enjoyed such confidence that he married his sister. He was occasionally employed as an ambassador; but in a cavalry charge he was most at home, and it was by such gallantry that he was proud to be distinguished. After he was made king of Naples, he joined in Napoleon's campaigns, to the defeat of Leipzig, when he left him. The rapid overthrow of the great general in 1815, however, alone prevented him from co-operating with him in gaining all Italy. This lost him his throne. He fled, but was taken, condemned by a court-martial, and shot, in 1815, aged 44 years. He reigned for seven years; but he neither gained nor deserved any fame as a king; he never ceased to be the mere soldier, even on the throne.

MURATON, LUDOVICO ANTONIO, the great Italian historian, of the beginning of the last century. He was, first, keeper of the Ambrosian library at Milan; and afterwards librarian to the Duke of Modena. He wrote on the history of Italy during the middle ages; and edited the contemporary historians and annalists of those times. He also wrote a larger history, and more entirely his own work, extending from the Christian era to his own day; and several other works on Antiquities, &c. &c. A more laborious compiler and editor has rarely accumulated materials for the true writer of history. He died in 1750, aged 78 years.

MURCIA, a province of Spain, on the coast of the Mediterranean, and bounded by the provinces of Valencia, New Castile, Andalusia, and Granada. It is about 90 miles in length, and 60 in breadth. It is crossed by several ranges of mountains, which attain the height of 5000 and 6000 feet at some points. Its principal river is Segura. The soil is dry, because it seldom rains here, and therefore produces little corn or wine; but there is plenty of oranges, citrons, lemons, olives, almonds, mulberries, rice, pulse, and sugar. It has also a great deal of silk. The air is very healthy, and the climate generally agreeable. Its capital is of the same name. It has a superb cathedral, and several churches and public buildings of fine appearance. It is seated in a plain, which abounds in fine gardens about the city, in which are the best fruits in Spain. It is seated on the river Segura, 212 miles from Madrid. Lat. 38. 3. N. Long. 1. 14. W. Pop. about 130,000. Pop. of the province, about 450,000.

MURDER, v. a. [murthor, or morthor, Sax.] In Law, the act of wilfully and feloniously killing a person upon malice or forethought.

To MURDER, v. a. to kill a man wilfully, feloniously, and of malice or forethought; to destroy or put an end to.

MURDER, interj. an outcry when life is in danger.

MURDERER, s. one who murders.

MURDERESS, s. a woman who commits murder.

MURDEROUS, a. guilty of murder; cruel; bloody; addicted to shedding blood.

To MURE, v. a. [murus, Lat.] to build a wall; to enclose within or by walls.

MURETUS, or MARC ANTOINE FRANÇOIS MURÉT, a very learned French professor of the 16th century. In Paris and several other places of France he gained great applause for his lectures on the classics and on law and philosophy. Migrating to Italy, at Venice, Ferrara, and Rome he gained yet more admiration. He was ill-advised enough (as regards his posthumous renown) to write verses; which are charitably forgotten. And his works in explanation of various classic authors, are yet of great use to the scholar. He died in 1585, aged 59 years.

MURIATIC, a. [muria, Lat.] in Chemistry, the old name for hydrochloric acid.

MURILLO, BARTHOLOMEO ESTEVEN, the great painter of Spain, who lived in the 17th century. He studied under Castillo and Velasquez, and carried on his art chiefly at Seville. His greatest works are altar-pieces to various churches; but some of his paintings are well known in England. The gracefulness, fidelity, and absence of artificiality gives the great charm to his pictures, added to the deep, rich colouring. He fell from a scaffold whilst engaged on one of his altar-pieces, and died in 1685, aged 67 years.

MURKY, a. darkish; obscure; cloudy.

MURMUR, s. [Lat.] a low rough noise; a complaint not openly expressed.

To MURMUR, v. a. to make a low rough sound; to grumble, or utter discontent.

MURMURER, s. one who repines, grumbles, or expresses discontent by muttering, or by some indirect manner.

MURRAIN, s. the plague in cattle.

MURRAY, DR. ALEXANDER, a self-taught linguist of Scotland, was originally a shepherd-boy, and acquired the knowledge of several languages by his own exertions solely, so well as to attract notice, and gain a scholarship at Edinburgh, where he prosecuted his studies with rapid success. He entered the Scottish kirk, and obtained, eventually, the professorship of the Oriental languages at Edinburgh; but he died in the following year, 1813, aged 38 years. A posthumous work, called the History of the European Languages, sustains his living reputation, and gives encouragement to those of lowly station, who may aspire to the acquisition of knowledge that seems almost wholly out of their reach.

MURRAY, DR. LINDLEY, the writer of certain school-books, held in liveliest remembrance by all who have been dragged through the thorny hedges, placed by the wisdom of our ancestors athwart the road to learning. He was born in Pennsylvania, United States, and was of Quaker origin; and he settled as a barrister in New Jersey, but subsequently followed the less ambitious calling of merchant, and retired to a country-house near New York.

Thence he wandered in search of health to the Old Country, and fixed his abode near York, where he alleviated the tedium of his painful disease by composing his Grammars, and Exercises, and Spelling-books, and Readers, and Keys, by which he gained more than commerce had brought to him. Perhaps the circumstances under which they were composed may explain the effect they have had on the English language and on English youth; but this certainly shows the woful neglect, or ignorance, or contempt of their mother-tongue by our progenitors, that such grammars should have become so popular, that even now the least possible impression is made on their reign in the schools. His little work illustrating the Power of Religion on the Mind, is interesting to young readers, if not very instructive, and the same may be said of his multitudinous reading books. There are, however, so many better and more even with the advance of letters, that these must needs be forgotten. He died in 1826, aged 81 years.

MURRAY, JAMES STUART, EARL OF, the Good Regent of Scotland during the troubled times preceding the Union of the two Crowns. He was an illegitimate son of James V.; and having held distinguished offices in the kingdom, joined the side of Knox and the Reformers. This brought him to the head of affairs, on that question, and to him may be ascribed the rapid progress of public opinion respecting it. On the return of Mary Queen of Scots, he was advanced to be her chief counsellor; in which office he conducted himself so as to show her all kindness and respect, and yet to advance the Reformation, though the fiery zeal of the Reformers made them misjudge his cool statesmanship. He was not wholly clear from suspicion of implication in Darnley's murder, and the events which followed it, though he was during some of this time absent from Scotland. He was appointed regent during Mary's imprisonment, and defeated her forces at Langside, after her escape. He, too, bore witness against her before Elizabeth; and was finally assassinated by Bothwellhaugh in 1570, aged about 38 years.

MURRAYSHIRE. See ELGIN.

MUSA, or MU'CA, IBN NOSSEIR, the famous Mussulman conqueror of N. Africa and Spain. His whole career was one of conquest, and he embodied the very spirit of martial fanaticism, that made the followers of the prophet every where victorious. His name is painfully connected with some of the finest old Spanish songs and poems. And his end was most tragic. The caliph feared him, and summoned him, from his schemes of subjugating all W. Europe, to Damascus. There he was imprisoned, and afterwards in dishonoured, though not dishonourable, degradation, he died, in 717, aged about 75 years.

MUSE/US, a poet of Greece, whose poem on the Amours of Hero and Leander is well known to scholars. There was another poet of this name, who wrote respecting the sphere; but the dates of both are very uncertain.

MUSE/US, JOHN CHARLES AUGUSTUS, a popular writer of Germany, in the last century. He was a professor at Weimar; and his tales are familiar to English readers, and as popular here as they were at home. He wrote other works; and died in 1787, aged 52 years.

MUSCAD, or ME/SCADINE, s. [Fr.] in Horticulture, &c., a kind of sweet grape, sweet wine, and sweet pear.

MUSCLE, (múscle) s. [musculus, Lat.] in Anatomy, the fleshy, fibrous parts of the animal frame, by means of which voluntary motion is communicated to the limbs, &c. In Natural History, a common, edible, bivalve shell-fish.

MUSCOSPITY, s. [musculus, Lat.] mossiness.

MUSCULAR, a. [musculus, Lat.] belonging to the muscles; performed by the muscles.

MUSCULARITY, s. the quality which shows that a thing is of the nature of a muscle.

MUSCULOUS, a. full of muscles; having large and swelling muscles; brawny; belonging to, or partaking of the nature of, a muscle.

MUSE, (múze) s. [Musa, Lat.] deep thought or study; a close and intense application of the mind to any object. In Heathen Mythology, the Muses were the deities who presided over the arts and sciences. Some reckon no more than three of them, viz. Mnemo, Acde, and Melete, i. e. memory, singing, and meditation; but Homer and Hesiod reckon nine; Clio, who presided over history; Euterpe, over music generally; Thalia, over comedy; Melpomene, over tragedy; Terpsichore, over dancing and song; Erato, over the poetry of the passions; Polyhymnia, over sacred poetry and song; Urania, over astronomy; and Calliope, over epic poetry. They resided on Parnassus in Greece; and were the daughters of Zeus, or Jupiter, and Antiope.

To MUSE, (múze) v. n. to apply the mind with intemperance to any subject; to study or revolve in the mind; to be absent of mind; to wonder.

MUSEFUL, (múze-fúl) a. full of thought.

MUSER, (múzer) s. a plodding person; or one that thinks intensely.

MUSETTE, (músette) s. [Ital.] a short air or song.

MUSEUM, (múzeum) s. a name which originally signified a part of the palace of Alexandria, which took up at least one-fourth of that city. This quarter was called the Museum, from its being set apart for the study of the sciences. Hence the word Museum is now applied to any place set apart as a repository for things that have an immediate relation to the arts and sciences. See BRITISH MUSEUM.

MUSHROOM, (múshcheron, Fr.) in Botany, the eatable fungus, that grows in pastures, and is cultivated in gardens; whence catsup is made. Figuratively, an upstart; a person that rises to grandeur from a mean and poor birth.

MUSIC, (múzik) s. [Musa, Lat.] one of the fine arts, in which by means of melodious sounds, and harmonies of sound, in measured cadence, expression is given to the passions, feelings, or sentiments of the human mind. It is the most entirely human of the fine arts; and charms not only by its accordance with the ear, but by its power of recalling associations that are least easily recalled, and of giving depth and intensity to the most usually recurring associations. In genuine music, too, there is always something more than and beyond the immediate expression implied, whence arises the chief part of its power. When composed for instruments alone, it is called instrumental music; and when written to aid the expression of poetical or religious sentiments, in songs, and hymns, &c., it is called vocal music. The theory of music is a branch of the higher mathematics.

MUSICAL, (múzikál) a. [Fr.] harmonious; belonging to music.

MUSICALLY, (múzikálly) ad. harmoniously; with sweet sound.

MUSICALNESS, (múzikálnesse) s. the quality of sounding sweetly, harmoniously, or melodiously.

MUSICIAN, (múzikshon) s. [musicien, Fr.] one skilled in harmony, or who plays on musical instruments.

MUSK, s. [mus, Fr.] in Commerce, &c., a dry, light, and friable substance, of a dark, blackish colour, tinged with purple; with a very powerful perfume, agreeable only when in a very small quantity, or moderated by the mixture of some other; found in a kind of bag, which grows under the bellies of a tribe of animals which are called musk animals or musks. They bear some resemblance to the antelopes, but have no horns. They are gentle, but extremely timid. Some of them are as large as a small deer, and others do not exceed the size of a rabbit.

MUSKCAT, s. in Natural History, the animal from which musk is got.

MUSKET, s. [mousquet, Fr.] the common fire-arm used in war by the infantry.—[moschetto, Ital.] in Falcoy, a small hawk.

MUSKETEEER, s. a soldier who carries a musket.

MUSKETOON, s. [mousqueton, Fr.] a fire-arm, shorter and thicker than a musket; a blunderbuss.

MUSKINESS, s. the quality or scent of musk.

MUSKMELOON, s. in Horticulture, a fragrant melon.

MUSK-PLANT, s. in Botany, a species of minulus, very commonly cultivated in pots and in gardens now, which has a very strong and agreeable odour resembling musk.

MUSK-RAT, s. in Natural History, an animal of N. America, called also the musquash, whose skin is used in furrery, and which builds a nest like the beaver. Its flesh smells strongly of musk.

MUSKY, a. fragrant; sweet-scented.

MUSLIN, (múslin) s. [mousseline, Fr.] a fine cloth made of cotton, and originally imported from India, &c., but now made chiefly in our own manufactories.

MUSLIN, (múslin) a. made of muslin.

MUSROLO, s. [musserole, Fr.] the nose-band of a horse's bridle.

MUSSELBURGH, Edinburghshire, Scotland. It stands on the Esk, over which it has 4 bridges, not far from the Frith of Forth, and it has a small but good harbour. It is chiefly a fishing place, and is very famous for that. It is 5 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 6331.

MUSSULMAN, s. plur. Mussulmans, [Arab.] a word used by Mohammedans to signify a true believer.

MUST, verb imperf. [musen, Belg.] signifies, be obliged. It is of all persons and tenses, used of persons and things, and placed before a verb.

MUST, s. [mustum, Lat.] new wine; new wort.

To MUST, v. a. [mus, Brit.] to give an ill scent or stink to a thing, generally applied to casks. To make mouldy.—v. n. to contract an ill scent, applied to vessels that are not in use; to grow mouldy.

MUSTA/CHIOS, s. [mustaches, Fr.] whiskers or hair growing on the upper lip.

MUSTARD, s. [mustard, Brit.] in Botany, a plant producing a small and warm seed. Sauce made of the flour of mustard-seed mixed with water, &c.

To MUSTER, v. a. [munsteren, Belg.] to review an army; to collect or bring together.—v. n. to assemble, in order to form an army.

MUSTER, s. a review of an army; a register of forces mustered; a collection. To pass muster, signifies to be allowed. This word is used in composition.

MUSTERBOOK, s. a book in which the names of the soldiers are registered.

MUSTERMASTER, s. one who superintends the muster, to prevent frauds.

MUSTERROLL, s. a register of forces.

MUSTILY, ad. with an ill scent.

MUSTINESS, s. damp foulness; a bad scent.

MUSTY, a. mouldy; spoiled with dampness; ill scented; stale; spoiled with age. Figuratively, dull; heavy; wanting activity or experience.

MUTABILITY, MUTABLENESS, s. [muta, Lat.] the quality of not continuing long in the same state; inconstancy or fickleness.

MUTABLE, a. changeable; inconstant; fickle, or unsettled.

MUTATION, s. the act of changing or altering.

MUTCHKIN, s. a liquid measure used in Scotland, containing four gills, and is the fourth part of a Scotch pint.

MUTE, a. [mutus, Lat.] silent; dumb; unable to say any thing. SYNON. By mute, is understood incapability of speech; by silent, a voluntary forbearance.

MUTE, s. one that cannot speak. In Grammar, the name of a class of consonants, which by themselves have no sound, being only the representatives of modifications of the vowel sounds, by the lips, teeth, &c. They are divided into different kinds, according to the organs.

	SUDDEN.	GRADUAL.	ASPIRATED.
LABIAL.	p.	b.	ph, f, v.
DENTAL.	t.	d.	th.
GUTTURAL.	c, k, qu.	g.	ch, gh.

MUTELY, ad. in a silent manner; without speech.

To MUTILATE, v. a. [mutilus, Lat.] to deprive of some essential part or limb.

MUTILATION, s. [Fr.] the loss of any essential part or limb.

MUTINEER, s. in the army or navy, a person who causes or joins in sedition.

MUTINOUS, a. [mutiné, Fr.] in the army, seditious; turbulent; resisting lawful authority.

MUTINOUSLY, ad. in a seditious manner.

MUTINOUSNESS, s. the quality of causing sedition, or disobeying lawful authority.

To MUTINY, v. n. [mutiner, Fr.] in the army, to rise against or resist persons in authority; to move sedition.

MUTINY, s. in the army or navy, the act of resisting lawful authority; sedition.

To MUTTER, v. n. [mutio, Lat.] to grumble; to murmur.—v. a. to utter discontent in a low tone of voice.

MUTTER, s. a murmur; or the act of expressing discontent in a low voice.

MUTTERER, s. one that mutters.

MUTTERINGLY, ad. expressing discontent in mutters.

MUTTON, s. [mouton, Fr.] the flesh of sheep. Figuratively, a sheep.

MUTUAL, a. [mutuus, Lat.] reciprocal; acting so as to perform the same action by turns.

MUTUALLY, ad. in return; reciprocally.

MUTUALITY, s. reciprocation; return.

MUZZLE, s. [museau, Fr.] the mouth of any thing; a fastening of thongs, to hinder a dog or other animal from biting.

To MUZZLE, v. n. to bring the mouth near; to mouth.—v. a. to bind the mouth; to restrain from hurt.

MY, pron. possessive, belonging to me. Mine is used instead of my in the predicate of a sentence, and the answer to a question.

MYCENE, in Ancient Greece, a city of Argolis, in the Peloponnese, originally the chief city of the state, but afterwards subjugated. Its ruins are very remarkable.

MYOGRAPHY, (mylography) s. [mus and grapho, Gr.] a description of the muscles.

MYOLOGY, s. the description and doctrine of the muscles.

MYOPS, s. [mus and ops, Gr.] a person who is short-sighted.

MYOPY, s. shortness of sight.

MYRIAD, s. [myrias, Gr.] the number of ten thousand. Figuratively, a great number.

MYRMELON, s. [myrmex and leon, Gr.] in Entomology, a winged fly allied to the dragon-flies, whose larva is known as the ant-lion. It makes a small conical pit in loose sand, and buries itself at the bottom, with its jaws extended, to seize on any insect that unwarily should fall in.

MYRMIDONS, s. [Gr.] armed men, ready to obey any command of their superior, or hirer.

MYROPOLIST, s. [myron and poleo, Gr.] one who sells ointments.

MYRRH, (mīr) s. [myrrha, Lat.] in Materia Medica, &c., a gum resin, which exudes from one or two trees growing in the East. It is of a reddish brown hue, with a disagreeable scent and taste. The tincture is used as a tonic stimulant, and has highly valuable properties.

MYRTIFORM, a. [myrtus and forma, Lat.] having the shape of a myrtle.

MYRTLE, s. [myrtus, Lat. myrte, Fr.] in Botany, a low fragrant shrub, with small leaves.

MYSELF, a reciprocal pronoun, [minselfe, Sax.] used by a person to show that a thing relates to him only, exclusive of any other.

MYRIA, in Ancient Geography, the country occupying the N. W. angle of Asia Minor. It had a good soil, and the people cultivated it diligently. It was the Troad. Troy and Pergamus were its most distinguished cities.

MYSOLE, a province of Hindustan, Asia. It includes the districts of Seringapatam, Nagara, and Chatracul. Its extent is near 250 miles, and its breadth about 150. The country in general is dry, rugged, mountainous, and barren, inasmuch that sustenance for men and animals cannot be raised upon it, but by the most persevering industry. It is subject to England. Pop. about 2,000,000.

MYSTAGOGUE, (mystagog) s. [mustes and ago, Gr.] one who interprets divine mysteries.

MYSTERIARCH, (mysteriark) s. [mysterion and arche, Gr.] one who presides over mysteries.

MYSTERIOUS, a. [mysterius, Fr.] not to be comprehended or discovered by the human understanding; artfully perplexed.

MYSTERIOUSLY, ad. in a manner not to be discovered by reason, or to be comprehended by the understanding; in an obscure or perplexed manner.

MYSTERIOUSNESS, s. that quality which renders any truth or doctrine above the discovery of reason, or comprehension of the understanding.

To MYSTERIZE, v. a. to explain as enigmas.

MYSTERY, s. [mysterion, from mues, Gr.] in its primary sense, originally used for some sacred rite or doctrine communicated only to a few chosen persons by the ancient priests. In the New Testament, a truth formerly concealed, but then made plain and manifest. Any thing artfully made difficult.—[metier, Fr.] a trade or calling: in the last sense it should be written mystery.

MYSTERY, s. in the middle ages, the name of some rude dramatic representations got up by the clergy, in which the Creation, Fall of Man, Last Judgment, &c. &c., were played. They were revoltingly coarse, according to our notions, but they answered the purpose of the inventors and promoters, in keeping down more improving dramatic entertainments, and in fixing certain opinions fast in the vulgar mind; all of which led to the supremacy of the priests.

MYSTICS, and MYSTICISM, s. the name given to the Platonic interpretation and interpreters of the gospel, in derision, by those who adopted the logic of Aristotle as their instrument of inquiry. The well-known Imitation of Christ, ascribed to Thomas à Kempis, is one of the best means for becoming acquainted with the Mystics of the middle ages.

MYSTIC, MYSTICAL, a. [mysticus, Lat.] obscure, emblematical, or including second or secret meaning under the form of a picture.

MYSTICALLY, ad. in a manner which conveys some secret meaning.

MYSTICALNESS, s. the state of conveying some secret meaning.

MYTH, s. [mythos, Gr.] in uncertain History, a fact which has been overlaid by the additions and ornaments of later ages; or an invented fact to account for some things the origin of which was not clear. It has been used lately, with great absurdity, by some writers, to characterize parts of the sacred narratives in the Bible.

MYTHOLOGICAL, a. [mythos and logos, Gr.] relating to the application or explanation of mythology.

MYTHOLOGICALLY, ad. in a manner suitable to mythology.

MYTHOLOGIST, s. one who explains mythology.

To MYTHOLOGIZE, v. n. to relate or explain mythology.

MYTHOLOGY, s. the name for the sacred legends and superstitions of heathen nations, which has lately been extended to embrace all popular traditions relating to the ante-historic period. Respecting heathen mythology, various and apparently conflicting theories have been advanced to account for its origin; but it is exceedingly likely that history, and tradition, and instinct, and poetry, have all had a share in the mythologies of all nations.

N

N IS the thirteenth letter in the English alphabet, having an invariable sound; except that after m it is lost, as in condemn. It is one of the consonants called liquids, or semivowels, because they have a distinct sound without a vowel. It is uttered by means of the teeth, and so is called a dental liquid. In the beginning of words or syllables, no consonant is used immediately after it; nor any before it, except g, k, and s, as in gnave, know, snail, &c. In Composition, before an l, b, p, and m, the n is frequently changed into an m, and before an l and r into an l and r, according to the custom of the Romans; as illicit, for inlicit; impress, for inpress; irreverent, for inreverent. When used for a numeral, N stands for 600, and with a dash over it thus, N̄, for 600,000.

N. B. (a contraction for nota bene), mark well; take notice; observe.

To NAB, v. a. [nappa, Swed.] to catch or seize unexpectedly. A low word.

NA'BOB, s. the name of a viceroy or governor of one of the provinces of the mogul's empire in India. Vulgarly, any person who has made a great fortune in India.

NABONASSAR, the founder of the kingdom of Babylon. He was the author of the Era of Nabonassar, which is important in Chronology, since by it all other epochs are connected and adjusted. It commenced with his reign in 747, B. C. The years are vague, each containing 365 days without intercalation. This year, 1848, A. D., corresponds with 2500 of this era.

NA'DIR, s. [Arab.] in Astronomy, is that point of the heavens which is diametrically opposite to the zenith, or point directly over our heads. The zenith and nadir are the two poles of the horizon.

NADIR SHAH, the celebrated king of Persia, at the commencement of the last century. He was originally of low rank in one of the Turkish tribes of Khorassan; and rendered effectual aid to Tâmasp, the king of Persia, when, by valour and ability, he had acquired power. He was made ruler of four fine provinces. Afterwards, when the king was defeated by the Turks, he dethroned him, and occupied his place. He subdued the Turks, gained all the country west of the Indus, conquered Bokhara and Khowaresm, and, lastly, the Turks of Armenia. Being now absolute, he ruled with dreadful tyranny. He blinded his own son, and put to death thousands of his subjects; and was at last assassinated by his own officers, in 1747, aged 59 years, after a reign of 15. His summary proceedings by way of settling questions of political economy, have, not long ago, found an admirer in the British parliament.

NEVIUS, CNEUS, an early Roman poet, who wrote comedies, &c., of which quoted fragments alone remain. He died in 203 B. C.

NAFF, s. in Ornithology, a kind of tufted sea-bird.

NAG, s. [nagge, Belg.] a small or young horse. In familiar language, a horse.

NAGPOUR, the capital in part of Berar, the Decan of Hindustan, which is subject to a native rajah. It is a city of modern date; but, though extensive and populous, is poorly built; and, excepting a small citadel of no strength, is open and defenceless. It is 700 miles from Calcutta. Pop. about 120,000. Lat. 21. 10. N. Long. 79. 7. E.

NAHUM, a Hebrew prophet, whose writings are included in the Old Testament. He prophesied in Judah, in the latter part of Hezekiah's reign; and his book, or poem, relates wholly to the destruction of Nineveh, and the benefits that should follow to the Jewish race. He is one of the sublimest, most fervent, and most daring of the minor prophets in his style; and the descriptions he introduces are full of life and power. He lived in about 700 B. C.

NAIADS, s. [naiades, Gr.] in Mythology, nymphs of the fountains.

NAIL, s. [nægal, Sax. nagel, Teut.] in Anatomy, a kind of horny substance upon the ends of the fingers and toes; talons, or a horny substance at the extremity of the toes of birds and beasts. A spike of metal with a sharp point, and sometimes a flat head, used to fasten things together; a stud or boss; also, a measure containing two inches and a half. On the nail, implies immediately or without delay.

To nail, v. a. to fasten any thing with small spikes of iron called nails; to stud with nails.

NAILER, s. a nail-maker.

NAIRN, Nairnshire, Scotland, the capital of the county, seated on the Frith of Murray, 104 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2672.

NAIRNSHIRE, a county of Scotland, lying on the Frith of Murray, and enclosed on every side by the counties of Inverness and Murray. Its length is about 12 miles, and its breadth about 10. The soil, though rocky, is fertile, and in general well cultivated. Findhorn is its chief river. It contains several lakes, which abound in fish, and some forests of firs. Pop. 9217. This county returns the moieties of 2 representatives to parliament.

NAKED, a. [nacod, Sax.] without clothes or covering: figuratively, unarmed; defenceless; unprovided. Plain, or evident, applied to truth. Mere; bare; simple; without any additional circumstances; applied to narratives of facts.

NAKEDLY, ad. without clothes, covering, or disguise.

NAKEDNESS, s. the state of a person without clothes or covering; plainness; evidence; freedom from disguise.

NALL, s. [naal, Isl.] anawl made use of by collar-makers.

NAME, s. [nama, Sax. naem, Belg.] denotes a word which serves to signify a thing or subject spoken of. The grammarians usually call a noun. Names are either proper or appellative. Proper names are those which represent some individual thing or person, so as to distinguish it from all other things of the same species; as Cicero, which represents a certain orator. Appellative names are either called Christian, or surnames; the first imposed for the distinction of persons, answering the Roman Prenomen; the second for the distinction of families, answering to the Nomen of the Romans, and the Patronymicum of the Greeks. Figuratively, reputation or character; renown; honour or glory; memory or remembrance; power given to a person to act for another; appearance, or an assumed character.

To NAME, v. a. [naman, Sax.] to apply a word constantly to distinguish a person or thing from others; to mention the word applied to any being; to specify or distinguish by mentioning the word used to express any person or thing; to utter or mention. SYNON. We name, to distinguish in conversation; we call, as for help when wanted.

NAMELESS, a. [namless, Sax.] having no word by which it may be expressed; one whose name is not known or expressed.

NAMELY, ad. [naemlick, nahmlich, Belg.] particularly; specially; to mention by name.

NAME'R, s. one that calls or knows any person or thing by name.

NAME'SAKE, s. one that has the same name with another.

NAMUR, the capital of the province of the same name, in Belgium. It has a very strong castle, built on the opposite side of the Sambre, on a sharp rock, and defended by Fort William, and many other considerable forts, so as to be supposed almost impregnable. It is seated at the confluence of the Maese and Sambre, and is a well-built city, with some fine public edifices. It has a good trade, and some valuable manufactures. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 50. 27. N. Long. 4. 48. E.

NAMUR, a province of Belgium, bordering on France; and bounded by Hainaut, Liège, and Luxembourg. It is pretty fertile; has several forests, marble quarries, and mines of iron, lead, and coal; and is about 30 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. The Sambre and the Maese are its great rivers. Pop. about 240,000.

NANCY, capital of the department of Meurthe, France. It is divided into the Old and New Town, which are separated by a canal. The first, though irregularly built, is rich and populous, and contains the palace of the ancient dukes of Lorraine. The New Town is very handsome, having long straight streets, and many fine public buildings. Here are several excellent educational and charitable institutions, and a capital public library. It is 190 miles from Paris. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 48. 42. N. Long. 6. 10. E.

NANKEEN, s. [from Nanking, in China,] a kind of salmon-coloured cotton cloth, manufactured in China, and formerly much more used in England than at present. Most of what is used now is of home manufacture.

NANKING, or KIANGNIN, a city of China, capital of the province of the Kiangan, and formerly the imperial city. It is the largest in China, being 17 miles in circumference, and about 3 miles distant from the great river Yang-tse-Chiang, from which canals are cut, so large that vessels may enter the town. This place is greatly fallen from its ancient splendour; for a third part of the city is desolate, but the rest is extremely populous, well inhabited, and full of business. The streets are narrow, but handsome and well paved, and on each side are shops, neatly furnished. The public buildings are mean, except a few temples, the city gates, and the famous tower of porcelain, 200 feet high, and divided into 9 stories, by projections, &c., covered with green varnished tiles. They have several manufactures in silk and wool. Here the physicians have their principal academy. It is seated near the river Yantschiang, 500 miles from Peking. Pop. about 500,000. Lat. 32. 12. N. Long. 118. 16. E.

NANTES, an ancient and large city in the department of Loire Inferieure, France. It is one of the most considerable places in the empire, and contains the richest merchants. The bridges over the river Loire, in which are some islands, are almost a league in length. The suburbs are so large, that they exceed the city. It is well and regularly built, and has some fine edifices, as the cathedral, town-hall, exchange, &c. Here is a good public library also. It has some valuable manufactures, and abounds with seminaries of learning. A great quantity of salt is made in the territory of Nantes, both at the Bay of Bourgneuf and in the salt-marshes of Guerande and Croisic. It has a good trade, but large vessels can come no higher than Paimbeuf, which is some miles below Nantes. It is 217 miles from Paris. Pop. about 80,000. Lat. 47. 13. N. Long. 1. 33. W.

NANTUCKET, the name of an island, a bay, a town, and a county of Massachusetts, United States. The town has a good harbour, and is compactly built. There are dangerous shoals on the S. E. of the island. It is 500 miles from Washington. Population, 912.

NANTWICH, or NAMPTWICH, Cheshire. It stands on the river Weaver, near a large basin of the Chester canal, and is a large and regularly built town. The salt-works that furnish so much of the fine white salt, in common use, are here. And round it lie the principal dairies of the county. It is 162 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 5921.

NAP, s. [hnæppan, Sax.] a slumber; short sleep; the soft or downy part of woollen cloth above the surface. In Botany, the catmint.

To NAP, v. n. to sleep; to be drowsy; to be in a state of seeming security.

NAPE, s. the joint of the neck behind.

NAPHTHA, s. [Lat.] in Chemistry, &c., a very pure, clear, and thin fluid, of a very pale yellow-brown; it is a compound of hydrogen and carbon, and is obtained from wood by distillation, and from coal tar by rectification. It is used in the preparation of caoutchouc for manufactures, and is burnt in lamps, &c. See PETROLEUM, BITUMEN, &c.

NAPIER, JOHN, a laird of Merchiston, near Edinburgh, a celebrated Scottish mathematician, of the 16th century. He studied at St. Andrews, and afterwards travelled on the continent. After his return, he devoted himself to the study of mathematics and theology. In the latter science he seems to have made no great way, except as regards the calculating of periods for the accomplishment of various unfulfilled prophecies, particularly those relating to the end of the world; in all which he was, as all others have been, disappointed. He happily wrote, "He also re-discovered that the pope of Rome was antichrist." More usefully for that, and more creditably to himself, in the other, and more favourite study, he was led on step by step till he invented logarithms, by a process we cannot detail, and with effects that are not yet fully developed, great as has been the use of his invention in practical mathematics. This has cast into the shade several other discoveries and improvements that he made in trigonometry, &c., which would have immortalized him in the annals of science. Another equally useful and successful invention, the bones of reckoning, he died in 1607, aged 67 years, having obtained the reputation of being addicted to the black arts amongst his neighbours, but having received in Kepler's admiration the verdict of all subsequent ages.

NAPIER'S BONES—as, in Arithmetical Computation, an ingenious contrivance for facilitating processes of multiplication and division. It may be made thus:—Write out on cardboard the Multiplication Table, but taking care to divide each square, in which the products are arranged, diagonally, and to write the unit on the right hand, and the tens and hundreds on the left hand side of the line; then cut the whole into vertical strips;—and for use, take those strips which contain the figures of the multiplicand at the head of them, and arrange them in their proper order, so that the figures that come in the products of the multiplier in order, and write down the sum of the two figures that occur in the adjoining segments of the squares, placing the figures that occur in the half squares at the beginning and ending of the line, in their respective places also: thus,—to multiply 1848 by 247:—

	1	8	4	8
2	$\begin{smallmatrix} 0 & 2 \\ 0 & 1 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 6 \\ 1 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 0 & 8 \\ 0 & 1 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 6 \\ 1 \end{smallmatrix}$	= 3696
4	$\begin{smallmatrix} 0 & 4 \\ 0 & 3 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 2 \\ 1 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 6 & 3 \\ 0 & 3 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 2 \\ 1 \end{smallmatrix}$	= 7392
7	$\begin{smallmatrix} 0 & 7 \\ 0 & 5 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 6 \\ 2 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 6 & 6 \\ 2 & 5 \end{smallmatrix}$	$\begin{smallmatrix} 6 \\ 1 \end{smallmatrix}$	= 12936
					456456

We have given only the series containing the necessary figures for the operation.

NA/PKIN, s. linen used at table to lay in the lap, and wipe the hands.

NAPLES, a kingdom of Europe, part of the kingdom of the Two Sicilies; consisting of the island of Sicily, and all Italy S. of the States of the Church. We refer to the word Sicily for an account of that part of the kingdom, and give here an account of the Italian part. It is nearly 400 miles long, and varies in breadth from 120 to 30 miles. It is divided into 13 provinces, namely, Terra di Lavoro; Provincia di Napoli; Principato di Salerno; Principato di Capua; Terra di Brindisi; Terra di Bari; Terra di Otranto; Terra di Taranto; Terra di Reggio; Terra di Catanzaro; Terra di Crotone; Terra di Gerace; and Terra di Reggio Calabria. The climate is extremely hot in summer; but the most disagreeable part of the climate is the sirocco, which is very common in spring, and is still more relaxing. In winter there is seldom any ice or snow except on the mountains. On account of its fertility, the country has been termed a terrestrial paradise; it abounds with all sorts of grain, the finest fruits, and vegetables of all kinds, with rice, flax, oil, wine, saffron, and manna; poultry, game, and fish, are also plentiful and cheap. It affords also alum, vitriol, sulphur, rock-crystal, marble, and several sorts of minerals, together with fine wool and silk. Besides these there are some valuable manufactures. The principal mountains are the Apennines, which traverse it from N. to S., and the celebrated volcano, Mount Vesuvius. The greatest inconvenience to which this kingdom is exposed, is the frequent earthquakes, though the eruptions of Mount Vesuvius contribute in some measure to prevent them. The Voltorno and the Ofanto are its chief rivers. The established religion is the Romish; and the clergy and convents possess two-thirds of the whole kingdom; but the Jews are allowed to settle here. Pop. about 6,250,000.

NAPLES, the capital of the above kingdom, and of that of the Two Sicilies, is one of the finest cities in the world, is the see of an archbishop, the seat of a university, and is defended by thick walls which surround it, regular bastions, strong towers, deep ditches, and fortified castles. It is about 15 miles in circumference, and has seven large suburbs. The palace royal is a spacious and convenient building; but the most magnificent are the cathedral and the chapel of St. Januarius, where they pretend the blood of that saint is preserved. The air of Naples is serene and healthy, and the winter mild. Its situation is most enchantingly beautiful. The harbour is capable of containing 500 vessels, which may ride with safety. It has some small manufactures. It is 110 miles from Rome. Pop. about 350,000. Lat. 40. 49. N. Long. 14. 15. E.

NA/PLESS, a. worn threadbare.

NA'PPINESS, s. the quality of having a nap.

NA'PPY, a. [from nap,] frothy; spumy; whence apples and ale are called lamb's wool.

NA'PTAKING, s. a surprise, or unexpected seizure and attack.

NARBONNE an ancient city in the department of Aude, France. Some Roman inscriptions, in different parts of the city, are still visible, and the canal, from the river Aude, through the city, to the Mediterranean, was cut by them. There are some fine buildings and institutions. Narbonne is famous for its honey. It is 500 miles from Paris. Pop. about 60,000. Lat. 43. 10. N. Long. 3. 1. E.

JOSEPH ARMAND DE LOUIS, COMTE DE, one of the noblesse of France, who, animated by some theory of constitutional monarchy, took part in the Revolution, and was in the ministry preceding that of the Girondists. He fell with the monarchy on the 10th of August; and was with difficulty got out of the country by his friend Madame de Staël. On Napoleon's acquisition of power, he returned, and was much honoured by him; and employed in several of his campaigns and embassies, particularly one to Vienna, where he succeeded to admiration. He died in 1813, aged 58 years.

NARCISSUS, s. [Lat.] in Botany, a kind of daffodil.

NARCO'SIS, s. [narke, Gr.] a privation of sense, as in a palsy, or by taking opium.

NARCOTIC, a. procuring sleep; stupifying; or causing stupefaction.

NARCO'TICS, s. medicines which take away the senses, or stupify.

NARD, s. [nardos, Gr. nardus, Lat.] a fragrant ointment called spikenard. In Botany, a sweet-scented shrub.

NARES, DR. JAMES, an English composer and organist of the last century. He was first appointed to York minster; and subsequently he held situations about the court. His works are numerous, and are very simple and beautiful; marked with great scientific skill. He died in 1783, aged 68 years.

NARES, DR. ROBERT, son of the foregoing, a divine and critic, who was assistant librarian at the British Museum, and archdeacon of Stafford. He was joint editor of the British Critic, and author of several works on Words, &c. His continuation of Tytler's History is not very good. He died in 1829, aged 65 years.

NA'RRABLE, a. [narro, Lat.] capable of being told or related.
NARRAGA'NSET BAY, a bay of the Atlantic Ocean, entering the New England portion of the United States. It is 28 miles long, and from 3 to 12 broad. It is accessible at all seasons, and has some fine harbours. Rhode Island, and several others equally beautiful and fertile, are in it.

To NARRATE, v. a. to tell or relate.

NARRATION, s. [narratio, Lat.] an account, relation, history, or description of any action, or series of actions.

NARRATIVE, a. [narrativus, Fr.] relating; giving an account of facts as they happened; fond of telling stories, or relating things past.

NARRATIVE, s. a relation; an account or recital of a fact as it happened.

NARRATIVELY, ad. by way of narrative.

NARRATOR, s. [Lat.] one that relates any fact.

NARROW, (nárró) a. [nearu, Sax.] of small breadth; containing a small distance from one extreme to another. Short, applied to time. Niggardily, or covetous; contracted; of confined sentiment; ungenerous; applied to the mind. Near, or within a small distance; close; vigilant; attentive.

To NARROW, (nárró) v. a. [nearwan, Sax.] to lessen the breadth or width of a thing; to shorten the space between any two things.

NARROWLY, (nárróly) ad. with small space between the sides; of little breadth; contractedly; without extent or generosity of sentiment; closely or attentively; scarcely; in an avicious or niggardly manner.

NARROWNESS, (nárróness) s. having its extremities at a small distance from each other. Want of extent or generosity, applied to the mind. Meanness, poverty, or a state of uneasiness, applied to condition. Want of capacity, applied to the understanding.

NARSES, one of the generals of Justinian I. in the declining period of Roman history. He was one of the eunuchs of the court at Constantinople, and was elevated by intrigues against the great Belisarius to the command of the army in the Italian war. He defeated Totila, took Rome, and gave to the harassed country abundance and peace. He ruled in Italy for 15 years, and was then deposed by intrigues similar to those which had removed from his way the former favourite of fortune. He retired to Naples, and invited the incursions of the Lombard king, Alboin, into the country, and died as his treason was about to take effect, in 567 A. D.

NARWHALE, s. in Zoology, a kind of whale, armed with a strong horn, whence it is called the sea-unicorn.

NARVA, capital of a government of Russia called by the same name. The houses are built of brick, stuccoed white; and in the suburbs, called Ivangorod, or John's Town, are the stupendous remains of an ancient fortress, built by Ivan Vassilievitch the Great, over the steep banks of the river. The principal exports from it are hemp, flax, timber, and corn. It is situated on the river Narova, 8 miles from its mouth, in the Gulf of Finland, 83 miles from St. Petersburg. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 59. 20. N. Long. 28. S. E.

NASAL, a. [nasus, Lat.] belonging to the nose. In Grammar, pronounced through the nose.

NASH, JOHN, the architect, whose works in the metropolises are sad memorials of his former pre-eminence. Regent Street, Regent's Park, Buckingham Palace, &c. in town, and the Pavilion at Brighton, are his chefs d'œuvre; and most of these are being altered, or removed, to make way for what is not quite so offensive to good taste. He died in 1835, aged 83 years.

NASH, RICHARD, better known as Beau Nash, the renowned arbitrer elegantium of Bath; who maintained his royalty at that seat of folly, in perfect character and keeping, for 50 years. He did one good service for society, for which, in spite of his laced hat, and six-horsed chariot, with riders and runners, he deserves honourable mention;—he banished swords from common wear amongst the fashionables; and they have never been reintroduced. He died in 1761, in poverty and neglect, aged 87 years.

NASHVILLE, capital of Tennessee, United States. It stands on the Cumberland river, and is a place of some importance. Its public buildings are handsome and numerous, and there is a rising university here. It is 684 miles from Washington. Pop. 11,000. Some other places in the States are similarly named.

NASICO'ROUS, a. [nasus and cornu, Lat.] having a horn on the nose.

NASSAU', a duchy of Germany, bordering on Prussia, and bounded by Hesse. It is a very small territory, but is very beautiful, being altogether hilly, and having some mountains more than 2000 feet high. The Rhine and the Main are its chief rivers. It yields silver, iron, copper, building-stone, marble, and other metals and minerals; and no part of Germany so abounds with Brünnen, or mineral springs. Corn, but in small quantities; and wine, especially hock, and fruit in abundance, are produced. Cattle and swine are fed in great numbers. It has some good and valuable manufactures. Nassau, whence it is named, is a small town. Wiesbaden is its largest place. Pop. about 400,000.

NASTILY, ad. in such a dirty, filthy, or polluted manner, as to raise nausea.

NAUSTINESS, s. the quality of being so dirty and filthy as to raise nausea. Obscenity, grossness, applied to words and thoughts.

NASTY, a. [nast, Tent.] raising disgust from dirt; nauseous; filthy. Figuratively, obscene, or lewd, applied to language.

NATAL, a. [natalis, from nascor, Lat.] native; relating to the time when, or place where, a person was born.

NATAL, the name of part of the E. coast of Africa, extending along Caffrelan, above Cape Colony. It has high mountains, and wide swamps; but there is also very fertile soil, which is beginning to be cultivated to advantage.

NATATION, s. [natio, Lat.] the act of swimming.

NATHLESS, ad. [natheless, Sax.] nevertheless; notwithstanding; not the less.

NATION, (náshón) s. [natio, Lat.] a considerable number of people inhabiting a certain extent of ground, and under the same government; a government or kingdom.

NATIONAL, (náshónal) a. [national, Fr.] public, general, opposed to particular; bigoted to one's country; confined to a particular country. National debt, the amount of various and vast sums of money raised by the funding system, at different times, but chiefly within the last half century, to defray the cost of the different wars, in which the rulers of England thought fit to engage; the interest on which due to the fund-holders, is the greatest cause for the excessive taxation of the country. It is considerably more than £800,000,000 at the present time. The proposition often made by demagogues to wipe off this debt, is tantamount to proposing to rob the middle classes (who are the greatest fund-holders) of this amount, which they have advanced to the government on no other security than the public faith. Yet it is greatly to be deplored that governments have not yet adopted some plan for redeeming this terrible debt gradually, and so giving effectual relief to the nation in an honourable way.

NATIONAL GALLERY, the name of the curious and insignificant building forming one side of Trafalgar Square, London; one half of which is devoted to a collection of paintings, purchased by or bequeathed to the government, in trust for the nation; and the other half to the exhibitions of the Royal Academy. The national collection is a gratuitous exhibition, and contains some very fine masterpieces, with some of very inferior worth and beauty.

NATIONALLY, (náshónally) ad. as a nation; generally.

NATIONALNESS, (náshónalness) s. reference to the people in general.

NATIVE, a. [nativus, from nascor, Lat.] produced by nature; natural, opposed to artificial; agreeable to nature; belonging to the time or place of a person's birth; original, or that from which a thing is made originally.

NATIVE, s. one born in any place; an original inhabitant; offspring.

NATIVENESS, s. the quality of being produced by nature, opposed to artificial.

NATIVITV, s. [nativité, Fr.] birth; time, place, or manner of birth; the state or place of being produced.

NATOLIA, or ANADOL. See ANATOLIA.

NATRON, s. in Chemistry, the native sesquicarbonate of soda, or the peroxide of sodium, found in certain lakes in Egypt.

NATTY-JACK, s. in Natural History, a kind of toad of a light green and yellow colour, common in dry, sandy heaths and soils in England; which runs very fast, and cannot jump.

NATURAL, a. [natural, Fr. naturalis, from natura, Lat.] produced or effected by nature. In Law, illegitimate, begotten by parents not joined in wedlock. Bestowed by nature, applied to the faculties of the mind. Unaffected; according to truth and reality. Proceeding from natural causes, opposed to violent. Natural functions are those actions of the bodily organs, whereby the aliments are changed and assimilated so as to become a part of the body. Natural History is a description of the productions of the earth. Natural inclinations are the spontaneous tendencies of our minds. Natural Philosophy is the popular name for all the branches of physical science; as Mechanics, Hydrostatics, Optics, Astronomy, &c. Natural System is that scheme for arranging plants, which regards, not any particular organ, &c. to the neglect of the rest; as Linnaeus's System does the sexual organs; but takes every part of the plant into due account, and thus groups together into orders, classes, &c. only plants which are truly related to each other.

NATURAL, s. a person who has not the use of reason. In Music, a sign made thus ( $\natural$ ), indicating that the note it precedes, and which is required by the key to be sounded as a sharp, is to be sounded half a tone lower, or as if it were in the natural key.

NATURAL BRIDGE, one of the most remarkable curiosities of the United States. It consists of a stupendous arch of limestone, over a chasm 90 feet wide at the top, and 50 at the base. The height of the bridge above the Cedar creek which flows under it, is 215 feet. Its average width is 80 feet. Its length is 93 feet; and it is 55 feet in thickness. It is covered to the depth of some feet with clayey earth, and has a natural parapet of rocks, rendered firm by trees and shrubs. It commands a prospect of terrible grandeur; and it is of considerable economic use for traffic, &c. It is in Rockbridge county, Virginia, 156 miles from Richmond. A much smaller bridge of the same kind is in New York; and near it is a village called by the same name.

NATURALIST, s. a person who studies and is versed in the works of nature.

NATURALIZATION, s. in Law, the act of giving foreigners the privileges of natives.

To NATURALIZE, v. a. to adopt into a community, or invest with the privileges of native subjects; to familiarize; to make easy, as if taught by nature.

NATURALLY, ad. without instruction, or being taught; by the impulses of unassisted nature; according to nature; without affectation; spontaneously.

NATURALNESS, s. the state of being given or produced by nature; conformity to truth, reality, or the nature of things.

NATURE, s. [natura, Lat.] the system of the world, or of the universe; the assemblage of all created beings; a distinct species or kind of being; the essential properties of a thing, or that by which it is distinguished from all others; the established order and course of material things; the series of second causes, or the laws by which the material universe is governed; the constitution, or an aggregate of the powers of an animal body; the action of Providence, or that spiritual power diffused throughout the creation, which moves and acts in all bodies, and gives them certain properties. Figuratively, disposition of mind, or temper; natural affection and reverence, or the principles implanted in us by the Deity; sort, kind, or species.

NATURITY, s. the state or quality of being produced by nature.

NAVAL, a. [navalis, from navis, Lat.] consisting of ships; belonging to ships.

NAVARRE, a province of Spain, adjoining to France, and bounded by Aragon, Biscay, and New Castile. It is 80 miles long, by about 60 broad. It is very mountainous, lying amongst the Pyrenees, some of whose heights are more than 5000 feet above the sea. The Ebro and the Bidasson are its chief rivers. It yields iron, copper, &c. &c. And produces corn, fruits, oil, wine, timber, cattle, &c. in considerable abundance. Pampeluna is its capital. Pop. about 250,000.

NAUDE, GABRIEL, a physician and literary character of France, in the 17th century. He served Richelieu, Mazarin, and Queen Christina of Sweden. His works are numerous, but are little known now. He died in 1653, aged 53 years.

NAVY, s. [navis, Sax.] the middle part of a wheel, in which the axle moves, and the spokes are fixed.—[old Fr.] the middle or body of a church.

NAVEL, s. [navela, or navela, Sax.] See UMBILICUS. Figuratively, the inward part or middle.

NAVELGALL, in Farriery, a bruise on the top of the chine of the back, behind the saddle, occasioned either by the saddle being split behind, or the stuffing being wanting.

NAVELWORT, s. in Botany, a plant, called also wall-penny-wort, and kidneywort.

NAVEW, s. in Botany, a kind of cabbage, found on ditch-banks and among corn.

NAUTRAGE, s. [navis and frango, Lat.] shipwreck.

NAUGHT, (naught), a. [nacht, Sax.] bad; worthless.

NAUGHT, (naught), s. nothing. Improperly written nought.

NAUGHTILY, (naughtily) ad. badly; viciously; wickedly; corruptly.

NAUGHTINESS, (naughtiness) s. [nahtiness, Sax.] depravity; a slight degree of wickedness.

NAUGHTY, (naughty) a. bad; vicious; wicked; corrupt.

NAVICULAR, a. [navicula, Fr.] in Anatomy, formed like a ship, applied to the third bone in each foot, situated between the astralagus and ossa cuneiformia.

NAVIGABLE, a. [navigo, Lat.] capable of being passed by ships or boats.

NAVIGABLENESS, s. the quality of being capable to be passed by ships or boats.

To NAVIGATE, v. n. [navis, Lat.] to sail; to pass in a vessel.—v. a. to pass over in a ship or boat.

NAVIGATION, s. [Fr.] the act of passing by water; the art or act of conducting any vessel by water from one place to another the most commodious way; the science of managing a ship. The Navigation Laws are statutes which forbid the employment of any but British vessels, or vessels belonging to the country in which any article of commerce is produced, in the importation of such product, and which impose analogous restraints on exports also. The effects of these laws, which were purposed for the protection of the carrying trade of British merchants, has been so disastrous to the nation, that they have been suspended lately, and will soon be repealed.

NAVIGATOR, s. [navigator, Fr.] a sailor, or person who passes from one place to another by water; one that works a ship. Also, a man employed in digging canals, which are called inland navigations; or in making the cuttings and embankments for railways, commonly, according to no known analogy, contracted to navie.

NAVIGATORS' ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the S. Pacific Ocean. They are surrounded by a coral reef; but boats may land with great safety.

NAULAGE, s. [navium, from navis, Lat.] the freight of passengers in a ship.

NAUMACY, s. [navis and mache, Gr.] a mock sea-fight.

To NAUSEATE, v. a. [nauseo, Lat.] to loathe; to reject with disgust; to affect with loathing.—v. n. to grow squeamish; to turn away with disgust.

NAUSEOUS, a. disgusting; loathsome.

NAUSEOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to cause loathing or disgust.

NAUSEOUSNESS, s. the quality which causes loathing and disgust.

NAUTIC, NAUTICAL, a. [nautica, Lat.] belonging to sailing, or sailors.

NAUTILUS, s. [Lat.] in Conchology, a genus of shell-fish, resembling the cuttle-fish in form, &c., whose shells are made with chambers communicating with the animal by means of a slender tube running through the whole; the animal lives in the outermost or open cell. It was formerly fabled that these animals were furnished with sails and oars, and they were thence named nautili; but more accurate observation has proved them to be in no way distinguished from the rest of their large family by such superfluous gifts, and has spoiled much affecting poetry thereby.

NAUVOO, the Mormonite city of Illinois, United States. It stands on the Mississippi, and includes a space 4 miles long and 3 wide. Its public buildings are Nauvoo House, a spacious hotel, where the pretended prophet, Joe Smith, resided; and Nauvoo Temple, the place of Mormonite worship. They have raised a legion for defence, and they maintain a university here. The whole population was about 10,000.

NAVY, s. [navis, Lat.] a fleet or collection of ships, generally applied to men of war.

NAVY, ad. [na, Sax.] a word used to imply denial or refusal. In Grammar, it is used as a cumulative conjunction.

NA'YLAND, or NEY'LAND, Suffolk. It has a manufacture of soap, bays, and says; and is seated on the river Stour, which divides it from Essex, 56 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1114.

NA'YWORD, s. a refusal; a by-word; a watch-word.

NAZARE'NES, in Ecclesiastical History, one of the sects of converted Hebrews, who combined the observance of the Mosaic law with trust in Jesus as the Messiah. They rejected the traditions of the elders respecting the law, and they used a History of Christ, or Gospel, which was not one of the four we have had handed down to us. It was not till the 4th century that they were placed in the list of heretics.

NAZARETH, a town of Palestine, in Syria, Asia, famous for being the residence of our Lord in the early part of his life. It is greatly reduced in size. Superstition and poetry have preserved sacred names for some sites. Lat. 32. 44. N. Long. 35. 19. E.

NAZARITE, in the Jewish Law, a person under a special vow, as Samson and John the Baptist were.

NEAGH, LOUGH, or LAKE, in Ulster, Ireland. It is 18 miles long and 12 broad. It communicates with the sea by means of the river Barne.

To NEAL, (neel) v. a. [onalen, Sax.] to temper by heating and cooling gradually.—v. n. to be tempered by fire.

NEAL, DANIEL, a Dissenting minister of London, in the beginning of last century, who wrote the History of the Puritans, and the History of New England. He died in 1743, aged 65 years.

NEAP, (neep) a. [nepfod, Sax.] low; decreasing: applied only to the tide, and sometimes used as a substantive. Neap-tides are those which happen when the moon is either about 9 or 24 days old.

NEAR, (neer) prep. [ner, Sax. naer, Belg. and Scot.] at a small distance from; close to.

NEAR, ad. almost at hand; not far off. After ge, not to want much, or not far off.

NEAR, a. not far off; advanced towards the end of a design or undertaking; affecting; dear; inclining to covetousness.

NEARCHUS, one of the generals of Alexander the Great, who conducted the fleet from India to the Persian Gulf. The journal of this voyage, preserved by Arrian, is of great value in the study of Ancient Geography. This general, in the subsequent part of the Macedonian empire, followed Antigonus. He lived in and about 320 B. C.

NEARLY, (neerly) ad. at no great distance; affecting; pressing; closely, used with concern. In a niggardly manner.

NEARNESS, (neerness) s. the quality of being at a small distance, or almost close to, applied to situation. Alliance of blood or affection, applied to relations or friends. Too great care of money, applied to expense.

NEAT, (neet) s. [Sax. naut, Isl. and Scot.] black cattle and oxen, used collectively; a cow or ox.

NEAT, (neet) a. [net, Fr.] made with skill and elegance, but void either of splendour or dignity; cleanly. In Trade, pure; unadulterated; not spoiled by foreign mixtures.

NEATH, Glamorganshire. It is seated on a river of the same name, over which is a bridge, where a number of small vessels come to load coal. In the neighbourhood are iron forges, extensive tin works, smelting works for copper, and many coal mines. A navigable canal has been cut from hence to the county of Brecon. It is situated near the Bristol Channel, 200 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 4970.

NEATHERD, (neetherd) s. [neathryd, Sax.] one that keeps black cattle.

NEATLY, (neetly) ad. in a cleanly manner; in such a manner as discovers skill and elegance, free from pomp, and without dignity.

NEATNESS, (neetness) s. spruceness; elegance, without pomp, affectation, or dignity; the quality of being free from adulation.

NEB, s. [nebbe, Sax.] nose; beak; mouth.

NEBULA, s. [Lat.] an appearance like a cloud in a human body; a film on the eye. In Astronomy, a cluster of stars, so distant from the earth, as to appear to ordinary telescopes only as dim and indistinct cloudlets. The gigantic telescope of Lord Rosse has exhibited all that were thought to be unformed stellar systems in their true character of clusters of stars.

NEBULAR HYPOTHESIS, in Cosmogony and Astronomy, a conjecture started by Sir W. Herschel and elaborated by La Place, respecting the process of the formation of stellar and solar systems, &c. Given, the material out of which the universe is made, and a rotatory motion, and then, according to this hypothesis, separate stellar systems are first condensed; next, in each system, the multitudinous solar systems, including planets, with their rings and satellites, and all that modern astronomy wots of; leaving, in the case of our own solar system, an undigested residuum of primal matter, that appears in the form of a lens-shaped disc round the sun, as the zodiacal light. Experiments with globules of oil, and several other little things, had proved this, analogically, to the contentment of all speculators, to whom law (whatever that is) was Gon; when Lord Rosse directed his telescope to the various nebulae, which had given indirect or indistinct countenance to this hypothesis, and instead of being luminous mists they were cluster of stars, arranged in most varied and wondrous forms; and the whole structure was overturned, leaving the vestiges of creation to be traced and delineated by those who believe in a Creator, and hesitate not to ascribe to Him his own work.

NEBULOUS, a. [nebula, Lat.] misty; cloudy.

NECESSARIANS, s. in Philosophy and Theology, those who are advocates for the doctrine of philosophical necessity.

NECESSARIES, s. such things as a person cannot live without; things necessary for the support of life.

NECESSARILY, ad. indispensably; by inevitable consequence.

NECESSARINESS, s. that quality of a thing which renders it such that it cannot be without it.

NECESSARY, a. [neceesse, Lat.] that which must be indispensably done or granted; that without which a thing cannot exist; impelled by an irresistible principle; conclusive; followed by inevitable consequences.

To NECESSITATE, v. a. to make necessary; to deprive of choice; to compel by irresistible force.

NECESSITATION, s. the act of making necessary, or compelling in such a manner as cannot be resisted.

NECESSITOUS, a. oppressed with want or poverty.

NECESSITOUSNESS, s. poverty; want of things essential to the support of life.

NECESSITUDE, s. want; need.

NECESSITY, s. in Metaphysics and Philosophy, signifies, first, the inevitable consequence of a certain proposition from those on which it depends in a syllogism, the opposite of which must needs be false or absurd; this is called mathematical or logical necessity;—second, the state in which irresistible power is exerted to compel things to be and to do as they do and are; as, for instance, in the operation of the (so called) laws of nature; this is called physical necessity;—third, the condition of beings when left perfectly free, and treated as moral agents, in which circumstances they ever act in accordance with the principle, or maxim, they have taken as their guide in respect of conduct, though it is in their power to act otherwise; and this is moral necessity. It is also used to signify an imagined state of subjugation, on the part of men, to the operation of the decrees of absolute power, in conformity with which they must act and be; in which case it is equivalent to Fate, and its consistent believers to Fatalists. Generally, it signifies a state of poverty, or want of those things without which life cannot be supported.

NECK, s. [neck, Belg. hanea, Sax.] in Anatomy, that part of the body which supports the head, and is between it and the body. Figuratively, a long, narrow part. On the neck, means immediately after, from one following another closely.

NECKCLOTH, s. a piece of linen worn round the neck.

NECKER, JAMES, the celebrated minister of finance to Louis XVI., who was the occasion of the outbreak of the Revolution. He was a native of Geneva, and was first clerk, and afterwards partner, in the house of Thelloussin, the Parisian banker. His wealth, and his pamphlets on questions of finance, introduced him to the notice of the ministry, who were at their wit's end, through fruitless attempts to choke the deficit in the revenue. He held at first a subaltern post, and was finally the finance minister. He managed matters just as he would have done in his bank; and, as circumstances were, such a pilot could only steer to bankruptcy. Yet he was the only man who could see at all into the inextricably involved affairs of the treasury, and after a resignation, and pettish retirement to Switzerland, he was recalled, and soon became the idol of the people. His publication of the condition of the revenue, laid bare a whole world of abominations; his being a Protestant, and literary man, ingratiated him still more with the spirit of the day; his rigid honesty, which would make no distinction between the burdens of the great and of the little, raised him still higher; and to crown all, he obtained both the promise and the performance of the summoning of the States-general. He then found greater difficulties than ever, and so left things to settle themselves; which resulted in the third estate obtaining all the power, and declaring itself the National Assembly. In the midst of the turmoil Necker was dismissed; and the populace of Paris rose, and from mourning over him proceeded to the attack and capture of the Bastille. He was soon recalled; but his popularity was passed away, the people had advanced more in a few months than he had in years, and further advance was out of his power. He returned again to Switzerland, and amused himself with pursuits more harmless and obscure than the guidance of revolutions. He died in 1804, aged 70 years.

NECKLACE, s. a string of beads or jewels worn by way of ornament round a woman's neck.

NECROMANCER, s. [nekros and mantis, Gr.] one that converses with ghosts, or reveals secret things by means of the dead; a conjurer.

NECROMANCY, s. the art of revealing future events by conversing with the dead; enchantment.

NECROSIS, s. [nekros, Gr.] in Surgery, the death of any of the bony parts of the animal frame.

NECTAR, s. [Gr.] a liquor said to be drunk by the gods, and that whoever drank of it should be immortal.

NECTARED, a. tinged, mingled, or abounding with nectar.

NECTAREOUS, a. [nektar, Gr. nectareus, Lat.] resembling nectar; as sweet as nectar.

NECTARINE, s. [Fr.] in Horticulture, a delicious fruit of the plum or peach kind.

NEED, s. [need, Sax. nood, Belg.] a pressing difficulty; want; distressful poverty; want of any thing useful or serviceable.

TO NEED, v. a. to want; to require; to be in want of.—v. n. to be wanted, or necessary.

NEEDER, s. one that wants, or cannot do without a thing.

NEEDFUL, a. necessary; not to bedone without; indispensably requisite.

NEEDFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to be necessary.

NEEDFULNESS, s. the quality of being necessary to an effect or end.

NEEDHAM, Suffolk. It has some trade in Suffolk blues and cloths; the poorer sort of women are employed in spinning and weaving bonelace. It is seated on the river Orwell, 73 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1353.

NEEDINESS, s. the quality of being in want of things essential to the support of life.

NEEDLE, s. [nadl, Sax.] a small slender piece of steel, used in sewing; the small steel bar, which points towards the north in the sea compass.

NEEDLES, two sharp-pointed rocks at the N. W. end of the Isle of Wight, so called from their sharp extremities. Lat. 50. 40. N. Long. 1. 29. W.

NEEDLEFISH, s. in Natural History, a kind of sea-fish.

NEEDLEFUL, s. as much thread as generally is used with a needle.

NEEDLER, NEEDLEMAKER, s. a person that makes needles.

NEEDLEWORK, s. any work performed with a needle; embroidery.

NEEDLESS, a. unnecessary; not requisite; not wanted.

NEEDLESSLY, ad. without obligation or necessity.

NEEDLESSNESS, s. the quality of being unnecessary.

NEEDS, ad. [nedes, Sax.] necessarily; by irresistible force or compulsion; indispensably.

NEEDY, a. distressed by poverty; wanting the necessities of life.

NEER, a contraction of NEVER.

TO NEESE, (neese) v. n. [nyse, Dan.] to discharge breath violently, and by a convulsive motion, through the nose.

NEFARIOUS, a. [nefas, Lat.] excessively wicked. In Law, unlawful.

NEGATION, s. [negatio, from nego, Lat.] denial, opposed to affirmation or assent. Refusal, opposed to consent. The absence of that which does not naturally belong to the thing we are speaking of, or which has no right, obligation, or necessity to be present with it.

NEGATIVE, a. [negativus, from nego, Lat.] denying, opposed to affirming. Implying the absence of something; having the power to withhold, though not to compel. Negative quantity, in Mathematics, a quantity which is, in common phrase, less than nothing, but which by a slight extension of the meaning of a term or two, and by the use of the negative sign, in Algebra, can be treated as if it had an actual existence, as well as existence to our thoughts. In Geometry, the extension of a few common terms introduces the same results.

NEGATIVE, s. a proposition by which something is denied. In Grammar, a particle made use of to imply denial; as, not.

NEGATIVELY, ad. with denial; in the form of a denial.

TO NEGLECT, v. a. [negligo, Lat.] to omit by carelessness; to refuse; to treat with scornful heedlessness; to postpone something that should be done.

NEGLECT, s. [neglectus, from negligo, Lat.] inattention; careless treatment, or scornful heedlessness; omission of something which ought to be done.

NEGLECTER, s. one who wilfully, scornfully, or heedlessly omits doing something which he ought to do.

NEGLECTFUL, a. heedless; omitting through scorn, heedlessness, or inattention.

NEGLECTFULLY, ad. so as to omit some duty for want of attention or caution; treating in a cold and indifferent manner.

NEGLENCE, s. [Fr. negligencia, Lat.] the habit of omitting some duty by heedlessness, or want of attention; want of care or caution.

NEGLENT, a. [Fr. negligens, Lat.] careless; heedless; inattentive; scornfully regardless.

NEGLENTLY, ad. in a careless, heedless, or unexact manner.

TO NEGOTIATE, (negotiate) v. n. [negociar, Fr. from negotium, Lat.] to carry on the trade of a merchant; to traffic; to enter into treaty with a foreign state; to pass a bill or draught for money.

NEGOTIATION, (negotiation) s. a treaty of business; a treaty with a foreign state.

NEGOTIATOR, (negotiator) s. [negotiator, Fr.] one employed to treat with others; one that transmits or pays away bills drawn on foreigners.

NEGOTIATING, (negotiating) part. employed in treating with others; passing bills drawn on foreigners.

NEGRO, s. [Span.] one of the varieties of the human race, inhabiting the tropical regions of Africa; distinguished by the woolly-seeming hair, the projecting mouth, the form of the legs, &c.

NEGROLAND, or NIGRITIA, the general name of that part of Africa through which the great river Quorra runs, lying between the Great Desert and the Atlantic Ocean. It is also called Soudan.

NEGROPONT, an island of Greece. It is near 100 miles long, and from S to 16 broad. It abounds in corn, wine, oil, fruits, flesh, fish, and fowls, and provisions of all kinds. A bridge reaches from the island to the continent, across the Strait of Negropont.

NEHEMIAH, an eminent leader of the Jews on the return from the captivity at Babylon. The services he rendered to his degraded and dejected countrymen are recorded in the book of the Old Testament that bears his name. His character was one of the purest patriotism, and he suffered nothing to hinder him in his endeavours to secure and to elevate those who were placed under his guidance. From some things in the Book of Nehemiah, it is evident that additions were made to it long after his time. In the Septuagint it is ascribed to Ezra, under the title of the Second Book of Esdras. He died in 420 B. C., having governed Judea about 30 years.

TO NEIGH, (ney) v. n. [hnegan, Sax.] to make a noise like a horse.

NEIGH, (ney) s. the noise made by a horse.

NEIGHBOUR, (neybur) s. [neigebur, Sax.] one who lives near to another; one familiar to another; any thing situated near or next to another; intimate; confidant.

TO NEIGHBOUR, v. a. to adjoin to; to confide on; to acquaint with; to make near to.

W. Hallard

DEATH OF HORATIO VASSANT NELSON.

A.W. Davis.

NEIGHBOURHOOD, (něyburhūd) s. [nēgēburhade, Sax.] a place situated near another; the state of being near to each other; those that live near one another.

NEIGHBOURLY, (něyburhly) a. in the manner of a neighbour; in a social and civil manner.

NEISSE, a city and principality of Silesia, in Prussia. The bishop of Breslaw generally resides here, and has a magnificent palace. The inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in linens and wine. It is seated on the river Neisse, is fortified, and abounds in educational and charitable institutions. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 50. 19. N. Long. 17. 35. E.

NEITHER, (něther) conj. [næther, Sax.] not either. When used in the first branch of a negative sentence, it is answered by nor. Sometimes it is used before the second branch of a negative sentence, when that is the most emphatic. Sometimes it follows a negative at the end of a sentence, and often, though not grammatically, yet emphatically, after another negative.

NEITHER, pron. not either; not one nor the other; not this nor that.

NEILON, HORATIO LORD, one of the most celebrated of the naval commanders of Great Britain. He was born at Burnham, Norfolk; and at an early age entered the service. His first voyages were to the E. and W. Indies, and in one of the N. polar expeditions. When the war broke out between England and the United States, he was engaged in several of the minor undertakings of the fleet; and was so shattered in health, that he stayed on land till the commencement of the war with France. His career in this war, till his death, was one of victory; with the exception of the affair at Teneriffe. He was at Toulon, Bastia, Calvi, St. Vincent, Teneriffe, Cadiz, the Nile, Copenhagen, Boulogne, and Trafalgar. He lost an arm at Teneriffe, an eye at Calvi, and his life in his crowning victory of Trafalgar. His character as a naval commander was such as to make him the idol of the whole service. Cool, fertile in expedients, of undaunted courage; understanding every point of tactics, and able to invent others; his presence carried with it the assurance of triumph. In the part he had occasionally to play, of statesman, he was not so eminent; and his allowing or commanding the execution of the Prince Carracioli has irretrievably stained his name. His private character is fully developed in his infamous connexion with the notorious Lady Hamilton. He received honours almost without number; and a magnificent funeral in Westminster Abbey realized his highest ambition, and closed his work here. He fell in 1805, aged 47 years. His name has not, perhaps never will lose its charm for British seamen; and the curious in strategy have remarked, that the greatest general of modern times, Napoleon Buonaparte, and the greatest admiral, Horatio Nelson, gained their victories by the adoption of the same manoeuvre.

NEILSON, ROBERT, an English churchman, not in orders, but regarded by our school as, at least, a confessor; of the latter part of the 16th century. He was an excellent man, modest and learned; and inflexible in maintaining what are called high-church principles. He was one of the stoutest friends of the nonjurers; and in that his opinions are sufficiently manifested. His works were numerous, and all of them enforced his ecclesiastical views; the one on the Fasts and Festivals of the English Church, is very popular with those who hold his opinions. He died in 1714, aged 58 years.

NEMEAN GAMES, one of the great national religious festivals of the ancient Greeks; instituted, as they held, by Hercules (Hercules); and observed at a village of Argolis, named Nemea. They were celebrated every third year, and the crowns bestowed were made of parsley.

NEMESIS, in Heathen Mythology, one of the old Grecian divinities, who personified the assurance of retribution for guilt.

NENNIUS, one of the early British historians. Very little is known of him, though much that is fabulous is related. The date assigned to him is sometimes the 8th and sometimes the 10th century. His work, the History of the Britons, has some value, from the absence of better documents, but needs careful selection.

NEOLOGY, s. [neos and logos, Gr.] in Church History, the name given to the theological system which arose in Germany, as the fruit and expression of the philosophy, originating with Hobbes and Locke, of England. It consists in the steady and uncompromising rejection of every thing contrary to experience or common sense; and sometimes bore the misnomer of Rationalism. The growth of the Critical Philosophy has overturned it, or changed its form completely. Yet there are in Germany, France, England, and the United States, especially amongst the old school of Unitarians in the last two countries, some who yet hold and teach its cold and barren scepticism.

NEOPHYTE, s. [fr. neos and phao, Gr.] one regenerated; a convert.

NEOTEERIC, a. [neotericus, Lat. from neos, Gr.] modern; novel; late.

NEPAUL, a territory of Hindustan, Asia. It lies amidst the Himalah mountains, between British India and Thibet, and is a long strip of about 500 miles by 100 miles in extent. The mountains are in some cases 20,000 feet high; and the rivers are almost all tributaries of the Ganges. The soil is in part fertile, and produces fruits, &c. &c., resembling those of the temperate zone. It also has mines of iron, lead, copper, &c. And it has wide forests which abound with game, &c. It has a good trade, both in transit between Thibet and India, and in the export of their own productions. Catmandoo is its capital. Pop. about 2,500,000. The religion most generally professed is Buddhism, but Brahminism and Lamaism exist amongst the people on the borders of India and Thibet respectively.

NEPENTHE, s. [ne and penthos, Gr.] in Antiquity, a fabled potion or opiate, which rendered persons insensible to, or made them forget, all their pains and grief.

NEPENTHES, s. in Botany, a very remarkable plant of interior Asia; the end of whose leaves extends into a tendril with a remarkably shaped cup, provided with a lid or cover at the extremity of it. In this cup is water, and some peculiar fresh-water species of shrimp has been occasionally found in it.

NEPHEW, (něpew) s. [nepew, Fr.] a brother or sister's son.

NEPHRITIC, (něphritic) a. [nephros, Gr. nephriticus, Lat.] in Surgery, belonging to the kidneys, reins, or vessels that convey the urine; troubled with the stone; good against the gravel and stone.

NEPOS, CORNELIUS, a Roman historian of the Augustan age, whose Biographies of Greek and Roman Generals are well known, being a common school-book. Some doubts are entertained by critics, however, respecting the genuineness of this work. Nepos flourished about the Christian era.

NEPOTISM, s. [nepotisme, Fr. nepos, Lat.] fondness for nephews. This word is chiefly used to express the extravagant power given by the ruling popes to their nephews, or other relations, in ecclesiastical affairs.

NEPTUNE, s. in Roman Mythology, the god of the sea. He was the brother of Jupiter and Pluto, and the son of Saturn and Ops. He is represented riding upon the waves, armed with a trident, and sitting in a chariot drawn by sea-horses. In Astronomy, the name given to a recently-discovered planet, whose orbit lies outside of that of Uranus. Its discovery was made simultaneously by two young astronomers, Mr. Adams of England, and M. Leverrier of France, by means of calculations founded on Bode's law of planetary distances, and the observed perturbations of the satellites of Uranus. The calculations were made by each in ignorance of what the other was doing, and the indifference of some official astronomers of England alone prevented Mr. Adams from being the first discoverer. This is one of the most brilliant triumphs of modern astronomy; and expands the inductive philosophy into an instrument for the prediction of facts, instead of chaining it down to the drudgery usually assigned it. For further particulars relating to this planet, see SOLAR SYSTEM.

NEPTUNIAN, a. in Geology, the name borne by a school of theorists, at whose head was the illustrious Werner, who explained all phenomena by the action of water. It is nearly exploded now, in consequence of the advance made in the general application of Bacon's philosophy.

NEIRO, CLAUDIUS CÆSAR, one of the emperors of Rome, successor to Claudius. He was son of one of the worst women that ever disgraced the world; and though, at first, under the guidance of Seneca and Burrhus, he governed with lenity and justice, he soon broke out into the most appalling tyranny. One of his first murders was committed on his own mother. Seneca fell by his orders. The detail of his crimes is impossible; and to make his debaucheries and cruelties seem the more frightful, he was wont to practise a kind of jocosity, such as the joining in street frolics with young men of his own age, similar to those practised by the Marquis of Waterford. Rome was burnt down, in good part, during his reign; and he fixed the crime on the Christians, who were forthwith subjected to a frightful persecution; whilst Nero amused himself with the conflagration, and with the punishments, which he knew to be unjust, too. He fell, at last, by a conspiracy, committing suicide in his abject terror of a retributive punishment, in 68 A. D., aged 31 years, and having reigned for nearly 14.

NERVA, MARCUS COCCUUS, the successor of Domitian in the empire of Rome, whose brief reign was a delightful contrast with the polluted and cruel tyranny of his predecessor. He raised Trajan to the throne as his co-emperor, and died in 98 A. D., having reigned not quite a year and a half.

NERVE, s. [nervus, Lat. nerf, Fr.] in Anatomy, a round, white substance, like a cord, composed of several threads or fibres, deriving its origin from the brain or spinal marrow, and distributed through all parts of the body, serving as the organ of sensation or motion, and consisting of two kinds, called nerves of motion and nerves of sensation. The beneficial operation of the recently discovered anæsthetic, or stupor-producing, agents, æther and chloroform, depends on this distinction. The nerves of motion being unaffected, whilst those of sensation are benumbed by them. A sinew or tendon. In Poetry, any thing which gives strength or is essential.

NERVELESS, a. faint; without strength; weak.

NERVOUS, a. [nervus, Lat.] well strung; strong; vigorous; relating to the nerves; having its seat in the nerves. Having weak or disordered nerves, in medical cant.

NESCIENCE, s. [ne and scio, Lat.] ignorance; the state of not knowing.

NESS, a termination added to an adjective, by means of which it is changed to a substantive, signifying state or quality in the abstract. Thus good is changed into goodness.—[ness, Sax.] used at the ends of the names of places, a nose, promontory, or headland; as, Inverness.

NESS, LOCH, one of the Scottish lakes, in Inverness-shire, lying amidst lofty mountains, about 20 miles long, and varying much in breadth. The waters of the Caledonian Canal pass through it. The scenery on and around it is very beautiful.

NEST, s. [Sax.] a bed or structure formed by a bird or fowl, for laying, hatching, and feeding her young in; any place where animals are produced; the young of a nest. Figuratively, a receptacle or place of residence; a collection of drawers, boxes, or pockets, that communicate with each other, or belong to the same frame.

To NEST, v. n. to build nests.

NESTEGG, s. an egg left in the nest to keep the hen from forsaking it.

To NESTLE, v. n. to settle, harbour, or lie close and snug, like birds in a nest.—v. a. to house, as in a nest; to cherish, as a bird does her young in a nest.

NESTLING, s. a bird just taken out of the nest.

NET, s. [net, Sax.] a texture of cord, &c. woven or knit with meshes, used as a snare for birds, fishes, &c.

NETHER, a. [neither, Sax.] lower, opposed to upper; situated in a lower place, or in the internal regions.

NETHERLANDS, or THE LOW COUNTRIES, a kingdom of Europe, lying on the German Ocean, and bounded by Belgium and Germany. It is about 150 miles in length, by 80 in breadth. It is an almost unbroken level, and near the sea, consists of marshes that are preserved by huge dikes, or embankments, which have been raised for the preservation of the land. Some parts of it are actually lower than the sea-level. Its rivers are the Rhine, the Scheldt, the Maase, the Yssel, &c., and it has an inland sea, communicating with the German Ocean, called the Zuyder Zee. Across the opening of this sea a range of islands extends, one of which is Texel. The climate is in accordance with these features of physical geography; and the excellent drainage alone, carried on by machinery, renders it fit for human habitation. It produces some corn, but more cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, &c., with butter, cheese, and other things of this kind. Its manufactures are known all over the world; they are principally linen and woollen goods, with silk, sugar, gin, &c. In trade it has always held a high rank, but the carrying trade, which at one time they almost monopolized, has been much injured by the navigation laws of various countries. It is divided into 10 provinces, Brabant, Guelderland, N. and S. Holland, (a name often wrongly given to the whole country,) Zeeland, Utrecht, Friesland, Gröningen, Overysse, and Drent. (See these names.) To which may be added the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, which belongs to the king of the Netherlands, (see LUXEMBURG,) and the Duchy of Limburg. (See LIMBURG.) The capital is Amsterdam. Pop. about 3,000,000.

NETHERMOST, a. [the superlative of nether.] lowest; below any thing that it is compared with.

NETTING, s. a piece of net-work.

NETTLE, s. [netel, Sax.] in Botany, a stinging herb.

To NETTLE, v. a. to sting, irritate, or provoke.

NETWORK, s. the work with which a net is made; any thing made with interstices resembling the meshes of a net.

NEVA, the river on which St. Petersburg stands, which connects the lake Ladoga with the Gulf of Finland.

NEVER, ad. [nefre, Sax.] at no time, either past, present, or to come; in no degree; none, or not a single one. "He answered him to never a word," Matt. xxvii. 14. This word is used in a form of speech which is a solecism; as in, "He is mistaken, though never so wise;"—which should be, "He is mistaken, though ever so wise;"—or else supplying the ellipsis, thus, "He is mistaken, though there never was a person so wise." In this sense, it always includes a comparison, and is followed by so.

NEVERS, the capital of the department of Nièvre, in France. It stands on the Loire, and is not a very well-built town. It has a cathedral, two palaces, and some government buildings. Several excellent educational institutions are here. It is a great place for iron manufactures of all kinds, and for other manufactures also. It is 140 miles from Paris. Pop. about 16,000. Lat. 47. 0. N. Long. 3. 9. E.

NEVERTHELESS, ad. notwithstanding.

NEUCHÂTEL, a canton of Switzerland, lying next to France, and bounded by the cantons of Bern and Vaud. It is about 50 miles long, and 20 broad. It is in the midst of the Jura mountains, some of whose peaks are 3000 feet high. The Doubs is its chief river. The air is healthy and temperate, but the soil is not every where alike fertile; it produces, however, a good deal of wine, both white and red; There is a great deal of manufacturing industry also displayed. The capital is of the same name, and is situated at the end of the lake of Neuchâtel. It is 25 miles from Bern. Pop. about 7000. Lat. 47. 7. N. Long. 7. 33. E. This canton is held as a principality by the king of Prussia. Pop. about 60,000. It is called Neuchâtel in Germany.

NEUCHÂTEL, LAKE OF, in Switzerland, is 25 miles long, by 5 broad. It lies between the canton of the same name and that of Bern. It receives the waters of the rivers Orbe, Reuse, Seyon, &c.; and discharges its own into the Rhine, through the lake Bienné and the river Aar. Neuchâtel stands on its banks.

NEVIS, one of the W. Indian islands, divided from St. Christopher's by a narrow channel. Here are springs of fresh water, and a hot bath, much of the same nature as those of Bath in England. It is a small island, but very fruitful, and a colony of the English. Charlestown is its only town. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 17. 14. N. Long. 62. 35. W.

NEURALGIA, s. [neurion and algos, Gr.] in Nosology, a disease of the nerves, whose chief symptom is the most acute pain, usually confined to some one nerve, and occasionally shooting along it to its very extremities. One of the most common and distressing varieties of this disease is the tic douloureux.

NEUROLOGY, s. [neurion and logos, Gr.] a description of, or discourse concerning, the nerves.

NEUROTOMY, s. [neurion and temno, Gr.] the anatomy of the nerves.

NEUTER, a. [Lat.] indifferent; not engaged in or taking part with either side. In Grammar, applied to a noun or adjective, &c. which implies no sex; applied to a verb, that which signifies neither action nor passion, but some state or condition of being; as, I sit.

NEUTER, s. one indifferent, or not engaged in any party.

NEUTRAL, a. [Fr. from neuter, Lat.] indifferent; not acting; not engaged on either side; neither good nor bad. In Chemistry, neither acid nor alkaline.

NEUTRAL, s. one who does not act or engage on either side.

NEUTRALITY, s. a state of indifference, of neither friendship nor hostility; a state between good and evil.

To NEUTRALIZE, v. a. to render neutral. NEUTRALLY, ad. in an indifferent manner; on neither side. NEW, a. [neue, Sax.] lately made or had; fresh; not used; modern; having the effect of novelty; not accustomed or familiar; renewed or repaired, so as to recover its first state; fresh after any cessation or impediment; of no ancient extraction. Generally applied to things in the same sense as young is to persons. In Composition, it signifies newly, or lately.

NEWARK-UPON-TRENT, Nottinghamshire. It is seated on the river Trent, over which is a bridge into a small island, made by the river. Here is a handsome and most spacious market-place. The trade is chiefly in corn, cattle, wool, &c.; and there is a considerable manufacture of malt, and a small one of sack. It once had a magnificent castle, of great importance, now in ruins. It is 124 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 10,195.

NEW BEDFORD, a town of Massachusetts, United States. It stands on the Acushnet river, and is very regularly laid out. The town-house, court-house, and custom-house, with other public buildings, are fine structures. The whale fishery is the chief support of this place. There are several manufactures carried on, and ship-building is a very considerable business. It is 434 miles from Washington. Pop. 15,000.

NEW BRITAIN. See BRITAIN, NEW.

NEW BRUNSWICK, a town of New Jersey, United States. It stands on the Karitan river, over which is a bridge. It is connected with an extensive scheme of railways, and is at the end of a fine and useful canal. There are many fine buildings in the upper part of the town. Rutgers's College is here, which has a good library. It is 193 miles from Washington. Population, 8693.

NEW BRUNSWICK, the name of one part of British N. America. It lies on the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is bounded by Nova Scotia, the United States, and Canada. It has several hills of some height, but is not mountainous. It is chiefly covered with dense forests, and has some wide swamps, but, where cleared, the soil is rich and fertile. The river St. Lawrence flows on one side of it; St. John, St. Croix, the Miramichi, are its other rivers. Iron, copper, and other metals, with coal, and many valuable kinds of stone and marble, abound. It has also excellent salt, and other kinds of mineral springs. The timber of the forests is of the most useful kind. The fur trade is carried on here with success. Game and fish are plentiful. Fredericton is the capital. Pop. about 100,000.

NEWBURY, Berkshire. It has a handsome market-house, and is seated on the river Kennet. It was formerly eminent for the clothing manufacture, but is much declined in this respect; yet many of the people are employed in spinning. It is 56 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 6379.

NEWBURYPORT, a town of Massachusetts, United States. It stands at the mouth of the Merrimac, and has a safe and spacious harbour. The place is regularly built, and has some handsome public edifices. Its fisheries are of considerable value. It is 478 miles from Washington. Pop. 7161. The celebrated English preacher, George Whitefield, died and is buried here.

NEWCASTLE, or NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, Northumberland. It is situated among steep hills, on the Tyne, which is here a fine and deep river; so that ships of 3 or 4 hundred tons burden may safely come up to the town, though the large colliers are stationed at Shields. It is a very secure haven, and is defended by Clifford's Fort, which effectually commands all vessels that enter the river. The town may be considered as divided into two parts, of which Gateshead, on the Durham side, is one; and both are joined by a fine stone bridge consisting of 9 arches. The town rises on the N. bank of the river, where the streets upon the ascent are exceedingly steep. Many of the houses are built of stone, but some of them are timber, and the rest of brick. The castle, which is old and ruins, overlooks the whole town. The exchange, church-houses, and other public buildings, are elegant; and the quay for landing goods is long and large. Here is a hall for the surgeons, a large hospital, built by the contribution of the keel-men, for the maintenance of the poor of their fraternity; and several other charitable foundations. It is situated in the centre of the great collieries, which have for centuries supplied London, all the eastern, and some of the midland and southern parts of the kingdom with coal. This trade has been the source of great opulence to Newcastle; which, besides, exports large quantities of lead, salt, salmon, butter, tallow, and grindstones. Ships are sent hence to the Greenland fishery. It also possesses manufactories of steel, iron, and woollen cloth; and in the town and neighbourhood are several glass-houses. The streets in the old part of Newcastle are unsightly and narrow, but the newer parts are handsome and commodious. Newcastle is 270 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 49,800. See GATESHEAD.

NEWCASTLE, or NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME, Staffordshire. It has a manufactory of cloth, and a large one of hats, here being an incorporated company of felt-makers. In the neighbourhood are many manufactories of stone ware. It is seated on a branch of the Trent, 149 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 9869.

NEW COLLEGE, Oxford, was founded by the celebrated William of Wykeham, in the 14th century. The buildings are very noble specimens of architecture, and the chapel is richly ornamented. It is a very rich establishment.

NEWCOME, DR. WILLIAM, an Irish prelate, who was an eminent divine and biblical scholar. His works which are best known, are his Harmony of the Gospels, and the Translations of Ezekiel and the Minor Prophets. The principle on which these translations are made is, however, too lax, and allows too much conjectural emendation to give them much intrinsic value. But they helped considerably to promote the study of the original Scriptures, as did his other works. He died in 1800, aged 71 years.

NEWEL, s. the centre round which a spiral staircase is carried.

NEW ENGLAND. See ENGLAND, NEW.

NEWENT, Gloucestershire. It is seated on a branch of the Severn, navigable for boats. Some valuable mines of excellent coal, the beds of which are of great magnitude, are here; and there is a navigable canal hence to Hereford. It is 114 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 3099.

NEWFANGLED, a. formed with a vain love of novelty.

NEWFANGLEDNESS, NEWFANGLEDNESS, s. a vain or foolish love of novelty.

NEW FOREST, an extensive tract on the coast of Hampshire, which was cleared and enclosed as a royal hunting-ground by William the Conqueror. It covers about 90,000 acres. But the real forest belonging to the crown, and held by a staff of officers, and protected by special laws and statutes, is about 60,000 acres; the rest being under cultivation.

NEWFOUNDLAND, a triangular island on the eastern coast of N. America, forming the E. boundary of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It is 350 miles in length, and 200 in breadth. It is hilly, and yields coal and other minerals. There is great plenty of venison, fish, and fowls, but very little corn, fruit, or cattle; upon which account the inhabitants have not only their clothes and furniture, but provisions, from England. The great trade of the island arises from the cod-fishery, on the Great Bank near it. St. John's is its chief town. Pop. about 100,000.

NEWFOUNDLAND DOG, s. in Natural History, a remarkably fine variety of the canine species, derived from a small but excellent breed indigenous to the island of Newfoundland. They are remarkably intelligent and docile, and have gained a good name by the frequency with which they have saved persons from being drowned.

NEW HAMPSHIRE, one of the United States, N. America. It lies on the Atlantic; and is bounded by the States of Maine, Massachusetts, and Vermont; and touches on the province of Lower Canada. It is about 160 miles long, and 50 broad; and is divided into 10 counties. It is mountainous in some parts, having hills of above 3000 feet; but near the sea is level, and the coast is low and sandy. Its rivers are the Connecticut and the Merrimac, navigable in part for boats, and several other smaller ones. It has also some lakes. It yields coal, iron, and other valuable minerals. It is also a fertile country, the elevated parts affording fine grazing lands. It exports the produce of these lands, and of its fisheries. There are many very valuable manufactories here of woollen, cotton, iron goods, &c. &c. It has 28 banks. There are but 2 colleges. Concord is its chief town, and Portsmouth its chief seat of trade. Pop. 284,574.

NEWHAVEN, a city and semi-capital of Connecticut, United States. It stands at the head of a bay opening into Long Island Sound. It is finely situated, and built with great regularity; and has some splendid public buildings, which are gathered together in its centre. The houses are chiefly of wood; and the whole place has a quiet and rural aspect that is remarkable in a city of such extent. It has many important institutions; one of the chief of which is Yale College, which is the most valuable in the Union. It has a fine set of buildings, with library, museum, and a good staff of professors. There are here numerous and extensive manufactories; and its commerce is greater than that of any other place in the same State. The harbour is safe, but gets gradually shallower. It is 300 miles from Washington. Pop. 12,960. Six other places in the States bear the same name.

NEW JERSEY, one of the United States, N. America, lying on the Atlantic, and bounded by New York, Delaware, and Pennsylvania, from which last it is divided by Delaware bay and river. It is 160 miles long and 50 broad, and is divided into 18 counties. The N. part is mountainous, the middle is agreeably diversified by hill and valley, and the S. is level and sandy. It produces iron, and other valuable mineral treasures; corn, fruits, cattle, tar, pitch, &c. &c. The rivers are the Hudson, the Delaware, the Karitan, the Passaic, &c., and there are several excellent bays. The commerce and manufactures are extensive. There are 26 banks. There are also 2 colleges, with theological seminaries attached to them. Trenton is the capital; and Newark is a great place for trade. Pop. 373,306.

NEW LONDON, a city of Connecticut, United States. It stands on the Thames, and is in general not very well built. The harbour is one of the best in the United States, and is both spacious and safe, and is defended by 2 forts. Beside various manufactures which are carried on here, a great amount of capital is embarked in the whale fishery, with great profit. It is 353 miles from Washington. Pop. 5519. There are in the Union 8 other places so named.

NEWLY, ad. lately; not long ago.
NEWMARKET, Cambridgeshire, on the borders of Suffolk. It consists chiefly of one long, well-built street, the N. side in Suffolk, and the S. side in Cambridgeshire. It is chiefly celebrated for horse-races, (its heath being the finest race-course in England,) and the two meetings in April and October are the first in the kingdom. It is situated in a healthy air, 61 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Thursday. Pop. 2566.

NEWNESS, s. freshness; the quality of being lately made, discovered, or possessed.

NEWNHAM, Gloucestershire. It is seated on the W. side of the Severn, over which it has a ferry. It has to this day the sword of state which King John gave with their charter. It is 112 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1105.

NEW ORLEANS, the capital of Louisiana, United States. It stands on the Mississippi, about 100 miles from its mouth. It is a very large place, and has 5 faubourgs. A huge embankment protects it from inundation, its level being below that of the river. The city is generally well built, and it has a great number of squares. The public edifices, churches, &c. are fine. Its situation for commerce is very commanding, having not only the Mississippi, and all its branches, to bring trade to it; but numerous canals and railroads also. The harbour is extensive, and the river, near it, half a mile in width. Its inhabitants present a most remarkable variety of manners, language, and appearance, being in great part still of French origin. It is 1172 miles from Washington. Pop. 102,193; of whom 23,448 are slaves.

NEWPORT, Hampshire, in the Isle of Wight. It is called in Latin, Medina, from whence the whole island, on the E. and W. sides of it, is called E. and W. Medina. It is situated almost in the centre of the island, on the river Cowes, (which falls 7 miles below it into the sea, and which is navigable up to the quay here for small vessels,) 91 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 3858.

NEWPORT, Shropshire. It has a handsome free-school and a market-house; and is 140 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2497.

NEWPORT, Monmouthshire. It is seated on the river Usk, over which is a handsome bridge. It has a good harbour, whence it has its name; and is 147 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 10,815.

NEWPORT, Pembrokeshire, Wales. It is seated at the bottom of a high hill, on the Nevers, a fine navigable river, at the bottom of a bay of the same name. 235 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1751.

NEWPORT, semi-capital of Rhode Island, United States. It stands about 5 miles from the ocean; and has a fine harbour, easy of access, safe, deep, and capacious. It is most pleasantly situated, and has some fine buildings connected with the government, &c. Its commerce is considerable; and it has good fisheries. It is 408 miles from Washington. Pop. 5333. There are 14 other places similarly designated in the United States.

NEWPORT-PAGNEL, Buckinghamshire. It is seated on a small river, which soon after falls into the Ouse. It is noted for the manufacture of bone-lace, for which it is a sort of staple; and it flourishes considerably on that account. It is 51 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 3569.

NEWRY, Armaugh and Down, in Ulster, Ireland. It is situated on the side of a steep hill, at the foot of which is the Newry Water, having over it two stone bridges, and there is a third bridge over a navigable canal, by which it has a communication with Lough Neagh and Carlingford Bay. Newry is so much improved in its shipping trade, buildings, and the linen manufacture, that it is now the largest town in the county. It is 50 miles from Dublin. Pop. 11,972.

NEWS, s. (used only in the plural.) fresh account of something; something not heard before.

NEWSMONGER, s. one who deals in newspapers; one who makes it his business to hear and tell news.

NEWSPAPER, s. one of the essentials of modern life, and the most effective means of spreading information respecting every subject of civilized man's care. These daily, weekly, and monthly sheets are, however, chiefly employed for the circulation of political opinions, and whether they lead or follow the opinions of their supporters, exert an influence on the community, which no other means of instruction and agitation can approach. In the time of the Puritan Revolution of England, they first assumed this station. During the French Revolution they did more than all the orators and insurgents. In England, America, France, and other countries that have a free press, they are the chief organs by which the reflecting and wise, and the designing and plotting, address the public ear; and they are multiplied beyond belief. In Germany, and other countries under a censorship, they are the means by which absolutism secures itself against the people. In all the colonies they play a very conspicuous part. And they are, indeed, one of the most characteristic signs of the age.

NEWT, s. [Sax.] in Natural History, an eft; a small water lizard.

NEWTON, SIR ISAAC, England's greatest mathematician and natural philosopher. He was educated at Grantham grammar-school, and at Cambridge, and began, during his studies at that university, those great discoveries which have immortalized his name. He was first appointed to a professorship at Cambridge, and afterwards appeared in parliament, and was made warden and master of the Mint. Perhaps his highest honour was that of being president of the Royal Society. Queen Anne knighted him, and he died in 1727, aged 85 years, receiving at his funeral honours almost equaling those paid to royalty itself. It will be impossible to give more than a brief and very imperfect outline of his labours, because most of his discoveries were made in the highest regions of science. In mathematics, he invented, contemporaneously with Leibnitz, with whom he was in consequence involved in a bitter controversy, the calculus, an instrument of discovery, the powers of which are even yet but partly proved. He called it the Method of Fluxions; and his notation has been superseded by the clearer and more easy one, adopted by his rival discoverer. Several of the most important steps preliminary to this were also taken by him, and the power shown in them is overlooked in consequence of the superior brilliancy of intellect displayed in the crowning invention. His mind was of such a penetrating character, that he found Euclid to be but a collection of axiomatic propositions; and at the same time, he was able to use the method of Euclid in teaching, with the same facility and elegance that he employed his own analytical method in making his discoveries. This mathematical faculty was the basis of all his skill, and led him to those other branches of science with which his name is more popularly associated. In astronomy, he discovered and applied the law of gravitation, which he developed so as not merely to explain the observations of preceding astronomers, but so as to correct their errors, and also to anticipate other discoveries. He first placed the Copernican system on a secure foundation, and opened the way to all the splendid discoveries since made, including, especially, that of the planet Neptune, and to all that Laplace and his fellows taught and arranged. In optics, he proposed a novel hypothesis respecting the nature of light, which has, however, been set aside for that of Huyghens; he analyzed it, applied with astonishing effect his mathematics to it, improved the construction of lenses, invented a reflecting telescope, and, in fact, first made the study of this branch scientific in its method; to which may be traced all the astonishing discoveries of later days. In his office of Mint master, he also studied the nature of assays. In chronology, he proposed a new way of computing dates, by which many errors were corrected. He applied himself also to the study of the prophecies of Daniel, and of the Book of Revelation, and wrote a masterly essay on the interpolation in the First Epistle of John, and the fifth chapter, relating to the three witnesses. His great work is entitled Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy, or, more briefly, Principia. His Optics, Universal Arithmetick, and other minor works are deserving of study. He also communicated a great number of papers to the Transactions of the Royal Society, and left many unpublished MSS. His character was quite in keeping with the genius of his works; calm, modest, yet assured; and the bitterness of his controversy with Leibnitz is, perhaps, more to be charged to the manners of the age, and the proceedings which he adopted or allowed in respect of Flamsteed, to the petulant and feeble self-importance of the astronomer royal, than to Newton himself.

NEWTON, JOHN, the friend of Cowper, and one of the most affectionate and affecting preachers of evangelical truth, was an English clergyman at Olney, and afterwards at St. Mary's Woolnoth, London. He was in early life a sailor, and of very bad character; but after the striking change, which he has so well described, took place, he devoted himself to study, and to the ministry. The friendship of Cowper was undoubtedly of great advantage to him. His Hymns, and his Cardiphonia, and Letters, are well known and universally esteemed. He died in 1807, aged 82 years.

NEWTON, DR. THOMAS, an English bishop, whose Disquisitions on the Prophecies are a standard work on that subject; and whose editions of Milton, and Life of that poet, helped to extend his fame. He died in 1782, aged 75 years.

NEW YORK, the most populous of the United States. N. America, lies on the Atlantic, and stretches to the lakes Erie and Ontario, and the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers, which divide it from Canada. It is bounded by Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. It is crossed by two ranges of mountains, called the Catskill Mountains, the Highlands, Adirondach Mountains, &c., and having some points above 5000 feet high, and several surpassing 2000 feet. On the E. and W. of these heights the surface is more level, or quite plain. The rivers are the Hudson, the Mohawk, the Genesee, the Black River, &c. &c., with St. Lawrence, Niagara, and others on its boundaries. It has very many lakes, beside those next to Canada: Lakes Champlain, George, Oneida, Cayuga, &c. &c. Long Island, Staten Island, Grand Island, (above Niagara Falls,) belong to it. Iron, coal, building-stones, and a great variety of valuable metals and minerals are obtained abundantly. Corn, fruits, timber, cattle, silk, sugar, wine, &c. &c. are produced in great plenty. It has an immense trade; and its manufactures are exceedingly extensive. There are 96 banks. And there are 13 colleges for general, theological, or medical purposes. New York is its capital and greatest commercial place. Other places of great importance will be noticed elsewhere. Pop. 2,428,921.

NEW YORK, capital of the State so named, in the United States. It stands at the S. end of New York island, at the confluence of the Hudson and East river, which connects its harbour with Long Island Sound. The old parts of the city are very irregularly built, but the more modern parts are well built, with wide and straight streets; to which pattern many of the other parts have been conformed. Broadway, the great thoroughfare, is 3 miles long, and 80 feet wide; and several other streets are proportionably fine. The most noble public buildings are the merchants' exchange, the custom-house, the city hall, the hall of justice, &c. &c. The Croton water-works are a very splendid work, the aqueduct being 33 miles long. There are many noble institutions here; such as Columbia college, and New York university, each with excellent libraries, and every thing needful in apparatus and professorships; 2 theological seminaries, also with good libraries; the college of physicians and surgeons, and other educational and benevolent foundations. There are, besides, 2 fine public libraries, and several others connected with mechanics' and literary institutions, museums, galleries of art, &c. &c. The churches are also fine buildings. And the theatres, hotels, and other like establishments are handsome structures. The principal part of the shipping lies in East river, and in its harbour (which is safe and commodious, being 25 miles in circumference) are always to be found vessels from all parts of the world. Packet ships and steamers run regularly to England and other parts of Europe, and to all the other great ports in the States. There are 30 banks; and manufactures of all kinds are carried on. There are on all sides strong defences; and a considerable garrison occupies the barracks. Bridges connect the city with several small islands, and with the mainland; and ferries, with Brooklyn, and other neighbouring towns. It is 225 miles from Washington. Pop. 312,710.

NEXT, a, the superlative of near, [Sax.] nearest, applied to place. Immediately succeeding, applied to order. Nextest in degree.

NEXT, ad, at the time or turn immediately succeeding.

NEY, MICHAEL, a peer and marshal of France, and one of the bravest of the generals raised by Napoleon. He was originally a law-student, but disliking the profession, he enlisted as a private; and in the first revolutionary war he displayed such courage that he rose in less than nine years to the rank of general of brigade. He was attached to Napoleon by every tie that could bind such a soldier, and he served with such distinction in Germany, Prussia, Spain, Russia, and in the last German campaign of the emperor. He received every mark of distinction, and the epithet bravest of the brave. On the return of Napoleon from Elba, he was sent to arrest his progress; and he deserted to his side, carrying the army with him. He fought at Waterloo; and returned to Paris, where, after the capitulation, and in spite of its express provisions, he was tried and shot. He fell by this unworthy means, under the brand of treason, in 1815, aged 46 years.

NIAGARA, the river by which the waters of Lake Erie are conveyed to Lake Ontario. It is about 33 miles long, and has in its course one of the most magnificent cataracts in the world. The river is at first some miles wide, but it contracts at the rapids; and being divided below by Goat Island, forms two falls, the larger of which is 407 yards in a direct line across it, but is bent by the wear of the waters into a hollow form, which nearly doubles its direct length. The fall on the American side is about 300 yards across, and its height 160 feet. The height of the horse-shoe fall is about 150 feet. Under the arch formed by this terrific torrent curious tourists often venture, but it is a perilous experiment. The surface of the water immediately below the fall is remarkably tranquil, and its rate not rapid, the great mass of the waters escaping by an under current, which appears about 4 miles down. A bridge is built over the smaller fall to Goat Island; and platforms are erected so as to enable visitors to obtain the most favourable view of the scene. A railway has been projected which will require a suspension bridge to be carried over the river directly in front of the falls. Many foolish stories are told of Indians being carried down in their canoes, and being alive in the pool below; but when the Caroline drifted over, she was literally shivered to atoms; not being seen at all beyond half the length of the rapids above the fall. It was once reported that they were destroyed,—had become a mere rapid; but the structure of the rocks makes this impossible; the upper bed being a very hard limestone, and the lower a much softer bed, and both lying almost horizontally; the cataract, by wearing away the softer rock, and by the falling in of the upper, has already cut a channel from the heights of Queenston, over which it originally fell, and this process still continues, but most slowly, and will continue till the channel be cut to the lake Erie itself. The thunder of this immense mass of waters falling may be heard 15 miles.

NIAS, a, [nias, Fr.] simple; silly; foolish.

NIB, s, [neb, Sax. nebbe, Belg.] the bill or beak of a bird; the point of any thing, as that of a pen.

To NIB, v. a, to cut the point of a pen.

NIBBED, a. having a point; having its point cut.

TO NIBBLE, v. a. to bite by little at a time; to eat slowly; to bite, as a fish does the bait.—v. n. to bite at. Figuratively, to carp at or find fault with.

NIBBLER, s. one that bites by little at a time.

NICARAGUA, a large lake of Central America, lying E. of the Rocky Mountains; and giving its name to one of the states of Guatemala.

NICE, an ancient and considerable sea-port, on the confines of France and Italy, capital of a county of the same name, in the Sardinian dominions. It is very agreeably situated on a sharp rock, with a strong citadel, at the mouth of the river Pagliu, and is a place of some trade. It is 83 miles from Turin. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 43. 42. N. Long. 7. 23. E.

NICE, a. [nise, Sax.] accurate in judgment to minute exactness and culpable delicacy; delicate; scrupulously captious; squeamish; refined.

NICELY, ad. in such a manner as discovers the greatest accuracy, delicateness, and the most scrupulous exactness.

NICENE CREED, in the Roman and Anglican Churches, is a formula of faith drawn up first at the council of Nice in the year 325, which was assembled on occasion of the spread of Arianism; and finally settled at the council of Constantinople, 60 years afterwards.

NICENESS, s. the quality of being minutely exact, superfluously delicate, and excessively scrupulous.

NYCETY, s. minute accuracy of thought or performance; squeamishness; minute observance, or critical exactness; delicate and cautious treatment; effeminacy. In the plural, dainties or delicacies in eating.

NICHE, s. [Fr.] a hollow or recess, in which a statue may be placed.

NICK, s. [nicke, Teut.] that exact point of time in which a thing is most proper or convenient to be done; a notch cut in any thing; a lucky cast; a score or reckoning.

TO NICK, v. a. to hit; to touch luckily; to perform at that point of time which is most proper and convenient; to cut in nicks or notches; to suit like tallies cut in notches; to defeat or cozen; to disappoint by some trick.

NICKEL, s. in Chemistry, is a fine white metal, ductile and malleable, but of difficult fusion. It is attracted by the magnet, and has itself the property of attracting iron. It is used most in the manufacture of spoons, and other articles usually made of silver.

NICKNAME, s. a name given to a person or body of men in scoff and contempt.

TO NICKNAME, v. a. to call by some reproachful name.

NICOBAR ISLANDS, a group of islands in the Indian Ocean, taking their name from the largest amongst them. They lie between Sumatra and the Andaman islands. They are hilly, and mostly covered with woods, in which excellent timber is found, and delicious tropical fruit. The inhabitants are Malays, though differing in many things from those of the main-land, and are not numerous. There is no European settlement on any of them. Lat. 7. 7. N. Long. 93. 0. E.

NICOLAÏ, CHRISTOPHER FREDERICK, a German author and bookseller of the last century. He was settled at Dublin, and his works were chiefly critical, those best known being Letters on the present State of Literature, and Anecdotes of Frederic II. He edited the General German Library; and was engaged in many controversies, arising from the acerbity of his judgments. He died in 1811, aged 78 years.

NICOLAÏTANS, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect of the first century, of whom nothing is certainly known beyond their condemnation in the Book of Revelation.

NICOMEDES, the name of three kings of Bithynia, the second of whom was educated at Rome, and the third gave to the empire of Rome its first Asiatic possession, for he bequeathed his kingdom to it. This one died in 74 B. C.

TO NICITATE, v. n. [nicitudo, Lat.] to wink.

NYCTITATING MEMBRANE, in Animal Physiology, is an inner eye-lid, which lies in the corner of the eyes of birds, and is drawn rapidly in a horizontal direction across the cornea: it is translucent.

NYDGET, s. [niding, Sax.] a term with which a person was formerly bandied, who did not repair to the royal standard in times of danger; a coward.

NIDIFICATION, s. [nidus and facio, Lat.] the act of building nests.

NIDIROSITY, s. belching, attended with the taste of undigested roast-meat.

NYDOROUS, a. [nidor, Lat.] resembling the smell or taste of roasted fat.

NIDULATION, s. [nidulor, from nidus, Lat.] the time of re-maining in the nest.

NIEBUHR, CARSTEN, a celebrated German traveller. He studied at Hamburg and Göttingen, and was engaged as geographer to the Danish exploring expedition to Arabia. He went, besides visiting Arabia and Egypt, to India, Persia, and Turkey; and returned to Copenhagen after an absence of nearly 6 years, alone; his companions had all perished. The published narrative of his travels is very interesting, and is known in England by means of translations. He held a situation under the government afterwards, and received various honours and rewards for his services. He died in 1815, aged 82 years.

NIEBUHR, BARTHOLOMGE, son of the foregoing, the celebrated historian of Rome. He studied at Kiel; and after holding some subordinate situations, visited England. On his return he received an appointment at Copenhagen; and after several changes, he finally entered the Prussian service. He rapidly rose to be a privy counsellor; but afterwards retired to a private and literary situation in connexion with the court. He next appears as lecturer on Roman History at Berlin; but on the outbreak of war again, he held another public post. On the final establishment of peace, he was sent as ambassador to Rome, where he had the opportunity of studying the very scenes of the history he was to unravel and elucidate. After 7 years he returned to Germany, and settled at Bonn, where he again lectured on the History and Antiquities of Rome. The 3 days of July at Paris, and the Belgian revolution which followed, filled him with such perturbation that he died in 1831, aged 55 years. Niebuhr's great work was his Roman History: beside that he wrote some smaller and less important ones, and edited a few classical works. In his History he examined with keen eye and steady judgment the original sources of Roman history, and exposes their true value. It is a work of immense learning and research, and not less originality. But in the proper sense of the word, the parts he lived to finish are not history, but criticism. Dr. Arnold's History may be looked upon as giving a fair exposition of the results of Niebuhr's inquiries, and as exhibiting the genuine fruits of Niebuhr's critical principles. Nothing can be more perverse than the application of Niebuhr's method to the documents of Scripture history, and especially to the narratives of our Lord's ministry and works. Nothing like the spirit of Strauss can be detected in Niebuhr; and yet he was writing only of secular history, whilst Strauss was engaged on the history of man's redemption. Niebuhr's private life and character was of the most winning kind; and the anxiety which brought him to his grave, was not the result of cowardice, but of too great love for those who had made his home so dear to him, and which he feared would be spoiled by war.

NIECE, (niece) s. [Fr.] the daughter of a brother or sister. NIEUENTYT, or NIEUVENTYT, BERNARD, a Dutch philosopher and mathematician of the beginning of the last century. His name is known in England, popularly even, by means of a work on the works of nature, written in a deeply devout spirit, and containing as much information as could be gathered together then. He died in 1718, aged 64 years.

NIEVRE, a department of France, bounded by Côte-d'Or, Yonne, Loiret, Cher, Allier, and Saône et Loire. It is 70 miles long, by about 60 broad. It is hilly generally; and its rivers are the Allier, the Yonne, and the Loire, and, among several of less note, the Nièvre, a tributary of the Loire, whence it is named. It yields granite and building-stones of several kinds; and coal and iron are also found. Corn and wine are produced in very great quantities; and cattle, &c. are plentiful. Abundance of timber is procured in the forests, which are very spacious. Iron is the chief article of manufacture. Nevers is its capital. Pop. about 320,000.

NYGER, See QUORRA.

NYGER, C. PESCENNIUS, one of the military leaders who revolted when the imperial throne was sold by auction to Didius Julianus. He was attacked by Severus, who had dethroned Julianus, and defeated in several battles, and at length killed. This was in 194 A. D.

NIGGARD, s. [nigggr, Isl.] a person who gives or spends little, or with unwillingness.

NIGGARD, a. sordid; avaricious; parsimonious; sparing. NIGGARDISH, a. somewhat inclined to avarice or parsimony. NIGGARDINESS, s. avarice.

NIGGARDLY, a. avaricious; sparing; wary.

NIGGARDLY, ad. in a sparing or grudging manner.

NIGHT, (the gh in this word and its following derivatives is mute in pronunciation; as, nî, nîgh, &c.) prep. [nygh, Sax.] not far from.

NIGHT, ad. at no great distance; a place not far off.

NIGHT, a. near; at no great distance. Allied closely by blood, applied to kindred.

NIGHTLY, ad. nearly; within a little.

NIGHTNESS, s. nearness; proximity.

NIGHT, (this word, and its following compounds and derivatives, is pronounced with the gh mute, as, nî, nîgh, nîghale, &c.) s. [nîht, Sax.] the time when the sun is below our horizon.

TO-NIGHT, ad. this night.

NIGHTCAP, s. cap worn in bed, or in undress.

NIGHTCROW, s. in Ornithology, a bird that cries in the night.

NIGHTDOG, s. a dog that hunts in the night.

NIGHTDRESS, s. a dress worn at night.

NIGHTED, a. blind; black.

NIGHTFARING, s. travelling in the night.

NIGHTFOUNDERED, a. distressed for want of knowing the way in the night.

NIGHTHAG, s. a witch, supposed to wander in the night.

NIGHTJAR, s. in Ornithology, a name given to the goat-sucker, from the noise it makes.

NIGHTINGALE, s. [nyght and gale, Sax.] in Ornithology, one of the common British migratory warblers, whose song has ever been the admiration of those who could appreciate the beautiful. It is a plain bird, and very bold in its habits, and sings both day and night.

NIGHTLY, ad. in the night; by night; every night.

NIGHTLY, a. done or acting by night.

NIGHTMAN, s. one who cleanses bins, &c. by night.

NIGHT-MAIR, s. in popular superstitions, an evil spirit, called also Inebus, which sits on the breasts of sleepers, and suggests frightful dreams. It is one of the features of dyspepsia, and is the penalty often paid by gourmands for the indulgence of too substantial suppers. It also often arises, with persons of delicate habit, from an inconvenient posture assumed during sleep. See INCUBUS, MARE, &c.

NIGHTPIECE, s. a picture, so coloured as to be supposed to be seen by candle-light, not by day-light; a description of some scene in the night.

NIGHTTRAIL, s. [nyght, Sax. and nyght] a cover thrown over the dress by night to keep it clean.

NIGHTTRULE, s. a tumult in the night.

NIGHTSHADE, s. [nîht scada, Sax.] in Botany, a poisonous plant of two kinds, one called the common, and the other deadly, nightshade.

NIGHTSHINING, a. glittering or shining by night.

NIGHTWALKER, s. one who roves in the night upon ill designs.

NIGHTWARD, a. approaching towards night.

NIGHTWATCH, s. a part or time of night distinguished by a change of the watch.

NIGHTS, NIGHTS, in Law, issues which the sheriff says are nothing worth and illeivable, from the insufficiency of the parties that should pay them.

NIGHTLY, s. [nîhtlîc, Fr. from nîht, Lat.] nothingness; the state or quality of being nothing.

NILE, a great river of Egypt, Africa, which rises in the mountains of Abyssinia, from several heads, and very soon flows on in one grand stream, along the hollow Egyptian valley. In some parts of this river there are rocks, whence the water falls several feet, and these are called the cataracts of the Nile. It overflows regularly every year, from June to September, when it begins to decrease. The fertility of Egypt depends upon this, which is caused by the periodical rains which fall every year between the tropics, and more particularly in Abyssinia. All the great cities and towns of Egypt, ancient and modern, stand near this stream.

It is about 2000 miles long; and the Delta at its mouth is equal in extent to the whole of Wales.

TO NIL, v. a. [nîllan, Sax.] to reject; to refuse.

NILL, s. the shining sparks of brass in trying and melting the ore.

TO NIM, v. a. [nemen, Belg.] to take.

NIMBLE, a. [numan, Sax.] moving or acting with quickness or swiftness.

NIMBLENESS, s. the quality of acting or moving with swiftness or quickness.

NIMBLEWITTED, a. too quick in displaying one's own wit and eloquence.

NIMBLY, ad. in a quick, swift, or active manner.

NIMMER, s. a thief; a pilferer.

NIMUEGEN, a strong town of Guelderland, in the kingdom of the Netherlands. It stands on the Waal, and is built as most Dutch towns are. There is a great deal of manufacturing industry displayed here. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 51. 50. N. Long. 5. 48. E.

NINCOMPPOOP, s. [a corruption of non compos, Lat.] a fool or silly person.

NINE, a. [nîun, Goth.] a number consisting of one more than eight, or one less than ten.

NINEFOLD, a. nine times.

NINEPINS, s. a play wherein 9 pieces of wood are set in a square in 3 rows, and knocked down with a bowl.

NINETEEN, a. a number consisting of nine and ten added together.

NINETEENTH, a. next to the eighteenth, or eighteen beyond the first.

NINETIETH, a. the ordinal of ninety, or the tenth nine times told.

NINETY, a. nine times ten.

NINEVEH, in Ancient Geography, a great city standing on the river Tigris, and once capital of the Assyrian empire. Various accounts in old Greek authors confirm the descriptions of it incidentally given in the Hebrew Scriptures; and the prophecies therein spoken against it, appear from the accounts of travellers to have been most completely fulfilled. Recent excavations on the site it once occupied, have brought to light many very curious antiquities, in sculpture, &c., which may cast great light on the dim notices of this lost metropolis of the Eastern world.

NINNY, s. [nîno, Span.] a fool or simpleton.

NINNYHAMMER, s. a simpleton or fool.

NINTH, a. [negotha, Sax.] an ordinal, implying that a thing is the next in rank, order, or number, beyond the eighth.

TO NIP, v. n. [nîpen, Belg.] to pinch off with the nails; to bite off with the teeth; to cut off by slight means; to blast; to pinch.

NIP, s. a pinch with the nails or teeth; a small cut, a blast.

NIPRON. See JAPAN.

NIPPERS, s. an instrument to cut the nails with, somewhat resembling pinners.

NIPPLE, s. [nûpele, Sax.] the teat.

NIPPLEWORT, s. in Botany, a plant, with yellow composite blossoms, and slender stalks, very much branched, called also dock-creases.

NISAN, in Jewish Chronology, a month of the Hebrews, answering to our March, February, or April, according to the course of the moon.

NISHNEI-NOVGOROD, or NISNGOROD, a populous town of Russia, with a considerable trade, capital of the government of the same name. As it was the appendage and place of residence of the ancient Russian princes, many of them lie buried here. It is seated at the confluence of the Volga and Ocea, 250 miles from Moscow. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 56. 19. N. Long. 44. 28. E.

NISI PRUUS, [s. [Lat.] a judicial writ, so called from the first words in it, "Nisi apud talem locum prius venerint;" i. e. "Unless the justice, to take the assizes, come to such a place before that day;" by means of which all easy pleas may be tried in the country, before justices of assize: it is directed to the sheriff to cause men to be impannelled to determine the cause there, in order to ease the county, by saving the parties, jurors, and witnesses, the charge and trouble of attending at Westminster.

NIT, s. [hnitu, Sax.] the egg of any small insect.
NITENCY, s. [niten, Lat.] lustre; clear brightness.—[nitor, Lat.] endeavour; spring to expand itself.

NITID, a. [nitidus, from nitro, Lat.] bright; shining.
NITRATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with nitric acid.

NITRE, (niter) s. [nitre, Fr. nitrum, Lat.] in Chemistry, the common name for the nitrate of potassa. Its chief use is in the manufacture of gunpowder. It is also employed as an antiseptic.

NITRIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to nitre. Nitric acid, in Chemistry and Commerce, or spirit of nitre, a compound of oxygen and nitrogen gases, which is usually in solution with water, and by manufacturers is called agua fortis. It is most frequently made by distilling vitriol and nitre, and is rarely sold in a perfectly pure state. It is a strong, highly corrosive acid, and is used in dyeing, in medical preparations, &c. &c.

NITROGEN, s. in Chemistry, also called azote, one of the elementary gases, which is not inflammable, and cannot support combustion, nor life; it enters into the composition of the atmosphere, in the proportion of 4 parts to 1 of oxygen. See AZOTE, ATRA.

NITROUS, a. [nitreux, Fr.] impregnated with nitre; consisting of nitre. Nitrous oxide gas, or protoxide of nitrogen, commonly called laughing gas, composed of 2 parts of nitrogen and 1 of oxygen, is colourless, with a slightly agreeable odour, and a sweetish taste; is inflammable, and supports combustion, &c. It will support respiration for a few minutes, and produces the most exciting and delicious sensations and feelings, with a strong tendency to laughter and muscular exertion; but though generally followed by no unpleasant languor even, has in a few instances produced very singular and even painful results. Nitrous acid, in Chemistry, differs from nitric acid, only in the proportions in which the constituent gases are combined. In the gaseous state it is red; but liquid, colourless, or nearly so.

NITRY, a. impregnated with or consisting of nitre.
NITTY, a. abounding in nits.

NIVAL, a. [nivialis, from nix, Lat.] abounding with snow.
NIVEOUS, a. [niveus, Lat.] snowy; resembling snow.

NIZAM, (Hind.) the title of the native prince of Hydrabad in Hindustan. See HYDRABAD.

NIZY, a. a simpleton; a dunce. A low word.

NO, [na, Sax.] a word used to signify denial, refusal, and resolution not to do or consent. Sometimes it is used to confirm a former negative; and sometimes it strengthens a negative that follows it. In a period which consists of several negative sentences, it is placed in the first, and is answered by nor in the following ones.

NO, a. not any; none. It is generally placed in the first sentence of a negative period, and answered by nor in the subsequent sentences.

To NOBILITATE, v. a. [nobilis, Lat.] to make noble; to enable.

NOBILITY, s. antiquity and dignity of family; the chief persons of a kingdom, or those who, by their honours and titles, are exalted above the commons; dignity; grandeur; greatness.

NOBLE, a. of an ancient and splendid family; belonging to the peerage; great; worthy; illustrious; exalted; elevated; sublime; magnificent; stately; pompous; or becoming a nobleman. Figuratively, free; generous; liberal.

NOBLE, a. a peer, or one of high rank. In Ancient Coinage, a piece of money valued at six shillings and eight pence.

NOBLEMAN, s. one who by birth, office, or patent, is above a commoner.

NOBLESSE, s. the quality which denominates any thing or person great, worthy, generous, magnanimous, or above the vulgar; splendour of descent or pedigree.

NOBLESS, s. [noblesse, Fr.] nobility; the collective body of nobles or noblemen.

NOBLY, ad. of an ancient family, applied to descent; in a manner worthy of a person of ancient birth, high office, and lofty sentiments; to a magnificent and splendid manner.

NOD, a. not any one; no one.

NOCENT, a. [nocens, from nocere, Lat.] guilty; criminal; hurtful; mischievous.

NOCTAMBULO, s. [nox and ambulo, Lat.] one who walks in the night in his sleep.

NOCTIDIAL, a. [nox and dies, Lat.] containing or consisting of a night and a day.

NOCTIFEROUS, a. [nox and fero, Lat.] bringing night.

NOCTIVAGANT, a. [nox and vago, Lat.] wandering in the night.

NOCTUARY, s. [nox, Lat.] an account of what passes by night.

NOCTURN, s. [nocturnus, Lat.] in the Ancient and in the Roman Churches, an office of devotion performed in the night.

NOCTURNAL, a. nightly; in the night.

NOCTURNAL, s. an instrument by which observations are made in the night.

To NOD, v. n. [Brit.] to decline or bend down the head with a quick motion; to make a short or slight bow; to bend downwards by a quick motion; to give a sign by bending the head downwards; to be drowsy.

NOD, a. a quick motion of the head downwards; a motion made with the head as a sign, or to show assent; the motion of the head in drowsiness; a slight bow.

NODATION, s. [nodus, Lat.] the state of being knotted, or act of making knots.

NODDER, s. one who makes nods.

NODDLE, s. [hnol, Sax.] the head, used in contempt.

NODDY, s. [naudin, Fr.] a fool; an idiot.

NODE, s. [nodus, Lat.] a knot; a knob; a swelling on a bone.

In Astronomy, applied to the two points wherein the orbits of the moon or planets intersect the ecliptic.

NODOSITY, s. a complication, or something in the nature of a knot.

NODOUS, a. knotty, or full of knots.

NODULE, s. a small knot; a small lump.

NOGGEN, a. hard; rough; harsh.

NOGGIN, s. [nosset, Teut.] a small mug.

NOISE, (noice) s. [Fr.] any kind of sound, generally applied to such as are unmusical, and implying excessive loudness; an outcry, clamour, or boasting and impertinent talk.

To NOISE, (noize) v. n. to sound loud, or so as to be heard at a great distance.—v. a. to spread by rumour or report; generally followed by abroad.

NOISEFUL, (noizeful) a. loud.

NOISELESS, (noizeless) a. silent, or without sound.

NOISINESS, (noiziness) s. loudness of sound; loud clamour by impropriety.

NOISOME, (noisao, Ital.) noxious; unwholesome; offensive; disgusting.

NOISOMELY, ad. so as to be offensive and unwholesome.

NOISEMNESS, s. the quality of occasioning disgust.

NOISY, (noizy) a. sounding loud; clamorous.

NO LI ME TA'NGERE, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, a cancerous swelling, exasperated by applications. In Botany, a plant of the sensitive kind.

NOLITION, s. [nolitio, from nolo, Lat.] the state of refusing or rejecting, opposed to volition.

NOLL, s. [hnol, Sax.] a head; a noddle.

NOLLEKENS, JOSEPH, in Italy, a celebrated English sculptor of the last century. He studied in Italy, and on his return, devoted himself to the most lucrative branch of his profession, the carving of busts, by which he gained the favour of George III. and realized a very handsome fortune. He executed several monuments, few of which display any true art, and several classic statues which are much admired. He was engaged by Townley in working at the marbles now in the British Museum. His bluntness was greatly esteemed by his admirers, and his penuriousness by his heirs and legatees. He died in 1823, aged 86 years.

NOLLET, JOHN ANTOINE, a French abbé who prosecuted the study of natural philosophy, and especially of electricity, with some success, in the last century. He was professor of physics at the college of Navarre, Paris, and belonged to several of the learned and scientific societies of Europe. He wrote several works on his favourite studies, mostly of a popular character, and died in 1770, aged 70 years.

NOMANCY, s. [nomance, Fr. nomen, Lat. and manteia, Gr.] the art of foretelling the fate or fortune of a person from the letters which compose his name.

NOMIBLES, s. the entrails of deer.

NOMENCLATOR, s. [Lat. nomenclateur, Fr.] one who calls persons or things by their proper names.

NORFOLK

Representative
Hundred

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16
North-west	North-east	South-west	South-east	West	East	North	South	West	East	North	South	West	East	North	South

Representative
Hundred

17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	29	30	31	32
West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West	West

NEWCASTLE ABBEY

The County returns 1 Member.

NOMENCLATURE, s. [Fr.] the act of telling the names of persons or things; a vocabulary or dictionary.

NOMINAL, a. [nomens, Lat.] referring to names rather than things; not real; merely titular.

NOMINALISM, s. in Philosophy, a doctrine held chiefly by the opponents of Scholasticism, which for many years agitated the learned world, and excited a rancour amongst the students of high science, quite as fierce as religious fanaticism. At the council of Constance, its adherents were very numerous, and the opposition of John Huss to it, quite as much as his opposition to the corruptions of the Church, brought him to the stake. It may be stated briefly thus: it denied any objective reality to general notions, which Realism (which see) affirmed, and thus led the way directly to modern Scottish and Lockian philosophy, which relies chiefly, if not solely, on the testimony of the senses, and the conclusions of experience. Its principal applications were to the theological questions of the Trinity and the sacraments, and happily, the disposition of these days being to deduce our belief from the Bible, rather than from Aristotle, makes it a very small matter to us.

NOMINALLY, ad. by name; with respect to its name; titularly.

To NOMINATE, v. a. to name; to mention by name; to entitle; to set down, or appoint by name.

NOMINATION, s. [Fr.] the act of mentioning by name; the power of appointing by name.

NOMINATIVE, s. [nominatif, Fr. nominativus, from nominare, Lat.] in Grammar, that form of nouns and pronouns, which is used to designate the subject in a simple sentence; and of adjectives and participles, to designate the attributes of the subject. In other parts of the sentence it, however, is occasionally used to express other notions, and in most languages has a distinguishing termination.

NON, ad. [Lat.] an inseparable particle, which signifies, when joined to words, the absence or denial of what they would imply if it were not joined to them.

NONAGE, s. in Law, generally signifies all the time a person continues under the age of 21; but in a special sense, it is all the time a person is under the age of 14.

NONCE, s. [from once,] purpose; design.

NON COMPOS MENTIS, s. in Law, is used to denote a person's not being of a sound memory and understanding. Of these persons there are four different kinds; an idiot, a mad-man, a lunatic, who has lucid intervals, and a drunkard, who deprives himself of reason by his own act and deed. In all these cases, except the last, one that is non compos mentis is not subject to capital punishment for any crime.

NONCONFORMIST, s. one who refuses to join the established worship; a common designation of Protestant Dissenters.

NONCONFORMITY, s. the act of refusing compliance. In Ecclesiastical History, the refusal to subscribe to the articles, &c. of the Established Church, and to conform to its forms of worship. SYNON. Though used commonly to express the same thought as Dissent, this word refers rather to the act of refusing to comply with external rites, creeds, &c.; whilst Dissent refers to difference of internal conviction and principle. See Dissent, &c.

NONE, s. [ne ane, Sax.] not one or any; nothing.—a. no; not any.

NON-ENTITY, s. non-existence; a thing that does not exist.

NONEXISTENCE, s. the state of not existing; a thing without existence.

NONJURING, a. [non and juro, Lat.] refusing to swear allegiance to the sovereign.

NONJUROR, s. in the Church of England, the designation of certain clergymen, who adhered to the cause of James II. after his abdication, and refused to swear allegiance to William III. and his successors.

NONIUS. See VERNIER'S SCALE.

NONNATURAL, s. it has no singular; such things as being neither naturally constitutive nor destructive, do, notwithstanding, both preserve and destroy in certain circumstances; these physicians call the air, meat and drinks, sleep and watching, motion and rest, retention and excretion, and the passions of the mind.

NONPAREIL, s. [Fr.] matchless excellence. In Horticulture, a kind of apple. In Printing, a small kind of type.

NONPLUS, s. [non and plus, Lat.] a state of perplexity, in which a person cannot either do or say more.

To NONPLUS, v. a. to confound or perplex, so that the mind is at a stand, and cannot proceed, and the person cannot either speak or do any more.

NONRESIDENCE, s. the act of not residing in one's parish, amongst clergymen of the Church of England.

NONRESIDENT, s. a clergyman of the English Church, who does not live nor work in his parish; but who takes the revenues of it as if he did.

NONRESISTANCE, s. in high-church politics, the principle of not opposing the king in any case; ready obedience to a superior.

NONSENSE, s. unmeaning or ungrammatical language; trifles, or things of no importance.

ONSENSICAL, a. without meaning.

ONSENSICALNESS, s. the quality of having no meaning.

NONSOLVENT, s. one who cannot pay his debts.

NONSOLVENT, a. who cannot pay his debts.

NONSOLUTION, s. failure of explaining.

To NONSUIT, v. a. to set aside an action at law, on account of some error in the plaintiff's proceedings.

NONSUIT, s. in Law, the dropping or renouncing of a suit or action, upon the discovery of some error in the plaintiff's management, or his being absent from court when called upon to hear the verdict, or being not ready for trial on the swearing of the jury.

NOODLE, s. a fool; a simpleton.

NOOK, s. [een hoeck, Teut.] a corner; a covert made by an angle or intersection.

NOON, s. [non, Sax.] the middle hour of the day; twelve; the time when the sun's centre is in the meridian.

NOONDAY, s. mid-day.—a. about noon.

NOONTIDE, s. [non-tide, Sax.] mid-day.—a. about noon.

NOOSE, s. a running knot, which the more it is drawn binds the faster; a snare.

To NOOSE, (nooze) v. a. to tie or catch in a noose; to entrap, or insnare.

NOOTKA SOUND. See KING GEORGE'S SOUND.

NOPE, s. in Ornithology, a bird called a bulfinch.

NOR, conj. [ne and or, Sax.] a particle used in the second branch of a negative proposition. In Poetry, it is sometimes used in the first branch for neither.

NORF, a department of France, occupying the N. E. corner of the kingdom, lying on the German Ocean, and next to Belgium. It is bounded by the departments of Pas de Calais, Somme, and Aisne. It is about 100 miles in length, and about 40 in breadth. The S. part alone is hilly. Its rivers are the Aa, the Sambre, the Yser, &c. Coal is found here in the greatest abundance. Iron, building-stone, &c. are also found. Corn, hops, fruit, &c., and cattle of all kinds are reared in great plenty. It has also profitable and valuable manufactures; and excellent fisheries. It is well supplied by its navigable streams and canals, as well as by its position, with the appliances of trade and commerce. Lille is its capital. Pop. about 1,250,000.

NORFOLK, a county of England, lying on the German Ocean; bounded by Cambridgeshire, Lincolnshire, and Suffolk. It extends 70 miles in length and 40 in breadth. It contains 33 hundreds, 1 city, 32 market-towns, and 660 parishes. The face of this county varies less than in most tracts of equal extent in England. Not one hill of any considerable height is to be seen in the whole county; yet, in most parts, its surface is broken into gentle swells and depressions. At the western extremity is a considerable tract of flat fenny land, which is part of the Bedford Level; and, on the east, a narrow tract of marshes runs from the sea, near Yarmouth, to some distance up the country. Between Lincolnshire and the W. extremity, is a broad but shallow arm of the sea, called the Wash. The S. W. part is very sandy and light land, not very easy nor profitable for husbandry; but the rest is a good mixed soil, generally very productive in corn of all kinds, mangold-wurzel, turnips, &c. Excellent butter and cheese is made, especially in the marshlands, and is sold in London as Cambridge butter and Siltton cheese. Cattle, sheep, fowls, &c. are abundant. Game and rabbits are too plentiful by far for the farmers. A few bustards yet live in the W. parts. On the sea-coast, herrings and mackerel are caught in great plenty; and Yarmouth, in particular, is noted for the curing of red herrings. The air of this county is sharp and piercing, which throws the seasons more backward than in other counties under the same latitude; but it is very wholesome, particularly in the inland parts. Its principal rivers are the Great Ouse, Nen, Little Ouse, Waveney, Wensum, Yare, and Bure. Norwich is the capital. Pop. 412,664. It sends 12 representatives to parliament.

NORFOLK ISLAND, an island in the S. Pacific Ocean, lying E. of New South Wales, and settled by a colony of convicts subordinate to that government. It is a fertile spot and very hilly. Among its most valuable productions are the flax plant and a very large species of pine tree. The island is well supplied with streams of good water, which abound with very fine eels. The settlement is formed in Sidney Bay, on the S. side of the island. Lat. 29.3 S. Long. 168.10 E.

NORMAL, a. (Norma, Gr.) in Pathology, according to rule; in a healthy or natural condition; in conformity with the natural laws of its being.

NORMAN, a. belonging to or originating in Normandy. Norman Conquest, the acquisition of England, and overthrow of the Saxons there, by William, Duke of Normandy, who became William I., or the Conqueror.

NORMANS, in early European History, a name of the Danish adventurers or pirates, who ravaged the coasts of most of the S. states of Europe, and obtained a footing in France, establishing the Duchy of Normandy, in S. Italy, in Sicily, &c.

NORREY, NORROY, s. the title of the third king at arms. His jurisdiction lies on the north side of the river Trent.

NORTH, s. [Sax.] one of the four cardinal points. The point opposite to the sun when he is in the meridian.

NORTH, a. situated to the north; northern.

NORTH, the name of an English family, which, from the 16th century to the end of the last, always had some eminent representative, in law, literature, or politics, before the public eye. Sir Edward, Baron North, was an eminent lawyer under Henry VIII., and Mary I. Sir Thomas North translated Plutarch's Lives, and published it and other works, in the reign of Elizabeth. Dudley Lord North, was the name of two members of it, both of whom espoused the parliament's side in the Puritan Revolution; and the second of whom wrote the Life of the first Lord North. Francis, Baron Guildford, eldest son of the last named, was lord keeper under Charles II. and James II. He studied at Cambridge, and was entered of the Middle Temple, and he rose gradually, after first attracting the attention of the government, to the highest point in his profession; and his character was such as became the son of a Puritan champion, though his powers were none of the greatest. His life, by his brother, has contributed not a little to his fame. He died in 1685, aged 52 years.

Sir Dudley North, his brother, was a Turkey merchant, having, perhaps, acquired a roving habit from the gipsies, who carried him off in his infancy. He held offices in the government, under Charles II. and James II., and wrote a book containing the observations he made during his voyages. He died in 1691, aged 50 years. Dr. John North was Greek professor at Cambridge, and died in 1683, aged 38 years. Roger North, brother to the 3 foregoing, was attorney-general in James II.'s reign. He wrote on music; in vindication of Charles II. and his reign; and the Lives of his 5 brothers. These works abound with racy anecdotes, and are amongst the happiest specimens of the power and ease of the English tongue, when used without affectation. He died in 1733, aged 82 years. Frederick Lord North, Baron Guildford, was educated at Oxford, and after his return from his travels on the continent, was appointed to some subaltern post in the government, in which he rose at length to be first lord of the treasury. He was minister through almost the whole of the American war, and retired on being defeated in a motion respecting it. He once more, in the Duke of Portland's ministry, held an office, and then retired for ever from public life. He died in 1792, aged 59 years, having been for several years quite blind. He was an estimable man, but of very moderate abilities; and so easily led away by love of approbation and kindness of disposition, as to act often in direct opposition to his own genuine convictions; as, for instance, in maintaining the war in America to please George III., whilst he believed it to be flagrantly wrong, and voting against the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts. The appointment of such a man to the virtual sovereignty of the nation, is a sufficient exposure of the weakness of the ever-lauded

British constitution, through the predominance and form of the aristocratic element.

NORTHALBERTON, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It consists of only one street, about half a mile long, and is situated in a district called Alvertons, on a small brook, which, a mile below, runs into the river Wisk. It is 223 miles from London. Market, Wednesday, for cattle, corn, &c. Fairs, on Jan. 2, and on St. Bartholomew's day. Pop. 5273.

NORTH AMERICA. See AMERICA.

NORTHAMPTON, Northamptonshire. It is seated on an eminence, gently sloping to the river Nen, which is joined here by another rivulet, and has been made navigable to Lynn. Its principal manufacture is that of boots and shoes, of which many are made here, and in other parts of the county, for exportation. Some stockings and lace are also made here. The horse-fairs of this place are reckoned to exceed all others in the kingdom. It is a handsome, well-built town, and has a regular, spacious market-place, one of the finest in England, a good free-school, and a county infirmary and gaol. Within half a mile of Northampton is a fine Gothic structure, called Queen's Cross, erected by Edward I. in memory of his queen Eleanor. It is 66 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs, on Feb. 20, April 15, May 4, August 5, and 26, Sept. 19, Nov. 28, and Dec. 19. Pop. 21,242.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Leicestershire, Rutlandshire, Lincolnshire, the counties of Cambridge, Huntingdon, and Bedford, Bucks, Oxfordshire, and Warwickshire. It is divided into 20 hundreds, containing a city, 13 market towns, and 336 parishes. The air of this county is very healthy, except in the N. E. part near Peterborough, which being surrounded and intersected by rivers, is very liable to inundations, and forms the commencement of the fenny tract extending to the Lincolnshire Washes. It is a fine and pleasant county, and possesses some considerable remains of its old forests, particularly those of Rockingham on the N. W., and of Salsley and Whittlebury on the S. In this last wild cats are still found. The products of this county are, in general, the same with those of other farming countries. It is, indeed, peculiarly celebrated for grazing land; that tract, especially, which lies from Northampton northward to the Leicestershire border. Horned cattle and other animals are here fed to extraordinary sizes, and many horses of the large black breed are reared. Wood for the dyers is cultivated in this part; but the county is not distinguished for manufactures, excepting the trifling one of bone lace. The principal rivers are the Nen and Welland; beside which it is partly watered by the Ouse, Leam, Cherwell, and Avon. The county-town is Northampton. Pop. 199,228. It sends 8 members to parliament.

NORTH CAPE, the most northerly point of the European continent, in Norwegian Lapland. Lat. 71.10 N. Long. 25.50 E.

NORTH CAROLINA. See CAROLINA.

NORTH COTE, JAMES, an eminent English painter of the last century. He studied under Sir Joshua Reynolds, and afterwards in Italy. He was at first a portrait painter only, but subsequently attempted, with tolerable success, the higher walks of art. He was a writer also, and his Fables, with their admirable wood-cuts, the Life of Sir Joshua Reynolds, the Life of Titian, &c., show his industry and ability. He was one of those who, with all their enthusiasm for art, contrive to keep on good terms with more terrene pursuits; and a handsome fortune was the proof of his devotion to the less sublime object of his life. He died in 1831, aged 85 years.

NORTH CURRY, Somersetshire. It is a pretty considerable town, seated on the river Tove. It is 134 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 2028.

NORTHEAST, s. [nordest, Teut.] the point between the north and the east.

NORTHERLY, a. being towards the north.

NORTHERN, a. in the north.

NORTHING, s. in Navigation, the difference of latitude which a ship makes in sailing towards the north.

NORTHEE/CH, Gloucestershire. It has several almshouses and a free grammar-school, and is seated on or near the river Leech, 80 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1290.

NORTH SEA, the name for that part of the ocean which lies between the British Isles and the N. part of the European Conminent. The S. part of it is commonly called the German Ocean.

1000

NORTHSTAR, s. the polestar, or the last star in the constellation named the Little Bear.

NORTHUMBERLAND, the most northerly county of England. It lies next to Scotland, on the German Ocean, and is bounded by Durham and Cumberland. It extends about 70 miles in length, and 50 in breadth; and contains 12 market-towns, and 460 parishes. The air is not so cold as might be imagined from the latitude in which it lies; and the snow seldom lies long in Northumberland, except on the tops of hills, some of which are above 2000 feet high. The soil is various; the eastern part being fruitful, having very good wheat and most sorts of corn, with rich meadows on the banks of the rivers; but the western part is generally barren, it being mostly heathy and mountainous. It yields lead; and is one of the most productive and best coal-fields in England. Iron and glass-works are its principal manufactures; and it has some fisheries. This county is well watered by rivers, the principal of which are the Tyne, Tweed, and Coquet. Alnwick is the county-town, but the largest and richest is Newcastle. Pop. 250,278. It returns 8 members to parliament.

NORTHWARD, a. towards the north.

NORTHWARD, ad. towards the north.

NORTH-WEST, s. the point between the north and the west.

NORTH-WEST PASSAGE, the name by which is designated an anticipated ocean-path to China and the E. Indies, through the bays, &c. of the N. part of N. America. As this part of the sea is for the greater part of the year frozen over, and for the rest beset with detached and most dangerous floating masses of ice, the benefits of the passage, if it be ever discovered, are somewhat problematical. By the various costly expeditions that have been made for that purpose, however, some curious light has been thrown on the phenomena of terrestrial magnetism.

NORTH-WEST TERRITORY, a region in N. America, lying N. of the United States; and stretching to the lakes discharging into Hudson's Bay on the N., and from Lake Superior to the Pacific Ocean. It possesses almost every variety of soil, and of temperate and cold climates. It has vast mountains, rivers, lakes, savannahs, forests, with wide tracts of fertile land, and barren and rocky countries. Almost all the native animals of N. America are found in it in the greatest abundance, and the waters abound with fish. With the exception of the fur traders' posts, the recent settlements in the Oregon territory, and a settlement on the banks of the Red River, the whole of this tract, which possesses resources capable of yielding sustenance and independence to many millions of people, is uninhabited. This is also called the Indian Territory, but it must be distinguished from the Territory of the United States so called. See OREGON TERRITORY.

NORTHWICH, Cheshire. It is seated near the river Dane, and is a handsome place, chiefly noted for its salt-works. Vast pits of rock salt have been dug here, from which immense quantities are raised, partly to be purified on the spot, and partly to be exported in its crude state. It is 173 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1368.

NORTH-WIND, s. the wind that blows from the north.

NORTON, or CHIPPING-NORTON, Oxfordshire. It has manufactures for horse clothing and harnesses; and is 73 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 3031.

NORWAY, a country in the N. of Europe. Northern Norway extends from Cape North to the Nahe, about 1100 miles, lying next to the N. Atlantic Ocean; and is bounded by Russia and Sweden. It is a very mountainous country, a chain of lofty and precipitous rocks running throughout its whole length, some points of which are above 7000 feet, and one above 8000 feet high. It abounds in rivers, which are more torrents than rivers; and lakes, which lie amongst the mountains; whilst the whole coast is deeply indented with sea bays. The horses are small, but strong, active, and hardy. The country does not yield corn sufficient for its inhabitants, but is exceedingly rich in pasture, and produces much cattle. There are large fisheries on the western coast, principally for the cod, the ling, and the whiting. The extensive forests abound with oak and pine, and with the birch, which not only supplies fuel, but a kind of wine which is produced by boring a hole in the trunk. The general exports of Norway are tallow, butter, salt, dried fish, timber and planks, horses and horned cattle, silver, alum, Prussian blue, copper, and iron. It belongs to Sweden, but is under distinct laws, and has a legislative assembly of its own. There are several distinct varieties amongst the inhabitants; the Laps of the extreme N. being very different from the people of the S. The capital is Christiania. Pop. about 1,500,000.

NORWICH, Norfolk. It is an ancient, large, and populous city, seated on the river Wensum, which runs through it, and is navigable to Yarmouth, without locks. It has a stately ancient castle, on a hill, which commands a fine view of the city and surrounding country, and is used as the county gaol; and a fine cathedral, with a very lofty spire: here are also 2 good public libraries, a city and county hospital, a shire-hall, a handsome guild-hall, and a corn-hall. The ancient bridewell, now a private house, is built of flints, remarkable for being beautifully cut into regular little squares, without any visible cement. It had formerly 60 churches, &c., and has now 36 churches, beside the cathedral, chapels, and dissenting meeting-houses. It was formerly a great manufacturing city; but it has much declined of late. Norwich has 10 bridges over the Wensum, and is the centre of several important lines of railways. The provision market is a fine square, and is well supplied. It is 108 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 62,344.

NORWICH, a city of Connecticut, United States. It stands at the head of the Thames navigation, and consists of 3 parts; called Chelsea Landing, or Norwich City, the Town, and Westville. These are situated at a little distance from each other, in very pleasant and commanding sites; and are adorned with many handsome public buildings. Manufacturing and commercial industry are very active here. Near this place is a very romantic cataract, which affords a fine water-power for mills, &c., and around which a village, called (after the name of the river) Yanticville, has sprung up. It is 357 miles from Washington. Pop. 7239. Eight other places in the States are called Norwich, and one Norwichtown.

NOSE, (nose), s. [naze, or nosa, Sax.] in Anatomy, that part of a human face which is the organ of smelling, and the emunctory of the brain. Figuratively, the end of any thing which is perforated or hollow; scent, or the power of distinguishing or discovering by the smell. To lead by the nose, signifies to drag by force; to have so much influence over a person as to make him do what you please. To thrust one's nose into the affairs of another, is to concern ourselves with the affairs of others without being invited, or to be officious, or a busy-body. To put one's nose out of joint, is to deprive us of the affections of another.

NOSEBLEED, s. in Botany, a kind of herb.

NOSEGAY, (nósegay) s. a bunch of flowers.

NOSELESS, (nózeless) a. without a nose; having no smell.

NOSLE, (nózele) s. [a diminutive of nose.] the extremity of a thing which is hollow, as of a pair of bellows.

NOSOLLOGY, s. [nosos and logos, Gr.] the scientific investigation and classification of diseases.

NOSOPHETIC, a. [nosos and pheto, Gr.] producing diseases.

NOSTRADAMUS, MICHAEL, an astrological quack of the 16th century, in France. He gained no little renown in his own day by a nostrum which he sold as a specific against a dangerous epidemic that was very fatal in the country, and was made court physician by Charles IX., whose reputation for wisdom is not very high on other accounts. His predictive rhymes, also, gained him no little notoriety, from some imaginary fulfillments of them. In after-ages credulity discovered many more fulfillments of his prophecies; but though a century and a half of them yet may be reckoned amongst the unfulfilled, people, both small and great, have ceased to consult Nostradamus. The end of all such impostures is devoutly to be hoped for. This prophet died in 1566, aged 63 years.

NOSTRIL, s. [nos, Isl. and thryl, Sax.] the hollow or cavity of the nose.

NOSTRUM, s. [Lat.] a medicine, the ingredients of which are not divulged. Figuratively, any remedy for any kind of wrong, put forward in an empirical and ignorant manner.

NOT, adv. [ne and Sax. niet, Belg.] a particle used in denoting denial and refusal; in a negative proposition it is placed in the first branch, and is answered by not.

NOTABLE, a. [noto, Lat.] worthy of notice.

NOTABLENESS, s. the quality of deserving notice.

The NOTABLES, of French History, were the most eminent men of the upper classes throughout the kingdom, who, on occasions of emergency, such as that which gave occasion to the outbreak of the Revolution, were assembled, as an extraordinary council, to aid the sovereign and his ministers with their advice.

NOTABLY, ad. in a remarkable manner; in a manner that deserves notice.

NOTARIAL, a. taken by a notary.

NOTARY, s. [notarius, from noto, Lat.] a person or scrivener who takes notice of any particulars which concern the public, and frames short draughts of contracts, obligations, charters, parties, &c. A notary public is one who publicly attests deeds, in order to make them authentic in other nations, and is principally employed by merchants in noting or making a mark on such bills as are refused to be paid, and in making protests on that account.

NOTATION, s. [notatio, Lat.] the act of describing any thing by figures and letters. In Arithmetic and Algebra, the method of expressing quantities by figures and letters.

NOTCH, s. [nocchia, Ital.] a nick or hollow cut in any thing.

To NOTCH, v. a. to cut into small hollows.

NOTCHWEED, s. in Botany, the herb orache.

NOTE, s. [nota, Lat.] a mark or token; a notice; heed; reputation, fame, or character. A single sound, or the character by which it is expressed in writing, applied to music. A state of being observed; a short hint, or minute; an abbreviation; a short letter; an explanation at the bottom or in the margin of a book. A promissory note is a writing under a person's hand, by which he engages to pay to another, or order, a sum of money.

To NOTE, v. a. to observe; to remark; to take notice of; to set down; to mention; to charge with a crime publicly. In Traffic, to have a bill witnessed by a notary-public, that the person on whom it is drawn refuses to accept or pay it. In Music, to set down the characters used to express any tune.

NOTEBOOK, s. a memorandum book.

NOTED, a. remarkable; celebrated.

NOTER, s. one who takes notice of any thing.

NOTHING, s. [Scot.] nonentity; negation of being; that which has no existence; no other thing; no quantity or degree.

NOTICE, s. [Fr. notitia, from nosco, Lat.] a remark made by attention and observation; heed; regard; information or intelligence.

NOTIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of making known; any thing represented by marks or symbolical characters.

To NOTIFY, v. a. [notus and facio, Lat.] to make known; to publish.

NOTION, (nōshn) s. [Fr. notio, from nosco, Lat.] a thought or opinion. In Metaphysics, the result of the combination of the impressions or representations derived from the senses, according to the forms or laws of the understanding; or the product of the activity of the understanding exercised on the perceptions furnished through our sensibility, regarded abstractly, i.e. as existing for the mind, independently of its actual existence.

NOTIONAL, (nōshnāl) a. relating to, or expressive of, notions. In Grammar, those words which express notions; as notus, which express notions of existences, and adjectives and verbs, which express notions of activities, without or with an assertion respecting them. See ADJECTIVE, NOUN, VERB.

NOTIONALITY, (nōshnālity) s. an empty or groundless opinion.

NOTORIETY, s. [notoriété, Fr.] the quality of being universally known, used in a bad sense.

NOTORIOUS, a. [notorius, Lat.] publicly known; evident; generally in a bad sense.

NOTORIOUSLY, ad. in a public, evident, or open manner.

NOTORIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being universally or generally known.

NOTTINGHAM, Nottinghamshire. It is pleasantly seated on a rocky eminence, above the meadows bordering the Trent; on the highest part of which stands the castle, a large, elegant, and noble palace, belonging to the Duke of Newcastle, with a most extensive prospect. It is a large, populous, and handsome town, with a spacious market-place, and considered as one of the principal seats of the stocking manufacture, particularly of the finer kinds, as those of silk and cotton. It has also a manufactory of glass and coarse earthenware, and a considerable trade in malt. It is remarkable for its vaults or cellars cut in the rock. It is 125 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs, on Friday after January 13th, May 7th, Thursday before Easter, and October 2nd. Pop. 53,091.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Leicestershire, and Derbyshire. Its greatest length is 50 miles, its greatest breadth about 25. It is divided into 8 hundreds, and contains 13 towns and 168 parishes. The principal rivers are the Trent and Idle. Almost the whole of the middle and western parts of the county were formerly occupied by the extensive forest of Sherwood, which is the only royal forest N. of the Trent; but the wood has in many parts been cleared, and the extent of the forest much contracted. The chief products of this county are corn, malt, pit-coal, of which there is great plenty. Their other commodities are malt, wool, liquorice, wood, fish, and fowl. Their manufactures chiefly consist of frame-work, knitting, glass, and earthenware. The principal town is Nottingham. Pop. 249,910. It returns 8 parliamentary representatives.

NOTWHEAT, s. in Farming, a kind of unbearded wheat.

NOTWITHSTANDING, conj. without any hindrance or obstruction; although; nevertheless; however.

NOVALIS, or FRIEDRICH VON HARDENBURG, a German writer and poet, of the end of the last century. He studied at Jena, Leipzig, and Wittenberg; and was an intimate friend of Tieck, and the Schlegels. It is highly characteristic of him, that, despite of his daring inquiries and speculations in philosophy and theology, he joined the Roman Church with Schlegel. He did not live long enough to complete any great work. His Hymns to Night, and Spiritual Songs, contain most exquisite poetry. His Heinrich von Ofterdingen, and Pupils at Saiz, were intended to embody his views of poesy and philosophy. The chief part, and perhaps the most interesting, of his writings, are fragments written unconnectedly, but classified by his friendly editors, on all his favourite subjects of thought. They contain passages of the profoundest significance and beauty; and many that indicate the earnest and resolute struggle of his spirit after some suffering representation of truth. He died early, after a beautiful and devout life, in 1801, aged 29 years.

NOVA SCOTIA, a province of British America, consisting of a peninsula, surrounded by the Atlantic Ocean and the Bay of Fundy, and bounded by New Brunswick. Prince Edward's Island, separated from it by Northumberland Strait, and Cape Breton Island, separated by the Strait of Canso, belong to this province. (See these names.) It was named Acadia by the French. It is about 250 miles long, and 70 broad. It has no heights exceeding 700 feet; but the rivers and lakes are very numerous. The Atlantic coast is indented with innumerable bays and harbours; and the shores are lined with rocks and thousands of small islands. In the Bay of Fundy, the shores have a more continuous outline. Coal, iron, lead, and copper, granite, and many valuable kinds of stone, are found here. The soil varies much in fertility; some, however, yield corn of all kinds, and fruits and vegetables common to the temperate climates, abundantly. The forests furnish excellent timber of all kinds; and the most valuable fisheries are in its immediate vicinity. It is governed as most British colonies are. Halifax is its capital. Pop. about 150,000, and of the whole province, about 250,000.

NOVATIANS, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect of the early Church, composed of the followers of Novatus, who was a rival Bishop of Rome (the first Anti-pope?) to Cornelius in the 3rd century. As he was in the minority, and maintained very rigid rules of ecclesiastical discipline, he was readily excommunicated, with his adherents, and designated a heretic and schismatic. He seems to have been a most excellent and right-minded man, quite unwillingly forced into the path of notoriety, by the representations of some, and especially of another Novatus of Carthage, who agreed with him respecting the need of greater purity in the church. The Novatians were called Puritans, (Cathari), and were persecuted by Constantine. They died in numbers, and disappeared in a century or two. Novatus was made Bishop of Rome in 251 A. D.

NOVA ZEMBLA, the name of two large islands, surrounded by great numbers of smaller islands, lying in the Arctic Ocean, immediately above the boundary of Europe and Asia. They are very imperfectly known. But there are lofty mountains in

WORKS OF MANOR

NOTTINGHAM CASTLE

Scale of Miles

Railway Stations Data

them; and very barren, owing to their high N. latitude They belong to Russia.

NOVEL, a. [nouvelus, Lat. nouvelle, Fr.] new; lately made or done; unusual. In the Civil Law, appendant to the code, and of later enactment.

NOVEL, s. relation of an adventure or intrigue; a romance. In Jurisprudence, it is a term used for the constitutions of several emperors, viz. Justin, Tiberius II., Leo, and particularly Justinian.

NOVELIST, s. an innovator; an assertor of something new; one who writes tales called novels.

NOVELTY, s. [nouveauté, Fr.] newness; the state of a thing unknown before.

NOVEMBER, s. [Lat.] the eleventh month of the year, from January.

NOVENARY, s. [novem, Lat.] a number or collection consisting of nine.

NOVERCAL, a. [noverca, Lat.] like a step-mother. Figuratively, cruel, or wanting the tenderness of a natural mother.

NOUGHT, (naught) s. [no aught, Sax.] not any thing; nothing. To set at naught signifies to slight, disregard, scorn. See NAUGHT.

NOVICE, s. [Fr. from novus, Lat.] one not acquainted with any thing; a fresh man; one in the rudiments of any thing; one who is entered into a religious house, but has not taken the vow.

NOVICIATE, (novishiate) s. [noviciat, Fr.] the state of a novice; the time in which the first rudiments of any science are taught; the time spent in a religious house by way of trial, before taking the vow.

NOUN, s. [nomen, old Fr. from nomen, Lat.] in Grammar, the designation of the class of words which signify notions of existences, or are the names of persons or things. They are divided into abstract and concrete nouns, and under them are other subdivisions. The infinitive mood of verbs is to all intents a noun. See SUBSTANTIVE.

NOVOGOROD, a government of Russia, bounded by the governments of Olonetz, Petersburg, Pskov, Tver, Yaroslavl, and Volodga. It is about 340 miles long, by 170 broad. It is hilly, and has many barren parts. Lake Ilmen, and the rivers Msta, Volchov, Vologa, &c. &c. water it. It is quite an agricultural district, and produces plenty of corn, fruits, cattle, sheep, &c. The capital is of the same name, and stands on the Volchov. It is much decayed now, and retains few traces of its ancient splendour and wealth, except its churches. It is above 100 miles from St. Petersburg. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 58.30. N. Long. 31.10. E. Pop. of government, about 1,000,000.

NOUREDIN, or NUR-ED-DEEN, the name of several persons celebrated in Saracenic history. The most famous of whom was governor of Syria and Egypt during the disastrous period of the fall of the Christian kingdom of Jerusalem. By courage and skill in warfare, and by prudence and craft in negotiations, he won his way against the various Christian princes who held different parts of Syria, and against Mussulman rulers also, till he not only had Egypt and Syria as a sultanate, but had extinguished the Fatimite caliphate in the former country, by means of the more celebrated Saladin. This military leader at last rebelled against Nouredin, and the great conqueror was spared the participation in further reverses by his death, in 1173, aged 56 years.

To NOURISH, (the o is mute in pron. this word and its derivatives; as, nurish, nurrishe, nurture, &c.) v. a. [nourrir, Fr.] to increase or support by food; to maintain; to encourage or foment; to train up or educate;—v. n. to gain nourishment.

NOURISHABLE, a. capable of affording nourishment; capable of increasing the growth, or supporting strength; capable of having its growth or strength supported by food.

NOURISHER, s. the person who supports or maintains; the thing which increases growth or strength.

NOURISHMENT, s. [nourrissement, Fr.] that which is given or received in order to promote the growth, or support the strength of a person or thing; nutrition; supply of necessities.

NOURTURE, s. [nouriture, Fr.] education; institution.

NOW, ad. and conj. [nu, Sax.] at this time; a little while ago; but. When beginning several branches of a sentence, it implies the present time in the first, and another time in the subsequent branches. In familiar speech it implies the present state of things. Now and then implies at different times. SYNON. The doing of a thing now expresses the taking it in hand at the very instant; instantly, immediately, and presently, express a time further and further off. Instantly implies without any perceptible intervention of time; immediately means without delay; and by presently is understood soon after.

NOW, s. the present moment.

NOWADAYS, ad. in the present age.

NOWED, a. [nowed, Fr.] knotted; inwreathed.

NOWHERE, ad. [nouhere, Sax.] not in any place.

NOWISE, ad. [no and wise, Belg.] not in any manner or degree.

NOXIOUS, a. [noxa, Lat.] hurtful; destructive; unwholesome. In Law, guilty, or liable to punishment.

NOXIOUSLY, ad. hurtfully; in such a manner as to be pernicious.

NOXIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being hurtful, mischievous, destructive, or unwholesome.

NOY, WILLIAM, attorney-general under Charles I., a lawyer of great renown, was a patriot in parliament, till the sun of royal favour made him see that his interest lay on the other side. He distressed the English nation greatly respecting soap, and devised, out of precedents in Ethelred the Unready's reign, the world-infamous Writ of Ship-money. Having planned which, and written some law books, of which his Mazins yet remain an accredited authority, he died in 1634, to the great joy of most men, aged 57 years. It was said of him, that he used to decree justice by a law, and thus his fame yet stands.

NOZLE, s. [a diminutive of nose,] the nose, snout, or end of any hollow thing. See NOSTLE.

NUBIA, a country of Africa, lying on the Red Sea, and bounded by Abyssinia, Egypt, and Boronou. The river Nile runs through it, on the banks of which, and those of the other rivers, it is pretty fruitful, but in other places barren, sandy, and in want of water. The productions of this country are gold, elephants' teeth, civet, and sandal wood, and they traffic largely in slaves. The principal towns known to the Europeans are Dongola and Sennar. This country is occupied by numerous tribes, having their own customs, laws, and capitals. It has all been subjugated by the pasha of Egypt. The population is not known.

To NUBBLE, v. a. (properly knoble), to bruise with the fist.

NUBILE, a. [nubilis, from nubo, Lat.] fit for marriage.

NUBIFEROUS, a. [nubifer, from nubis and fero, Lat.] bringing clouds.

To NUBILATE, v. a. [nubilo, from nubes, Lat.] to cloud.

NUCIFEROUS, a. [nux and fero, Lat.] bearing nuts.

NUCLEUS, s. [Lat.] in Botany, the kernel or edible part of a nut or stone fruit; any fruit contained within a husk or shell. In Astronomy, the body of a comet, by some called its head, in contradistinction to its tail. In Surgery, any thing about which matter is gathered, and closely adhears.

NUDATION, s. [Fr. from nudo, Lat.] the act of making bare or naked.

NUDITY, s. [nudités, Fr.] nakedness.

NUGATION, s. [nugor, Lat.] the act or practice of trifling.

NUGATORY, a. trifling; insignificant.

NUISANCE, (nuisance) s. [Fr.] something pernicious and offensive; any thing which annoys the neighbourhood.

To NULL, v. a. [nullus, Lat.] to annul; to deprive of efficacy or existence. To set aside, applied to laws.

NULL, a. void; of no force or efficacy.

NULL, s. something that has no power or meaning. The marks in ciphered writings which stand for nothing, are nulls.

NULLIBETY, s. [nullibi, Lat.] the state of being no where.

To NULLIFY, v. a. to make void; to annihilate.

NULLITY, s. [nullité, Fr.] want of force or efficacy; want of existence.

NUMA POMPILIUS, according to old legends, the second king of Rome; a Sabine by birth, who gave laws for the regulation of all the religious affairs by the state, under the guidance of the nymph Egéria. He devoted himself with equal assiduity to the regulation of trade and property, and he reformed the calendar. During his reign, Rome was not at all engaged in war, and the temple of Janus was shut. When he died he ordered his books to be buried with him. The lays in which this story is embodied are plainly of a different origin from those which tell of Romulus and Tullus. This king has all the attributes of an Etruscan pontiff, and is the creation of the patrician class. Perhaps also, as Niebuhr thought, this making of a Sabine king of Rome, indicated some internal revolution amongst the people of the different hamlets that made up the state; then; in the way of raising some one to an equality of influence with that held already by the ruling tribe. Readers of Roman history should know this, however, that the French novel of Numa Pompilius is quite as worthy of credence, for matters of fact, as the common accounts given of this king and his peaceful reign.

NUMB, (num), a. [denuded, Sax.] deprived of feeling in a great measure, and the power of motion; producing such a chilliness as almost deprives of the power of motion and feeling; torpid.

To NUMB, (num) v. a. to make dull of motion and feeling; to deaden, or stupefy.

NUMBEDNESS, s. torpor; interruption of sensation.

To NUMBER, v. a. [numerus, Lat.] to count, reckon, or tell how many are contained in any collection or sum.

NUMBER, s. [nombre, Fr. numerus, Lat.] that species of quantity which answers to the question, How many? Any particular collection of units; many; more than one; harmony, or proportion calculated by numbers. In Poetry, verses; used in the plural. In Grammar, designation of, or application to, one or more things or persons, in nouns, pronouns, verbs, &c., expressed by the termination of the word, or by the use of particular and different words.

NUMBERER, s. one who counts how many single ones are in the collection.

NUMBERLESS, a. not to be counted; not to be expressed by numbers.

NUMBERS, BOOK OF, one of the Books of the Old Testament, included in the Law, Pentateuch, or Five Books of Moses. It contains an account of the census taken of the Israelites in the wilderness of Mount Sinai, some miscellaneous ceremonies, a narrative of the journeyings in the desert from the time that the Israelites left Mount Sinai to the time of their arrival in the plains of Moab, with a list of all the halting-places; a particular account of the attempts made on them by Balak, king of Moab, by means of Balaam; a second census, taken at the same time; and some further miscellaneous directions, specially relating to the divisions of the land of Canaan amongst the tribes. The events recorded occupy a space of 37 years.

NUMBLES, s. [nombres, Fr.] in Hunting, the entrails of a deer.

NUMBNESS, (numness) s. the state of being, in a great measure, deprived of the sense of feeling, and the power of motion.

NUMERABLE, a. [numerabilis, Lat.] capable of being counted, or expressed, by figures.

NUMERAL, a. [Fr. numerus, Lat.] belonging to, or consisting of, numbers.

NUMERALLY, ad. according to number.

NUMERARY, a. any thing belonging to a certain number.

NUMERATION, s. [numeratio, Lat.] the art of numbering. In Arithmetic, the mode of expressing number in figures.

NUMERATOR, s. [Lat.] one that numbers. In Arithmetic, the upper figure in a common fraction, which shows how many of the parts the integer is supposed to be divided into are expressed by the fraction; thus in the fraction  $\frac{1}{3}$ , the figure 3 is the numerator.

NUMERIA/NUS, M. AURELIUS, son of M. Aurelius Carus, and joint-emperor with his brother Carinus. He was gentle by nature, and had a mind well formed by study. He was murdered by his father-in-law, the praetorian prefect, Arrius Aper, in 284, having reigned only part of a year.

NUMERICAL, a. denoting number; belonging to number; the same in kind or species, and likewise in number.

NUMERICALLY, ad. with respect to sameness in number.

NUMERIST, s. one that deals in numbers.

NUMEROSITY, s. [numerosus, Lat.] number; multitude; the state of being numerous; harmony, or agreeable flow.

NUMEROUS, a. containing or consisting of many.

NUMEROUSNESS, s. the quality of consisting of many; the quality of exciting a sensation of harmony or melody.

NUMIDIA, in Ancient Geography, a country of the N. coast of Africa, lying on the Mediterranean, and bounded by Mauritania and Carthage; occupied by nomadic races, till, shortly before its subjugation by Rome, one of the chiefs seems to have gained the supreme power. Cirta, Zama, Hippo Regius, &c. were its chief cities.

NUMISMATICS, s. [nomisma, Gr.] that branch of Archaeological and Statistical science, which treats of the coins, medals, &c. of all nations.

NUMMARY, a. [nummus, Lat.] relating to money.

NUMMULARI, a. [nummularius, from nummus, Lat.] relating to money.

NUMSKULL, s. [probably from numb and skull] a dunce, blockhead, dullard.

NUMSKULLED, a. dull; stupid.

NUN, s. [Sax.] in Romanism, a female who has taken the monastic vows, and entered a convent. In Natural History, a kind of bird.

NUNCIATURE, s. [nuncio, Lat.] the office of a nuncio.

NUNCIO (ninshio) s. [Ital.] a messenger; an envoy or ambassador from the pope.

NUNCUPATIVE, NUNCUPATORY, a. [nuncupatus, from nuncupo, Lat.] publicly or solemnly declared; pronounced by words.

NUNEATON, Warwickshire. It has a manufactory of woollen cloth; and is seated on the river Anker, 99 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 7105.

NUNNERY, s. in Romanism, a convent for females who have taken the monastic vows.

NUPTIAL (núptial) a. [nuptialis, from nubo, Lat.] belonging to marriage.

NUPTIALS (núptials) s. it has no singular, [nuptiae, Lat.] marriage.

NUREMBURG, or NÜRNBERG, a handsome, strong, and flourishing city of Bavaria, Germany, once a free, imperial city. It is a large place, being about 6 miles in circumference. It stands on the Pegnitz, over which are 17 bridges, and it is surrounded by a wall which has 8 gates in it. It has some fine public buildings, and is very rich in specimens of German art. It has also several valuable scholastic institutions, and a good library. The best toys are made here, which are commonly known in England by the name of Dutch toys. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 49. 26. N. Long. 11. 5. E.

NURSE, s. [nourrice, Fr.] a woman who brings up a child, or has the care of a sick person; one that breeds, educates, or protects. The state of being nursed. In Composition, applied to any thing that supplies food.

To NURSE, v. a. to bring up a child; to feed, keep, or maintain; to take care of a sick person; to cherish.

NURSER, s. one that nurses or takes care of an infant or sick person; one that encourages or foment.

NURSERY, s. the act or office of bringing up a child, or attending a sick person; that which is the object of a nurse's care; a plantation of young trees to be transplanted; the place where young people are taken care of; the place or state where any thing is fostered or brought up.

NURSLING, s. [a diminutive of nurse] one brought up by a nurse; a findling.

NURTURE, s. [contracted from nouriture] food; diet; education; institution; any thing which supports life, or promotes growth.

To NURTURE, v. a. to educate or bring up.

To NUSTLE, v. a. to fondle or cherish.

NUT, s. [nut, Sax.] in Botany, the fruit of a tree, consisting of a kernel covered by a hard shell.

NUTATION, s. [nuto, Lat.] in Astronomy, a slight perturbation of our planet arising from the attraction of the moon, which makes the conical oscillation of its axis, called Precession, (which see,) proceed irregularly, so that the path described by the semi-axis is a fluted cone, instead of merely a cone. One of the most singular consequences of this perturbation, which is accomplished in about 19 years, is, that the stars seem to have a motion in latitude; it is, however, too small to be noticed by any but accomplished astronomers, furnished with the best instruments. According to astronomical calculations, there is a similar effect also produced by the attraction of the sun, but it is so small as to have defied the attempts of the closest observers to detect it.

NUTBROWN, a. brown as, or of the colour of, a nut kept long.

NUTCRACKER, s. in Ornithology, a bird which is sometimes seen in England, but is common on the continent: it much resembles in its habits the nuthatch.

NUTCRACKERS, s. an instrument used in cracking the shells of nuts.

NUTGALL, s. in Natural History and Commerce, an excrescence formed by an insect on the branches of certain trees, of the figure of a nut. See GALL.

NUTHATCH, s. in Ornithology, a common and pretty English climbing bird, which lives on nuts and similar seeds, and insects.

NUTHOOK, s. a stick with a hook at the end, used in pulling down the boughs of a tree to gather nuts.

NUTMEG, [nut and muscat, Fr.] in Botany, Commerce, and Cookery, the kernel of a large fruit not unlike a peach, separated from the mace, which surrounds it. It is of a roundish oval figure, of a compact or firm texture, furrowed in its surface, of an agreeable smell and aromatic taste. The male is long and cylindrical, but less aromatic than the female, which is shaped like an olive. The tree resembles our pear-tree, its leaves have a fragrant smell whether green or dry, and the trunk or branches, when cut, produce a red liquor.

NUTRIMENT, s. [nutrimentum, from nutrio, Lat.] that which feeds or nourishes.

NUTRIMENTAL, a. having the qualities of food; affording nourishment.

NUTRITION, s. [nutritio, Lat.] the act of supporting strength and increasing growth. In Physiology, the process by which the waste of the animal and vegetable frame is actually repaired, and its utmost development and growth provided for.

NUTRITIOUS, (nutritious) a. having the quality of supporting strength, or increasing growth.

NUTRITIVE, a. having the power to nourish.

NUTRITURE, s. the power of nourishing.

NUTSHELL, s. the hard shell or substance which encloses the kernel of a nut.

NUTTREE, s. in Botany, a tree that bears nuts.

NUXVOMICA, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, an acro-narcotic poison, the product of a vegetable known amongst botanists by the generic name of Strychnos, and commonly called Ratsbane.

To NUZZLE, v. a. to nurse or foster; to go with the nose down like a hog.

NYE, PHILIP, an eminent Puritan or Nonconformist divine of the times of the Revolution of 1640. He was educated at Oxford, and had a benefice in London; but fled to Holland, whence he did not return till the ascendancy of the parliament rendered the step safe. He sat in the Assembly of Divines, and was one of the foremost in claiming liberty of conscience, from presbytery, as well as from prelacy. He was one of the commissioners to Charles, when in Carisbrook Castle, and was ejected from all office, or capability of it, by special act, on the Restoration. He died in 1672, aged 70 years.

NYLGHAU, s. in Zoology, a large animal of the antelope kind, indigenous to India.

NYMPH, (nymf) s. [nymphus, Gr.] in Ancient Mythology, a goddess of the woods, meadows, or waters. In Poetry, a graceful young lady.

NYMPHAL, (nympfal) a. belonging to nymphs.

O

O IS the fourteenth letter of our alphabet. It is a vowel, and is sounded by the breath passing out of the mouth through the cylindrical concavity of the tongue and round configuration of the lips. It is long in drone, stone, alone; and short in got, not, hot, shot. It is made long by an u subjoined, as in moan, groan, or by e at the end of a syllable, as bone. The sound of oo is soft, as goose, reproof, soon, &c., but in some words oo is pronounced like u short, as in flood, blood, &c. The single o has the sound of oo in some words, as in Rome, womb, tomb, move, reproove, &c. In some words its sound is dropped, as in people; and sounds like u obscure in iron, citron, saffron, &c. As a numeral, O stands sometimes for II, and with a dash over it, thus, o, for 11,000.

O, interj. instinctive sound of wishing, or exclamation, or a sensation of pain.

OAF, (of) s. written likewise auf, ofe, [oph, Belg.] a change-ling; a foolish child left by the fairies; an idiot.

OA-FISH, (ofish) a. stupid; silly; doltish.

OA-FISHNESS, (ofishness) s. stupidity; dullness.

OAK, (ak) s. [ac or ec, Sax.] in Botany, a well-known tree, whose timber is much used in building, especially in ship-building, and is much valued for its durability, &c. It is also used in smoking fish, meat, &c. And its bark yields tannin, used in the preparation of leather. Its fruit, acorns, are good food for swine. The sea-oak is a species of fucus, found on rocks and stones in the sea.

OA-KAPPLE, s. in Natural History, an excrescence produced on the small branches of oak trees, by a small insect, in which the larvae live, and the pupæ remain till the perfect insect is formed. It was usual to wear them in the hat on May 20th, in commemoration of the restoration of Charles II., who was concealed after the battle of Worcester in the branches of an oak. But now that better knowledge prevails, the wearing of such things is confined to school children.

OA'KEN, (oken) a. [oacan, Sax.] made of oak.

OA'KENPIN, s. in Horticulture, a sort of apple.

OA'KHAM. See OKHAM.

OA'KHAMPTON, or OK'CKINGTON, Devonshire. It has a manufacture of serges; and is seated on the river Oak, 195 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2194.

OA'KINGTON. See OKINGHAM.

OA'KUM, (okum) s. ropes untwisted, and reduced to hemp, which are used to caulk, or stop the leaks, of ships.

OAAR, (or) s. [are, Sax.] a long pole with a broad thin end, by which boats, &c. are rowed.

To OAAR, (or) v. n. to row.—v. a. to move by rowing, or by means of oars.

OA'RWEEED, s. in Botany, the common name of some marine plants, which have broad leaves, and are very numerous and abundant in the British seas. Several species are serviceable in manuring land, and an impure alkali, named kelp, may be made by burning them.

OA'RY, a. having the form or use of oars.

OA'SIS, s. [Gr.] a verdant spot, or fertile tract, in the midst of a desert region.

OA'TCAKE, s. cake made of the meal of oats.

OA'TEN, (oten) a. made of oats, or of the stalk of oats.

OA'TES, TITUS, one of those portentous products of general corruption, which disclose the character of the age in which they appear. He was an English clergyman, and pretended to become a Jesuit. On his return to England, he got up information of a conspiracy against the king and the government, (it was in Charles II.'s reign,) to reinstate papal sway, and in conjunction with some other villains, swore away the lives of some of the most peaceful and best-intentioned of the subjects of the realm. He was pensioned for his feats by Charles, (who thoroughly disbelieved him, and was a secret Romanist,) by James II. he was fined, whipped, and pilloried, and by William III. was pensioned again, but at a lower rate. He died in 1705.

OA'TH, (oth) s. [ath, Sax.] a solemn affirmation, wherein we appeal to God as a witness of the truth of what we say. In our courts of justice, &c. the form of the oath is highly objectionable, being actually the same that was used in former times, before the ordeal of battle. It is much to be desired that this should be changed, and that it should be dispensed with in every case in which it is only a snare for perjury.

OA'THBREAKING, (oth-breaking) s. perjury, or the violation of an oath.

OA'TMEAL, (otmeal) s. flour made by grinding oats.

OA'TS, (ots) s. [aten, Sax.] in Farming and Botany, a kind of bearded grain, of which bread is made in some countries, and used likewise for food for horses.

OBADI'AH, a Hebrew prophet, of whom the only record is a solitary chapter, forming a prophetic poem against Idumea, or Edom. The style is forcible, and the country he spoke of a fearful commentary on his denunciations.

To OBADU'CE, v. a. [ob and duco, Lat.] to draw over as covering.

OB'DURACY, s. inflexible wickedness; impenitence; hardness of heart.

OB'DURATE, a. [durus, Lat.] impenitently wicked; immovably cruel; harsh; rugged.

OB'DURATELY, ad. in a stubborn, inflexible, or impenitent manner.

OB'DURATENESS, s. stubbornness; impenitence; obstinacy.

OB'DURATION, s. hardness of heart; stubbornness.

OB'DURED, a. hardened; inflexible; impenitent.

OBEEDIENCE, s. [Fr. from obedio, Lat.] the performance of the commands of a superior.

OBEIENT, a. [obediens, Lat.] obsequious; submissive to authority.

OBEIENTIAL, (obediēshal) a. [obédientiel, Fr.] according to the rules of obedience.

OBEIENTLY, ad. in such a manner as to perform the commands of a superior.

OBEISANCE, (obéissance) s. [Fr.] a bow, applied to a man; a courtesy, applied to a woman.

OBELISC, OBELISK, s. [obeliscus, Lat.] a slender pyramid, having four faces, lessening gradually upwards, till it terminates in a point, generally raised as an ornament in some public place. In Printing, a mark, thus, †.

OBERLIN, JOHN FREDERIC, the distinguished pastor of the Ban de la Roche, in Alsace, France. He was born and studied at Strasburg; and on entering upon his duties in this mountainous and secluded spot, he found that he had to civilize as well as to evangelize the people. In spite of all obstacles, he set out on this noble task, labouring himself at road-making, bridge-building, planting, &c. &c.; promoting education, trade, and every thing that could advance his flock; watching against and averting, as far as he could, all that could harm it. So well did he labour, that in the worst times of the French Revolution he was honoured, and his valley was as sacred as a sanctuary. His character was most simple and beautiful; and, as can easily be conceived, abundantly enthusiastic. He died in 1826, aged 86, after having laboured incessantly for nearly 60 years.

OBERRATION, s. [oberratio, Lat.] the act of wandering about.

OBESSE, a. [obesus, Lat.] fat; corpulent.

OBESENESSE, OBE'SITY, s. morbid fatness, or excessive corpulency.

TO OBEY, v. a. [obeyre, Fr. obedio, Lat.] to perform the commands of a superior.

OBJECT, s. [ob and jacio, Lat.] that with which the attention of the senses or mind is busied; the ultimate purpose entertained by any one in speaking, writing, or acting. See SUBJECT.

OBJECT-GLASS, s. the glass of a telescope or microscope, which is nearest the thing to be viewed, and farthest from the eye.

TO OBJE/CT, v. a. [objicio, Lat.] to oppose. To propose scruples against any thing as not consistent with reason or law, used with to or against.

OBJECTION, s. the act of placing any thing in opposition; the act of opposing any argument, or charging with a crime; an argument produced in opposition to something already asserted.

OBJECTIVE, a. [objectif, Fr.] belonging to or contained in the object. In Grammar, the relation in which the immediate object of the activity of the verb stands to it; expressed most commonly by the case called the accusative case. See SUBJECTIVE.

OBJECTIVELY, ad. in the manner of an object; in the state of opposition.

OBJECTIVENESS, s. the state of being an object.

OBJE/CTOR, s. one who raises difficulties against an opinion or assertion.

O'BIT, s. [a corruption from obit, Lat.] funeral obsequies, or an office performed at the interment of a corpse.

OBITUARY, s. [obituarium, Lat.] a funeral register, sometimes called mortuaries, but more frequently, neecrologies.

OBJURGATION, s. [objurgatio, from objurgo, Lat.] reproof; reprehension.

OBLATE, a. [oblatus, from latus, Lat.] flatted at the poles, applied to a spheroid.

OBLATION, s. [Fr. from offero, Lat.] any thing offered to God as a sacrifice, or an act of worship.

OBLIGATION, s. [oblecto, Lat.] recreation; pleasure; delight.

TO OBLIGATE, v. a. [obligo, from ligo, Lat.] to bind by contract, kindness, or duty.

OBLIGATION, s. the necessity of doing or omitting any action in order to be happy; the binding power of an oath, vow, duty, or contract; an act which binds to some performance; a favour which binds a man to gratitude. In Law, a bond wherein is contained a penalty conditioned for the payment of money.

OBLIGATORY, a. [obligatoire, Fr.] binding or having the power to enforce the performance or omission of something; coercive.

TO OBLIGE, v. a. to bind or compel to something; to indebted, or lay obligations of gratitude; to please or gratify.

OBLIGEE, s. the person bound by a legal and written contract.

OBLIGER, s. he who binds by contract.

OBLIGING, part. and a. civil; complaisant; engaging; respectful.

OBLIGINGLY, ad. in a kind, civil, and engaging manner.

OBLIGINGNESS, s. the quality of being civil, complaisant; obligation, force.

OBLIGATION, s. [obligatus, Lat.] declination from straightness or perpendicularity; obliquity.

OBLIQUE, (oblique) a. aslant; not straight, or perpendicular; indirect. Oblique ascension, is an arc of the equinoctial contained between the first degree of Aries, and that point of it which rises with the centre of the sun or a star. Oblique sphere, is that position of the globe in which either of the poles are elevated less than 90 degrees. In Grammar, formerly applied to all cases of nouns, excepting the nominative.

OBLIQUELY, (obliquely) ad. not directly; not perpendicularly, nor in a straight line; not in the direct meaning.

OBLIQUENESS, (obliqueness) OBLIQUITY, s. [obliquité, Fr.] deviation from natural rectitude, from perpendicularity, and from moral rectitude. In Astronomy, the angle formed at the intersection of the equator and the ecliptic.

TO OBLITERATE, v. a. [ob and littera, Lat.] to efface any thing written; to wear out, destroy, or efface from the memory.

OBLITERATION, s. the act of effacing any thing written, or rendering any thing forgotten.

OBLIVION, s. [obliviscor, Lat.] forgetfulness. An act of oblivion, an amnesty, wherein a general pardon is proclaimed for offences against a state.

OBLIVIOUS, a. causing forgetfulness.

O'BLONG, a. [oblongus, from longus, Lat.] longer than broad.

O'BLONGLY, ad. in an oblong form.

O'BLONGNESS, s. the quality or state of being longer than broad.

O'BLOQUY, s. [obloquor, Lat.] censorious speech; language by which any person or thing is represented to its disadvantage; slander; the cause of reproach.

OBMUTESCENCE, s. [obmutescere, from mutus, Lat.] loss of speech.

OBNOXIOUS, a. [obnoxius, from noxia, Lat.] subject or liable to be punished; liable; exposed.

OBNOXIOUSLY, ad. in a state of subjection, or of being liable to punishment.

OBNOXIOUSNESS, s. the state of being subject or liable to punishment.

TO OBNU'BLATE, v. a. [obnubilo, from nubes, Lat.] to cloud; to make obscure.

OBO'E, the same as HAUTOB, which see.

OBOLE, s. [obolus, Lat.] in Pharmacy, twelve grains.

OBRE/PTION, s. [obrepitio, from obrepio, Lat.] a stealing or creeping in.

TO OBROGATE, v. a. [obrogo, from rogo, Lat.] to proclaim a contrary law for the dissolution of the former.

OBSCENE, a. [obscenus, Lat.] immodest; raising unchaste ideas; offensive or disgusting; inauspicious.

OBSCENELY, ad. in an immodest or lewd manner.

OBSCENENESS, OBSCENITY, s. [obscenité, Fr.] impurity or immodesty in thought, word, or deed.

OBSCURATION, s. [obscuratio, from obscurus, Lat.] the act of darkening, or being deprived of light.

OBSCURE, a. [obscurus, Lat.] dark; gloomy; living in the dark. Abstruse or difficult, applied to writings. Not noted or famous, applied to persons.

TO OBSCURE, v. a. to darken; to make less visible. Figuratively, to render less easy to be understood, applied to the mind; to eclipse the beauty or dignity, applied to rank.

OBSCURELY, ad. in such a manner as to show want or privation of light; in a dark or gloomy manner; out of sight; in a mean, private manner; in a station neither conspicuous nor famous.

OBSCURENESS, OBSCURITY, s. a state of darkness, or that wherein is a privation of light; privacy; a state wherein a person lives unobserved or unknown. Darkness of meaning, applied to words.

OBSECRATION, s. [ob and sacer, Lat.] entreaty or supplication.

OBSEQUES, s. [obsequium, from obsequor, Lat.] the funeral rites or solemnities.

OBSEQUIOUS, a. obedient; complaisant; funeral.

OBSEQUIOUSLY, ad. obediently; with compliance.

OBSEQUIOUSNESS, s. passive obedience, or compliance.

OBSERVABLE, (the s in this and the following words derived from obseruo, Lat. is usually pron. like z: as obzervable, obzervant, obzerving, &c. &c.) a. remarkable; deserving notice; eminent.

OBSERVABLY, ad. in a manner worthy of notice.

OBSERVANCE, s. [Fr.] respect; ceremonial reverence; attentive practice; a law or rule for practice; careful obedience; attention; regard; religious rite.

OBSERVANT, part. attentive; diligent; watchful; obedient; respectfully attentive; submissive; respectful. In Ecclesiastical History, the name given to those Franciscans who returned to the rigid observance of the rule of their founder, in the reformation of the order begun at the commencement of the 15th century.

OBSERVATION, s. [obseruo, Lat.] the act of taking notice of things and persons; a remark; an animadversion; a notion gained by observing. In Navigation, the act of taking the altitude, &c. of the sun, moon, &c., to find the longitude, &c.

OBSERVATOR, s. one who observes; a remarker.

OBSERVATORY, s. a place built for making astronomical observations.

To OBSERVE, (obzerve) v. a. [obseruo, Lat.] to watch; to look at; to regard with attention; to obey; to follow; to perceive by attention; to regard or keep religiously.—v. n. to apply with attention; to remark.

OBSERVER, s. one who looks vigilantly or attentively at persons or things; one who remarks, looks on, or beholds; one who practises any rite, custom, or law.

OBSERVINGLY, ad. with attention, heed, or care.

OBSSESSION, s. [obsessio, from obsideo, Lat.] the act of besieging.

OBSTIDIAN, s. [from the name of the first discoverer;] in Mineralogy, a kind of glass usually of a dark green colour, and not transparent, found in large or small shapeless masses; which is one of the most remarkable volcanic products.

OBSTIDIONAL, a. [obstidionalis, Lat.] belonging to a siege.

OBSOLETE, a. [obsoletus, from soleo, Lat.] not in use; worn out of use; unfashionable.

OBSOLETENESE, s. the quality of being no longer used, or of being out of fashion.

OBSTACLE, s. [Fr. from obsto, Lat.] something which opposes the exertion of any power, either of body or mind.

OBSTETRIC, a. [obstetrica, Lat.] belonging to midwifery.

OBSTETRICATION, s. the office of a midwife.

OBTINACY, s. [obstinatio, Lat.] stubbornness; pertinacity; contumacy; persistency.

OBTINATE, a. refusing to act or assent; immovably resolved.

OBTINATELY, ad. in such a manner as to remain culpably fixed or resolute; in such a manner as to be inflexibly resolute.

OBTINATENESS, s. stubbornness; wilfulness; contumacy.

OBTUSIFICATION, s. [obtusio, Lat.] the act of stopping up any passage.

OBTREPEROUS, a. [obstrepro, Lat.] loud; noisy; turbulent; clamorous; vociferous.

OBTREPEROUSLY, ad. in a noisy or clamorous manner.

OBTREPEROUSNESS, s. loudness; clamour; turbulence; noise.

OBTRICTION, s. [obstrictus, from obstringo, Lat.] obligation; bond.

OBTRICTIVE, v. a. [obstruo, from ob and struo, Lat.] to block up; to hinder; bar; or be in the way of; to oppose or retard.

OBTRICTER, s. one who hinders or opposes.

OBTRICTION, s. any hindrance, difficulty, obstacle, or impediment. In Medicine, the stoppage of any canal or vessel in the human body, so as to prevent the passage of any thing through it.

OBTRICTIVE, a. [obstrictif, Fr.] causing hindrance or impediment.

OBTRICTIVE, s. any thing which hinders or impedes.

OBSTRUENT, part. [obstruens, Lat.] hindering or blocking up any passage.

OBSTUPEFACTION, s. [obstupefacio, Lat.] the act of inducing stupidity, or interruption of the mental powers.

OBSTUPEFACTIVE, a. stupifying, or obstructing the vigour of the mind.

To OBTAIN, v. a. [obtineo, Lat.] to gain, acquire, or procure; to impetrate; to gain by the concession or excited friendship of another.—v. n. to continue in use; to be established; to prevail or succeed.

OBTAINABLE, a. capable of being procured.

OBTAINER, s. one who obtains.

To OBTEMPERATE, v. a. [obtempero, Lat.] to obey, or be at command.

To OBTEND, v. a. [ob and tendo, Lat.] to oppose; to hold out in opposition; to pretend; to make use of as the reason of any thing. Seldom used.

OBTENEBRATION, s. [tenebra, Lat.] darkness; the state of being darkened; the act of darkening; cloudiness.

To OBTES, v. a. [obtestor, Lat.] to beseech or implore.

OBTES, s. the act of beseeching or supplicating.

OBTRECTATION, s. [obrecto, Lat.] slander; calumny; detraction.

To OBTUDE, v. a. [obtrudo, from trudo, Lat.] to force into any place or state by violence or imposture; to offer with unreasonable importunity.

OBTUDER, s. one who obtrudes.

OBTUSION, (obtrichon) s. the act of obtruding.

OBTUSIVE, a. inclined to force oneself, or any thing else, upon another.

To OBTUND, v. a. [obtundo, from tundo, Lat.] to blunt, dull, quell, or deaden.

OBTURATION, s. [obturo, Lat.] the act of stopping up any thing by smearing something over it.

OBTUSANGULAR, a. [obtusus and angulus, Lat.] having angles larger than right ones.

OBTUSE, a. [obtundo, Lat.] not pointed or sharp; blunt. In Geometry, applied to angles which are larger than a right angle. Figuratively, dull; stupidified; not quick; obscure; not shrill.

OBTUSELY, ad. without an edge or point; in a dull, stupid manner.

OBTUSENESS, s. bluntness; dullness.

OBTUSION, s. the act of dulling or blunting; the state of being made dull.

To OBTURT, v. a. [vertio, Lat.] to turn toward.

To OBTURBATE, v. a. [ob and turn, Lat.] to meet in the way; to prevent.

OBTURB, a. meeting any thing; opposed in front to any thing. Figuratively, open; exposed. Easily discovered, or plain, applied to sentiment.

OBTURB, ad. evidently; plainly.

OBTURB, s. the state of being evident, apparent, or easily discovered.

To OBTURBATE, v. a. [obturno, from turno, Lat.] to shade, cloud, or make any thing less visible.

OCCAM, or OCCAM, WILLIAM, the Invincible Doctor of the Schoolmen, was an Englishman by birth, and studied under Duns Scotus. He founded a school called by his name, which held and taught Nominalism, in opposition to the authorized Realism of the age, and shook the church almost as much as an attempt at a practical reformation would have done. He taught at the university of Paris, under the shadow of the French king's protection; and died in Munich in 1347, aged about 50 years. His books are very unreadable now, the language and the subject too being irrecoverably dead.

OCCASION, (okázhon) s. [ob and cado, Lat.] an incident; opportunity; convenience; occurrence casual; an unforeseen opportunity; an accidental cause; casual need or exigence.

To OCCASION, (okázhon) v. a. to cause without design; to cause or produce; to influence.

OCCASIONAL, (okázhonat) a. casual; incidental; producing without design; produced by occasion, or incidental exigence.

OCCASIONALLY, (okázhonally) ad. casually, or on account of some unforeseen emergency.

OCCLEATION, (okkeldashon) s. [occeatio, from cæcus, Lat.] the act of blinding or making blind.

OCCIDENT, (oksidens) s. [occidens, from occido, Lat.] the west.

OCCIDENTAL, (oksidental) a. [occidentalis, Lat.] western.
 OCCIDUOUS, (oksiduous) a. [occiduus, Lat.] western.
 OCCIPITAL, (okspital) a. [occipitalis, from occiput, Lat.] placed in the hinder part of the head.

OCCIPUT, (okspit) s. [Lat.] the hinder part of the head.
 OCCISION, (okshion) s. [occisio, from occido, Lat.] the act of killing or slaying.

TO OCCULDE, v. a. [ob and claudo, Lat.] to shut up.
 OCCULSE, a. shut up; closed.
 OCCULT, a. [occulto, Lat.] secret; hidden; unknown; undiscoverable.

OCCULTATION, s. in Astronomy, the concealment of a star or planet, by the interposition of the moon, or some other planet, between it and us.

OCCULTNESS, s. the state of being secret, hid, or not discoverable.

OCCUPANCY, s. [occupans, from occupo, Lat.] the act of taking possession.
 OCCUPANT, s. one that takes possession.

TO OCCUPATE, v. a. [occupo, Lat.] to possess, hold, or take up.
 OCCUPATION, s. [Fr.] the act of taking possession; an employment, business, trade, or calling.

OCCUPIER, a. a possessor; one that takes possession; one who follows any employment.

TO OCCUPY, v. a. [occupor, Fr.] to possess, keep, or take up; to employ and busy; to follow as a trade or business; to use, or expend.—v. n. to practise or follow any business.

TO OCCUR, v. n. [ob and curro, Lat.] to present to the memory or attention; to appear in different places; to meet, clash, or strike against; to obviate, or oppose.

OCCURRENCE, s. [Fr.] an incident; accidental event; occasional presentation.

OCCURRENT, s. [occurrens, Lat.] any event or thing that happens.

OCCURSION, s. [occurro, Lat.] a clash, hurt, or blow, by the meeting of two bodies together.

OCEAN, (ashan) s. [Fr. oceanus, Lat.] in Geography, is a vast expanse of salt waters. There are usually reckoned 5 oceans on the surface of our globe: 1. The Atlantic Ocean, which divides Europe and Africa from America: 2. The Pacific Ocean, or South Sea, which divides America from Asia: 3. The Indian Ocean, which separates the Indies from Africa: 4. The Arctic Ocean, or Icy Sea, round the N. pole; and, 5. The Antarctic Ocean, round the S. pole. The other seas which are called oceans usually receive their names from the countries they border upon; as the German Ocean, between England and Germany. Any immense expanse.

OCEAN, (ashan) a. belonging to the main sea.
 OCEANIA, s. [Oceanis, Fr.] in Geography, the French name for the groups of islands in the Pacific Ocean. See POLYNESIA.

OCELLATED, a. [oculus, Lat.] resembling the eye.
 OCELLUS, surnamed Lucanus, from his native country, Lucania; a Pythagorean philosopher, supposed to have lived in the 6th century B. C. His treatise, on the Nature of the Universe, is still extant.

CELOT, s. in Zoology, an animal of the cat kind, which inhabits Mexico, and is covered with very beautiful spots.

OCHILL, the name of a range of mountains in Scotland, the loftiest parts of which are in Perthshire, and exceed 2000 feet in height.

OCHIMY, (okimy) s. [formed by corruption from alchemy,] a mixed base metal.

CHRE, (shkr) s. [Fr. ochre, Gr.] in Mineralogy, an earth which is known in chemistry as one of the oxides of iron. Ochres are of several kinds, distinguished by their colours.

CHREOUS, (shkreous) a. consisting of ochre.

CHREY, (shrey) a. partaking of ochre.

CKLEY, SIMON, a clergyman of the English Church, who was eminent for his attainments in oriental literature. He was Arabic Professor at Cambridge; and wrote many works, the best known of which is his History of the Saracens. He died in indigence, in 1720, aged 42 years.

O'CONNELL, DANIEL, the Irish Liberator, a distinguished political agitator of the present century. He was educated at St. Omer and Douay, and afterwards studied law at Lincoln's Inn. After he was called to the bar, he was almost unknown till he defended and procured the acquittal of Lord Killeen and others from a Protestant jury. He had before appeared as the advocate of Catholic Emancipation; and in the Catholic Committee, the Catholic Board, and the Catholic Association, he laboured with the energy of a giant, and displayed the noblest eloquence to obtain that just demand. And in this he was finally successful. He had before this, his first and only true triumph, been returned to parliament, and it was this return which won his cause. His professional practice had been considerable, and he received a voluntary tribute from the Irish people, as a compensation for his loss of that, whilst carrying on this war of opinion. He was never out of parliament, nor out of the public eye, afterwards; but the rest of his career was one huge sham. He sacrificed the poor country voters in the time of the Reform Bill; and he kept Ireland in one ceaseless ferment for above 15 years, by agitating the question of repeal of the union of that country with England. He raised this ferment to the most alarming pitch, at length, by his monster meetings, of hundreds of thousands, on spots consecrated by national tradition; and he was then in the zenith of his popular glory, crowned as de facto king of the Irish. One step higher in the splendour of his pretence the English government raised him, by a prosecution, conviction of conspiracy, and incarceration in Richmond gaol. But from this show of martyrdom he was delivered by Writ of Error, and his occupation was for ever gone. Unable to guide the spirits he had raised; alarmed by the realities of famine and pestilence, which prevented the supply of the funds by which he had carried on his bistrionic warfare against the Saxons; worn out by the ceaseless excitement of his public life; he left the field, and died, on his journey to the Eternal City, at Genoa, in 1847, aged 72 years, bequeathing his heart to Rome. He has already been tried by history; and her judgment is, that priestism, and not patriotism, was the genius by which he was led. Yet history most gratefully records, that O'Connell first proved the power of pacific agitation, and by that only means gained one of the noblest victories over the coward bigotry of State-churchism which late days have ever seen.

CTAGON, s. [okto and gonia, Gr.] in Geometry, a figure of eight sides and angles.

OCTAGONAL, a. having eight sides and angles.
 OCTANGULAR, a. [okto and angulus, Lat.] having eight angles.

OCTANGULARNESS, s. the quality of having eight angles.
 OCTANT, OCTILE, a. [okto, Lat.] in Astrology, that aspect of any heavenly body with respect to another, that they are only one-eighth of a circle, or 45 degrees, distant from each other.

CTAVE, s. [Fr.] the eighth day after some particular festival. In Music, an eighth, or interval of eight sounds.

CTAVO, s. [Lat.] a book, each of whose leaves is one-eighth of a sheet of paper.

CTENNIAL, a. [okto and annus, Lat.] happening every eighth year; lasting eight years.

CTOBER, s. [Lat.] the tenth month in order from January.

CTONARY, a. belonging to the number eight.

TONOCULAR, a. [okto and oculus, Lat.] having eight eyes.

CTOPEOTALOUS, a. [okto and petalon, Gr.] in Botany, having eight flower leaves.

CTOSTYLE, s. [okto and stulos, Gr.] the face of a building having eight columns.

CTUFLE, a. [oktuplus, Lat.] eight-fold.

CTULAR, a. [okulaire, Fr. from oculus, Lat.] depending on the eye; known by the eye.

CTULARLY, ad. in such a manner as to be visible to the eye.

CTULATE, a. having eyes; knowing or perceiving by the eye.

CTULIST, s. one who professes to cure the disorders of the eye.

CTAKOW, or OCHZAKOFF, a town in the government of Cherson, Russia. It is seated at the mouth of the river Dnieper, opposite Kinburn, and has some trade. Pop. about 1500. Lat. 46. 50. N. Long. 33. 16. E.

ODD, a. [od, Brit.] not even; not to be divided into even numbers; more than a round number, or the number mentioned.

Figuratively, particular; strange; uncouth; whimsical; fantastical; uncommon; unlucky; unlikely; singular.

ODDLY, ad. in a strange, singular, or unaccountable manner; in such a manner as not to be divided into an even number.

ODDNESS, s. the state of being uneven; singularity, peculiarity, strangeness, or uncouthness.

ODDS, s. the excess of two, compared with each other; advantage or superiority for or against a thing; a quarrel, debate, dispute, or difference.

ODE, s. [Gr.] a song, or poetical composition, to be sung or set to music. It is generally, however, used to designate compositions of the lyrical kind, which are not primarily intended for music, and which display thought and emotion, rather than facts. Pindar's odes are the noblest in Greek; Horace is the greatest Latin writer of odes; and in English we have many, and Wordsworth's are amongst the best.

ODESSA, a town of the government of Cherson, Russia. It stands on the shore of the Black Sea, and is a handsome town, with several noble public buildings. Its harbour is formed by vast moles, and is very extensive, and strongly fortified. It is a very important place for commerce, and is the great shipping port for the corn of the S. part of Russia. It has also some valuable manufactories. Its inhabitants belong to a great many different countries, and there are various institutions for purposes of education and charity, which are well supported. Pop. about 70,000. Lat. 46. 32. N. Long. 30. 35. E.

ODIHAM, Hampshire. It is situated on a navigable canal from the Wye and Thames to Basingstoke, 42 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2817.

ODIN, s. in Northern Mythology, the supreme or chief amongst the gods. War and trade, by a very remarkable and characteristic inconsistency, were put under his especial protection. Odin is said to have been the chief, under whom the Northmen migrated from Seythia, long before the Christian era. He was otherwise called Woden, and the Wednesday was dedicated to his honour.

ODIOUS, a. [odiosus, from odi, Lat.] exposed to hate; causing hate; hateful, abominable, detestable.

ODIOUSLY, ad. hatefully; abominably; invidiously.

ODIOUSNESS, s. the quality which renders a person or thing the object of hatred; the state of being hated.

ODIUM, s. [Lat.] hatred; the quality of provoking hatred.

ODOACER, the chief of the Herulians, a tribe of Northmen, who in the 5th century finally overthrew the empire of Rome, and made himself king of Italy. He was defeated several times by the Goths under Theodoric, besieged in Rome, and murdered in 493, after a reign of 17 years.

ODONTALGIC, a. [odon and algos, Gr.] pertaining to the tooth-ache.

ODORATE, a. [odor, Lat.] scented; having a strong scent.

ODORIFEROUS, a. [odor and fero, Lat.] giving scent; fragrant; perfumed.

ODORIFEROUSNESS, s. sweetness of scent; fragrance.

ODOROUS, a. sweet-scented; fragrant; perfumed.

ODOUR, s. [odor, Lat.] a scent or smell, whether good or bad; but most properly applied to a sweet one.

ODYSSEY, the name of the second great Homeric epic poem, which recounts the adventures of Odysseus, commonly called Ulysses, as he returned to Ithaca from the siege of Troy. See Homer.

OE, (pron. like an E in the following words,) a diphthong used in English to represent the diphthong oi of the Greek language.

ECOLAMPA'DIUS, JOHN, one of the most eminent of the Swiss reformers, who studied at Heidelberg, and entered the priesthood; but being converted to the new doctrine by the writings of Luther, he went to Basle, and was made theological professor there. He espoused the sacramental opinions of Zwinglius, and wrote many learned and valuable works. He died in 1531, aged 49 years.

ECONOMICS, s. [oikos and nomos, Gr.] the management of household affairs.

ECONOMIST, s. one who manages a family; one who conducts his affairs with prudence and discretion; one who so conducts his national revenues and finances.

ECONOMY, s. the act of prudently managing affairs; thriftiness; good husbandry. In Theology, a particular dispensation or revelation of God's will to man; also, the moral government of God.

ECUMENICAL, a. [oikoumene, Gr.] general; respecting the whole habitable world. Ecumenical Councils, in Ecclesiastical History, are assemblies convened from all Christendom, for the regulation of doctrine and discipline in the Church. Church historians reckon 19 of these councils, the first being the council of Nice, and the last the council of Trent.

CEDEMA, s. [oedema, from oideo, Gr.] a white, soft, insensible tumour, proceeding from cold.

CEDEMATIC, CEDEMATOUS, a. appertaining to an oedema.

CELLAD, s. [oell, Fr.] a glance; wink; taken given by the eye.

CELE, contracted in poetry for ever.

CEPHAGUS, s. [oios and phago, Gr.] in Anatomy, the gullet, or membranous pipe or passage, whereby our food is conveyed from the mouth to the stomach.

OF, (oe) prep. [Sax.] from; relating to; concerning; among; according to. Used with the reciprocal pronoun, it implies power, ability, choice, or willingness. Applied to families, being born of; extraction. Sometimes it signifies the matter of which anything is made. When put before an indefinite expression of time, it gives an adverbial signification. "Of late," i. e. lately. It is commonly used to express the genitive relation, or possession and property, in English.

OFF, ad. [of, Sax.] the chief use of this word is to conjoin it with the verbs, come, fly, look, and take, and is generally opposed to on, and then signifies separation, disunion, breach of continuity. When applied to measure, it signifies distance. In Painting or Statuary, projection or relief. After go, it implies vanishing, absence, or departure. Absolutely, it implies disappointment, defeat, or interruption. When opposed to on, it implies in behalf or favour. When applied to any action, it implies change, alteration, or diversion. Off hand, signifies without study or premeditation.

OFF, interj. an expression of abhorrence, or command to depart.

OFF, prep. is opposed to on or upon. At a distance, applied to place.

OFFA, a king of Mercia, in Anglo-Saxon Britain, and ninth Bretwalda, or supreme king of the land. He was elected king of Mercia in place of one Beorred, whose tyranny was unbearable; and his fame has made him the theme of as many legends as any Teuton king. He subdued the Welsh, and either by battle, or by negotiation, or by treachery, gained the supremacy over all the other Saxon kingdoms. Before his death he summoned a great council of his own realm, and had his son Egfrith acknowledged and crowned king of Mercia. His contemporary celebrity is proved by the fact that Charlemagne, claiming to be the greatest monarch in Eastern Christendom, always addressed Offa as the greatest in the West. Tamworth was the royal residence of this forgotten hero. He died in 795, having reigned for 40 years.

OFFAL, s. [perhaps from offa, Lat.] waste meat, or that which is not eaten at table; carrion, or coarse flesh; refuse, or that which is thrown away as of no value; any thing of no esteem; the entrails.

OFFENCE, s. [offendo, Lat.] any thing which may cause disgust, on account of being contrary to law, or the inclination of another; any thing that may injure or displease.

OFFENCEFUL, a. causing displeasure; injurious; contrary to law.

OFFENCELESS, a. without doing injury, or any thing that may cause displeasure; innocent, harmless, inoffensive.

TO OFFEND, v. a. [offendo, Lat.] to irritate, or make angry; to attack; to assail; to transgress; to injure; to violate.—v. n. to be criminal; to provoke to anger; to be guilty of a transgression of any rule.

OFFENDER, s. a criminal; transgressor; one who has done an injury.

OFFENDRESS, s. a female offender.

OFFENSIVE, a. causing anger, displeasure, pain; assailable; disgusting; injurious.

OFFENSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to displease, or cause uneasiness or hatred.

OFFENSIVENESS, s. mischief; uneasiness; injury, or cause of disgust.

TO OFFER, v. a. [offero, Lat.] to present to a person; to hold so as a person may receive; to sacrifice, or immolate; to bid, applied to price; to attempt; to commence; to propose.—v. n. to be present, or to present itself; to make an attempt.

OFFER, s. [offre, Fr.] proposal of an advantage to another;

a proposal made; the price bid at a sale or market; attempt or endeavour; first advance.

OFFERER, s. one who makes a proposal; one who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.

OFFERING, s. any thing sacrificed on a religious account.

OFFERTORY, s. [offertorio, Fr.] the thing offered; the act of offering.

OFFICE, s. [Fr. from officium, Lat.] any public charge or employment; agency; peculiar use; act of good or ill, voluntarily proffered; private employment; act of worship; formulary of devotions; place appropriated to particular business; a place where business is transacted. Italy Office, see INQUISITION.

OFFICER, s. [officier, Fr.] a man employed by the public; a commander in an army; one who has the power of apprehending criminals, or arresting debtors. Commission-Officers are those appointed by the king's commission; such are all from the general to the cornet, inclusive; thus denominated in contradistinction to Warrant-Officers, who are appointed by the colonel or captain's warrant, as quarter-masters, sergeants, corporals, and even chaplains and surgeons. Field-Officers are such as command a whole regiment; as the colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major. Flag-Officers are admirals, commodores, and commanders of squadrons. General-Officers are those whose command extends to a body of forces, composed of several regiments; such are the general, lieutenant-general, major-generals, and brigadiers. Staff-Officers are such as, in the king's presence, bear a white staff, or wand; and at other times, at their going abroad, have it carried before them by a footman bareheaded; such are the lord-steward, lord-chamberlain, lord-treasurer, &c. The white staff is taken for a commission; and at the king's death, each of these officers breaks his staff over the bier made for the king's body, and by this means lays down his commission, and discharges his inferior offices. Subaltern-Officers are all who administer justice in the name of subjects; as those who act under the earl-marshal, admiral, &c. In the army, the subaltern officers are the lieutenants, cornets, ensigns, sergeants, and corporals.

OFFICERIAL, a. supplied with commanders.

OFFICIAL, (official) a. [Fr.] conducive towards performing any public charge.

OFFICIAL, (official) a. a person commissioned to judge causes in an ecclesiastical court.

OFFICIALTY, (officialty) s. [officialité, Fr.] the charge or post of an official.

TO OFFICIATE, (officialiate) v. n. to discharge any office, generally applied to acts of worship; to perform an office for another;—v. a. to give in consequence of office.

OFFICINAL, a. [officina, Lat.] among apothecaries, used in shops.

OFFICIOUS, (officious) a. [officium, Lat.] doing good offices, or acts of kindness, in a good sense. Assisting or intermeddling with the affairs of another, without being invited or welcome; forward, in a bad sense.

OFFICIOUSLY, (officiously) ad. in such a manner as to be too fond of assisting a person, or intermeddling in his affairs, without being asked or welcome. Kindly, or with unasked kindness, in a good sense.

OFFICIOUSNESS, (officiousness) s. too great a readiness to assist or oblige another, commonly used in a bad sense. Service, in a good sense.

OFFING, s. in sailors' language, is the open sea, or far from land. When a ship is sailing to sea, they say, she stands for the Offing.

OFFSET, s. a sprout, a shoot of a plant.

OFFSCOURING, s. a part rubbed off in cleaning or scouring; refuse.

OFFSPRING, s. the thing propagated or generated; children, descendants; a production of any kind.

OFF, ad. [Sax.] frequently; several times; often; not rarely; not seldom.

OFFEN, (usually pronounced as if spelt ōfen), a. in the comparative, offener, in the superlative, offenest; many times; frequently.

OFFENTIMES, ad. many times; more than once or twice; frequently.

OFFTIMES, ad. many times; frequently.

OGEE, Qui've, in Architecture, a moulding.

TO O'GLE, v. n. [oggh, Belg.] to view with stolen glances, in order to escape notice.

O'GLER, s. [oggheler, Belg.] one that views another by side or stolen glances.

OGRESSES, s. in Heraldry, balls of a black colour.

OH, interj. an exclamation made use of to express sorrow, pain, or surprise.

O'HIO, a river of North America, which rises in the Alleghany Mountains, by the junction of the Alleghany and the Monongahela rivers, and falls into the Mississippi after a course of about 950 miles. There is only one part in all this distance that deserves the title of rapids, and even they are passed by boats when the water is high. It is 900 feet wide at its mouth. It receives the waters of innumerable tributaries.

O'HIO, a State of the Union, North America. It lies on Lake Erie, and is bounded by Michigan, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Kentucky, and Indiana. It is 210 miles long, and 200 miles wide, and is divided into 79 counties. It is generally level, but about a quarter of its surface, in the E. and S. E. parts, is broken and hilly. The Ohio, the Muskingum, the Scioto, the 2 Miamis, &c., with their tributaries, are its chief rivers. Coal and iron are found in various parts. Wheat and other grain are produced abundantly. The forests furnish most valuable kinds of wood, and the extensive prairies graze large herds of cattle. It is yet but in an infant condition, but it has some valuable manufactures, and some excellent trading places, as it communicates with the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi too; it has also 37 banks. It has no less than 16 colleges of different kinds, literary, legal, theological, and medical. Cincinnati is its great place of trade, and Columbus its seat of government. Population, 1,519,467.

OIL, s. [œl, Sax.] a fat, unctuous, thin, and inflammable juice, drawn from animal, vegetable, and mineral bodies, either by expression or distillation. See the names of the principal kinds.

TO OIL, v. a. to smear with oil.

OIL-COLOUR, s. colour made by grinding coloured substances in oil.

OILINESS, s. greasiness; unctuousity; the quality approaching to, or like, that of oil.

OILMAN, s. one who trades in oils, pickles, &c.

OILSHOP, s. a shop where oil, pickles, and other commodities are vended.

OILY, a. fat; greasy; resembling oil.

TO OINT, v. a. [Fr.] to anoint; to smear with something greasy.

ONIMENT, s. a medicine made of unctuous, oily, or greasy substances.

OISE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Aisne, Seine at Marne, Seine et Oise, Eure, Seine Inférieure, and Somme. It is 60 miles long and 40 broad. It is generally level, and is watered by the Oise, (after which it is named), the Aisne, &c. &c. Building-stone, limestone, marble, &c. are its mineral products. It is a decidedly agricultural district, producing all kinds of corn in abundance, with cattle of all kinds, fruits, cider, &c. It has wide forests, abounding in game, &c. In the towns, extensive manufactures are carried on. Beauvais is its capital. Pop. about 420,000.

OKEHAM, Rutlandshire. It is pretty well built, and has a free-school and an hospital. It is the county town. It is seated in a rich valley, called the Vale of Catmos, and is 95 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Saturday. Pop. 2720.

OKEINGHAM, O'KINGHAM, or WO'KINGHAM, Berkshire and Wiltshire. It has a small manufactory of denims, and some mills for throwing silk. It is 32 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 3342.

OKER, s. See OCURE.

OKHOTSK, a town of Asiatic Russia, standing on the river Ochota, not far from the coast of the Sea of Okhotsk. It is a place of some trade, being the only town of any importance between Siberia and Kamchatka and Russian America. Pop. about 2500. Lat. 62. 30. N. Long. 141. 0. E.

OLAUS MAGNUS, the historian of the ancient Scandinavian races, was one of the few clergy who remained faithful to their old creed at the Swedish Reformation. His great work contains much rare and valuable information respecting the Northmen. He died at Rome in 1508.

OLBERS, DR. HENRY WILLIAM, an eminent German astronomer of the last century and the beginning of the present. Although not a mean proficient in mathematical astronomy, his fame rests on his discovery of two of the asteroids, the 2nd of the first 4 known, named Pallas, and the 4th, named Vesta. He also calculated the elements of some smaller comets. He had a most beautifully furnished observatory at his own house on Bremen, and an excellent library attached to it. He died in 1840, aged 72 years.

OLD, a. [old, Sax., alt, Teut.] advanced in years, or beyond the middle age of life. Of long continuance; begun long ago; not new; ancient; not modern; subsisting before something else, opposed to last; long practised, or veteran. In familiar or burlesque language, more than enough; a frequent repetition of the same thing. Of old, signifies long ago, or in times long past.

OLDCASTLE, SIR JOHN, LORD COBHAM, the most illustrious of England's martyrs before the Reformation. He was a man of high standing and considerable military renown, nor yet less fitted for counsel than for war; and he enjoyed great favour from Henry V., who could appreciate these excellencies. Being a convert to Wicliffe's faith by means of his books, he was naturally much looked up to by the persecuted followers of that apostle of the truth in England. Priestly intolerance procured his excommunication and sentence, but he escaped from the Tower. Afterwards a basely false charge of treason was laid against him; and being taken, although the king knew how false the charge was, he so much feared the priests, that he suffered this brave and holy man to be burnt to death in chains, slowly, in 1417.

OLDENBURG, a duchy of Germany, consisting of Oldenburg Proper, Lübeck, and Birkenfeld. They lie in the N. W. part of Germany, and are bounded by Denmark, Hanover, Prussia, the Netherlands, &c., respectively. Oldenburg is a level tract at the mouth of the Weser, having good grazing grounds, and a soil which, though not very fertile, produces corn of all kinds, &c. Lübeck is also level, and is watered by the Trave. Birkenfeld is mountainous, yielding iron, coal, stone for building, &c.; and in its lower parts producing corn, wine, fruits, &c. It has not much trade, nor any very valuable manufactures. Oldenburg, the capital, stands on the river Hulta, and has, beside the palace, several schools, &c. worthy of observation. Pop. about 8000. Lat. 53. 10. N. Long. 8. 10. E. Pop. of duchy, about 275,000. It is sometimes called Holstein-Oldenburg.

OLDFASHIONED, a. made in a form at present laid aside, or not used.

OLDHAM, Lancashire. It stands on the Mellock, and is a manufacturing town of some importance. In its neighbourhood are several coal mines. There are many handsome buildings for educational and other public purposes in the town. It is 166 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 42,595.

OLDNESS, s. old age; antiquity; the quality of being old; impaired by age or time.

OLD RED SANDSTONE, in Geology, the former name of a variable formation, lying as the base of the carboniferous rocks, and found in coal districts. See SILURLIAN SYSTEM.

OLEAGINOUS, a. [oleaginus, from olea, Lat.] oily; unctuous.

OLEAGINOUSNESS, s. oiliness.

OLEANDER, s. [oleandre, Fr.] in Botany, the plant rosebay.

OLEFIANT GAS, in Chemistry, the product of the decomposition of alcohol by an excess of sulphuric acid, which consists of equal parts of carbon and hydrogen.

OLEOSE, a. [oleosus, from olea, Lat.] oily.

OLFACTORY, a. [olfactorie, Fr.] having the sense of smelling.

OLID, OLIDOUS, a. [olidus, from olea, Lat.] stinking.

OLIGARCHICAL, [oligárkikal, a. [oligarchicus, Lat. from oligos and arche, Gr.] belonging to an oligarchy.

OLIGARCHY, [oligárky, s. a form of government which places the supreme power in a small number, generally nobles; aristocracy.

OLIO, s. [olla, Span.] a rich dish made of different sorts of meat; a medley.

OLITORY, a. [olitor, Lat.] belonging to the kitchen garden.

OLIVAREZ, GASPARD GUZMAN, DUKE D', an eminent Spanish statesman, who held almost sovereign sway under Philip IV. for 22 years, and managed the domestic affairs of the kingdom with some success; but having to contend with the powerful Richelieu in foreign affairs, was compelled to abide the loss of Portugal, and many of the American colonies. Being dismissed in consequence of this, he fell into obscurity, and died in 1643, aged 55 years.

OLIVASTER, a. [olivastre, Fr. from oliva, Lat.] darkly-brown; tawny.

OLIVE, s. [olea, Lat.] in Botany, a tree producing an oblong fruit, about the size of a damson, which is pickled; it is famous for its oil, which is a very considerable article of commerce in the different states of Italy, &c.; and was formerly used as an emblem of peace.

OLMUTZ, a town of Moravia, Austria. It is a place of some consideration for trade and manufactures; and has a college, a riding academy, and a learned society. It is well built, populous, and fortified, and is seated on the river Morava, 100 miles from Vienna. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 49. 55. N. Long. 17. 14. E.

OLNEY, Buckinghamshire. It has a considerable manufacture of bone-lace; and is seated on the river Ouse, 56 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 2437.

OLONETZ, a town of Russia, formerly capital of a government so called, famous for its mines of iron, and its mineral water. It is situated in the government of the same name, on the river Olonza, which falls into the E. side of the Lake Ladoga. Pop. about 3000. Lat. 61. 26. N. Long. 34. 20. E.

OLONETZ, a government of Russia, lying on Lake Ladoga, and bounded by Novgorod, St. Petersburg, Finland, Volodga, and Archangel. It is very various in the character of its surface, having plains, mountains, marshes, and lakes. Iron, timber, furs, &c. are its articles of trade. Petrozavodsk is its capital. Pop. about 400,000.

OLYMPIAD, s. [from Olympus, where the Olympic games were celebrated,] in Chronology, the space or period of four years, whereby the Greeks reckoned their time. The first was in 776 a. c.

OLYMPIC GAMES, the greatest national festival of the Greeks, held at Elis in Peloponnesus, once in five years; when a crown of olive was awarded to the victors. There was a celebrated temple of Zeus (Jupiter) near the spot, wherein was the chryselephantine statue of the god by Pheidias. No honours were so much esteemed as an Olympic victory; it was regarded as a triumph by the native place of the conqueror, and the most flattering honours were paid him.

OLYMPUS, the name of three mountains, in Asia Minor, in Crete, and in Thessaly; on the summit of one of which, according to Grecian Mythology, the happy gods had their lofty palaces. It cannot be told which it was, as the legends are contradictory, and no traces of the buildings have been found on any of them.

OMAR, the name of two Mohammedan caliphs; the first of whom lived in the palmy days of Mussulman triumph, and was one of the purest types of the chief of Islam. Under his rule the empire was pushed through Syria, Persia, Egypt, &c. &c. And it was by this caliph, according to a somewhat incredible tale, that the celebrated library at Alexandria was destroyed. He was assassinated in 644, after a reign of 10 years. The magnificent mosque built on the site of the temple of Jerusalem is called by his name.

OMBRÉ, [ómbre, s. [ombre, Span.] a game of cards played by three persons.

OMEGA, s. [Gr.] the last letter of the Greek alphabet.

OMÉLET, s. [omelette, Fr.] a pancake of eggs.

OMEN, s. [Lat.] any sign or token by which a future event may be foretold.

OMENED, a. containing prognostics, or signs by which future events may be foretold.

OMENTUM, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the covering of the intestines, called also reticulum, from its structure resembling that of a net.

OMER, s. [Heb.] a Hebrew measure containing about three pints and a half English.

OMER, ST. a large and populous town in the department of Pas de Calais, France. The hospital and college of the Jesuits here are worthy of notice. It is 135 miles from Paris. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 50. 45. N. Long. 2. 13. E.

TO OMIMATE, v. a. [omen, Lat.] to foreshow; to prognosticate; to foretell.

OMINATION, s. a prognostic.

OMINOUS, a. foreshowing something future, mostly used in a bad sense. Containing signs of something good or ill.

OMINOUSLY, ad. with good or bad omen.

OMINOUSNESS, s. the quality of betokening some future ill or good.

OMISSION, (omission) s. [omissio, Lat.] the act of forbearing to do something that ought to be done; a neglect of duty, opposed to a commission of evil.

To OMIT, v. a. [omitto, Lat.] to leave out; not to mention; to neglect doing what ought to be done.

OMNIBUS, s. the name of a large kind of public carriage, much used in London and other large cities and places, capable of seating twelve or more inside, and, in some cases, almost as many outside also.

OMNIFARIOUS, a. [omnifarius, Lat.] of all kinds or varieties.

OMNIFEROUS, a. [omnis and fero, Lat.] all-bearing.

OMNIFIC, a. [omnis and facio, Lat.] all-creating.

OMNIFORM, a. [omnis and forma, Lat.] of all shapes.

OMNIGENOUS, a. [omnis and genus, Lat.] consisting of all kinds.

OMNIPARITY, s. [omnis and par, Lat.] general equality.

OMNIPOTENCE, s. [omnis and potens, Lat.] almighty power.

OMNIPOTENT, a. all-powerful, almighty.

OMNIPRESENCE, s. [omnis and presens, Lat.] ubiquity; unbounded presence.

OMNIPRESENT, a. present every where; ubiquitous.

OMNISCIENCE, s. [omnis and scientia] s. [omnis and scio, Lat.] the knowledge of all things; infinite knowledge.

OMNISCIENT, (omniskient) a. knowing every thing; of infinite knowledge, and all-knowing.

OMNISCIOUS, (omniskious) a. knowing all things; all-knowing.

OMNIVOROUS, a. [omnis and voro, Lat.] all-devouring; eating food of all kinds.

OMNIUM, s. [omnis, Lat.] in the Funds, the average of the value of all the different kinds of stock, taken on a contract for a loan to government.

OMOPATE, s. [omnis and platus, Lat.] in Anatomy, the shoulder-blade.

OMPHALOPTIC, s. [omphalos and optikos, Gr.] in Optics, a convex lens.

OMRAHS, the title of the great lords at the Mogul's court.

ON, prep. [en, Belg. an, Teut.] upon; supported by; or covered with. It signifies or points out the subject of action; dependence or reliance; the motive or occasion of any thing; as soon as any thing is done; the period at which any thing happens; the state of any thing; a condition of a bargain or sale. Sometimes it is used to imply distinction or opposition. When used by contraction before it, it signifies of. In threats, it is put before the thing threatened, and implies it will be in danger for want of compliance.

ON, ad. forward; in succession or progress; without ceasing; upon the body. Resolution to advance, used elliptically for go on.

ON, interj. a word of incitement or encouragement to proceed, or attack, used elliptically instead of go on.

ONCE, (oonce) ad. only one time; a single time. Used with at, the same time; in an indivisible point of time; formerly. It is to be remarked, that this word seems to be rather a noun than an adverb, when it has at before it, or when it is joined with an adjective; as, At once, or this once.

ONE, (oon) a. [ane, Sax.] single; any thing expressed by an unit; any. Used with another, belonging to both. Opposed to another, different. Opposed to other, one of the two certain, or particular. Used with day, in a past tense; otherwise it signifies some time to come, when used with a future tense.

ONE, (oon) s. a single thing; a person; concord; agreement; a person of a particular character. This word is used in the plural either when it stands for persons indefinitely; as, "The great ones of the world;" or when it relates to something going before, or is used instead of a noun plural; as, "These successa are more glorious—than such ruinous ones." Sometimes it is used before an impersonal verb, to signify any person, or man; as, "One would imagine." One by one, means singly, or a single person or thing at a time.

ONEBERRY, s. in Botany, the herb paris, called also true-love.

ONEEYED, (oon-eyed) a. having one eye; monocular.

ONEIROCRITIC, a. [oneiros and krisis, Gr.] an interpreter of dreams.

ONEIROCRITICAL, a. belonging to the interpretation of dreams.

ONENESS, (ooneness) s. unity; the quality of being one.

ONERARY, a. [onerarius, from onus, Lat.] fitted for carriage or burdens; comprising a burden.

ONERATION, s. the act of loading.

ONEROUS, a. burdensome. Figuratively, oppressive.

ONION, (oonion) s. [oignon, Fr.] in Botany, an aromatic strong-scented plant, with a bulbous, coated, and orbicular root.

ONKELOS, the writer of one of the Targums. See TARGUM.

ONLY, a. [from onelik, by contraction; onlie, Sax.] single; without any other of the same kind or species; this above all others; this without any more. SYNON. When, speaking of a thing, we make use of the word only, we mean there is no other of the same kind; when that of alone, that it is not accompanied with any other.

ONLY, ad. simply; singly; barely; thus and no otherwise; without any more.

ONOMANCY, s. [onoma and manteia, Gr.] divination by names.

ONOMATICAL, a. belonging to divination by names.

ONOMATOPEE, s. [onoma and poieo, Gr.] in Etymology, a word made to resemble the sound it is the name of, as crash, roar, buzz, &c. This process is called onomatopoeia.

ONSET, s. the first attack or assault; aggression; ornamental appendage.

ONSLAUGHT, (onslaud) s. attack; assault.

ONTARIO, the name of the most easterly of the great lakes of central N. America, which receives the waters of the remainder, through Niagara river, and discharges them into the river St. Lawrence. It is 190 miles long, and 50 wide, and is navigable throughout its whole extent. It lies on the boundary of the United States and Canada.

ONTOLOGIST, s. [onta and logos, Gr.] a metaphysician, or one who considers the properties of being in general.

ONTOLOGY, s. the science of being generally; metaphysics.

ONWARD, ad. [onward, Sax.] forward; progressively; somewhat further.

ONYCHA, (onyka) s. in Natural History, the shell of a kind of snail, found in the East.

ONYX, s. [Gr.] in Mineralogy, a variety of quartz rock, semi-pellucid, and horn-coloured.

OLITE, s. [ool and lithos, Gr.] in Geology, the name of a kind of limestone rock, composed of small granules, resembling in appearance the roe of a fish. Each of these granules is a grain of sand coated with carbonate of lime. There are three formations of this general character; the great or Bath oolite, the inferior oolite, and the Portland oolite. They all abound with different, but characteristic, fossils; and they are all of great value for building purposes, &c. These rocks give the name to a series of formations of the secondary class.

ONALASHEKA, one of the Aleutian isles, in the N. Pacific Ocean, near Behring's Straits. It is about 50 miles long; and is of a clearly volcanic origin, having at least one active crater. The inhabitants are much like those of Nootka Sound and Kamtchatka, and live by fishing. It belongs to Russia.

OOZE, s. [oozes, Sax.] soft mud; mire at the bottom of water; slime; a soft flow or spring. The liquor of a tanner's vat.

To OOZE, v. n. to flow by stealth; to run gently; to slip away.

OOZY, a. miry; muddy; slimy.

To OPACATE, v. a. [opacus, Lat.] to darken, cloud, shade, or obscure.

OPACITY, s. cloudiness; want of transparency.

OPACOUS, a. dark; void of light; not to be seen through.

OPAL, s. [opalus, Lat.] in Mineralogy, a kind of silica, much used by jewellers for ornamental purposes, because of its delicate and beautiful colour. The best stones come from the East Indies.

OPAQUE, (opake) a. dark; having no light in itself; not to be seen through.

To OPE, O'PEN, v. a. [Sax.] to unlock; to unclose; to lay open; to discover; to divide or cause a breach, by which a thing may be seen. Figuratively, to explain; to disclose by degrees. In Law, to begin. In Anatomy, to make an incision.—v. n. to separate or unclose; to cease to be shut. In Hunting, to bark.

OPE, O'PEN, (the e is mute in pronouncing this word and its following derivatives and compounds; as, Ope, opener, opening, &c.; ope is used only by old authors, and by them only in its primitive sense); a. unclosed; not locked or shut. Figuratively, plain; apparent; public; without art, disguise, or reserve. Applied to the season, not cloudy or gloomy. Free, unconfin'd, or without cover, applied to the air. Exposed, or without defence, applied to danger or injuries. Attentive, applied either to the eyes or ears, and followed by unto or upon.

O'PENER, s. one that unlocks or makes open. Figuratively, one that explains or interprets; any thing that separates or divides.

OPEN'EYED, a. watchful; vigilant.

OPENHA'NDED, a. generous; liberal; munificent.

OPENHEA'RTED, a. generous; candid; void of base reserve or subtlety.

OPENHEA'RTEDNESS, s. generosity; liberality; munificence.

O'PENING, s. a breach or hole; aperture. Figuratively, the sight of a thing at a distance; a faint, imperfect, or confused knowledge.

O'PENLY, ad. in sight; plainly; without subterfuge, reserve, or disguise.

O'PENMOUTHED, a. greedy; clamorous; unable to keep a secret.

O'PENNESS, s. freedom from obscurity or ambiguity; clearness; plainness; freedom from disguise, subterfuge, or artifice.

O'PERA, s. [Ital.] in Music, a musical drama, usually accompanied by dancing. It is derived from Italy, and is the chosen dramatic amusement of the higher classes in England. Perhaps it more nearly resembles the Grecian drama, in its essential points, than any other kind of histrionic or scenic performance of modern times.

OPERABLE, a. [operor, from opus, Lat.] capable of being done.

OPERANT, a. [Fr.] active; having power to produce any effect.

TO OPERATE, v. n. [opus, Lat.] to act; to produce an effect; with on, before the subject of operation.

OPERATION, s. [Fr. operatio, Lat.] agency; influence; action; an effect. Figuratively, an effect. In Surgery, that part of medicine, or the art of healing, which depends on the use of instruments. The motions or employments of an army.

OPERATIVE, a. having the power of acting; efficacious; active; vigorous.

O'PERATOR, s. [Lat.] one that performs any act by the hand; one that produces any effect.

O'PEROSE, a. [operosus, Lat.] laborious; full of trouble and tediousness.

O'PHICLEIDE, s. [ophis and kleis, Gr.] in Music, a bass wind instrument, used especially in military bands. It is of considerable compass, and great richness of power; and has almost superseded all other bass instruments of brass, in orchestries, &c.

O'PHIOPHAGOUS, a. [ophis and phago, Gr.] serpent-eating.

O'PHIR, in Ancient Geography, a country often referred to in the Old Testament, as producing gold, odoriferous woods, &c. &c. It is thought to be some part of Arabia, or India; but the notices are so indistinct, that it cannot be clearly fixed, although it must have been some part of S. Asia.

OPHITES, (ofites) s. [ophis, Gr.] marble of a dusky greenish ground, with oblong, and usually square, spots of lighter green.

OPHIUCUS, or SERPENTARIUS, in Astronomy, one of the equatorial constellations, lying between Hercules and Scorpio. It has no star of the first magnitude.

OPHTHALMIC, (ophthalmic) a. [ophthalmos, Gr.] belonging to the eye.

OPHTHALMIA, (ophthalmia) a. a disease in the eye, being an inflammation in its coats. It occurs in many different forms.

OPIATE, s. [opium, Lat.] a medicine that causes sleep.

OPIATE, a. soporiferous; causing sleep.

OPIE, JOHN, a portrait and historical painter of the last century. He is one of those who have successfully striven against unpropitious circumstances, being the son of a carpenter of Cornwall, and destined to the same craft. Having a taste for limning, he amused himself by taking likenesses of persons he knew, and attracting the notice of Dr. Wolcot, was taken up by him, and by him, after due proclamation, introduced to the world of fashion in London, and to Sir Joshua Reynolds. After being an object of modish wonder, and after obtaining some property by his portrait painting, he was almost overlooked, yet he continued to study in his profession, and to endeavour to improve his mind. He produced some historic pictures, and became eventually professor of painting at the Royal Academy. He died in 1807, aged 46 years.

OPINATOR, s. [Lat.] one who holds an opinion.

TO OPINE, v. n. [opinor, Lat.] to be of opinion; to guess.

OPINATIVE, a. obstinate in opinions already received; imagined; not proved.

OPINIATOR, s. [opinatrie, Fr.] one fond of his own notions; inflexible from his own opinion.

OPINIATRE, (opiniâtre) a. [Fr.] obstinate; stubborn.

OPINION, s. [Fr. from opino, Lat.] a persuasion of the mind without proof or certain knowledge; sentiment; judgment; notion; a favourable judgment.

OPINIONATIVE, a. fond of notions we have already espoused or assented to; stubborn.

OPINIONATIVELY, ad. stubbornly.

OPINIONATIVENESS, s. the quality of adhering inflexibly to preconceived notions.

OPINIONIST, s. [opinioniste, Fr.] a person fond or conceited of his own notions.

OPITZ, or OPITIUS, MARTIN, the father of German poetry, a writer of the 17th century. He was first a law student, then a roving literateur, and afterwards secretary to a nobleman. He obtained great celebrity, and many honours, being even ennobled by the German emperor. He finally settled in Prussia, and died in 1639, aged 42 years. Some of his works are yet greatly admired.

OPIUM, s. [Lat.] in Materia Medica, the inspissated juice of a species of poppy, which is a very powerful narcotic stimulant, and taken in excess a certain poison. See LAUDANUM, MORPHINE.

OPODELODC, a. a popular medicine, used for bruises, numbness, and weakness of the joints.

O'POPONAX, s. [Lat.] a gum resin, of a tolerably firm texture, strong, disagreeable smell, and an acrid and extremely bitter taste.

O'PORTO, or PORTO, a handsome city and sea-port of Douro, in Portugal, with an excellent harbour. It is noted for its wines; on which account all red wines, that come from Spain or Portugal to England, are called Port wines. Next to Lisbon, it is the richest, most populous, and most commercial town in the kingdom. It is seated on the declivity of a mountain, about 2 miles from the mouth of the Douro, and 172 from Lisbon. Pop. about 75,000. Lat. 41. 11. N. Long. 8. 39. W.

OPOSSUM, s. in Zoology, an animal having a pouch or false belly, into which its young ones retire for protection. There are various species of opossums, from the size of a badger to that of a rat. They are most of them natives of New Holland.

O'PPIAN, a Greek poet of the 3rd century. Two only of his works are extant, Idyllics, or the art of fishing, and Cynegetic, or the art of hunting; which contain some remarkable traces of the extent and the uncertainty of the zoological knowledge of his age. They are elegant poems, and especially the former. He died about 210 A. D.

TO OPPIGNERATE, v. a. [oppignero, from pignus, Lat.] to pledge, pawn, or give as security.

OPILATION, s. [oppilio, Lat.] obstruction; matter heaped together.

OPILATIVE, a. obstructive.

OPPONENT, s. [oppono, Lat.] an adversary; antagonist. In the schools, one who raises objections to the opinions or doctrines of another.

OPPOSITE, a. opposite; adverse.

OPPORTUNE, a. [Fr. opportunus, Lat.] seasonable; fit; well-timed.

OPPORTUNELY, ad. seasonably; timely.

OPPORTUNITY, s. [opportunitas, Fr.] the proper season for doing a thing, or rendering it successful.

TO OPOSE, (oppose) v. a. [ob and pono, Lat.] to act against; to hinder or resist; to put in opposition; to offer as an antagonist or rival; to place as an obstacle; to place in front; to raise objections in disputations.

OPPOSER, (opposer) s. one who opposes; an antagonist; enemy; rival; one who raises objections in a dispute.

O'POSITE, (opposite) a. [Fr.] placed in front; facing each other; contrary; repugnant; adverse.

O'POSITE, (ôppôzîte) s. an adversary; opponent; antagonist; enemy.

O'POSITELY, (ôppôzîtely) ad. in such a position as to front each other; adversely.

O'POSITENESS, (ôppôzîtleness) s. the quality of facing or fronting; the quality of being contrary.

O'POSITION, (ôppôzîshon) s. [oppositio, Lat.] situation of facing or fronting another; resistance; contrariety of interest, measure, or meaning. In Astronomy, applied to the moon when she is at the full; to the planets when they are 180° distant from the sun, or from one another.

TO OP'PRESS, v. a. [opprino, Lat.] to crush by hard-hip or unreasonable severity; to overpower, subdue.

OP'PRESSION, s. [oppressio, from opprino, Lat.] the act of oppressing; cruelty; severity; hardship; calamity; dulness of spirits, or fatigue of body.

OP'PRESSIVE, a. cruel; inhuman; rigorous in exacting; heavy; overwhelming.

OP'PRESSOR, s. [Lat.] one who harasses or afflicts another with unreasonable severity.

OP'PRO'BRIOUS, a. [opprobrium, from probrum, Lat.] reproachful; scurrilous; disgraceful; causing infamy.

OP'PRO'BRIOUSLY, ad. in a reproachful or scurrilous manner.

OP'PRO'BRIOUSNESS, s. scurrility, or reproachfulness; that which causes infamy or disgrace.

TO OP'PU'GN, (ôppân) v. a. [oppugno, from ob and pugno, Lat.] to oppose, resist, or attack.

OP'PU'GNANCY, s. opposition.

OP'PU'GNER, (ôppâner) s. one that opposes or attacks.

OPSI'MATHY, s. [opse and manthano, Gr.] late education; late erudition.

OPSONA'TION, s. [opsonia, Lat.] catering, or buying provisions.

OP'TATIVE, a. [opto, Lat.] wishing. In Grammar, the mood of the verb which expresses desire.

OP'TIC, a. [optikos, from optamai, Gr.] used in seeing; producing sight; relating to the science of optics.

OP'TIC, s. an instrument or organ of sight.

OPTIC'AL, a. relating to the science of optics.

OPTIC'IAN, (ôptâshian) s. one who is skilled in the nature and laws of vision, or one who makes instruments to assist the sight, or to explain the doctrine of vision.

OPTICS, s. in Natural Philosophy, the science which investigates the nature and laws of light and vision. For the chief departments of this branch of physics, and for the most recent discoveries, &c. and inventions, in relation to it, reference must be made to LIGHT, REFLEXION, REFRACTION, DIFFRAC'TION, CATOP'TICS, DIOP'TRICS, PHOTOGRAPHY, MICROSCOPE, TELESCOPE, PRISM, &c.

OPTIMACY, s. [optimus, Lat.] nobility; the body of nobles.

OPTIMISM, s. the doctrine that the present system of things, or created beings, is the best that God could make.

OPTIMIST, s. [optimiste, Fr.] a person who asserts that the present system is absolutely best, and that a better could not possibly be.

OPTIMITY, s. the state of being best.

O'PTION, (ôpshon) s. [optio, from opto, Lat.] choice; election.

O'PULENCE, O'PULENCY, s. [opulentia, from opes, Lat.] wealth; riches; affluence.

O'PULENT, a. [Fr.] rich; wealthy; affluent.

O'PULENTLY, ad. richly; splendidly.

OR, conj. [other, Sax.] a particle used to signify distribution or opposition. Sometimes it answers to either. Before else, it is redundant, or has no meaning. — Or ever, signifies before.

OR, (ore) s. [Fr.] in Heraldry, gold, or gold colour. It is represented in engraving by small points or dots, scattered all over the field or bearing.

ORACH, s. in Botany, a sort of plant.

ORACLE, s. [oraculum, Lat.] an answer supposed to be given by the ancient deities, about the success of a future event; something delivered by supernatural wisdom; the place where, or person of whom, any determinations of Heaven were given; any person or place where certain decisions are obtained. Delphi, Dodona, and the temple of Ammon in Egypt, were very famous oracles. Figuratively, one so famed for wisdom, that his decisions are held without dispute.

ORACULAR, ORACULOUS, a. uttering oracles; like an oracle; authoritative; magisterial.

ORACULOUSLY, ad. in the manner of an oracle.

ORACULOUSNESS, s. the state or quality of resembling an oracle.

O'RAISON, s. [Fr. oratio, from oro, Lat. frequently, but not so properly, written oraison] prayer.

O'RAL, a. [Fr. from os, Lat.] delivered by the mouth; not written.

O'RALLY, ad. by mouth; without a writing.

O'RANGE, s. [Fr.] in Botany, &c., the fruit of a shrub, indigenous to countries on the borders of the tropical regions, and largely imported from the Azores, Portugal, Spain, &c. to England; where it is much esteemed for its refreshing and rich flavour. Colour made of a yellow and red mixed together.

O'RANGE, PRINCE OF. See NASSAU, WILLIAM III., &c.

O'RANGERY, s. [orangerie, Fr.] a plantation of orange-trees.

O'RANGEMUSK, s. in Horticulture, a species of pear.

O'RANGEWIFE, s. a woman who sells oranges.

O'RANG-OUTANG, s. in Natural History, the name of a large kind of baboon or ape, which inhabits some of the islands of the Indian Archipelago. It is in its anatomy and habits, as well as in other obvious particulars, widely separated from the human race, although some speculators have used it as a link in their development theory of creation.

ORATION, (ôrâshon) s. [oratio, from oro, Lat.] a speech according to the laws of rhetoric; an harangue.

O'RATOR, s. [Lat.] a public speaker; a man of eloquence. A petitioner in Chancery.

ORATORICAL, a. rhetorical; becoming or belonging to an orator.

ORATORIO, s. in Music, a sacred musical drama, somewhat various in its form, but never relying on scenic and histrionic art for effect in its performance. The subjects, and the words too, are usually taken from Scripture history. The oratorios of Handel, Haydn, Spohr, &c. are well known in England.

O'RATORY, s. eloquence; rhetorical skill; the exercise of eloquence. See RHETORIC. In the Romish Church, a place set apart purely for praying.

ORB, s. [orbis, Lat.] a round or spherical body; a celestial body, or planet. Figuratively, a wheel, or rolling body; a circle; a circular path described by any of the celestial bodies; a period, or revolution; a sphere of action; the eye, so called on account of its form, and its furnishing the body with light.

O'RBED, a. round; circular; rounded.

ORBI'CULAR, a. [orbiculaire, Fr. from orbis, Lat.] spherical; round; circular.

ORBI'CULARLY, ad. spherically; circularly.

ORBI'CULARNESS, s. the quality of being circular.

ORBI'CULATE, a. [orbiculatus, Lat.] moulded into an orbit.

ORBIT, s. [orbite, Fr.] the line or path described by a planet in its revolution.

ORC, s. [orca, Lat.] in Natural History, a sort of sea-fish.

O'RCHARD, s. [ortgard, Sax.] a garden of fruit-trees.

ORCHESTRA, ORCHESTRE, (ôrkestra, ôrkestre) s. [Gr.] in the ancient theatres, was a place in the form of a semicircle, where the chorus danced; and among us, the place where the musicians sit.

O'RCHIL, s. See ARCHIL.

ORD, s. in old English signifies beginning; whence probably the proverbial phrase odds [ords] and ends, for scraps and remnants.

TO ORDAIN, v. a. [ordo, Lat.] to appoint, decree; to establish, institute; to commission to act as a clergyman.

ORDA'INER, s. one who ordains, decrees, or commissions another to assume an office.

O'RDEAL, s. [ordal, Sax.] in Ancient Law, a manner of trying a person's innocence of crime, or the rectitude of his claim, by appeal to the miraculous or providential interference of God. The duel, or wager of battle, was common amongst the knights and nobles. Amongst other classes, walking over red-hot irons, holding them in the hand, or putting the hand in boiling water, &c. were practised.

O'RDER, s. [ordo, Lat. ordre, Fr.] a method or regular disposition; the established manner of performing a thing; the proper state, applied to the mind or body; a precept or command; a rule; regular government; a class or division of the members of a state; a religious society, or society of knights. In Astronomy, direct progress, opposed to retrograde motion. In War, an arrangement of the parts of any force, either by sea or land; or the distance of one rank or file from another. In Architecture, a system of the several members, ornaments, and proportions of columns and pilasters; or a regular arrangement of the projecting parts of a building, especially of a column, so as to form one beautiful whole. In the plural, the office of a clergyman. Order in Council, in England, means an edict of the privy council, during the vacation of parliament, having all the force of a legally enacted statute, but which requires indemnity from parliament, on its assembly, if it has contravened the law; and confirmation, otherwise, by the enactment of a statute to the same purpose.

To ORDER, v. a. to regulate or conduct; to manage or procure; to direct or command; to commission; to ordain to sacerdotal functions.—v. n. to give command; to give direction.

ORDERER, s. one who regulates, reduces to method, or disposes in a regular manner.

ORDERLESS, a. without order; in a confused manner.

ORDERLINESS, s. regularity; methodicalness.

ORDERLY, a. methodical; regular.

ORDINABLE, a. [ordo, Lat.] such as may be appointed.

ORDINAL, a. [Fr.] noting order.

ORDINAL, s. a ritual; a book containing orders.

ORDINANCE, s. [ordinance, Fr.] a law, rule, or precept; the observance of a command; an appointment.

ORDINARILY, ad. according to established or settled rules; commonly.

ORDINARY, a. [ordinarius, Lat.] established; usual; common; mean; of low rank or value; ugly, or not handsome. This term is variously applied; thus, an ambassador or envoy in ordinary, is one sent to reside steadily, and for a number of years, in the court of some foreign prince or state, to watch over the interest of his own nation. It is also applied to several officers of the king's household, who attend on common occasions; thus we say, physician in ordinary, chaplain in ordinary, &c. SYNON. Though ordinary and common have been reputed synonymous in two senses, as implying frequent use, and meaning of little or no value, yet they are different in both. In the first sense, ordinary seems best applied when the repetition of actions is in question; common, when a multitude of objects. In the second sense, that which is ordinary has nothing to distinguish it; that which is common has nothing to make it sought after.

ORDINARY, s. an established judge in ecclesiastical causes; an appellation generally given to the bishop of a diocese; a settled establishment; an actual and constant office; a regular price of a meal; a place of eating, where a person pays a settled price for eating; one who officiates as chaplain at a prison.

To ORDINATE, v. a. [ordino, Lat.] to appoint.

ORDINATE, a. [ordinatus, Lat.] regular; methodical. Ordinate figures, are such as have all their sides and angles equal.

ORDINATION, s. [ordinatio, Lat.] an established order or tendency; used with to. Also, the appointment of a person as the minister of a particular congregation.

ORDNANCE, s. cannon, or great guns.

ORDNANCE, s. [Fr.] the disposition of figures in a picture.

ORDURE, s. [Fr.] dung; excrements; filth.

ORE, s. [See] In Mineralogy, the native metal, as it is dug out of the mine, mixed with earth and other metals. The rock from which any metal is got by smelting, &c. Figuratively, metal.

OREGON, a territory of N. America, lying between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean; and extending from the Snowy Mountains, the old Mexican boundary, to the edge of the Russian possessions. Inland it is mountainous; and two other ranges, parallel to the Rocky Mountains, traverse almost its whole length. The intervals are fertile, and well adapted for agriculture. It is watered by the Columbia, which, with its tributaries, extends to almost every part of the territory; and by some other rivers of less magnitude and note. It has also numerous lakes. The harbours on the coast are by no means good. It abounds now with game, and beasts that yield good fur. Its mineral treasures are quite unknown. The Hudson's Bay Fur Company have been the chief hunters and dwellers in this vast and imperfectly known country. The population is reckoned to be about 25,000; including Indians, hunters, and all parties known as settled there. The 49th parallel of latitude is the boundary line between the British and the American parts of this territory; but the British have Vancouver's Island also, and the free navigation of the Columbia river.

OREL, a government of Russia, bounded by the governments of Tamboff, Voronez, Kursk, Tchernigov, Smolensk, and Kaluga. It is hilly, and is watered by the Disna, and some smaller tributaries of the Dnieper and the Volga. It produces corn, fruits, timber, cattle, &c. &c. in the greatest abundance. And it is tolerably well supplied with manufactures. Orel, the capital, stands on the Oka, and has a good trade. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 52.57. N. Long. 36. 5. E. Pop. of government, about 1,500,000.

ORELLA'NA. See AMAZON.

ORELLANA, FRANCISCO, a Spanish officer, who accompanied Pizarro's expedition; and joined Pizarro's brother in his attempt to discover the Golden Country, dreamed of by all Europeans; as existing some where in the interior of S. America. In the course of this, he sailed down the river Amazon, and associated his own name with it. Returning to his fruitless quest, some years afterwards, he died, in 1549.

ORFGILD, s. the restitution of goods or money taken away by a thief by violence, if the robbery was committed in the daytime.

ORFORD, Suffolk. It is seated on the sea-coast between two channels, was formerly a good fishing-town, but has lost its trade. Here is a handsome church, whose steeple is a good sea-mark, and near it are the ruins of an old castle, as also of a priory, St. George's chapel, &c. It is said to have been once very large, and to have had 12 churches; but it is a small place now. It is 88 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 1028.

ORGAL, s. lees of wine.

ORGAN, s. [organon, Gr.] in Physiology, such a part of the animal body, or of a plant, as is capable of performing some perfect act or operation; thus, the eye is the organ of seeing; the ear, of hearing; the stamens and pistils are the organs by which the seed is fertilized, &c. In Music, an instrument, consisting of pipes of different lengths, diameters, &c., placed in a frame so as to be sounded by wind from a set of bellows, according to the player's will. It is played by keys, and every complete set of pipes in it is called a stop.

ORGANIC, ORGA'NICAL, a. [organicus, Lat. from organon, Gr.] consisting of various parts co-operating with each other; instrumental; made or designed for some certain end. Organic Remains, in Geology, are the relics of animals and plants which are enclosed in the various strata of the earth's surface, and are the subject matter of the science of Palæontology, which see.

ORGANICALLY, ad. by means of organs or instruments; by an organical disposition of parts.

ORGANISM, s. any organic or organized structure, composition, product, &c., physical or metaphysical.

ORGANIST, s. [organiste, Fr.] one who plays on the organ.

ORGANIZATION, s. [Fr.] construction in which the parts are so disposed as to be subservient to each other.

To ORGANIZE, v. a. [organizer, Fr.] to construct so that the parts shall be mutually subservient to each other.

ORGANLOFT, s. the gallery of a church where an organ stands.

ORGANON, s. [Gr.] in Philosophy, a term used to designate a system of logic, originally, but afterwards, a development of the principles and rules for the discovery of facts in physical science and truths in metaphysical. See Logic, INDUCTIO, ARISTOTLE, Bacon, &c.

ORGANPIPE, s. the pipe of an organ.

ORGASM, s. [orgao, Gr.] a sudden violence, impulse, or appetite.

ORGIES, s. it has no singular; [orgia, Lat.] the mad rites performed to Bacchus. Figuratively, any frantic revels.

ORIEL, s. in Architecture, a projecting window from any part of a building above the ground floor.

ORIEL COLLEGE, Oxford, a royal foundation of the 14th century. It has been totally rebuilt, and much enlarged, at different times: the library is much admired.

ORIENT, a. [oriens, from oriar, Lat.] rising as the sun; eastern; bright; shining; glittering.

ORIENT, s. [Fr.] the east, or part where the sun first appears.

ORIENTAL, a. [Fr.] eastern; placed in the east; proceeding from the east.

ORIENTAL, s. an inhabitant of the eastern parts of the world.

ORIENTALISM, s. manner of speaking peculiar to those who live in the east.

ORIENTALITY, s. the state of rising or being in the east.

ORIFICE, s. [Fr. orificeum, from oro and facio, Lat.] any opening, hole, or perforation.

ORIGAN, s. [origanum, Lat.] in Botany, wild marjoram.

ORIGEN, or more correctly ORIGENES, one of the most learned and famous of the Fathers of the Church, of the former half of the 3rd century. He was a native of Egypt, and studied under Clemens Alexandrinus. His father was a martyr. He taught grammar for a subsistence, and practised the greatest austerity and asceticism. During the time of his being thus occupied, he paid a visit to Rome. Having retired to Palestine in a season of persecution, he was ordained there, and gained great fame as a preacher. The bishop of Alexandria, out of jealousy, hereupon persecuted him greatly, deposed, and even excommunicated him. Cæsarea was thenceforward his home, and there he employed his vast erudition, and his eloquence and industry, in vindicating and illustrating (according to his own views) the faith of the gospel. In the Decian persecution he was imprisoned, but was afterwards released; but he soon died, in 254, aged 69 years. His writings are most voluminous. His Hexapla and Tetrapla, or six-fold and four-fold exhibition of the text of Scripture, have been a noble monument of his industry, but only parts remain;—his Commentaries, in one form or other, relate to every book but that of Revelation;—his Reply to the Infidel Celsus is a most valuable apology for the gospel;—his Homilies sustain his reputation for eloquence. He was a confirmed spiritualizer of the Scriptures, but his opinions were, in general, in harmony with those held by the orthodox of his day. Nevertheless, his writings abound with crude hints of speculations more unfettered than orthodoxy loves; and this circumstance has detracted from his credit, with many, unjustly.

ORIGIN, ORIGINIAL, s. [origo, Lat.] the beginning or first existence; a fountain or source of existence; derivation or descent. A copy, or that from which any thing is transcribed, translated, or imitated; in this sense original only is used.

ORIGINAL, a. primitive; or primary; first; pristine.

ORIGINALLY, ad. in its first state; primarily; at first.

ORIGINALITY, s. the quality or state of being the first or original.

ORIGINARY, a. [originaire, Fr.] productive, or causing existence; primitive. Seldom used.

TO ORIGINATE, v. a. to produce as a cause; to bring into existence.

ORIGINATION, s. [originatio, Lat.] the act of producing as a first cause, or of bringing into existence.

ORINOCO, a large river of S. America, which, springing from a mountain near the Brazilian boundary, flows in a wide semicircle through the Colombian republics, and empties itself into the Atlantic Ocean, by several mouths, opposite the island of Trinidad. It receives the waters of several large tributaries which rise in the Andes, and other high regions of those parts. Its whole length is about 1500 miles.

ORIOLE, s. in Ornithology, a handsome bird of the thrush kind, which occasionally visits England as a migratory bird. In which way it visits, stately, almost all the rest of Europe, retiring in the autumn to Africa.

ORION, s. [Gr.] a southern constellation in the heavens, which forms one of the most brilliant objects in the winter's midnight sky. It contains a most remarkable nebula, or very remote cluster of stars.

ORISONS, (orisons) s. not used in the singular; [oraison, Fr. from oro, Lat.] prayers.

ORISSA, one of the provinces of British India, lying on the Bay of Bengal, and bounded by Bengal, Bahar, Allahabad, Benar, and the N. Circars. It is a flat region, and is very hot; but it is, notwithstanding, fertile. Cuttack is a place of some trade. See INDIA.

ORKNEYS, or ORCADES, a cluster of islands on the N. of Scotland, from which they are separated by a channel, 20 miles in length, and 6 in its narrowest part. Their number has generally been reckoned 30, of which 23 are inhabited; the rest are called holms, and are used only for pasturage. The principal one, called the Main Land, or Pomona, greatly exceeds the others in extent. Beyond this island to the N. E. are, among others, Ramsay, Westray, Shapinsay, Eday, Stronsay, Sanday, and N. Ronaldshay. To the S. of it are the isles of Hoy and S. Ronaldshay, with others of inferior note. The chief exports are linen and woollen yarn, stockings, butter, dried fish, herrings, oils, feathers, with skins of various kinds, and kelp. Total of pop. 30,547. See separate names of islands.

ORLEANS, capital of the department of Loiret, France. It stands on the Loire, over which is a very fine bridge of 9 arches. Some parts of the town are well built; and there are some handsome churches, &c., and a good library. In one of the squares is a curious old statue of Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans. It has a good trade; and there are several manufactories of some value here. It is 70 miles from Paris. Pop. about 45,000. Lat. 47. 55. N. Long. 1. 54. E.

ORLEANS, a title borne by a junior branch of the royal family of France. Amongst the numbers of generally illustrious men who have been so entitled, the Regent Orleans, a man of infamous moral character, who was one of the constitutional guardians of Louis XV. during his minority, and who died in 1723; and the yet more infamous Philippe Egalité, of the French Revolution, who, after a most remarkable career (for a prince of royal blood) as ultra-revolutionist, was guillotined in 1793; are, at least, the most notorious in French history.

ORLEANS, NEW. See NEW ORLEANS.

ORLOP, s. [oorloop, Belg.] the main deck of a ship.

ORMOND, JAMES BUTLER, DUKE OF, a distinguished royalist leader during the troubles of the 17th century. He maintained the cause of Charles I. in Ireland as long as he could; and it is worthy of remembrance in connexion with that monarch, that he was not true even to him; and after the triumph of Cromwell's party, retired to the continent, once, however, venturing even to London during the protectorate, when Oliver sent him warning to return by Lord Broghill. He held some appointments after the Restoration; and was nearly hanged by Blood, who was hired by the Duke of Buckingham. He felt as keenly as any one who had devoted life and property, all to the Stuart cause, the heartless and selfish ingratitude of that race. The son as well as the father could be false with Ormond. This true nobleman died in 1688, aged 78 years.

ORMUS, a small island of Asia, at the bottom of the gulf of the same name, at the entrance of the Gulf of Persia. Here is neither sweet water nor grass, it being a rocky and barren place. It was formerly frequented by a vast number of merchants, who were extremely rich; but it is now almost deserted; for it produces nothing but salt, which sometimes is two inches deep upon the surface of the earth. However, here is a commodious harbour. Lat. 27. 20. N. Long. 50. 25. E.

ORNAMENT, s. [orno, Lat.] embellishment; decoration; honour.

ORNAMENTAL, a. serving to decorate or embellish.

ORNAMENTALLY, ad. in such a manner as to embellish or set off.

ORNAMENTED, a. embellished, adorned, or set off.

ORNATE, a. [orno, Lat.] fine; adorned.

ORNATENESS, s. finery.

ORNATURE, s. decoration.

ORNE, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Manche, Sarthe et Mayenne, Eure et Loir, Eure, and Calvados. It is 80 miles long, by 50 broad. It is a rocky, mountainous district; and is watered by a number of small rivers, after one of which it is named. It yields iron, &c., building-stones, and valuable clays; and produces some corn, &c., but in no great quantities. It has manufactures, but the chief of them are iron. Alençon is the capital. Pop. about 450,000.

ORNSCOPIST, s. [ornis and scopeo, Gr.] one who examines the flight of birds, in order to foretell some future event.

ORNITHOLOGY, s. [ornis and logos, Gr.] the scientific classification and description of birds.

ORNITHORHYNCHUS, s. [ornis and rhunkos, Gr.] in Natural History, a quadruped of New Holland, which has a very remarkable bill, resembling a duck's, instead of the usual mouth of quadrupeds. Its feet also are webbed for swimming. It is sometimes called the duck-billed Platypus.

O'RHAN, (órfan) s. [orphanos, Gr.] a child who has lost either one or both of its parents.

O'RHAN, (órfan) a. deprived either of one or both parents by death.

O'RHANAGE, O'RHANISM, (órfanage, órfanism) s. the state of a child who has lost either one or both of its parents.

O'RHANOTROPHY, s. [orphanos and trope, Gr.] an hospital for orphans.

O'PHEUS, a philosophical poet of earliest Greece, whose history is beset with legends. His music was such as to draw round him not wild beasts alone, but the very rocks and trees also. He had won back from the lower regions his wife Eurydice, by the sweetness of his song, charming the gloomy king of Hades; but his too eager love looked back before she had quite regained the upper air. He was torn to pieces by Bacchanals, in Thrace, and so perished. Whether any of the fragments bearing his name are to be regarded as actually his poems, cannot be certainly known.

O'RPIMENT, s. [Fr.] in Mineralogy, a native combination of sulphur and arsenic.

ORREERY, s. an instrument which represents the revolutions of the planets, by means of wheels, &c. But such instruments are at best so incorrect and imperfect, as to be no better than toys.

ORRIS, s. [orris, old Fr.] a kind of gold or silver lace. A name given to the root of a species of iris, used by druggists and nurses.

ORTHODOX, ORTHODOXAL, a. [orthos and doxa, Gr.] in Theology, agreeing with one's own, or with the established and current opinions; not heterodox.

ORTHODOXLY, ad. with orthodoxy.

ORTHODOXY, s. orthodox doctrine or opinion, in matters of religion.

ORTHODROMICS, s. [orthos and dromos, Gr.] in Navigation, the art of sailing in the arc of some great circle, which is the shortest or straightest distance between any two points on the surface of the globe.

ORTHODROMY, s. the act of sailing in a straight course.

ORTHOGON, s. [orthos and goné, Gr.] a rectangular figure.

ORTHOGONAL, a. [orthogon, Fr.] rectangular.

ORTHOGRAPHER, (orthographe) s. [orthos and grapho, Gr.] one who gives rules, &c. for the spelling of words.

ORTHOGRAPHIC, ORTHOGRAPHICAL, (orthográphik, orthográphic, a.) correctly spelt; relating to correct spelling; delineated according to the elevation, not the ground plot. In Geography, the orthographic projection of the sphere, is a representation of the several points of its surface on a plane, which cuts it in the middle, the eye being supposed to be placed at an infinite distance, vertical to one of its hemispheres.

ORTHOGRAPHICALLY, ad. according to the rules of spelling; according to the elevation.

ORTHOGRAPHY, (orthógraphy) s. in Grammar, the art of correct spelling. In Architecture, the elevation of a building delineated. In Geometry, the art of expressing or drawing the fore-sight plan, or side, of any object. In Fortification, the profile or plan of any work.

ORTHOPNEA, (orthopnéa) s. [orthos and pneó, Gr.] in Medicine, a disorder in which a person cannot breathe unless he be in an upright posture.

ORTIVE, a. [ortivus, from orior, Lat.] relating to the rising of any planet or star.

ORTOLAN, s. [Fr.] in Ornithology, a small bird resembling a finch, accounted very delicious food.

ORTS, s. [orda, Ir.] refuse; scraps of meat; mammoths.

ORVAL, (orvala, Lat.) in Botany, a name of the herb clary.

ORVIETAN, s. [orvietano, Ital. so called from a mountebank at Orvieto in Italy.] an antidote or medicine used to prevent the effects of poison.

OSCHEO'CELE, (oskeósele) s. [oscheon and cele, Gr.] in Surgery, a kind of hernia, or rupture, when the intestines break into the scrotum.

OSCILLATION, s. [oscillum, Lat.] the act of moving backwards and forwards like a pendulum.

OSCILLATORY, a. moving backwards and forwards like a pendulum.

OSCITANCY, s. [oscito, Lat.] the act of yawning; unusual sleepiness; carelessness; reverie.

O'SCITANT, a. [oscians, Lat.] yawning; unusually sleepy; sluggish; careless.

OSCITATION, s. the act of yawning. Figuratively, carelessness.

OSCUATION, s. [osculatio, from oscular, Lat.] kissing.

O'SIER, (ózier) s. [Fr.] in Botany, a tree of the willow kind, growing by the water, the twigs of which are used in making baskets, &c.

O'SIRIS, in Egyptian Mythology, one of the chief deities, who was worshipped under the form of a bull, and is usually represented with a bull's head.

OSMAZOME, s. [osme and zomos, Gr.] in Organic and Domestic Chemistry, the compound extract of meat, produced either by boiling or roasting, &c., which gives the peculiar relish to that kind of food.

OSMIUM, in Chemistry, a metal obtained from the pulverulent residue of the ores of platinum, which is first a black porous powder, but obtains a metallic lustre by friction.

OSMUND, s. in Botany, a large kind of fern, the largest that is now found in Great Britain; commonly called Osmunda-royal.

OSNABURG, or OSNABÜRG, a province of Hanover, in Germany. It abounds in cattle and hogs, almost half of the province consisting of heath lands. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is spinning of yarn, and manufacturing a coarse kind of linen. Osnaburg is the capital, and is seated on the river Haze, with some fine public buildings, and good schools, &c. It is 70 miles from Hanover. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 52. 24. N. Long. 8. 20. E. Pop. of province, about 240,000.

OSNABURGS, s. a kind of coarse linen imported from Germany, of which there are two kinds, the white and brown.

O'SPRAY, s. in Ornithology, the sea-eagle, or bald buzzard.

O'SSIAN, the name of an early Gaelic poet, some fragments of whose poems, or songs, preserved by tradition amongst the Highlanders, were worked up by James Macpherson, during the last century, into the form in which Ossian's poems are commonly known. See MACPHERSON.

O'SSICLE, s. [ossiculum, from os, Lat.] a small bone.

OSSI'FIC, a. [os and facio, Lat.] having the power of turning into bone.

OSSIIFICATION, s. in Medicine and Physiology, change of fleshy parts into bones.

OSSIFRAGE, s. [os and frango, Lat.] in Ornithology, a kind of eagle.

To OSSIFY, v. a. to change into bone.

OSSI'VOROUS, a. [os and voro, Lat.] devouring bones.

O'SSORY, an Irish bishopric, in connexion with Ferns and Leighlin; whence.

O'SSUARY, s. [ossuarium, from os, Lat.] a charnel-house; a place where the bones of the dead are kept.

OST, OUST, s. a vessel upon which hogs or malt is dried.

OSTADE, VAN, the name of two painters of the Dutch school, brothers; whose subjects were smoking groups with interiors of inns, or landscapes; and whose fidelity to them is greatly admired by connoisseurs of Dutch tastes. Isaac, the younger, died very young. Adrian, the elder, died in 1685, aged 75 years.

OSTEN'SIBLE, a. applied to that which is alleged as the cause or object of any action, but is not.

OSTENSIVE, a. [ostendo, Lat.] showing; botokening.

OSTEND, a large and populous sea-port of Belgium. It is seated in a marshy soil, among a number of canals, and almost surrounded by two of the largest of them. Ships of great burden enter these canals with the tide. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 51. 14. N. Long. 3. 1. E.

OSTENT, s. [ostendo, Lat.] an appearance, air, or mien; show or token; a portent or prodigy.

OSTENTATION, s. boast; outward show; a display of any thing showing vanity or ambition.

OSTENTATIOUS, (ostentatious) a. boasting; fond of showing any thing which may give the public an advantageous opinion of one's wealth and abilities.

OSTENTATIOUSLY, (ostentatiously) ad. showing or displaying in such a manner as declares ambition or vanity.

OSTENTATIOUSNESS, (ostentatiousness) s. the act of displaying with vanity or ambition.

OSTENTATOIT, s. [ostentateur, Fr.] one that displays through ambition or vanity.

OSTEOCOPE, s. [osteon and kopto, Gr.] in Medicine, pains in the bones, or rather in the nerves and membranes that encompass them.

OSTEOLOGY, s. [osteon and logos, Gr.] a scientific description of the bones.

OSTIARY, s. [ostium, from os, Lat.] the opening at which a river discharges itself into the sea.

OSTLER, s. See HOSTLER.

OSTRACISM, s. [ostrakon, Gr.] a manner of sentence, in which the person's name who was acquitted or condemned was written on a shell; a method taken by the Athenians to banish such persons in their state, whose great power, abilities, or merit, rendered them capable of attempting any thing which might endanger the constitution. Figuratively, banishment, or public censure.

OSTRACITES, s. in Natural History, a petrified oyster.

OSTRICH, s. [ostruche, Fr.] in Ornithology, the tallest of all birds, measuring 7 or 8 feet when it stands erect; it is covered with a kind of feathers which resemble hair; its legs are long and naked, and its feet have only two toes. The feathers of its wings are in great esteem as ornaments. They are hunted on horseback, for they never fly, but use their wings to assist them in running. They swallow bits of iron in the same manner as other birds do gravel or stones, to assist in digesting their food. They lay their eggs on the ground, and hide them under the sand, and leave them to be hatched by the sun.

OSWEGO, a town of New York, United States. It stands on the Oswego river, at its entrance into Lake Ontario, and is regularly and handsomely built. Its harbour is formed by a long and substantial pier, and is a very good one. It has great facilities for trade, being at the head of a fine canal. It is 373 miles from Washington. Pop. 4665. Three other places in the States bear this name.

OSWESTRY, Shropshire. It is seated at the head of a small river, near the canal between the Severn and Mersey. It has some trade from Wales in flannels, and is 174 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 5843.

OTACUSTIC, s. [ota and akousto, Gr.] in Surgery, a medicine to cure deafness; an instrument used by the deaf to make them hear better.

OTATHEITE. See TAHITI, and SOCIETY ISLANDS.

OTHER, pron. (Sax.) applied to things, different, opposed to this. Applied to persons, not oneself, but somebody else. Used with side, the contrary. Used with each, it implies reciprocation. Sometimes besides, or more. The next. After next, it implies the third, joined with day. Sometimes it is used elliptically for other thing, or something different.

OTHERWISE, s. sometimes written otherguess, [from other and guise] of another kind.

OTHERWISE, (otherwise) adv. differently; by other means or causes; in other respects.

OTHMAN, the third caliph of the Mohammedan empire, whose reign was not very distinguished, and who was assassinated in 656, having held the throne or pulpit for 12 years.

OTHO, M. SALVIUS, a Roman emperor, who succeeded Galba; but being opposed by Vitellius, he hazarded several battles, and killed himself, having lost one of them, in 69 A. D. He reigned about 3 months.

OTHO, the name of four emperors of Germany, the first of whom was surnamed the Great. He established the supremacy of the imperial over the pontifical power at Rome, and three times entered the city, twice to dethrone the pope. He overcame the Hungarians also; and died in 955, having reigned 18 years.

OTRANTO, a province of the kingdom of Naples, forming the easterly promontory or peninsula of the extremity of Italy. It produces oil, wool, fruit, wine, &c. Otranto, Brindisi, Gallipoli, &c. are its chief towns. Pop. about 400,000.

OTRANTO, capital of Terra d'Otranto, Naples. It is a large, handsome place, with a commodious harbour, seated on the Gulf of Venice. Pop. about 2500. Lat. 40. 20. N. Long. 18. 35. E.

OTTER, s. [oter, Sax.] in Zoology, an amphibious animal that preys upon fish. It is exceedingly pernicious in ponds, as it kills, not merely from necessity, but for amusement. They have sometimes been tamed, and taught to catch fish for their masters.

OTTOMAN, s. an appellation given to the Turkish empire from Othoman, an emperor who died in 1328. See TURKEY.

OTWAY, THOMAS, an English dramatist of the latter part of the 17th century. He was educated at Oxford; and having, by some successful plays, been introduced to the Earl of Plymouth, he obtained a military commission, and served in Flanders. He soon returned, however, and in his extreme poverty wrote some of his best dramas; and at last died in want, in 1685, aged 34 years. His Venice Preserved, which is the best of his productions, is still occasionally represented.

OVAL, a. [ovale, Fr. from ovum, Lat.] oblong; resembling an egg when cut in two the long ways.

OVAL, s. a roundish oblong figure; an ellipse.

OVARIUS, s. [ovum, Lat.] consisting of eggs.

OVARY, s. [ovaire, Fr.] in Physiology, that part of the body of an animal wherein the eggs are lodged; that part of a plant where the seeds lie.

OVA-TION, s. [ovo, Lat.] a lesser triumph among the Romans, allowed to those who defeated an enemy without much bloodshed, or conquered one less formidable.

OU/BAT, OU/bust, s. in Entomology, a sort of caterpillar.

OUCH, s. a spangle or glittering ornament made of small plates of gold and silver, or of jewels. Obsolete.

OUDE, a province of Hindustan, lying on both sides of the Ganges, and occupying (with the exception of the district of Rampour) all the flat country between that river and the mountains of Nepal, as well as the principal part of that fertile tract lying between the Ganges and Jumna, and known by the name Doab, to within 40 miles of the city of Delhi. The dimensions of Oude and its dependencies are estimated at 360 miles in length, and 160 in breadth. The capital is Lucknow. The remains of an ancient city of the same name are yet to be seen in this province, on the Ganges, near Fyzabad. Lat. 26. 53. N. Long. 82. 3. E.

OVEN, s. [ofen, Sax.] an arched cavity heated with faggots, or a fire with fuel carried round it, used in baking.

OVER, prep. [ofre, Sax.] superior to, or above, applied to excellence, dignity, authority, or place. Upon; across, or from one side to the other; through.

OVER, adv. above the top; more than a quantity assigned; from side to side; from one to another; from a country beyond the sea; on the surface; past. To read over, is to read throughout. Over and over, denotes repetition to excess. Over and above, implies besides, or more than what was at first supposed or immediately intended. Over against, opposite, or facing in front. In Composition, its significations are various; but it generally implies excess, more than enough, or too much.

To OVERABOUND, v. a. to abound more than enough.

To OVERACT, v. a. to carry any character too far; to act more than enough.

To OVERARCH, v. a. to cover with an arch.

To OVERAWE, v. a. to keep in awe.

To OVERBALANCE, v. a. to weigh down or preponderate.

OVERBALANCE, s. something more than equivalent.

To OVERBEAR, (oerbedre) v. a. to bear down; to repress, or whelm.

To OVERBID, v. a. to offer more than equivalent.

To OVERBLOW, (oerblow) v. a. to drive away the clouds before the wind.—v. n. to be past its violence.

OVERBOARD, (oerboord) adv. off or out of a ship.

To OVERBULK, v. a. to oppress by bulk.

To OVERBURDEN, v. a. to load with too great weight.

To OVERCAST, v. a. to cloud, or darken; to cover; to rate too high.

To OVERCHARGE, v. a. to oppress, cloy, or surcharge with too much food; to load or crowd to excess; to rate too high; to fill too full; to charge more than is just.

To OVERCLOUD, v. a. to cover with clouds.

To OVERCOME, v. a. preter. overcame, past part. overcome; [overcomen, Belg.] to subdue, conquer, or vanquish in battle or by calamity; to overflow.

OVERCOMER, s. one that conquers.

To OVERCOUNT, v. a. to rate above the true value.

To OVERDO, v. a. to do to excess.

To OVERDRESS, v. a. to adorn too much.

To OVERDRIVE, v. a. to drive too hard, or beyond strength.

To OVERFLOW, (oerfloei) v. n. to be too full to be contained within the brim; to abound to excess.—v. a. to fill beyond the brim; to deluge, drown, or cover with water. Figuratively, to overpower.

OVERFLOW, (oerflo) s. inundation; such a quantity as flows over; too great an abundance.

OVERFLOWING, (oerfloing) s. the act of exceeding limits, applied to water. Too great a plenty or abundance.

OVERFLOWINGLY, (oerfloingly) ad. in such a manner as to exceed any limits.

OVERFORWARDNESS, s. too great a quickness or forwardness.

TO OVERFREIGHT, v. a. preter. oerfreighted, part. oerfreught: to load too heavily.

TO OVERGO, v. a. to surpass; to excel.

TO OVERGORGE, v. a. to eat or swallow too much.

TO OVERGROW, (oergrō) v. a. preter. oergrēw, past part. oergrōwn: to cover by growth; to raise above.—v. n. to grow beyond the usual standard, or natural size.

OVERGROWTH, (oergrōth) s. excessive growth.

TO OVERHALE, (oerhād) v. a. to spread over; to examine a second time.

TO OVERHANG, v. a. to jut or hang over.

TO OVERHARDEN, v. a. to make too hard.

OVERHEAD, (oerhed) ad. aloft; above; in the ceiling; over a person's head.

TO OVERHEAR, (oerhēer) v. a. to hear those who do not intend to be heard.

TO OVERHEAT, (oerhēt) v. a. to heat to excess.

TO OVERJOY, v. a. to transport; to affect with too much joy.

OVERJOY, s. excess of joy; transport.

TO OVERLADE, v. a. to oppress with too heavy a burden.

OVERLARGE, a. larger than enough.

TO OVERLAY, v. a. to oppress with too much weight or power; to smother with too much covering; to cloud; to cover the surface; to join by something laid over.

TO OVERLEAP, (oerleēp) v. a. to leap over, or across.

OVERLEATHER, (oerlether) s. the upper leather, or that part of a shoe which covers the foot.

TO OVERLIVE, v. a. to live longer than another.

TO OVERLOAD, (oerlōd) v. a. to burden with too great a load.

TO OVERLOOK, v. a. to view from a higher place; to peruse; to superintend; to review; to neglect; to slight.

OVERLOOKER, s. one that sees over any thing below; one that passes by a thing without observing it.

OVERMASTED, a. too much mastered.

TO OVERMATCH, v. a. to be too powerful; to conquer.

OVERMATCH, a. one of superior power.

OVERMEASURE, (oermeēsure) s. more than measure.

OVERMOST, a. highest, or superior to others in authority.

OVERMUCH, a. more than enough.

OVERMUCH, ad. in too great a degree.

OVERNIGHT, (oernit) s. night before bed-time; the foregoing night to any particular day.

TO OVERNAME, v. n. to name in a list.

OVER-OFFICIOUS, (oer-offishious) a. too busy; too fond of assisting; too importunate.

TO OVERPASS, v. a. to pass over or across; to overlook or slight; to omit in a reckoning; to omit without receiving.

OVERPAST, part. a. gone; past.

TO OVERPAY, v. a. to pay too much.

OVERPLUS, s. that which remains above what is sufficient.

TO OVERPOISE, (oerpoīze) v. a. to weigh more than or outbalance another.

TO OVERPOWER, (oer pron. as in how), v. a. to conquer, or oppress by greater power.

TO OVERPRESS, v. a. to crush or bear upon with irresistible force.

TO OVERPRIZE, v. a. to value at too high a rate.

OVERPRODUCTION, s. in Political Economy, the production of more commodities than people can buy, though much less than people want.

OVER-RANK, a. too rank.

TO OVERRATE, v. a. to rate or value too high.

TO OVERREREACH, (oer-rēch) v. a. to rise above; to stretch oneself too much in reaching; to deceive or impose upon by superior cunning.—v. n. to bring the hinder foot too far forwards, or strike the toes against the fore shoes, applied to a horse.

OVERREACHER, s. a cheat; a deceiver.

TO OVERRIPEN, v. a. to make too ripe.

TO OVERROAST, v. a. to roast too much.

TO OVERRULE, v. a. to influence by superior authority; to govern with excess of authority. In Law, to supersede, or reject as incompetent.

TO OVERRUN, v. a. to wander through a country by force of arms; to exceed in running; to overspread or cover all over; to pester or harass by numbers.—v. n. to flow over; to be more than full.

TO OVERSEE, v. a. to superintend; to pass by without taking notice; to omit.

OVERSEEN, part. mistaken or deceived.

OVERSEER, s. one who is employed to see that others perform their duty; an officer employed to collect and take care of the money collected for the poor of the parish.

TO OVERSET, v. a. to turn the bottom of a vessel upwards. Figuratively, to be hurried away by an impetuous passion.—v. n. to fall off its basis.

TO OVERSHADE, v. a. to cover with any thing that causes darkness.

TO OVERSHADOW, (oershādō) v. a. to cast a shadow over any thing; to shelter or protect.

TO OVERSHOOT, v. n. to fly beyond the mark.—v. a. to shoot beyond the mark; to venture too far; to go beyond one's abilities.

OVERSIGHT, (oerāht) s. superintendence; a mistake or error owing to inadvertence.

TO OVERSKIPE, v. a. to pass by leaping; to pass over. Figuratively, to escape.

TO OVERSLEEP, v. a. preter. and past part. overslept; to sleep too long.

TO OVERSLEIP, v. a. to pass without doing, or taking notice of; to neglect.

OVERSOLD, part. sold at too high a price.

OVERSOON, ad. too soon.

OVERSPENT, a. wearied; fatigued.

TO OVERSPREAD, (oerspred) v. a. to cover, spread, or scatter over.

TO OVERSTAND, v. a. to stand too obstinately upon conditions.

TO OVERSTOCK, v. a. to crowd or fill too full.

TO OVERSTORE, v. a. to store with too much.

TO OVERSTRAIN, v. n. to stretch any part by making too violent efforts.—v. a. to stretch too far.

TO OVERSWAY, v. a. to overrule; to bear down.

TO OVERSWELL, v. a. to swell over, or rise above.

OVERT, a. [overt, Fr.] open; public; apparent.

TO OVERTAKE, v. a. to catch in pursuit; to come up to something going before. To take by surprise, followed by in.

TO OVERTASK, v. a. to exact too great labour or duties.

TO OVERTAX, v. a. to tax too highly.

TO OVERTHROW, (the v is mute in this and the two following words), v. a. pret. oerthrowe, part. oerthrown: to turn upside down; to throw down, or demolish; to destroy. To conquer or defeat, applied to an army.

OVERTHROW, s. the state of being thrown down, or tumbled upside down; ruin; destruction; degradation; a defeat.

OVERTHROWER, s. one that beats down, ruins, or defeats.

OVERTHWART, a. opposite, or over against; crossing any thing. Perverse, applied to humour.

OVERTHWART, prep. across.

OVERTHWARTLY, ad. across; transversely.

OVERTHWARTNESS, s. posture across; perverseness.

OVERTLY, ad. openly.

TO OVERTOOK, preter. and past part. of TO OVERTAKE.

TO OVERTOP, v. a. to raise above the top. Figuratively, to excel or surpass; to obscure; to make of less importance by superior excellence.

TO OVERTRADE, v. a. in Political Economy, to carry on a larger trade than one's capital will allow.

TO OVERTRIPE, v. a. to trip or walk lightly and nimbly over.

OVERTURE, s. [overture, Fr.] an opening or disclosure; a proposal. In Music, a piece of instrumental music, that is usually played at the commencement of an opera, or an oratorio, &c.

TO OVERTURN, v. a. to throw down; to ruin; to subvert. Figuratively, to overpower, surmount, or conquer.

OVERTURNER, s. a subverter.

TO OVERVALUE, v. a. to rate too high.

To OVERWATCH, v. n. to watch too long.

To OVERWEE/N, v. n. to be too highly or arrogantly.

OVERWEENINGLY, ad. with too much arrogance.

To OVERWEIGHT, (overweight) v. a. to weigh down; to weigh more; to preponderate.

OVERWEIGHT, (overweight) s. preponderance; the quantity given above the neat weight.

To OVERWHOLEM, v. a. to crush under something violent or heavy; to look gloomy; to beat down by force of water.

OVERWHOLEMINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to beat down and overcome, applied primarily to water, and figuratively, to calamity or the passions.

OVERWISE, (overwise) a. affectedly wise; conceited; wise to affectation.

OVERWROUGHT, (over-rôt) a. laboured too much; wrought all over.

OVERYSSEL, a province of the kingdom of the Netherlands, lying between Hanover and Prussia, and the Zuyder Zee, and bounded by the provinces of Friesland, Drenthe, and Guelderland. It is low and marshy; and the Yssel is its chief river. It affords excellent grazing ground; and produces sheep, cattle, horses, &c. It has also good fisheries, and many valuable manufactures. Zwoll is its capital. Pop. about 200,000.

OVERZEALOUS, (over-zealous) a. zealous too much.

OUGH, (aut) s. more properly written ought, [ahit, Sax.] any thing.

OUGH, (aut) verb inperf. owed; was bound to pay, or indebted; to be obliged by duty; to be fit or necessary.

OVID, or properly, PUBLIUS OVIDIUS NASO, a Roman poet of the times of Augustus, who was patronized by him. He studied law, and held some public offices of a legal and judicial kind; but afterwards devoted himself to literature. He numbered amongst his friends the other great poets of the age. He was at last, for some cause, banished from Rome, and died in exile, in 17 A. D., aged about 60 years. His works are numerous, and are characterized by great elegance and purity of style; but the impurity and obscenity of the subjects, and of his mode of treating them, is extremely revolting. His Metamorphoses, though not perhaps the best of his writings, is the best known, and most read, being a common school book.

OVIDIO, the capital of the province of Asturias, Spain. It stands at the junction of two small streams; and is a fine place, adorned with some very splendid buildings. There is also a university here, with a good library. The cathedral is a particularly noble edifice. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 43. 22. N. Long. 5. 57. W.

OVIFORM, a. [ovum and forma, Lat.] having the shape of an egg.

OVIPAROUS, a. [ovum and pario, Lat.] bringing forth eggs; not viviparous.

OUNCE, s. [once, Fr. uncia, Lat.] a weight, the twelfth part of a pound, containing twenty pennyweights in Troy Weight. In Avoirdupois Weight, the sixteenth part of a pound. In Zoology, an animal of the cat tribe, which inhabits Barbary, Persia, and China. It is about the size of the leopard, but is easily tamed, and is employed in hunting antelopes.

OUNCLE, Northamptonshire. It is seated on the river Nen, 77 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3037.

OVIVIPAROUS, a. [ovum, vivis, and pario, Lat.] bringing forth its young alive, but through the hatching or breaking of the eggs before extrusion.

OPHE, (ouf) s. [auff, Teut.] a fairy; an imaginary being called a goblin.

OPHEN, a. elfish.

OUR, pron. possessive, [ure, Sax.] pertaining or belonging to us; of the same country with us. When the substantive goes before, we write ours.

OURSELVES, reciprocal pron. the plural of myself; we, exclusive of others. Ourself is used in the singular by kings.

OUSE, (ooze) s. [oozt, Teut.] tanner's bark.

OUSEL, (oozel) s. [oole, Sax.] in Ornithology, a name of the blackbird.

To OUST, v. a. [ouster, oter, Fr.] in Law, to put out, or deprive of.

OUT, ad. [ut, Sax. uyt, Belg.] not in a place, generally opposed to in. In a state of disclosure; absent from a place or home; from an inner to a more public part. Exhausted, applied to liquors. Discarded by the court, applied to statesmen. Loudly, or so as to be heard, after the verbs speak, read, laugh, &c. Let to another, applied to lands. In an error, applied to the judgment. At a loss, applied to the understanding. Out at elbows, signifies torn or worn in holes, applied to dress, or in a state of poverty, applied to condition. This word is used emphatically before alas, and after verbs signifying discovery.

OUT, interj. an expression of abhorrence, and signifying, be gone immediately.

OUT or, prep. from, applied to produce. Not in, or excluded from, applied to place. Beyond, applied to power. Not in, applied to season. From, applied to the things or materials of which any thing is made. From, or discharge, applied to duty. Inconsistent with, applied to character. Past, without, applied to hope. By means of, applied to cause. In consequence of. Out of hand, implies immediately, or without delay.

To OUT, v. a. see Oust; to expel; to deprive.

OUT, in composition, generally implies comparison, and signifies something beyond another, or more than usual.

To OUTACT, v. a. to act to excess.

To OUTBALANCE, v. a. to overweigh; to preponderate.

To OUTBID, v. a. to bid more than another person.

OUTBIDDER, s. one that bids more than another.

OUTBOUND, a. bound to sail to some foreign country.

To OUTBARE, v. a. to bear down and disgrace by superior courage, insolence, or show.

To OUTBRAZEN, v. a. to get the better of by impudence.

To OUTBREAK, (outbreak) s. an eruption; a sudden and violent expression of opinion or feeling.

To OUTBREATH, (outbreath) v. a. to weary by having better breath; to expire; to breathe out.

OUTCAST, part. thrown away as refuse; banished, expelled, exiled.

OUTCAST, s. one rejected or expelled.

To OUTCRAFT, v. a. to excel in cunning.

OUTCRY, s. noise, a cry of distress, or a clamour of detestation; public sale, auction.

To OUTDATE, v. a. to antiquate.

To OUTDO, v. a. to excel; to perform beyond another.

OUTER, a. without, opposed to inner.

OUTERLY, ad. towards the outside.

OUTERMOST, a. superlative of outer; furthest from the middle.

To OUTFACE, v. a. to brave, or bear down by a show of magnanimity or impudence; to stare out of countenance.

To OUTFLY, v. a. to leave behind; to go beyond in flight.

OUTFORM, s. external appearance.

To OUTFROWN, v. a. to overbear by frowns; to frown down.

To OUTGIVE, v. a. to exceed another in giving.

To OUTGO, v. a. preter. outwent; participle outgone; to surpass or excel; to go beyond, or leave behind; to over-reach; to circumvent.

To OUTGROW, (outgrô) v. a. to surpass in growth, or to grow too great or too old for any thing.

OUTGUARD, s. one posted at a distance from the main body, as a defence.

To OUTJEST, v. a. to overpower by jesting.

To OUTKNAVE, (outknave) v. a. to surpass in knavery.

OUTLANDISH, a. not native; foreign; alien.

To OUTLAST, v. a. to exceed in duration.

OUTLAW, s. [utlaga, Sax.] one excluded from the benefit of the law.

To OUTLAW, v. a. to deprive of the benefits of the law.

OUTLAWRY, s. a decree by which any person is deprived of the protection of the laws, and cut off from the community.

To OUTLEAP, (outleap) v. a. to pass in leaping; to start beyond.

OUTLEAP, (outleap) s. a sally; flight; escape.

OUTLET, s. a passage outwards; a passage by which any thing may go out.

OUTLINE, s. the contour or line with which any thing is bounded; an extremity.

To OUTLIVE, v. a. to live longer; to survive.

OUTLIVER, s. a survivor, or one that lives longer than another.

To OUTLOOK, v. a. to face down; to browbeat.

sists chiefly of two spacious streets, which cross each other in the middle of the town. It is chiefly celebrated for its university, which is said to have been founded by Alfred, but is generally supposed to have been of even earlier origin. Here are 20 colleges, and 5 halls, several of which stand in the streets, and give the city an air of magnificence, which has obtained for it the name of the City of Cathedra. The colleges are very wealthy, but are retained exclusively by the Established Church. The number of students is usually about 2000. Among the libraries in the university, the most distinguished is the Bodleian, founded by Thomas Bodley; those of All Souls' College, Christ Church, Queen's, New College, St. John's, Exeter, and Corpus Christi. Among other public buildings, are the Theatre, the Ashmolean Museum, the Clarendon Printing-house, the Radcliffe Infirmary, and a fine Observatory. (See under the names of the various colleges, &c.) It is 58 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 23,834.

OXFORDSHIRE, a county of England, 47 miles in length, and 29 in breadth; bounded by Buckinghamshire, Gloucestershire, Berkshire, Warwickshire, and Northamptonshire. It is divided into 14 hundreds, which contain 1 city, 12 market towns, 280 parishes, and 51 villages. The air is sweet, mild, pleasant, and healthy, for which reason it contains several gentlemen's seats; and the soil, though various, is fertile in corn and grass, and the hills are shaded with woods. It is also a great sporting country, there being abundance of game preserved here. It has no manufactures of any account, being chiefly agricultural. Its chief city is Oxford. Pop. 161,643. It sends 9 members to parliament.

OXGANG, s. twenty acres of land.

OXIDATION, s. in Chemistry, the operation by which any substance is combined with oxygen in a certain proportion.

OXIDE, s. in Chemistry, any substance combined with oxygen.

TO OXIDIZE, v. a. in Chemistry, to combine oxygen with a body in particular proportions.

O'XILIP, s. in Botany, a hybrid between the primrose and the cowslip, commonly called lady's fingers.

OXSTALL, (oxstall) s. a stand for oxen.

OXTONGUE, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which two are British species, viz. the yellow succory, and common oxtongue.

OXYCRATE, s. [oxus and keranymi, Gr.] a mixture of water and vinegar.

OXYGEN, s. in Chemistry, an elementary substance, best known as a gas. It is the supporter of animal life and of combustion, in its combination with nitrogen and carbonic acid gas, as atmospheric air. It also enters into the composition of water. And it is one of the most widely diffused of all elementary, or indecomposable, substances.

OXYGENIZABLE, a. in Chemistry, that will combine with oxygen, and does not emit flame during the combination.

TO OXYGENIZE, v. a. in Chemistry, to acidify a substance by oxygen.

OXYGENIZEMENT, s. in Chemistry, the production of acidity by oxygen.

OXYMEL, s. [oxus and meli, Gr.] a mixture of vinegar and honey.

OXYMORON, s. [oxus and moros, Gr.] a figure in Rhetoric, in which an epithet of a contrary signification is added, as, "Painful pleasure."

OXYRHODINE, s. [oxus and rhodon, Gr.] a mixture of two parts of oil of roses with one of vinegar of roses.

OYER, s. [old Fr.] in Law, heard; thus a court of oyer and terminer, is a place where causes are heard and determined.

OYES, s. [oyez, Fr.] a word used and repeated three times by a public crier in a court of justice, and in delivering a proclamation, to demand silence.

OYSTER, s. [oster, Belg.] in Natural History, a common marine shell-fish, esteemed a great delicacy.

OYSTER-CATCHER, s. in Ornithology, a kind of crow, that lives near the sea-shore, and occasionally eats oysters, and even, it is said, catches them itself, by dropping a stone into their shells, when opened for feeding.

OYSTERWENCH, OYSTERWOMAN, s. a woman who sells oysters. Figuratively, a low, mean, and vulgar woman.

OZENAS, s. [ozo, Gr.] in Surgery, a malignant ulcer of the nose.

OZARKS, the name of a mass of mountains in Missouri and Arkansas, United States. They usually range between 2000 and 3000 feet in height; and though yet but imperfectly explored, they are known to contain very valuable mineral treasures. (See those States, and UNITED STATES.)

OZIER, s. See OSIER.

P

P IS the fifteenth letter of our alphabet, and is a consonant uttered by the sudden compression of the anterior part of the lips, as pul, put, pot, and has nearly the sound of b. When p stands before s or t, its sound is lost; as in psalms, pseudo-prophets, Ptolemy, ptisan, &c. When it stands before h, it has the sound of f: as in physic, philosopher, phosphorus, and in most other words; but in phthisic, and some Greek words, the ph is not pronounced. Used as a numeral letter, it stood for 400, but with a dash on the top, thus, ̄p, for 400,000. Among medical writers it stands for pugil, or the eighth part of a handful. In Italian music it stands for piano, or soft, and shows that the force of the voice or instrument is to be lessened. P implies piu piano, more soft, and PPP pianissimo, the softest possible. P. M., in Astronomy, stands for post meridiem, or afternoon.

P'ABULAR, P'ABULOUS, a. [pabulum, Lat.] affording aliment or provender.

PABULATION, s. the act of feeding or procuring provender.

PABULUM, s. [Lat.] among physicians, such parts of our common food as are necessary to recruit the animal fluids; also any matter that constitutes the cause of a disease.

PACATIANUS, TITUS JULIUS MANLIUS, one of those who rebelled against the emperor Philip; he was defeated by the troops of Decius, who was afterwards emperor, in 249 A. D.

PACATUUS, LATINUS DREPANUS, a Roman orator and poet of the 4th century. He was sent to congratulate Theodosius the Great, on his defeat of Maximus, and his speech on that occasion yet remains. He received several valuable offices as a reward for his eloquence.

PACATION, s. [paco, Lat.] appeasing, pacifying, or assuaging.

PACE, s. [pas, Fr.] a step or single motion of the foot in walking; the gait or manner of walking. Degree of quickness: hence, to keep pace with, is to equal a person either in walking or riding. A measure of five feet. In the Menage, it is of three kinds, viz. walk, trot, and gallop; to which may be added an amble.

TO PACE, v. n. to move on slowly; to move. Applied to horses, to move by raising the feet on the same side together.—v. a. to measure by steps.

PACED, a. having a particular gait or manner of walking.

PACER, s. a horse that raises the two legs on the same side together.

PACIFIC, a. [pacifique, Fr. from pax and facio, Lat.] mild; making peace; gentle; appeasing. The Pacific Ocean is the most expanded surface of water on the globe. It lies between Asia and Australia and the American continent; and reaches from Behring's Straits to the Antarctic Ocean. It is studied, especially in the S. tropical regions, with countless groups of small islands, which increase in number and magnitude as they approach Australia. (See POLYNESIA.) It is generally much freer from storms than the Atlantic and Indian Oceans, whence it is named Pacific.

PACIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of making peace; the act of appeasing.

PACIFICATOR, s. [pacificateur, Fr.] a peace-maker.

PACIFICATORY, a. tending to make peace.

PACIFIER, s. one who appeases.

TO PACIFY, v. a. to reconcile, appease, or quiet an angry person.

PACK, s. [Belg. and Teut.] a large bundle of any thing prepared for carriage; a burden or load; a certain number of cards, generally 52; a number of hounds hunting together; a number of persons united in some bad design; any great number or quantity.

TO PACK, v. a. [packen, Belg.] to bind up for carriage; to despatch in haste, used with off: to sort cards iniquitously; to fill a meeting, alleged to be impartial, with partisans: to get

OXFORDSHIRE

REFERENCE TO THE HUNDREDS

1. Banbury
2. Banbury
3. Binfield
4. Bloxham
5. Bellingham
6. Chaddington
7. Dorchester
8. Ewelme
9. Langtree
10. Leckham
11. Barton
12. Ploughley
13. Thame
14. Woodton

HOUSE

Scale of Miles

Parliament of Boroughs County returns numbers

Railway Stations three

RAVENS LIFES LIBRARY

See Oxford into her heart's embrace
Mystic in the Moon's embrace
She waits there, ever in the Moon
Did the great Pile of ancient Art
See the great Pile of ancient Art
See the great Pile of ancient Art
And here and there soft, sweet, sweet
Her dearest of leaves

prejudiced persons on a jury, so as to secure a particular verdict.—v. n. to tie up goods; to remove in haste; to associate in bad designs.

PACKCLOTH, s. [packleed, Belg.] a cloth in which goods are bundled or tied up.

PACKER, s. one who packs goods.

PACKET, s. [paquet, Fr.] a small pack; a mail of letters; a vessel that carries a mail; a small bundle, as of a mountebank's medicines.

To PACKET, v. a. to bind up in parcels.

PACCKHORSE, s. a horse employed in carrying burdens of goods.

PACKSADDLE, s. a saddle on which burdens are laid.

PACCKTHREAD, s. strong thread used in packing or tying up parcels.

PACCKWAX, s. in Anatomy, the strong oponeuroses on the sides of the neck in brutes.

PACO, s. in Zoology, a species of camel sheep in South America, which has an exceedingly fine fleece.

PACT, s. [pactum, from pango, Lat.] a contract, bargain, or covenant.

PACTITIONOUS, (paclishious) a. [pactio, from pango, Lat.] settled upon condition.

PACUVIUS, M., a Roman tragedian of the 2nd century B. C., of whose writings only a few fragments remain.

PAD, s. [paad, Sax.] the road; a foot path; an easy-paced horse; a robber on foot; a soft saddle; properly a saddle or bolster stuffed with straw; a kind of bolster used by crooked people to conceal their deformity.

To PAD, v. n. to travel gently; to rob on foot; to make a way smooth and level; to conceal any deformity with a kind of bolster.

PADAR, s. grouts; coarse flour.

PADDER, s. one who robs on foot.

PADDDLE, v. n. [patouiller, Fr.] to row; to beat the water as with oars; to play with, or in, the water; to finger.

PADDLE, s. [pattie, Brit.] a short oar used by a single rower in a boat; any thing broad like an oar.

PADDLER, s. one that paddles.

PADDLE-STAFF, s. a staff headed with broad iron.

PADDOCK, s. [padde, Belg. pada, Sax.] in Natural History, a great foor, or toad. A small enclosure.

PADELION, s. [pas de lion, Fr.] in Botany, a plant.

PADERBORN, a considerable city of Westphalia, capital of a bishopric of the same name, and formerly one of the Hans Towns. The rivulet Pader rises here under the high altar of the cathedral. It is a celebrated university, and is 37 miles S. W. of Minden, and 43 E. S. E. of Munster. Lat. 51. 46. N. Long. 8. 55. E.

PADLOCK, s. [padde, Belg.] a lock hung on a staple to fasten a door, box, &c.

PADSTOW, Cornwall. It is a place of some trade to Ireland, &c. The harbour is capable of containing vessels of 500 tons at high water, but is of dangerous access without a skilful pilot, being rocky on the E. side, and barred with sea-sand on the W. The chief business here, and along this coast, next to the trade in slate-tiles, is fishing for herrings which come up the channel in October. It is 243 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2145.

PADUA, an ancient, large, and celebrated city of Venetian-Lombardy, in Austrian Italy. It is capital of the Paduano, but is much less considerable than it was formerly. The houses are built on piazzas, which give it a rather gloomy air. The hall of the town-house is one of the largest in Europe, and contains the cenotaph of Livy, the historian, who was a native of Padua. The university, formerly so celebrated, is now, like every thing else in this city, on the decline. Here is a cloth manufactory; the city, however, swarms with beggars. Padua is seated on the rivers Brenta and Barchigione, in a fine plain, and is about 7 miles in circumference. It is 20 miles from Venice. Lat. 45. 22. N. Long. 12. 1. E.

PAEAN, s. [from the songs sung to Pæan or Apollo, beginning with Io Pæan] a song of triumph.

PEDO-BAPTISM, s. [pais and baptismus, Gr.] infant baptism. Pedo-baptists are those who maintain that baptism should be administered to infants.

PAGAN, a. [pagus, Lat.] idolatrous; heathenish.

PAGAN, s. a heathen.

PAGAN, BLAISE FRANCOIS, a distinguished military engineer of France, in the 17th century. He gained great notice by his courage in several arduous engagements, in one of which he lost an eye. Afterwards he became totally blind, but he did not relinquish his favourite study, and composed an excellent treatise on Fortification, with several works on Mathematics and Astronomy. He died in 1665, aged 61 years.

PAGANI, NICCOLO, a celebrated violinist, who acquired chief part of his renown from the extraordinary skill with which he executed very difficult music on a single string. He wrote some wild pieces for his favourite instrument. He travelled through the greater part of W. Europe, and accumulated a great fortune. His private character was not at all worthy of his devotion to music. He died in 1840, aged 56 years.

PAGANISM, s. [paganisme, Fr.] heathenism.

PAGE, s. [page, Fr.] one side of the leaf of a book; a youth attending on a great person.

To PAGE, v. a. to mark the pages of a book with figures; to attend as a page.

PAGEANT, s. a statue in a public show; any show or spectacle of entertainment.

PAGEANT, a. showy; pompous; gaudy.

To PAGEANT, v. a. to exhibit in show; to represent.

PAGEANTRY, s. pomp; show.

PAGINAL, a. [pagina, Lat.] consisting of pages.

PAGODA, s. an Indian idol, or temple. The porcelain tower of Nanking is a very beautiful Chinese pagoda.

PAID, preter, and past part. of To PAY.

PAIGLE, s. in Botany, a name for the cowslip.

PAIL, s. [pala, Span.] a vessel in which milk or water is carried.

PAIFUL, s. the quantity that a pail will hold.

PAIN, s. [paena, Lat.] punishment threatened; a sensation of uneasiness. Uneasiness, applied to the mind. In the plural, labour; task; the throes of child-birth.

To PAIN, v. a. to make uneasy. Used with the reciprocal pronoun, to labour hard, or to hurt in making an effort.

PAINE, THOMAS, a political writer of the last century, who made himself notorious by his political writings, by his share in the American and French Revolutions, and by his scurrilous writings against the Bible. He was first a stay-maker, then an excise-man; afterwards he went to America, and by his Common Sense aided greatly to form the resolution that led to the Independence of the United States. He once visited France officially, to effect a loan; in which he succeeded, and for which he was rewarded. Visiting France and England again, on the peace, for the purpose of carrying out some private schemes, he engaged in defence of the French Revolution, with his Rights of Man, and was, in this country, prosecuted, and in France elected to the Convention. Here he was not fierce enough for the leaders of the populace, and he was eventually confined in the Luxembourg, and sentenced to death. A remarkable and most trivial circumstance, his jailer having marked the inside of his cell door instead of the outside, saved him from the guillotine, for Robespierre himself fell the next day. His Age of Reason was produced about this time. After lingering awhile in France, he returned to the United States, and continued his writing and estate-building; and died in 1809, aged 72 years. The title of his first famous pamphlet, Common Sense, gives a fair estimate of his powers; this, in his political speculations, led him to announce with great plainness and force the great principles of political justice; but other faculties were requisite for finance, and there he failed; and still others, of heart and of head, for the discussion of religious topics, and on them he not only failed, but so as to bring on all his works the condemnation which these alone deserved.

PAINFUL, a. miserable; afflictive; causing an uneasy sensation; difficult; laborious; industrious.

PAINFULLY, ad. with great pain, affliction, labour, or diligence.

PAINFULNESS, s. affliction, sorrow, grief; industry.

PAINIM, PAYNIM, s. [payen, Fr.] an infidel; a pagan.

PAINIM, PAYNIM, a. pagan; heathenish.

PAINGLESS, a. without pain.

PAINSTAKER, s. a laborious person.

PAINSTAKING, a. labouring hard and diligently.

PAINSWICK, Gloucestershire. It has a manufacture of white cloths for the army, and for the India and Turkey trade; and hence is brought a stone, remarkable for its beauty and neatness, for the pavement of floors. It is 101 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 3730.

To PAINT, v. a. [peindre, Fr.] to represent in colours; to cover with colours. Figuratively, to describe; to colour, or diversify. — v. n. to lay colours on the face.

PAINT, s. colours used in making pictures, &c. Also, colours united with oil, and used to cover wood-work, &c. with, to preserve it from the action of the atmosphere and damp; and for the sake of ornament.

PAINTER, s. [peintre, Fr.] one who practises the art of representing things in colours; one who paints wood-work, &c.

PAINTING, s. the art of representing things in colours; a picture; colours laid on wood-work, &c. See FRESCO, ENAMEL, &c.

PAINTURE, s. [peinture, Fr.] the art of painting.

PAIR, s. [paire, Fr.] two things suiting one another; a man and wife; two of a sort; two similar parts joined together, and composing one thing.

To PAIR, v. n. to be joined in pairs; to suit or resemble. — v. a. to join in couples; to unite as correspondent or opposite.

PAISIELO, GIOVANNI, the celebrated composer of the last century. He studied under Durante, and produced his first work at Bologna. His reputation soon became European, and he was invited to Russia, whither he went, and held an office in the Czarina Catharine's court. He afterwards returned to Italy, and settled at Naples; where, with the exception of a short visit to Paris, he staid for the remainder of his life. He died in 1816, aged 75 years. His works are very numerous, and some of his pieces are well known, having been adapted to popular songs.

PAISLEY, Renfrewshire, in Scotland. It had formerly a celebrated abbey. It is seated on the river White Cart, over which are 3 bridges, and has very considerable manufactures of silk and thread gauze. It has some handsome public buildings, and is a place of great importance. It is 50 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 60,487.

PALACE, s. [palais, Fr. palatium, Lat.] a house in which a great person resides; a splendid house.

PALACIOUS, a. royal; noble; magnificent.

PALÆOGRAPHY, s. [palai and grapho, Gr.] the study of ancient writings, with respect to the kind of characters and ornaments employed merely.

PALÆONTOLOGY, s. [palai, onta, and logos, Gr.] in Natural History, the study of the remains of the animals and plants that lived on this globe in earlier stages of its history.

PALÆOTHEORIUM, s. [palaios and therion, Gr.] in Natural History, a genus of animals of the tapir tribe, whose remains are found in the tertiary beds round Paris.

PALANQUIN, s. a kind of covered carriage, used by persons of distinction, and supported on the shoulders of slaves in the East.

PALATABLE, a. agreeable to the taste.

PALATE, s. [palatum, Lat.] in Anatomy, the upper part or roof of the mouth; the organ of taste. In Botany, the inner part of the mouth of a gaping blossom.

PALATIC, a. belonging to the palate.

PALATINATE, the ancient name of two provinces of Germany, one of which now forms part of Bavaria, and the other is divided amongst different sovereigns.

PALATINE, s. [palatin, Fr.] one invested with royal rights and privileges. Chester and Lancaster are the only counties palatine in England.

PALATINE, a. possessing royal privileges.

PALE, a. [pale, Fr. pallidus, Lat.] of a white colour; not high coloured; of a faint lustre; dim.

To PALE, v. a. to make whitish or pale.

PALE, s. [patus, Lat.] a narrow piece of wood joined above and below to a cross beam, to enclose grounds; any enclosure, or district. In Heraldry, a stake placed upright from the top of the chief to the point.

To PALE IN, v. a. to enclose with pales; to encompass.

PALE IN, a. in Botany, applied to such flowers as have leaves surrounding a head or thum; as the marigold.

PALE-EYED, a. having dim eyes.

PALE-FACED, a. having the face whitish, or without any ruddy colour.

PALELY, ad. wanly; not ruddily.

PALENESS, s. want of colour; want of lustre.

PALEOUS, a. [palea, Lat.] husky; chaffy.

PALEOMO, an ancient, rich, and beautiful city of Sicily, in the Val-di-Mazara; situated near the extremity of a kind of natural amphitheatre, formed by high and rocky mountains, which is one of the richest and most pleasant spots in the world. Two great streets intersect each other in the centre of the city, where they form a handsome square, called the Ottangolo, adorned with elegant uniform buildings. From the centre of this square is seen the whole of these noble streets, and the four great gates of the city which terminate them. About a mile from Palermo is a celebrated convent of Capuchins, in which are vaults where the corpses of the monks, and other persons, are preserved, having been first dried over a fire. There is a university here, with a good library. Palermo is seated on the N. side of the island, at the bottom of the gulf of the same name, and is the capital of the island. It is 200 miles from Naples. Pop. about 150,000. Lat. 38. 7. N. Long. 13. 20. E.

PALESTINE, one of the names of that part of Syria, which was formerly possessed by the Israelites, and is also called the Holy Land, Canaan, &c. It lies at the S. part of the E. extremity of the Mediterranean Sea; and was bounded on the N. by Mount Lebanon. The borders on the E. and S. were less accurately defined. Lebanon, Carmel, Tabor, Hermon, &c. were its mountains. The Jordan is its chief river; and the Lake of Gennesaret, or Tiberias, and the Dead Sea, its chief expanses of water. It was very fertile; and produced iron, copper, &c. At different periods of its history it was differently divided; having been first held by various independent half nomade tribes; then by the Israelites, and by them being divided according to the tribes; and lastly, at the time of our Lord, being divided into Judea, Galilee, Samaria, Peræa, Decapolis, &c. Jerusalem was its capital. Samaria, Cæsarea, Capernaum, &c. were also places of note. (See these names separately.)

PALESTRICAL, a. [palaestra, Lat.] of or belonging to wrestling.

PALESTRINA, GIOVANNI PIETRO ALOYSIS, a famous Italian composer of the 16th century. Some of his music is yet performed in the churches of Italy, &c. His style is greatly admired. He died in 1594.

PALETTE, s. [Fr.] a light board, or flat earthen or metallic plate, with a hole, through which the thumb passes, used by a painter to place his colours on.

PALEY, DR. WILLIAM, an eminent divine of the English Church; whose writings have had a considerable influence on the theology and philosophy of England, to the present day. He studied at Cambridge; and was eventually a prebendary of London, and subdean of Lincoln, holding also other more or less valuable benefices. He died in 1805, aged 62 years. The style of all his writings is remarkably clear and elegant, and this has, no doubt, contributed to their popularity. His great work is his Moral Philosophy, in which (following Locke) he rejected all moral sense, and adopted utility or expediency as the basis of right. This work contains much valuable matter; but as an ethical system, it is such as could have been formed and adopted only in England, and under the shadow of our institutions. His Natural Theology is a very able exposition of the proofs of design in all the various works of nature; but as a positive demonstration of the existence of God, it fails, as all such arguments must. His Essay on the Evidences of Christianity is an admirable compendium of the immense accumulations made by Dr. Lardner, and is a beautiful piece of reasoning. But it does not substantiate the claims of Christianity, although it proves the New Testament to be a true historical document. His best work is his Horæ Paulinæ, in which he has, with admirable clearness and skill, shown that the minute and incidental agreements between the different apostolic letters and the Acts of the Apostles, are such as to prove the genuineness of those letters. His other works are of less account. A hopeful reaction against the ethics and evidences of this writer has commenced, and has warlike advocates in Cambridge itself.

PALEFREY, (paifrey, s. [palfray, Brit.]) a small horse used by ladies; a state horse with trappings.

PALIMPSEST, s. [palia and psestos, Gr.] in Criticism, the name of a MS. in which an attempt has been made to obliterate the first writing from the parchment, for economy's sake, and some other work written over it.

PALINDROME, s. [palin and dromos, Gr.] a word or sentence that reads the same backwards as forwards; as madam.

PALINGENE/SIA, s. [palin and genesis, Gr.] regeneration; the migration of the soul of a defunct into another body.

PALINODE, PALINODY, s. [palin and ode, Gr.] a recantation.

PALISA'DE, PALISA'DO, s. [Fr. Span.] pales set by way of enclosure or defence.

PALLISH, a. somewhat pale or wan.

PALL, (paul) s. [pallium, Lat.] a cloak or mantle of state. An episcopal vestment, of white woollen cloth, consisting of a narrow band, and worn over the shoulders. A covering of black velvet, sometimes edged with white silk, thrown over a coffin when carried to interment.

To PALL, (paul) v. n. a. to cloak or invest.

To PALL, (paul) v. n. [pallu, Brit. or from pale], to grow rapid or tasteless.—v. a. to make insipid or rapid; to damp or dispirit; to impair or weaken; to cloy.

PALLA'DIO, ANDREA, the great Italian architect of the 16th century. He studied under Trissino; and was employed in all parts of Italy. His works are always regarded as classical studies by architects. He wrote on his favourite study, and published also a work on Roman antiquities. He died in 1580, aged 62 years.

PALLADIUM, s. a security or safeguard. In Antiquity, a statue of the goddess Pallas, preserved in Troy, whereon the fate of the city is said to have depended. In Chemistry, a metal found in connexion with platinum, of gray colour, and metallic lustre.

PALLAS, in Heathen Mythology, the Grecian goddess of wisdom, called by the Latins, Minerva. In Astronomy, one of the asteroids, or small planets, or parts of planets, revolving between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. See SOLAR SYSTEM.

PALLAS, PETER SIMON, the celebrated traveller, was a German by birth, and studied at Halle, Göttingen, and Leyden; and afterwards entered the service of the empress of Russia. He was engaged in the survey of the Russian empire, and travelled throughout Asiatic Russia. He afterwards lived in the Crimea. But eventually he returned to Berlin, where he published his Travels, &c., and died in 1811, aged 70 years.

PALLET, s. [palette, Fr.] a small or mean bed.—[palette, Fr.] a small measure, formerly used by surgeons.—[from pale], in Heraldry, a narrow pale.

To PALLIATE, v. a. [pallium, Lat.] to cloak, cover, or extenuate any crime by excuses or favourable representations; to ease without radical cure.

PALLIATION, s. [Fr.] the act of covering or extenuating a crime; an imperfect and temporary cure.

PALLIATIVE, a. [palliati, Fr.] extenuating by excuses and favourable representations.

PALLIATIVE, s. something that extenuates a crime, or alleviates pain.

PALLID, a. [pallidus, Lat.] pale; wan; not high coloured. PALLI'LOGY, s. [pallin and logos, Gr.] a figure in Rhetoric, in which the same word is repeated.

PALL-MALL, (pel-mell) s. [palette maille, Fr.] a game in which a ball is struck through an iron ring with a mallet. See MALL, and MELL.

PALM, s. [palma, Lat.] in Botany, the name of a large class of tropical plants, distinguished for their height and beauty. They furnish many useful vegetable substances. The hand spread out, or the inside of the hand. In Measure, three inches.

To PALM, v. a. to conceal in the palm; to handle; to stroke with the hand. To impose on, used with upon.

PALMA, one of the Canary Islands. It is about 25 miles long, and 15 broad, and is one mass of lofty rocks, reaching to above 7000 feet in height. Santa Cruz is its capital. Pop. about 5000. See CANARIES.

PALMER, s. a pilgrim, so called from the custom of bearing branches of palm by those who had visited the Holy Land. A crown encircling a deer's head.

PALMERWORM, s. in Entomology, the name of a kind of caterpillar.

PALMETTO, s. in Botany, a kind of palm-tree, with the leaves of which women's hats are made.

PALMIFEROUS, a. [palma and fero, Lat.] bearing palms.

PALMPEDE, a. [palma and pes, Lat.] web-footed; having the toes joined by a membrane.

PALMISTER, s. one who professes palmistry.

PALMISTRY, s. [palma, Lat.] the pretence of telling fortunes by the lines of the palms.

PALM-SUNDAY, s. in the Church Calendar, the Sunday next before Easter; so called from palm branches being carried before our Saviour on his triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

PALMY, a. bearing palms.

PALMYRA, formerly a magnificent city of Asia, in the deserts of Syria, of which Zenobia was queen, who held out a long time against the Romans, but was at length taken captive, and led in triumph through the streets of Rome. This place, called by the Arabs, Tadmor in the Desert, appears to have been built by Solomon, but the architecture of its admired remains is probably Grecian, coeval with the time of the Seleucidae. The present inhabitants, consisting of 30 or 40 families, have erected their mud cottages within the spacious court of a magnificent temple of the sun. Palmyra is situated in the midst of a large sandy plain, surrounded on three sides by a long chain of mountains, 90 miles from Damascus. Lat. 34. 29. N. Long. 38. 48. E.

PALPAB/LITY, PAL/PABLENESS, s. the quality of being perceivable to the touch; grossness; plainness.

PAL/PABLE, a. [Fr. from palpo, Lat.] to be perceived by the touch; gross; coarse; easily detected; plain or easily perceived.

PAL/PABLY, ad. in such a manner as to be perceived by the touch; grossly; plainly.

PALPATION, s. the act of feeling.

To PAL/PITATE, v. a. [palpito, Lat.] to beat like the heart; to flutter.

PALPITATION, s. [Fr.] the more rapid pulsation of the heart, occasioned by fright or disorder.

PAL/SGRAVE, (päulgrave) s. [palstra, Teut.] a count or earl who has the superintendence of a prince's palace.

PALSIED, (päusied) a. afflicted with the palsy.

PALSY, (pälsy) a. [paralysis, from paraluo, Gr.] in Medicine, a kind of paralysis, in which, most commonly, the limbs cannot be kept from trembling. There are also other kinds of this disease not characterized by this symptom.

To PAL/TER, (päulter) v. n. to prevaricate; to shift or dodge.—v. a. to squander; to trifle.

PAL/TERER, (päulterer) a. an insincere dealer; a shifter.

PAL/TRINESS, (päultriness) s. meanness.

PAL/TRY, (päultry) a. sorry; worthless; contemptible; mean.

PAL/Y, a. pale. Used only in poetry.

PAM, s. [perhaps from palma, Lat. as trump is from triumph], the knave of clubs.

PAMPAS, the name given to the vast plains which form the S. part of the S. American continent, and cover many thousands of square miles. Some parts are fertile; but most of this land is barren. In those about Buenos Ayres, wild horses abound. On the N. is the Salinas, or Salt Desert. The Patagians inhabit the S. part.

To PAM/PER, v. a. [pamberare, Ital.] to fill with food, or feed luxuriously; to glut.

PAM/PHLET, (pämplet) s. [written by Caxton pamphet, from par un flet, Fr.] a small book not bound, but only stitched.

To PAM/PHLET, v. a. to write small books or pamphlets.

PAMPHLET/E'R, a. a writer of pamphlets.

PAMPHY/LIA, a province of Asia Minor, lying on the Mediterranean, and bounded by Lycia, Pisidia, and Cilicia. One part of the Tauric range of mountains crossed the N. part of it. Its rivers were small. Termessus, Olbia, Perge, Attalia, Selinus, &c. were its chief cities.

PAN, s. [pán, Teut.] an earthen vessel broad and hollow; the part of a gun-lock that holds the powder; any hollow or cavity. In the Heathen Mythology, the god of shepherds. He was also the personification of the Universal Soul. His appearance was that of a satyr.

PANACEA, s. [pan and akeomai, Gr.] a universal medicine. PANA'DA, PANA'DO, s. [panade, Fr.] food made by boiling bread till it is in a manner dissolved in water.

PANA'MA, the name of the isthmus that connects N. and S. America, of a gulf adjoining it, and of a rich and handsome town standing on the gulf. The town is the capital of the department of New Granada, with elegant public buildings. It is a place of considerable trade. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 9. 0. N. Long. 79. 19. W.

PANARY, a. in Chemistry, belonging to bread.

PAN/CAKE, s. a kind of cake or pudding made in a fryingpan.

PANCHRE/STA, (pankrēsta) s. [pan and chrestos, Gr.] medicines that are supposed efficacious in all diseases.

PANCRATICAL, a. [pan and kratoe, Gr.] very strong, or exercising in all gymnastic exercises.

PANCREAS, s. [pan and kreas, Gr.] in Anatomy, the part called the sweetbread; a gland, situated between the bottom of the stomach and the vertebrae of the loins, and secreting a juice of great service in assisting digestion.

PANCREATIC, a. belonging to the pancreas.

PANDECT, a. [pandecta, Lat.] a treatise that comprehends the whole of any science. A digest of civil law.

PANDEMIC, a. [pan and demos, Gr.] incident to a whole people.

PANDER, s. [from Pandarus,] a pimp; a man that procures prostitutes for another.

TO PANDER, v. a. to pimp; to be subservient to lust or passion.

PANDERLY, ad. pimping; pimplike.

PANDICULATION, s. [pandicular, Lat.] the restlessness, stretching, and uneasiness, usually accompanying the cold fits of an intermitting fever.

PANE, s. [pancau, Fr.] a square piece of glass; a piece mixed in variegated works with other pieces.

PANEYRIC, s. [panegyrique, Fr.] a piece written in praise of a person or thing.

PANEYRIC, PANEYRICAL, a. praising; in the nature of a panegyric.

PANEYRIST, s. [panégyriste, Fr.] one that writes praise; an encomiast.

PANEL, s. [panellum, Lat. panesau, Fr.] a square or piece of any matter inserted among others; a square piece in a waistcoat. In Law, it signifies a schedule, or small roll of parchment, containing the names of the jurors returned by the sheriff to pass upon a trial; so that the impannelling a jury is no more than the sheriff's entering them upon a panel or roll.

PANG, s. [peine, Fr.] excessive pain; a sudden pain or torture.

TO PANG, v. a. to torment cruelly.

PANGOLIN, s. in Zoology, an animal of the manis tribe.

PANIC, a. [from Pan,] violent without reason, applied to fear.

PANICGRASS, s. in Botany, the panicum of Linnaeus; the great loose cocksfoot, and creeping panicgrass, are the British species.

PANICLE, s. [panicula, Lat.] in Botany, an assemblage of flowers upon stalks that are variously subdivided; as in the oats, tilac, horre-chesnut, &c. &c.

PANNADE, s. the prancing of a high-bred horse.

PANNEL, s. [panneel, Belg. paneau, Fr.] a kind of clumsy saddle. In Falconry, the stomach of a hawk.

PANNIER, s. [panier, Fr.] a basket or wicker vessel, hung on the side of a horse.

PANNO'NIA, a country of ancient Enrope, lying on the Danube, and bounded by Mesia, Illyricum, and Noricum. It was one of the frontier provinces of the Roman empire. Vindobona (now Vienna) and Taurunum (now Belgrade) were its chief cities.

PANOPLY, s. [pan and oplon, Gr.] complete armour.

PANSY, s. [pensée, Fr.] in Botany and Floriculture, a well-known garden flower, commonly called heart's ease.

TO PANT, v. n. [panteler, old Fr.] to fetch the breath short, when frightened or out of breath. To play with intermission, applied to the wind. To wish or long for.

PANT, s. the palpitation of the heart.

PANTALOON, s. [pantalon, Fr.] breeches long enough to cover the leg to the ankle.

PANTHEOLOGY, s. [pan and theologia, Gr.] the whole sun or body of divinity.

PANTHEON, s. [pan and theos, Gr.] a temple at Rome dedicated to all the gods.

PANTHER, s. [Gr.] in Zoology, an animal which bears a near resemblance to the leopard, but is superior in size.

PANTILE, s. a gutter tile.

PANTINGLY, ad. with a palpitation; breathing short.

PANTLER, s. [panitier, Fr.] a person who keeps the bread in a great family.

PANTOFLE, s. [pantoufle, Fr.] a slipper.

PANTOGRAPH, s. [pas and grapho, Gr.] an instrument so constructed that a copy of a map or drawing may be made, exactly, by it, either of the same size, or in any proportion to it. It is complicated, and not easy to describe without a diagram.

PANTOMIME, s. [Fr. pan and mimemai, Gr.] one who can express his meaning by mute actions. A play, very popular with children of all ages, consisting in gesture and dumb show, and usually represented at Christmastide. A mimic.

PANTON, s. a shoe made to recover a narrow and hoof-bound heel.

PANTRY, s. [paneterie, Fr.] the room in which victuals are kept.

PA'OLI, PASCAL, the general and patriot of Corsica, who, in the last century, laboured so bravely to free that island from the power of Genoa, and afterwards from that of France. He was supported with great warth by England, and seemed several times to be successful, but he was engaged in a struggle that could not end triumphantly; and he died in London, in 1807, aged 81 years, having richly deserved the esteem in which he was held by all parties who took any interest in his patriotic contest.

PAP, s. [pappe, Belg. papa, Ital. papilla, Lat.] the nipple of the breast; food made for infants of bread boiled in milk or water; the pulp of fruit.

PAPA', s. [Lat. pappas, Gr.] a name of fondness used by a child to its father.

PAPACY, s. [papa, Lat.] the office or dignity of a pope.

PAPAL, a. [Fr.] belonging to the pope.

PAPAL STATES, the territories belonging to the pope, in Italy. They reach from the Mediterranean Sea to the Gulf of Venice, and are bounded by Naples, Tuscany, Modena, and the Austrian dominions. They are about 200 miles long, and 100 broad. The Apennines run through the midst of them, and the chief river is the Tiber. They are abundantly productive of every kind of wealth that is common to Italy, although the frequent change of rulers, and the ceaseless intrigues for and against them, has prevented the full development of their resources. Rome is the capital. They are Bolognese, Ferrarese, Romagna, Urbino, Ancona, Ombrina, Perugia, Camerino, Umbria Fermo, Orvieto, Pat. di Pietro, Sabina, and Campagna di Roma. Pop. about 3,000,000.

PAPAVEROUS, a. [papaver, Lat.] belonging to or resembling poppies.

PAPER, s. [ppapyrus, Lat. papier, Fr.] the reed of the Nile, on which they wrote before the invention of paper; a substance on which we write or print, made of linen rags ground, macerated in water, and formed into thin sheets by machinery; a piece of paper; a single sheet printed or written, usually applied to journals, or essays published in single sheets.

PAPER, a. made of paper; slight or thin.

TO PAPER, v. a. to cover or wrap in paper; to register.

PAPERMAKER, s. one who makes paper.

PAPERSCENT, a. tending towards or resembling pap.

PAPHLAGONIA, a country of Asia Minor, lying on the Euxine, and bounded by Bithynia, Galatia, and Pontus. It was mountainous, and the celebrated Halys was its chief river. Sinope and Amastris were its principal cities. It furnished Greece with slaves.

PAPIER-MÂCHÉ, s. [Fr.] in the Useful Arts, a substance of the same nature as the pulp of paper, used very much in making trays, and ornaments for janneping; mouldings for picture frames, &c. &c.

PAPILLO, s. [Lat.] a moth of various colours, by some called a butterfly.

PAPILIONACEOUS, a. [papilio, Lat.] in Botany, applied to such flowers as represent a butterfly, with its wings expanded, as in the pea, broom, gorze, &c.

PAPILLARY, PAILLOUS, a. [papilla, Lat.] having emulgent vessels resembling papas.

PAPIST, s. [papiste, Fr.] one that adheres to the communion of the pope and Church of Rome.

PAPISTICAL, a. popish; adhering to the pope.

PAPISTRY, s. popery; the doctrine of the Church of Rome.

PAPPOUS, a. [pappus, Lat.] in Botany, applied to seeds covered with a light thin down, as in the dandelion, thistle, &c.

PAPPUS, a celebrated mathematician of Alexandria, of the 4th or 5th century a. d. Some of his works are yet extant; and show how diligently the synthetical branch of mathematical science continued to be studied at that eminent school.

PAPPY, a. soft; juicy; easily divided.

PAPUA, a large island lying immediately N. of New Holland, and E. of the Moluccas. It is about 1500 miles long, and 500 broad; but is of a very irregular shape. Very little is known of its appearance, productions, inhabitants, &c., as no commercial relations have yet been established with it, on the part of any people of Europe; and the natives are very barbarous. Yet they carry on some kind of trade with China, Japan, &c. &c. It is also called NEW GUINEA.

PAPULOSITY, s. [pappus, Lat.] fullness of blisters or pimples.

PAPYRUS, s. [Lat.] in Botany, the name of the Egyptian reed, the inner skin of which was made into paper, before the discovery of linen paper, or the introduction of cotton paper from India.

PAR, s. [Lat.] the state of equality, or equal value.

PAR VAGUM, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, one of the three nerves of the eighth pair, which supplies the lungs and the respiratory system.

PARABLE, s. [paraballo, Gr.] a similitude; a narrative of fact or fiction made use of to convey some important truth.

PARABOLA, s. [Lat.] in Geometry, a conic section arising from a cone's being cut by a plane parallel to one of its sides.

PARABOLIC, PARABOLICAL, a. [parabolique, Fr.] expressed in parabolas, or by a similitude. In Geometry, having the form or properties of a parabola.

PARABOLICALLY, ad. by way of parable, or similitude. In Geometry, in the form of a parabola.

PARABOLISM, s. in Algebra, is the division of the terms of an equation, by a known quantity that is involved or multiplied in the first term.

PARABOLOID, s. [parabola and eidos, Gr.] in Geometry, a solid supposed to be formed by the revolution of a parabola on its axis.

PARACELSUS, a physician and natural philosopher of Switzerland in the beginning of the 16th century; who seeing more in nature than modern students do, but not being aided by so clear and trustworthy a method, and being, also, surrounded by circumstances hostile to careful study of nature, devoted himself to alchemy, and hoped to find out the means of thwarting natural decay and death. The use of mercury, tartar, &c. was introduced by him into medical art with great success. He died in 1541, aged but 48 years. The figurative terms he employed to classify his facts, have been urged against his pretensions to be a man of science. Nomenclature is of great importance to science, but it is not so in art. See ROSICRUSTANS.

PARACENTESIS, s. [para and kenleo, Gr.] in Surgery, an operation for the dropsy, called tapping.

PARACENTRIC, PARACENTRICAL, a. [para and kentron, Gr.] deviating from the centre.

PARACHUTE, s. [para, Gr. and chute, Fr.] in Aerostation, a machine, constructed like an umbrella, to break the fall of one descending through the air from a great altitude. Unfortunately the experimenters have either been killed, or nearly so, so that the machine does not appear to be of great use.

PARACLETE, s. [parakaleo, Gr.] an advocate, helper, or comforter; in Scripture, applied to our Lord and to the Holy Spirit.

PARADE, s. [Fr.] an ostentatious show or display; military order; a place where troops are drawn up for duty; a guard, or a posture of defence.

PARADIGM, s. [paradiknumi, Gr.] an example; used chiefly to designate the tables of nouns and verbs, in grammar.

PARADISE, s. any place or state of exquisite happiness.

PARADISACAL, a. suiting, resembling, or forming paradise.

PARADOX, s. [para and doxa, Gr.] a statement which at first appears absurd, but is actually true.

PARADOXICAL, a. of the nature of a paradox.

PARADOXICALLY, ad. after the manner of a paradox.

PARADOXOLOGY, s. [paradoxos and lego, Gr.] the act of speaking in paradoxes.

PARAGOGUE, s. [parago, Gr.] a figure whereby a syllable or letter is added to the end of a word; s. along, alonged.

PARAGON, s. [paragone, Ital.] a model; pattern; something superlatively excellent; fellow, equal.

To PARAGON, v. to compare; to equal.

PARAGRAPH, (paragraf) s. [para and grapho, Gr.] a distinct part of a discourse. In Printing, a mark used to signify the beginning of some other subject, and formed thus, ¶.

PARAGRAPHCALLY, (paragrafically) ad. with distinct breaks or sentences.

PARAGUAY, a republic of S. America, bounded by Brazil, Bolivia, La Plata, and Uruguay. It is about 500 miles long by 200 broad. It has numerous lakes and rivers. Of the latter, the principal are the Paraguay and the Parana, the united streams of which form the celebrated Rio-de-la-Plata. These rivers annually overflow their banks; and, on their recess, leave them enriched by a slime, that renders the soil extremely fertile. It is an extremely fertile plain, and produces cotton in great abundance, tobacco, and the valuable herb called Paraguay, which is peculiar to this country, and the infusion of which is drunk in all the Spanish provinces of S. America, instead of tea. They have also a variety of fruits, and very rich pastures; but the country has but few woods or forests. Assumption is its capital. Pop. about 500,000.

PARALYPSIS, s. [paraleipo, Gr.] a figure in Rhetoric, wherein that thing is left pass, which nevertheless is intended to be insisted on at large.

PARALLACTIC, PARALLACTICAL, a. belonging to a parallax.

PARALLAX, s. [parallatto, Gr.] in Astronomy, the apparent change of place in a heavenly body, when observed from different positions; from which the distance of many of them has been exactly calculated. The fixed stars have (with a very few exceptions) no appreciable parallax.

PARALLEL, a. [parallellos, Gr.] extended in the same direction; preserving always the same distance; having the same tendency; continuing the resemblance through several particulars; like.

PARALLELS, s. lines continuing their course, and equally distant from each other. Lines on the globe, which distinguish the latitude. In the singular, direction conformable to that of another line; resemblance; likeness; a comparison; any thing resembling another.

To PARALLEL, v. to place so as to keep the same direction with, or be at the same distance from, another line; to correspond to; to compare; to bear resemblance to.

PARALLELISM, s. the state of being parallel.

PARALLELGRAM, s. [parallellos and gramma, Gr.] in Geometry, a right-lined quadrilateral figure, whose opposite sides are parallel and equal.

PARALLOGRAMMICAL, a. having the properties of a parallelogram.

PARALLOPEIPEDON, s. [parallelepipedo, Fr.] in Geometry, a solid figure contained under six parallelograms, whose opposite sides are equal and parallel.

PARALOGISM, s. [para and logo, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a false argument.

PARALOGY, s. a false reasoning.

PARALYSIS, s. [paralyo, Gr.] in Medicine, the failure of some part of the nervous system to perform its functions. In one very painful and common variety, one half of the body, from the head to the feet, is without feeling or power to move. In another, the lower part of the body is thus lifeless. The palsy is a kind of paralysis; and in the New Testament, all instances of paralysis are named palsy.

PARALYTIC, PARALYTICAL, a. affected with the palsy.

PARAMARIBO, the principal town of Dutch Guyana, in S. America. It is a very flourishing and lively place, abounding in every thing which can indicate wealth. The town is very extensive and remarkably clean, and the houses are extremely well built. Rows of orange trees, lemon, &c. are planted in the streets at the distance of ten or twelve feet from the houses, which in the months of May and June diffuse a most delicious fragrance. Lat. S. 48. N. Long. 55. 11. W.

PARAMETER, s. in Geometry, a constant right line in each of the three conic sections, called likewise the latus rectum.

PARAMOUNT, a. [paramont, old Fr.] having the chief or highest authority; eminent, or of the highest order.

PARAMOUNT, s. the chief, supreme, lord.

PARAMOUR, s. [par and amour, Fr.] a lover; a mistress.

PARAMPH, (paramph) s. [para and nunphe, Gr.] a bride-man; one that countenances another.

PARAPEGM, s. [parapignumi, Gr.] a brazen table fixed to a pillar, on which laws and proclamations, the rising and setting of stars, and other astronomical observations, were formerly engraved.

PARAPET, s. [Fr.] a wall breast high.

PARAPHERNALIA, (parafernalia) s. [Lat. from para and pherna, Gr.] goods in the wife's disposal.

PARAPHRASE, (parafrase) s. [para and phrazo, Gr.] a loose interpretation, wherein more regard is had to an author's meaning than his words.

To PARAPHRASE, (parafrase) v. a. to interpret freely, so as to give the sense of a passage, but not the meaning of every word.

PARAPHRAST, (parafrast) s. a lax interpreter; one who expounds in many words.

PARAPHRASTIC, PARAPHRASTICAL, a. explained in a free or loose manner; not literal.

PARAPHRENTIS, (parafrenitis) s. [Gr.] in Surgery, an inflammation of the diaphragm, accompanied with a violent fever and great pain in inspiration.

PARAPLEGIA, s. [para and plessio, Gr.] in Surgery, a palsy which seizes all parts of the body except the head.

PARASANG, s. a Persian measure of length.

PARASELENE, s. [para and selene, Gr.] in Optics, those more luminous spots, which appear in the intersections of lunar halos, and are commonly called mock-moons. See PARHELION.

PARASIOPEISIS, s. [para and siopao, Gr.] a figure in Rhetoric, which signifies keeping silence.

PARASITE, s. [Fr. parasitos, Gr.] a term of reproach used for a flatterer or mean dependant.

PARASITIC, PARASITICAL, a. flattering or wheedling. In Botany, applied to those vegetables that do not take root in the earth, but grow upon other plants or trees; thus the mistletoe is found to grow upon the apple-tree, the pear, the lime, the elm, the poplar, the hawthorn, and the buckthorn, but never upon the ground.

PARASOL, s. [Fr. from para, Gr. and sol, Lat.] a small canopy or umbrella, used to defend the head from the heat of the sun.

PARASYNEXIS, s. [parasinagoo, Gr.] in the Civil Law, a conventicle, or unlawful meeting.

PARATHEISIS, s. [para and tithemi, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a small hint of a thing. In Printing, the matter contained within two crochets, marked thus [ ].

To PARABOIL, v. a. [parabouiller, Fr.] to half-boil.

To PARBREAK, v. n. [brecker, Belg.] to vomit.

PARCE, s. [Lat.] in Mythology, the fates or destinies, daughters of Erebus and Nox; Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos; the first of whom held the distaff, the second drew the thread of human life, and the last cut it.

PARCEL, s. [parcelle, Fr.] a small bundle; a part taken separately; a quantity or mass; a number of persons or things, used in contempt.

To PARCEL, v. a. to divide into separate portions; to make up into a mass.

PARCENER, s. in Law, applied to a man's sisters or daughters who become possessed as joint tenants or co-heirs of a man's estate, by his dying without issue male.

PARCENERY, s. holding or occupying of lands by joint tenants, otherwise called coparceners.

To PARCH, v. a. to scorch or burn slightly; to dry up, — v. n. to be scorched or dried.

PARCIMENT, s. [parchemin, Fr. pergamena, Lat.] sheepskin dressed for writing. It was first made at Pergamus, in Asia Minor.

PARCITY, s. [parcitas, Lat.] frugality; sparingness.

PARD, PARDALE, s. [pardus, pardalis, Lat.] in Poetry, the leopard, or any spotted beast.

To PARDON, v. a. [pardonner, Fr.] to excuse an offender, forgive a crime, or remit a penalty. Pardon me, is a phrase of civil denial, or slight apology.

PARDON, s. [Fr.] the act of forgiving an offender a crime, or of remitting a penalty; forgiveness received; exemption from forgiveness.

PARDONABLE, a. excusable; venial.

PARDONABLENESS, s. the quality of being possible to be forgiven; venialness.

PARDONABLY, ad. in such a manner as may be forgiven; venially.

PARDONER, s. one who forgives. In Ecclesiastical Antiquities, a hawk of papal indulgences, relics, &c.

To PARE, v. a. to cut off the outward coat or surface; to cut off extremities by little and little.

PARÉ, AMBROSE, a famous French surgeon of the 16th century. He was an army surgeon, and was particularly successful in his treatment of gun-shot wounds. He was royal surgeon under four successive monarchs. He was the first of his profession who ventured, in modern times, on the application of the results of diligent observation to his science. He died in 1590, aged 81 years.

PARCBASIS, s. [Gr.] in Rhetoric, the exaggeration of a crime.

PARÉJA, JUAN DE, a Portuguese painter, born in the W. Indies, and originally a slave. In this capacity he was employed in the studio of the famous Velasquez, where he taught himself, at night, to paint. Having at length caught the attention of King Philip, who used to visit the great artist at his easel, he was emancipated, but continued in the service of his former owner, and of his family, till his death. He died in 1670, aged 60 years.

PARÉGORIC, s. [paregorico, Gr.] in Medicine, a preparation of the tincture of opium, used by persons unacquainted with its character, much too frequently, for children.

PARENCHYMA, (parinkyma) s. [parenchyma, Gr.] in Physiology, the spongy or cellular substance of which the different organs, and particularly the glands, are composed.

PARÉNEISIS, s. [paraineo, Gr.] persuasion.

PARENT, s. [parens, from pario, Lat.] a father or mother.

PARENTAGE, s. [Fr.] extraction; birth; condition with respect to rank of parents.

PARENTAL, a. becoming or belonging to parents.

PARENTATION, s. [parento, Lat.] something done or said in honour of the dead.

PARENTHESIS, s. [para, en, and tithemi, Gr.] in Grammar, an explanatory sentence, which may be left out without spoiling the sense of the passage; in Printing, marked thus ( ).

PARENTHETICAL, a. pertaining to a parenthesis.

PARENTHICIDE, s. [parens and cedo, Lat.] the murder, or the murderer, of a father or mother.

PARERY, s. an instrument used to cut away the surface of any substance.

PARERGY, s. [para and ergon, Gr.] something unimportant or done by the by.

PARGET, s. a plaster laid on the roof or ceiling of a room.

To PARGET, v. a. to cover with plaster.

PARHELION, s. [para and helios, Gr.] in Optics, a phenomenon frequently attending solar halos, commonly called a mock sun. It is the brilliant appearance at the intersections of the halos, and is usually somewhat prismatic.

PARIETAL, a. [paries, Lat.] constituting the sides or walls.

PARING, s. the rind; that which is pared off any thing.

PARINI, JOSEPH, an Italian poet of the last century. After a long struggle with indigence, he was appointed to a professorship at Milan. He died in 1799, aged 70 years. His works are chiefly poetical; and the most extended is of a satirical description.

PARIS, the capital of France, one of the largest, finest, and most populous cities of Europe. The river Seine, which crosses it, forms in its course 3 small islands, called the islands of Louviers, the Notre-Dame, and the Palace, which last is the ancient city of Paris. It is crossed by 27 bridges, one of which occupies the whole breadth of the Seine, namely, the Pont Neuf. The Quais are very fine. The public fountains are very numerous, and on some of them is displayed very elegant sculpture. The public places, squares, &c. are also numerous and elegant, among which may be noticed the Place de la Concorde, Place Vendôme, &c. The Boulevards are planted with trees, and with the gardens of the Tuileries and other palaces, the Champs Elysées, &c., form beautiful promenades. The cathedral of Notre-Dame, a Gothic structure, is one of the largest in Europe, and contains 45 chapels. The Pantheon, the Madeleine, &c. are very fine parochial churches. The principal palaces are the Louvre, which is used as a gallery of arts and antiquities; the Tuileries, which has hitherto been the royal residence; the Palais Royal; the Luxembourg, in which the Peers have till now held their assembly; and the Palais Bourbon, used hitherto for the Chamber of Deputies. The buildings connected with government, trade, &c., as the Hôtel de Ville, the Mint, the Bourse, the Corn Market, are worthy of notice. The city abounds with arches, columns, obelisks, and similar public decorations. But the most remarkable recent work is the fortifications, which completely enclose the city, leaving a space, varying from less than half a mile to two miles, for the future growth of the city. These works are strengthened and supported by 16 detached forts, and one lunette, which are arranged round them, at a greater distance from the city. Paris abounds with educational institutions, and has a noble and celebrated university. It is equally famous for its manufactures, which are very numerous and valuable. Pop. about 1,000,000. Paris forms, with a small district round it, one of the departments of France. Lat. 48. 50. N. Long. 2. 20. E.

PARIS, MATTHEW, a Benedictine monk of St. Albans, in the 13th century. He wrote various books, but the greatest is his History of England, from the Norman Conquest to the time in which he lived. He is be-praised by some as a miracle of learning and various accomplishments; and he does evince some skill in rhetoric, in his writings. He died in 1279.

PARIS, FRANCIS, the ABAD PARIS, a Jansenist, who died in 1727, and whose tomb was the scene of such astonishing miracles, and was visited by such vast crowds, for the sake of the cures, and for curiosity's sake, that the cemetery was made inaccessible, in 1782, by order of government. The careful examination of these reputed miracles has taken from this post-humous, and latest, wonder-worker not a little of his renown; but has not deprived those troubled with the diseases that were cured there, of the hope of like wonders, whenever any circumstance shall inflame their enthusiasm in the proper degree.

PARIS, in legendary story of ancient Greece, the son of Priam of Troy, whose rape of Helen provoked the famous siege of that city, which inflicted on the various states and leaders of Greece such numerous ills, and ended in the destruction of the well-walled Ilium. Homer names him Alexander, and does not give him a very exalted character.

PARISH, s. [paroisse, Fr.] a district belonging to the same church, and under the care of the same priest.

PARISH, a. belonging to or having the care of the parish; maintained by the parish.

PARISHONER, (parishöner) s. [paroissien, Fr.] one that belongs to a parish.

PARISHAN, a. belonging to, or in use at, Paris.

PARITOR, s. a beadle or summoner of the courts of civil law.

PARTY, s. [partit, Fr.] equality; likeness.

PARK, [parc, Sax. para, Fr.] a piece of ground enclosed, and stocked with beasts of chase, &c. In War, an orderly assemblage of all the cannon of an army, either for the sake of having it ready when needed, or for the sake of using it with the more concentrated and terrible effect.

To PARK, v. a. to enclose as in a park.

PARK, MUNGO, the celebrated traveller in W. Africa. He studied medicine at Edinburgh, and sailed to the E. Indies as surgeon to an E. Indianman. Being engaged by the African Society to explore the river Niger, he set out alone, and spent 2 years in the interior of Nigritia; whence he returned much reduced by fever. Some years afterwards he was despatched at the head of another expedition; and when he was left almost alone, through the death, &c. of his companions, he still pressed on, till at Boussa he was attacked by the natives, and, with his companions, perished. He died in 1805, aged 34 years. His Travels, though not written in the best style, are remarkably truthful and interesting.

PARKER, the name of two Anglican prelates of some note. The first, Matthew Parker, was made archbishop of Canterbury by Elizabeth, having accredited his zeal during the Marian persecution. He was almost a model of the class he belonged to, holding (in the main) evangelical doctrines; sufficiently compliant to please even Elizabeth; a strenuous coe-r of Puritans; —his name is well chosen by the society which reprints old books of Anglican Low-church divinity of the 16th and earlier part of the 17th centuries. He died in 1575, aged 71 years. The other, Samuel Parker, was first a Puritan, and afterwards so much anti-Puritan, that James II. made him bishop of Oxford, in the hope of making use of him in re-introducing the authority of Rome. He died, however, before the scheme was ripe, in 1687, aged 47 years.

PARKHURST, DR. JOHN, an English clergyman of some learning, and of some name in his day, as an opponent of Wesley and of Priestley. His chief works are his Lexicons, of the Hebrew of the Old Testament, and the Greek of the New. But, beside their being written in the very infancy of biblical studies in England, Parkhurst did not believe in the Hebrew points, (and had nothing to substitute for them,) and he did believe in Hutchinsonianism; whence these books are mere curiosities of literature, and of no use to any student of the Sacred Scriptures. He died in 1797, aged 69 years.

PARLE, s. [parler, Fr.] conversation; the act of treating by word of mouth.

To PARLEY, v. n. [parler, Fr.] to treat by word of mouth; generally used in War, of the treaties carried on by enemies during a suspension of arms for that purpose.

PARLEY, s. a treaty carried on by word of mouth. To beat or sound a parley, signifies to give the signal for a conference, by beat of drum, or sound of trumpet.

PARLIAMENT, s. [parlement, Fr.] properly, the legislature of Great Britain and Ireland, consisting of the sovereign, the lords spiritual and temporal, and the commons. But, commonly, applied to the House of Commons alone.

PARLIAMENTARY, a. enacted by, suiting, belonging to, or performed by, parliament.

PARLOUR, s. [parloir, Fr.] in monasteries, a room where the religious meet and converse. In houses, a room furnished for reception and entertainment.

PARLOUS, a. [corrupted from perilous] keen; sprightly; waggish. It is totally disused except by small novelists.

PARLOUS, a. [from peerless] incomparable; matchless.

PARLOUSNESS, s. quickness; keenness.

PARMA, a duchy of Italy, bounded by Austrian Lombardy, Modena, Tuscany, and the Sardinian kingdom. It reaches from the Apennines to the Po, and is about 50 miles long by 40 broad. The soil is very fertile in corn, wine, oil, and hemp; the pastures feed a great number of cattle, and the cheese was in very high esteem. Here are inconsiderable mines of copper and silver, and abundance of iron, marble, building-stone, &c. Parma is the capital. Pop. about 500,000.

PARMA, an ancient, rich, populous, and handsome city of Italy, capital of the duchy of the same name, with a university. It has a magnificent cathedral, and many handsome churches, several of which are adorned with paintings by Correggio. It once had a monstrous and useless theatre. The library, picture gallery, and museum of antiquities, &c. are excellent. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 44. 50. N. Long. 10. 30. E.

PARMENIDES, a Grecian philosopher of the Eleatic school, about the beginning of the 5th century B.C. He taught that there was but One Being; that it was known by reason alone, through faith; that through the senses, the knowledge of appearances alone was obtained; that truth and opinion were altogether distinct. He was a man of wealth, and so was not exposed to the temptations which made philosophy contemptible in the hands of the sophists. He once visited Athens; and we have only fragments of his writings.

PARMENIO, a general of some fame under Philip of Macedonia and Alexander the Great. After a career of unblemished military fame, he was put to death by Alexander's orders, on the ground of alleged confessions of conspiracy, wrung by torture from his son, who was also killed. They fell in 330 B.C.

PARMESAN, s. is a name given to a kind of cheese, much esteemed among the Italians, and made at Parma, from whence it is sent to various parts of Europe. It is said to be made of skimmed milk.

PARNA'SSUS, now called PARNASSO, a famous mountain of Turkey in Europe, in Livadia, near the ruins of Delphi. It has two summits, one of which was formerly consecrated to Apollo and the Muses, and the other to Bacchus. It is the highest in Greece, and from the top there is a prospect as far as Corinth. The Turks call it Licoura.

PARNELL, THOMAS, one of the standard poets of England. He was a clergyman in Ireland, and was intimate with the brilliant circle of wits of the reign of Queen Anne. His Hermits is a good specimen of his style and manner of thought. He died in 1717, aged 38 years.

PARO'CHIAL, (parokhial) a. [parochialis, from parochia, Lat.] belonging to a parish.

PA'RODY, s. [parodie, Fr. from para and ode, Gr.] a kind of writing, wherein the words of an author are applied to another subject; generally applied to the turning something serious into burlesque; travesty.

To PA'RODY, v. a. [parodier, Fr.] to apply the words of an author to a different subject, generally in order to cause pleasure.

PAROE'MIA, s. [para and oime, Gr.] a proverb. In Rhetoric, a proverbial manner of speaking.

PAROLE, s. [Fr.] a word given by way of assurance; a promise given by a prisoner not to go away.

PARONOMA'SIA, s. [para and onoma, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure wherein words alike in sound, but of a different sense, are used to give a peculiar point to a sentence.

PARONYCHIA, (paronychia) s. [Gr.] in Surgery, a swelling under the root of the nail of a finger; a whitlow; a felon.

PARONYMOUS, a. [para and onoma, Gr.] resembling another word.

PAROQUET, s. [parroquet or perroquet, Fr.] in Ornithology, a small kind of parrot.

PAROTID, a. [para and otia, Gr.] in Anatomy, the salivary gland, so named because near the ears.

PAROTIS, a. a tumour in the parotid glands.

PAROTYSM, s. [para and oxis, Gr.] a severe fit of a disease, in which it grows more violent and dangerous.

PARR, DR. SAMUEL, a celebrated scholar of the end of the last century, and beginning of the present. He was educated at Harrow, and studied at Cambridge. He made several attempts at maintaining a school, with various success, till he was at last made head master of Colchester grammar school, and afterwards of that at Norwich. Subsequently, we find him living on his benefices in the church, and not altogether forgotten by his patrons. He was famous for his immense erudition, but he has left no worthy monument of it. He wasted his powers in the paltry strife of Whig against Tory, and his lordly and overbearing nature prevented his reaping the only reward he could have received for his toils,—a bishopric. In conversation he was great, but terribly exacting. And there seems to have been little skill in him to grasp principles, or to apply them. His works are mere pamphlets and letters. He died in 1825, aged 79 years.

PARRHASIUS, an Ephesian or Athenian painter of ancient Greece, whose skill and taste are not highly rated in the popular tale of his contest with Zenxis, in which the curtain he had depicted deceived his rival; and whose vanity, according to the tale of his gold crown and sceptre, was as little refined as his art. He flourished in the 5th century B. C.

PARRICIDE, s. [Fr. from pater and caedo, Lat.] the murder, or the murderer, of a father. Figuratively, one who invades his country, or one whom he ought particularly to reverence.

PARRICIDAL, PARRICIDIOUS, a. relating to, or committing, parricide.

PARRROT, s. [perroquet, Fr.] in Ornithology, a numerous tribe of birds, many species of which are very beautiful, and some of which are commonly kept as pets, being easily taught to speak many words, and possessing great shrewdness, though not in general pleasant companions.

To PARRY, v. n. [parer, Fr.] to put by thrusts in fencing; to fence.

To PARSE, v. a. [pars, Lat.] in Grammar, to resolve a sentence into its different parts, and to show their relations, &c., with the signs, &c. of them.

PARSIMONIOUS, a. frugal; niggardly; stingy; covetous.

PARSIMONIOUSLY, ad. in a frugal, sparing, or covetous manner.

PARSIMONIOUSNESS, s. a disposition of sparing or saving.

PARSIMONY, s. [parsimonia, from parvo, Lat.] frugality; stinginess; covetousness.

PARSLEY, s. [persil, Brit. persil, Fr.] in Botany and Cookery, a common garden herb, principally used with us in sauces, but supposed to be possessed of diuretic powers in a considerable degree.

PARSLEYPIERT, s. in Botany, a plant with trailing leafy stems, jagged leaves divided into three lobes, and small greenish white blossoms; found in corn-fields and dry gravelly soils in abundance. It flowers in May.

PARSNIP, PARSNER, s. in Gardening, a profitable kind of root, resembling the carrot, but of a light yellow colour; used as a vegetable.

PARSON, s. [persona, Lat.] a clergyman of the Established Church; a parish priest.

PARSONAGE, s. the dwelling-house of a parish priest.

PART, s. [pars, Lat.] something taken from and less than a whole; a portion; a number; a share or concern; a side or party. In the plural, qualities, powers, or faculties; regions; districts. Applied to the mind, accomplishments.

PART, ad. partly; in some measure.

To PART, v. a. [partior, Lat.] to divide; to separate; to keep asunder.—v. n. to quit each other; to take leave of; to have share; to go away.

PARTABLE, a. capable of having its parts separated.

PARTAGE, s. [Fr.] division; the act of sharing.

To PARTAKE, v. n. preter. I partook, past part. partaken. to share; to have something of the property, nature, claim, or right; to be admitted to; not to be excluded; to combine, or enter into a design.

PARTAKER, s. a sharer in any thing; an accomplice, associate.

PARTER, s. one that separates or divides.

PARTE'RRÉ, s. [Fr.] a level division of a garden, generally furnished with flowers, &c.

PARTHENON, the name of the splendid temple of Pallas Athens, which was in the Acropolis of Athens; from which great part of the marbles in the Elgin saloon of the British Museum were taken. Its despoiled ruins yet remain; and attest the reports of its former magnitude and beauty.

PARTHIA, in Ancient Geography, the name of a rugged mountain district on the N. of Media in Asia. It abounded in magnificent and fertile valleys, and the mountains were covered with forests. Hecatompylos was its chief city. It is part of the modern Khorassan.

PARTIAL, (partial) a. [Fr. from pars, Lat.] inclined to favour one side more than another.

PARTIALITY, (partialité) s. [partialité, Fr.] the act of favouring one party more than another.

To PARTIALIZE, (partialiser) v. a. [partialiser, Fr.] to make a person favour one side more than another.

PARTIALLY, (partialité) ad. with favour or dislike to one more than another.

PARTIALITY, s. divisibility; separability.

PARTIBLE, a. capable of separability; divisible.

PARTICIPABLE, a. such as may be shared among several.

PARTICIPANT, a. [Fr. from pars and copio, Lat.] sharing; having a share or part.

To PARTICIPATE, v. n. to enjoy in common with others; to have a part of more things than one; to receive part or share.

PARTICIPATION, s. [Fr.] the state of sharing or enjoying something in common; distribution or division into shares.

PARTICIPIAL, a. in Grammar, having the nature of a participle.

PARTICIPIALLY, ad. in the sense or manner of a participle.

PARTICIPLE, s. [participium, Lat.] in Grammar, a word by which the notion of a verb is expressed in a way that admits of its application as a substantive, or adjective. It does not contain an assertion; but it takes an object after it.

PARTICLE, s. [particule, Fr. from pars, Lat.] any small part or portion of a greater substance. In Grammar, the general name of the smaller relational words.

PARTICULAR, a. [particulier, Fr.] single, or relating to a single person; any thing peculiar to, or which distinguishes, a person or thing.

PARTICULAR, s. a single instance or point; an individual or single person; a minute detail of things enumerated distinctly; distinct recital.

PARTICULARITY, s. [particularité, Fr.] the quality which distinguishes a person or thing from others, sometimes including the idea of affectionation; a distinct notice of particular circumstances.

To PARTICULARIZE, v. n. [particulariser, Fr.] to mention distinctly or minutely.

PARTICULARLY, ad. distinctly; singly; above all others; in an extraordinary manner or degree.

PARTING, s. in Chemistry, the operation of separating gold from silver by means of nitrous acid and other mediums.

PARTISAN, PARTIZAN, s. [pertuisan, Fr.] a kind of pike or halberd; one who belongs to a faction; a commander of a party detached from the main body upon some sudden excursion; a commander's leading staff.

PARTITION, s. [partio, Lat.] the act of dividing; the state of being divided; separation; division; distinction; a part divided from the rest; that by which different parts or chambers are separated; the place or part where separation is made.

TO PARTITION, v. a. to divide into distinct parts.

PARTLET, s. a name given to a hen; the original significance being a ruff, or band, or covering for the neck.

PARTLY, ad. in part; in some measure or degree.

PARTNER, s. one that partakes or enjoys any thing in common with another; one who is joined in trade with another; one who dances with another.

PARTNERSHIP, s. joint interest or property; the union of persons in the same trade. In Arithmetic, an application of the Rule of Proportion to the determination of the shares of profits due to the several partners in any trading undertaking.

PARTOOK, the preterite of TO PARTAKE.

PARTRIDGE, s. [pertris, Brit.] in Ornithology and the Game Laws, a small wild, gallinaceous bird, a native of these islands, which is one of the favoured few of our wild animals, which may neither be kept nor killed (save by way of theft and crime) by any one who has not at least enough money to spare to buy a certificate. They eat young corn, and do other damage to farmers, which young lordlings attribute to the wireworm.

PARTURIENT, a. [parturio, Lat.] ready or about to bring forth.

PARTURITION, s. the state of being about to bring forth.

PARTY, s. [partis, Fr.] a number of persons united in one common design; one of two adversaries; an accomplice, or one concerned in an affair; a cause, or side; a political combination; a particular person. In War, a detachment of soldiers.

PARTY-COLOURED, a. having different colours.

PARTY-JURY, s. a jury consisting of half foreigners and half natives.

PARTY-MAN, s. a factious person, or abettor of a party.

PARTY-WALL, s. a wall that separates one house from another.

PARVIS, s. [Fr.] a church or church-porch, applied to the meetings in the inns of court; and also to that disputation in Oxford, called Disputatio in parvis.

PAS, (pas) s. [Fr.] precedence; right of going foremost.

PAS DE CALAIS, a. a department of France, lying on the Straits of Dover, (of which it bears the French name), and bounded by the departments of Nord and Somme. It is about 80 miles long, and 40 wide. The coast is cliffy, but there are no particular elevations inland. Its chief rivers are the Eca and the Scarpe. Coal (in small quantities) and limestone are its chief productions; but it furnishes admirable pasture land, and yields abundance of corn, &c. It is also quite a manufacturing district, and linen and woollen goods, sugar, &c. &c., are made in great quantities. Arras is its capital. Pop. about 700,000.

PASCAL, BLAISE, one of the most eminent of the literary men of France, for the purity and elegance of his style, for the originality of his genius, for the delicacy and keenness of his wit, and for the rigidly logical character of his productions. When a boy, he caught a hint respecting geometrical demonstrations at his father's table, and he worked out proposition after proposition, in the attic, and had succeeded in proving that which stands 32nd in Euclid, before his amusement was discovered. Various treatises, some on pure and some on applied mathematics, with some detailing the result of his experiments with the barometer, in which he triumphantly completed Torricelli's demonstration of the phenomena it displays, were produced before he had well entered on manhood. A very remarkable deliverance from expected and imminent death then decided him on devoting his time and thoughts to religion. He joined, but not by a profession, the Portroyalists, and soon found labour for his pen and for his heart in the defence of that little band of splendidly inconsistent men. His Provincial Letters utterly routed the Jesuits; but nothing could give extensive vitality to Jansenism. Pascal, worn out by austerities, at length died, in 1662, aged 39 years. After his death, his friends collected and published, without much regard to order, however, the fragments he had written, purposely in preparation for a great work in defence of Christianity. This was his famous Thoughts, which have given a wider notoriety to his deep, intelligent, yet most inconsequential piety, than ever the wit and logic of the Provincials could. It is interesting to have in more than one of his "thoughts," clear proof of his acquaintance with some of the immortal works of our Lord Bacon.

PASCHAL, (pâschal) a. [pascha, Lat.] relating to the Passover, or Easter.

PASH, s. [paz, Span.] a slap or blow on the face.

TO PASH, v. a. [pierssen, Belg.] to strike; to crush.

PASQUE-FLOWER, s. in Botany, the passion-flower. Also a kind of anemone.

PASQUIL, PA'SQUIN, PA'SQUINADE, s. a mutilated statue at Rome, in a corner of the palace of Ursini. It takes its name from a cobbler of that city called Pasquin, famous for his sneers and gibes on all the people that went through that street. After his death, as they were digging up the pavement before his shop, they found in the earth the statue of an ancient gladiator, well cut, but maimed and half spoiled. This they set up in the place where it was found, and by common consent named it Pasquin. Since that time all satires are attributed to that figure, and are either put into his mouth, or pasted upon it; and these are addressed by Pasquin to Marforio, another statue at Rome. When Marforio is attacked, Pasquin comes to his assistance; and Marforio assists him in his turn.

TO PASS, v. n. [passer, Fr.] to move from one place to another; to make way through. To make a transition from one thing to another; used with from. To vanish; to be lost; to be enacted; to exist; to be effected; to be supremely excellent; to be in a tolerable state. To be spent, or intervene, applied to time. To become current, applied to money. In Fencing, to thrust or make a push. In Gaming, to refuse playing or taking the lead. To transgress, or go beyond any limits. To pass away, to disappear; to depart for ever.—v. a. to go beyond; to go through; to spend; to live through; to carry hastily; to transfer to another proprietor; to utter ceremoniously; to put an end to; to surpass; to excel; to omit, or neglect; to enact a law; to impose fraudulently; to send from one place to another. To pass away, to spend, to waste. To pass by, to decline punishing; to excuse, or forgive. To pass over, to neglect, or disregard.

PASS, s. in War, a narrow entrance or defile. A passage or road; a permission to go or come any where; an order by which vagrants are sent to their proper parish. In Fencing, a push or thrust.

PASSABLE, a. [passible, Fr.] that may be passed or travelled; capable of being admitted; indifferent, though not perfect.

PASSADO, s. [Ital.] a push or thrust.

PASSAGE, s. [passage, Fr.] the act or state of a person travelling; a road; liberty of going in or coming out; entrance or admission to the mind; an occurrence; an unsettled state; an incident; management; conduct; a single sentence or paragraph in a book.

PASSAU, a. an ancient, handsome, and celebrated city of Bavaria, in Germany. The houses are well built, and the cathedral is thought to be the finest in all Germany. It is divided into four parts, namely, the town of Passau, Instadt, Iltzstadt, and the quarter wherein the bishop's palace is seated. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Inn and Iltz, and has a considerable trade. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 48. 28. N. Long. 13. 37. E.

PASSENGER, s. a person who is travelling in any vehicle, either by land or water.

PASSER, s. one that is upon the road, or passes by another.

PASSIBILITY, s. [passibilité, Fr.] the quality of receiving impressions from external agents.

PASSIBLE, a. [passibilis, from pator, Lat.] susceptible of impressions from external agents.

PASSIBLENESS, s. the quality of receiving impressions from external agents.

PASSING, part. a. supreme, or surpassing others. Exceeding.

PASSINGBELL, s. the bell which rings on the death of a person. It was rung while any one was dying, to invite prayer for the soul.

PASSION, (the ssi, in this word and its derivatives and compounds, is pron. like sh; as, pâshôn, pâshônate, &c.) s. [passio, Lat.] an effect caused by an external agent; anger, in a popular and vulgar sense; zeal, or ardour; love; eager desire or fondness. In theological and ecclesiastical writings it usually means, the sufferings endured by a martyr, or by our Lord.

PASSIONATE, a. [passionné, Fr.] moved by, or expressive of, passion; easily moved to anger; choleric.

PASSIONATELY, ad. with great affection, commotion of the mind, or anger.

PASSIONATENESS, s. state of being subject to passion; vehemence of mind.

PASSION-FLOWER, s. in Botany, a very elegant kind of climbing plant, with a singular but very beautiful flower. It derives its name from a fancied resemblance of its various parts to the cross, scourge, nails, crown of thorns, &c. associated with our Saviour's passion.

PASSIONS, s. in Metaphysics, those phenomena of mental activity, in which the character of the activity is intensified by the co-operation of mere bodily feeling or appetite, unchecked by the calculations of the intellect or the dictates of reason.

PASSION-WEEK, s. in the Ecclesiastical Calendar, the week immediately preceding Easter, so called because the sufferings and crucifixion of our Saviour are commemorated in that week.

PASSIVE, a. [passif, Fr. passivus, from patior, Lat.] receiving impressions; suffering, opposed to active; unresisting. In Grammar, applied to such verbs as signify the suffering, or receiving the effects of any action.

PASSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to make no resistance.

PASSIVENESS, Passivity, s. the quality of receiving impressions from external agents; passibility, or suffering without resistance.

PASSOVER, s. in the Old Testament, a feast instituted among the Jews in commemoration of the slaughter of the first-born of the Egyptians, when the angel passed over the houses of the Israelites. The sacrifice killed at the feast of the passover.

PASSPORT, s. [passport, Fr.] a permission to pass.

PAST, part. preter. of pass; something which has been; spent or expired.

PAST, prep. beyond, applied to time or place; out of the reach of, applied to state. Above, applied to measure.

PASTE, s. [paste, Fr.] any thing mixed so as to be moist and viscous; flour and water boiled together, so as to form a cement; an artificial mixture made to represent precious stones.

TO PASTE, v. a. to fasten with paste.

PASTEBBOARD, s. a thick paper, formed either of several sheets pasted together by paper macerated in water and cast in moulds; or of old cordage, as other paper is made of rags.—a. made of pastebord.

PASTER, s. [pasturor, Fr.] the joint next the foot of a horse.

PASTIL, s. [pastille, Fr. from pastillus, Lat.] a crayon for painting; a composition of perfumes.

PASTIME, s. a sport, diversion, or amusement.

PASTOR, PA'sTOUT, s. [pastor, from pasco, Lat.] a shepherd. Figuratively, the minister of a congregation.

PASTORAL, a. rural; resembling shepherds. Figuratively, relating to ministerial labour.

PASTORAL, s. a poem which contains some scene in the country; a bucolic.

PASTRY, s. [pastissarie, Fr.] the art of making pies; pies, or baked paste; the place where pastry is made.

PASTRY-COOK, s. a person whose trade is to make and sell pies, tarts, &c.

PASTURABLE, a. fit for pasturo.

PASTURAGE, s. [Fr.] the business of feeding cattle; lands grazed by cattle; the use of pasture.

PASTURE, s. [Fr. pastura, Lat.] food, or the act of feeding; ground on which grass grows, and cattle are fed.

TO PASTURE, v. a. to place in a pasture.—v. n. to graze on the ground.

PASTY, s. [pasté, Fr.] a pie made of raised crust without a dish.

PAT, a. [pas, Belg.] fit, proper, or exactly suitable, applied either to time or place.

PAT, s. [patte, Fr.] a light quick blow or tap; a small flat piece of butter, &c.

TO PAT, v. a. to strike lightly; to give a slight blow or tap.

PATACHE, s. a small ship.

PATACOON, s. a Spanish coin worth four shillings and eight pence English.

PATAGONIA, a large country of South America, occupying the S. extremity of that continent, and bounded by the republics of La Plata and Chili. As no European nation has made any settlement on this country, but little is known respecting it or its inhabitants. It is a mountainous country, covered with snow great part of the year, and consequently excessively cold. The natives live in a very barbarous manner, and there seem to be several different tribes of them. The gigantic stature of some of them, which was spoken so much of by the old navigators, appears to have been a little exaggerated.

TO PATCH, v. n. [patcher, Dan.] to cover by sewing on a piece; to mend in a clumsy manner; to make up with shreds of different sorts; to lay small spots of black silk on the face.

PATCH, s. [pezzo, Ital.] a piece sewed on to cover a hole; a piece laid in, in Mosaic work, or in work consisting of pieces of different colours; a small piece of black silk formerly worn by ladies on their faces as an ornament; a small particle; a small piece of land; a paltry person, supposed to be a patch in the creation. The last sense is obsolete.

PATCHER, s. one who patches; a botcher.

PATCHWORK, s. work made of different colours.

PATE, s. the head.

PATED, a. headed; used in composition; as, long-pated, or cunning; shallow-pated, or foolish.

PATEFACTION, s. [pateo and facio, Lat.] act or state of opening.

PATEN, s. [patina, Lat.] a plate.

PATENT, s. [patens from pateo, Lat.] a writ by which a person enjoys a right or privilege exclusive of others, in respect of some invention or improvement, in machinery, &c., which he has devised.

PATENT, a. containing a patent, or exclusive privilege; appropriated by letters patent. Letters Patent are the title by which the exclusive privilege maintained by a patent is enjoyed. They were formerly granted for many things beside those which are commonly, now, the subjects of them; and were the ground-work of most injurious and unjust monopolies. The monopoly of Bible printing in England is yet maintained by this means.

PATENTEE, s. the person who has a letter patent.

PATERCULUS, C. VELLEIUS, a Roman historian, who served in the army under Tiberius; and when he was made emperor, became pretor. Most of his history is lost. He died in about 70 A. D., aged about 50 years.

PATER-NOSTER, s. [Lat.] the Lord's Prayer; so called from the two first words of it in the Latin.

PATERNAL, a. [pater, Lat.] having the relation or affection of a father; received by descent from one's father.

PATERNITY, s. [paternité, Fr.] the relation of a father; fatherhood.

PATH, s. [Sax.] a road; track; a passage.

PATHETIC, PATHE'TICAL, a. [pathos, Gr. pathétique, Fr.] affecting the passions; moving.

PATHE'TICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to affect the passions.

PATHE'TICALNESS, s. the quality of affecting the passions.

PATHLESS, a. untrodden. Without tracks or paths.

PATHOGNOMONIC, a. [pathos and gnomon, Gr.] in Medicine, such signs of a disease as are proper and inseparable, designating the real essence or nature of the disease; not symptomatic.

PATHOLOGICAL, a. [pathos and logos, Gr.] relating to the tokens or discoverable effects of a disorder.

PATHOLOGIST, s. one who treats of pathology.

PATHOLOGY, s. in Medicine, that part which treats of the diseases, with their causes, differences, and effects, incident to the human body, scientifically.

PATHOPOEIA, s. [pathos and poieo, Gr.] the rising of a passion. In Rhetoric, a method of moving the mind to anger, hatred, compassion, &c.

PATHOS, s. [Gr.] literally, passion, but used for the energy of a discourse, or its power to move the passions.

PATHWAY, s. a narrow way to be passed on foot.

PATIBULAR, a. [patior, Lat.] tolerable; sufferable.

PATIBULARY, a. [patibulaire, Fr. from patibulum, Lat.] belonging to the gallows.

PATIENCE, (πάθειν) s. [patientia, from patior, Lat.] calmness under injuries or affronts, misery, and tortures; the quality of expecting long without rage of discontent; long-suffering. In Botany, a species of dock.

PATIENT, (pâshent) a. enduring pain, injuries, and affronts calmly.

PATIENT, (pâshent) s. that which receives impressions from external objects; a person under the care of a physician, apothecary, or surgeon.

PATIENTLY, (pâshently) ad. in such a manner as to be calm under reproaches, affronts, pains, distresses, or tortures.

PATINE, s. (patina, Lat.) in Church furniture, the cover of a chalice.

PATMOS, at present called PATINO, an island of the Grecian Archipelago. It is about 18 miles in circumference. To this island, the apostle and evangelist John is said to have been banished by the Roman emperor, and here he is said to have written the Apocalypse; a manuscript of which the inhabitants still carefully preserve. The island is almost a bare rock, with but two small towns or villages. Lat. 37. 30. N. Long. 26. 40. E.

PATNA, a city of Hindustan, capital of Bahar. It is an extensive and populous place, on the S. bank of the Ganges; and is fortified in the Indian manner with a wall and a small citadel. The buildings are high, but the streets are narrow, and far from clean. It is a place of considerable trade, and is supposed to be the ancient Palabothra. It is 250 miles from Calcutta. Pop. about 320,000. Lat. 25. 37. N. Long. 85. 15. E.

PATLY, ad. conveniently; fitly.

PATRIARCH, (pâtriarkh) s. [patriarche, Fr. from pater and arche, Gr.] one who governs by right of paternity; a father of a family. In Ecclesiastical affairs, a bishop superior to archbishops.

PATRIARCHAL, (pâtriarkhal) a. [patriarchal, Fr.] belonging to, or enjoyed by, patriarchs.

PATRIARCHATE, PATRIARCHSHIP, (pâtriarkate, pâtriarkship) s. [patriarchat, Fr.] the office or dignity of patriarch.

PATRIARCHY, (pâtriarky) s. the jurisdiction of a patriarch; patriarchate.

PATRICIAN, (pâtrishian) a. [patrieien, Fr. patricius, Lat.] noble; senatorial; not plebeian.

PATRICIAN, (pâtrishian) s. a nobleman. In Ancient Rome, where it was first used, it was the designation of the members of the families which originally composed that state.

PATRICK, the patron saint of Ireland. Little authentic is known of him, beyond that he was of Scottish origin, and that he was sent to Ireland as an apostle or missionary, of such Christianity as Rome then had. The marvels related of him, are such as were commonly told and believed in the middle ages. He flourished in the 5th century, dying in about 460.

PATRICK, DR. SIMON, an English prelate of the 17th century; one of the high-church party, held in some esteem by his school. His Commentary is his largest and best known work. His Heart's Ease is also not without admirers. But his Parable of the Pilgrim seems to have lived on, by virtue of its being like (but how unlike!) John Bunyan's glorious allegory. He had a fair share of church preferment, and died in 1707, aged 81 years.

PATRIMONIAL, a. possessed by inheritance.

PATRIMONIALLY, ad. by inheritance.

PATRIMONY, s. [patrimonium, Lat. patrimoine, Fr.] an estate possessed by inheritance.

PATRIMONY OF ST. PETER, one of the Papal States, Italy. It borders on Tuscany, and is bounded by the other provinces, of Orvieto, Sabina, Umbria, and the Campagna di Roma. Some of the offshoots of the Apennines cross it; and it is watered by the Marta and other small streams. Its chief towns are Viterbo, Civita Vecchia, Cometo, &c. The first two of which are the name of the delegation, or government, according to the most recent civil arrangements of the Papal Territories. The population may be about 160,000. See VITERBO, &c.

PATRIOT, s. [patria, Lat.] one who makes the good of his country the constant motive of his actions or measures, without selfish views.

PATRIOTISM, s. a constant and disinterested love for one's country.

PATRISTIC, a. [pater, Lat.] in Theology, that branch which unfolds the teaching of the Fathers of the church. It is also used to designate the system of doctrine and government based on their teaching, rather than on the Sacred Scriptures.

To PATROCINATE, v. a. [patrocinor, from patronus, Lat.] to defend, protect, patronize.

PATROCINATION, s. the act of defending, or protecting; the maintaining any one's cause.

PATROL, (pâtrôl) s. [patrouille, Fr.] the act of going the rounds in a garrison or camp to observe what passes, and if the sentries perform their duty; the persons who go the rounds in a garrison or camp; a policeman who comes on duty in the evening.

To PATROL, (pâtrôl) v. n. [patrouiller, Fr.] to go the rounds in a camp or garrison.

PATRON, s. [patronus, from pater, Lat.] one who countenances, supports, or protects, generally applied to one who encourages an author; a guardian saint; an advocate or defender; one who has the gift of an ecclesiastical benefice.

PATRONAGE, s. protection; support; guardianship of saints; donation of a benefice.

PATRONAL, a. guarding; supporting; defending.

PATRONESS, s. a female who defends, protects, encourages, or supports; a female guardian saint; a woman who has the gift of a benefice.

To PATRONISE, (pâtronize) v. a. to encourage, protect, support, countenance.

PATRONYMIC, s. [pater and onoma, Gr.] a name given to a person expressing that of his father; as, Arrides, the son of Atreus, in Greek; and Johnson, &c. in English; O'Connor, in Irish; Mac Donald, in Scotch.

PATTEN, s. the base of a pillar.—[patin, Fr.] a wooden shoe with an iron ring at the bottom, worn under the common shoe by women, to keep them from dirt.

PATTENMAKER, s. one who makes pattens.

To PATTER, v. n. [pâtte, Fr.] to make a noise like the quick steps of many feet.

PATTERN, s. [patron, Fr. patroon, Belg.] an original to be imitated or copied; a specimen or sample; an instance; any thing put out for a model; archetype, plan.

To PATTERN, v. a. [patroner, Fr.] to copy; to make an imitation of something; to serve as an example to be followed.

PAU, the capital of the department of Basses Pyrénées, France. It stands amongst the mountains, and has a fine castle, where they show with much reverence the shell (of turtle or tortoise) in which the Great Henry was rocked. It is generally a good-looking place, and has a good trade, with some profitable manufactures. It is about 450 miles from Paris. Pop. about 12,500.

PAUCILOQUY, s. [paucus and loquor, Lat.] little and sparing speech.

PAUCITY, s. [paucitas, Lat.] fewness; smallness of number or quantity.

To PAVE, v. a. [pavio, Lat. paver, Fr.] to lay or floor with brick or stone. Figuratively, to make way for, or make a passage easy.

PAVEMENT, s. a stone floor; stones or bricks laid for a floor.

PAVER, PAVIER, s. one who lays a road, &c. with stones.

PAVIA, an ancient and celebrated town of Lombardy, in Austrian Italy, with a celebrated university. It is situated in a beautiful plain, on the river Tesino, and has some fine churches. The university has some excellent apparatus, such as museums, library, &c. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 45. 11. N. Long. 9. 10. E.

PAVLION, [pavillon, Fr.] a tent; a turret; a detached building.

To PAVLION, v. a. to furnish with tents; to be sheltered by a tent.

PAUL, (whose original name was SAUL) the great apostle of the Gentiles, and the most eminent for ability and for evangelic labour amongst the apostles. He was born at Tarsus, and so was a Roman citizen, and was a Hebrew of the Hebrews. He was taught by Gamaliel, the celebrated rabbi, at Jerusalem, and first appears in history as taking part in the martyrdom of Stephen. His zeal led him to use persecution as the shortest and surest method of opposing the new way, which, by the preaching of the apostles, was gaining converts every where. But, on the road to Damascus, whither he was bound on this fanatic errand, a bright vision of Jesus himself appeared to him, and he entered that city to become a disciple of the faith he would fain have destroyed. We have full information only respecting part of his subsequent career, with scattered and incidental notices of the rest. And it appears that in Asia Minor, Arabia, Greece, and other parts, he for many years, and in various journeys, fully preached the gospel of Christ. Being at length at Jerusalem, a tumult arose on his being found in the temple, and he was rescued from the mob by the Roman guard, who held him prisoner. At one hearing before the prefect he appealed to the emperor, and after some delay he was sent to Rome. There he was a prisoner, but apparently on parole, for two years; and being then heard and dismissed, he made another journey through the fields of his former labours, and returned to Rome, to be imprisoned again, and, finally, martyred, in about 65. His letters to various churches and friends, which form no inconsiderable portion of the New Testament, afford us the most affecting and instructive picture of the man himself; whilst they are a treasure of inspired wisdom, such as the world has in no other similar productions. Written at various times, to various parties, with different objects, they present innumerable aspects of the same great and vital truths, which he preached, and lived and died for. For profundity of thought, power of reasoning, and extent and depth of interest, his Epistle to the Romans is unequalled by any human composition. For remarks on his writings, see their titles in this work. The Letter to the Hebrews, generally ascribed to him, seems not to have been written by him. For proofs of their genuineness, compare them with each other, and with the narrative in the Acts of the Apostles.

PAUL OF SAMOSATA, bishop of Antioch in the 3rd century. He was an ostentatious, vain, and arrogant man, and caused great disturbance in his time by his attempts to solve the problem of the Divine nature, and of the relation of Christ to it. He appears to have taught that Jesus was a mere man, and that the Word of God descended into him, and enabled him to teach, and to work miracles. But he so disguised his doctrines by ambiguous forms of speech, that though councils were repeatedly held, he escaped conviction till one Malchion, a rhetorician, drew him from his concealment, when he was convicted and deposed. He was then protected by Zenobia of Palmyra. A sect adopted his opinions, and were called Paulians, or Paulianists.

PAUL, the name borne by five popes of Rome: the third of whom summoned the famous council of Trent in 1545; the fourth was a zealous reformer of abuses in the papacy, and the excommunicator of our Queen Elizabeth, which was the real cause of the final separation of this country from the Roman see, and died in 1559; and the fifth smothered the contest between the Dominicans and the Jesuits, just when the world hoped the latter would have received a mortal blow; and was, in other respects, just such a pope as a man of cultivated and elegant mind, with sufficient notions of his own spiritual power, could be. He died in 1621.

PAULICIAN, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect which held partly Manichean and partly Gnostic opinions, in the 9th century.

PAULUS, JULIUS, a celebrated Roman jurist of the 3rd century. He was raised to the dignity of imperial counsellor by Alexander Severus; and was banished by Heliogabalus. Only some fragments of his works remain.

PAUNCH, s. [panse, Fr. panca, Span. pantex, Lat.] the belly, or abdominal region.

TO PAUNCH, v. a. to rip up the belly, or take out the entrails.

PAVO, the Peacock; in Astronomy, a constellation of the southern hemisphere.

PAUPER, s. [Fr.] in Law, a poor man; one who is in receipt of parish allowance, under the Poor Laws.

PAUPERISM, s. the condition of those who receive relief in money, food, and shelter, according to the Poor Laws.

PAUSANIAS, the son of Cleombrotus, king of Sparta, who was regent during the lawful king's minority. He entered into treacherous correspondence with Persia; and being discovered, took refuge in the temple of Pallas, where he was blocked up by order of the Ephors, and died 474 B.C.

PAUSANIAS, a Greek topographer of the 2nd century A.D. He described every remarkable place which he visited in Greece, in a book, still extant, called the Description of Greece, which is very valuable to students of early history.

PAUSE, (pauses) s. [Fr. from pau, Gr.] a stop or cessation from action; a break, or separation between the words of a discourse; a stop or intermission in music.

TO PAUSE, (pauses) v. n. to stop or cease for a time; to deliberate; to be intermitted.

PAUSER, s. he who pauses; he who deliberates.

PAUW, CORNELIUS DE, a Dutch author of the last century, who was canon of Xanten in Germany. His works are chiefly inquiries into the true character of some ancient and modern nations, the Greeks, Egyptians, Americans, and Chinese; in which he mercilessly disposes of most cherished illusions, and treats his subjects with coldest, most paradoxical common sense. The French Revolution, which gave his nephew, the famed Anacharsis Clootz, the opportunity of realizing these paradoxes, as representative of the human race, destroyed his tranquillity, and put an end to his inquiries. He died in 1799, aged 60 years.

PAW, s. [paaw, Brit.] the fore-foot of a beast.

TO PAW, v. n. to draw the fore-foot along the ground.—v. a. to stroke with the fore-foot; to handle roughly; to fawn or flatter.

PAWED, a. having paws; broadfooted.

PAWN, s. [paud, Belg. pan, Fr.] pledge given as security for money, &c. borrowed; the state of being pledged; a common man, in chess.

TO PAWN, v. a. to give any thing as a security for money, &c. lent.

PAWNBROKER, s. one who lends money at interest upon goods deposited as security.

TO PAY, v. a. [payer, Fr.] to discharge a debt; to recompense; to give the worth in money for any thing bought; to atone; to make amends by suffering; to beat.

PAY, s. wages; money for service.

PAYABLE, a. [payable, Fr.] due, or to be paid; possible to be paid.

PAY/DAY, s. a day on which debts are discharged or wages paid.

PAYER, s. he that pays.

PAY/ING, s. among seamen, is the laying a ship over with a coat of hot pitch; and when this is done with canvass, it is called parcelling. Also, when she is soiled, and the soil burnt off, a new coat of tallow and soap, and one of train oil, rosin, and brimstone, boiled together, is put on her; that is also called paying of a ship.

PAY/MASTER, s. one who pays; one from whom wages or money for goods sold are received.

PAY/MENT, s. the act of discharging a debt or promise; reward; chastisement.

PEA, (pee) s. [pisum, Lat.] in Botany and Horticulture, a papilionaceous plant, the unripe seeds of which are much esteemed as a delicate vegetable. There are many varieties, known to all housekeepers.

PEACE, (the ea in this word and its derivatives and compounds is pron. like oe: as peace, &c.) s. [paix, Fr. par, Lat.] a state wherein nations are in friendship with each other; a respite from war; rest from any commotion or disturbance; reconciliation; silence.

PEACE, interj. a word commanding silence.

PEACEABLE, a. free from war, tumult, or disturbance; not inclined to be quarrelsome or turbulent.

PEACEABLENESS, s. the quality of being quiet, or disposed to peace.

PEACEABLY, ad. without war, tumult, or disturbance.

PEACEFUL, a. quiet; inclined to peace; mild; undisturbed.

PEACEFULLY, ad. quietly; mildly; gently.

PEACEFULNESS, s. quiet; freedom from noise or disturbance.

PEACEMAKER, s. one who reconciles differences.

PEACE-OFFERING, s. among the Jews, a sacrifice offered for atonement and reconciliation for a crime or offence.

PEACH, (peech) s. [pesche, Fr.] in Horticulture, a roundish fleshy fruit, of a very delicious flavour, covered with a downy coat, enclosing a rough stone.

TO PEACH, (peech) v. n. [corrupted from impeach,] to accuse a person of a crime; to betray one's accomplices.

PEACHICK, s. the chick of a peacock.

PEACOCK, (peacock) s. in Ornithology, a gallinaceous bird, native to India, very generally known in England, and remarkable for the richness of the plumage of the upper part of its body, and especially for the splendour of the long feathers which grow on the lower part of the back, which it has the power of erecting, and which then appears covered with iridescent purple eyes. It was fabled in Greece that Hera adorned her favourite bird thus, when Hermes slew Argus of the hundred eyes, whom she had employed as a spy on Zeus.

PE/AHEN, (pechen) s. the female of the peacock.

PEAK, (peek) s. [peac, Sax. pique, Fr.] the top of a hill or eminence; any thing having a sharp end or point; the rising or projecting part of a head-dress or cap.

To PEAK, v. n. to look sickly, meagre, mean; to sneak.

The PEAK, is the name of one of the loftiest points of the Derbyshire hills, which is nearly 2000 feet in height.

PEAL, (peel) s. a succession of loud sounds, as of cannon, bells, thunder, &c.

To PEAL, v. a. to ring a peal; to stir with agitation.—v. n. to play solemnly and loud.

PEAR, (pair) s. in Horticulture, a fleshy fruit, larger and more pointed towards the foot-stalk than the apple. There are a great many varieties, some of which are particularly delicious, whilst others can be kept for a long time.

PEARL, (péril) s. [perle, Fr. perla, Span.] a roundish concretion of shelly matter found attached to the inside of the shell or in the very body of the animal of the pearl-oyster, the common oyster, the muscle, &c. It arises from some disease in the animal, and is evidently an irregular deposition of the earths of which the shell is formed. It is esteemed as an ornament, and by jewellers is mounted and set in various ways; the clearest in hue, and the most regular in form, being the most valuable of the different sizes. Mother of Pearl is the nacreous or iridescent lining of some shells. In Medicine, a round speck or film in the eye.

PEARL-ASH, s. in Chemistry and the useful Arts, the carbonate of potassa, prepared by lixiviating the ashes of wood and other vegetable matter, and evaporating the solution. It is also called Folash.

PEARLEAF, s. in Botany, a name for the several species of winter-green.

PEARLED, (périled) a. ornamented or set with pearls.

PEARL-OYSTER, s. in Natural History, a two-valved shell-fish, found in the Indian Ocean, which yields the finest and best pearls. They are obtained by divers who gather them from the rocks, to which they adhere. This trade is a very dangerous one, not only from the natural effects of remaining under water for some time, but also because of the sharks, which abound in those seas.

PEARL-WHITE, s. in Chemistry, an oxyde of bismuth, which is used as a cosmetic.

PEARLWORT, s. in Botany, the sagina of Linnæus; of which two are British species, viz. the great stitchwort, and moss-like plink.

PEARLY, (pérly) a. abounding with or containing pearls; resembling pearls.

PEARMAIN, s. in Horticulture, a kind of apple.

PEARSON, DR. JOHN, an English prelate of the 17th century; who was one of those taken into favour at the Restoration; and who is well known by his luminous work, entitled An Exposition of the Creed, which has become a classic in Anglican Theology. He wrote some other less known works; and died in 1686, aged 73 years.

PEATREE, s. the tree that bears peats.

PEASANT, (peasant) s. [peasant, Fr.] one employed in agricultural labour.

PEASANTRY, s. rustics or country people; peasants.

PEASCOD, (peiskod) PEASHELL, (peishell) s. the shell in which peas grow.

PEASE, (peece) s. when mentioned as a single body or grain we use pea, whose plural is peas; but used collectively for food, we use pease; [piea, Sax.] food of peas.

PIET, (peet) s. a kind of turf used for firing. It originated in the decay of vegetable matter, through long maceration in water. It is found in greatest abundance in the bogs of Ireland, and in the mosses, fens, and marshes of England, and is cut in the summer and dried for fuel; it also makes an excellent manure after it is burnt.

PEBBLE, PEBBLESTONE, s. a small stone.

PEBBLE-CRYSTAL, s. a kind of crystal of an irregular shape, in form of nodules.

PEBBLED, a. sprinkled or abounding with pebbles.

PEBBLY, a. full of pebbles.

PECCABILITY, s. the state of being subject to sin.

PECCABLE, a. [pecco, Lat.] subject to sin.

PECCADILLO, s. [Span. peccadillo, Fr.] a slight fault, crime, or venial offence.

PECCANCY, s. [peccans, Lat.] bad quality

PECCANT, a. [peccans, Lat.] guilty; criminal. In Medicine, injurious to health. In Law, wrong, or contrary to form.

PECCARY, s. in Natural History, a kind of wild pig, with very long and curved tusks.

PECK, s. the fourth part of a bushel.

To PECK, v. a. [bequer, Fr.] to strike with the beak; to pick up with the beak; to strike with any pointed instrument. To quarrel and endeavour to expose, used with at.

PECK, FRANCIS, a learned English antiquary, of the first part of the last century. He was a church clergyman, and was preferred to a prebendal stall in Lincoln cathedral. His writings are numerous, and amongst them are Lives of Cromwell and Milton. His greatest work, Monasticon Anglicanum, he did not live to print. He died in 1743, aged 51 years.

PECKER, s. one that pecks. In Natural History, a kind of bird, called likewise a wood-pecker.

PECKLED, a. [corrupted from speckled] spotted; varied with spots.

PECTINAL, a. [pecten, Lat.] like a comb.

PECTINATED, a. inserted into one another as combs are by their teeth.

PECTINATION, s. the state of being pectinated.

PECTORAL, a. [pectoralis, from pectus, Lat.] belonging to the breast.

PECTORAL, s. a breastplate.

PECULATE, PECULATION, s. [peculor, Lat.] robbery of the public money.

PECULATOR, s. [Lat.] a robber of the public.

PECULIAR, a. [peculiaris, Lat.] belonging to one, exclusive of others; particular.

PECULIAR, s. exclusive property; a thing exempted from ordinary jurisdiction. In the Canon Law, it signifies a particular parish or church that has jurisdiction within itself for granting probates of wills and administrations, exempt from the ordinary or bishop's courts.

PECULIARITY, s. the quality which distinguishes one person or thing from another; particularity.

PECULIARLY, ad. in a manner not common to others; particularly; singly.

PECUNIARY, a. [pecunia, Lat.] relating to, or consisting of, money.

PED, (see PAD), s. a small packsaddle, much less than a pannel; a hamper; a basket.

PEDAGOGICAL, a. [pais and ago, Gr.] suited or belonging to a schoolmaster.

PEDAGOGUE, (pédagog) s. one that teaches boys; a pedant; a schoolmaster.

To PEDAGOGUE, (pédagog) v. a. to instruct in an overbearing manner.

PEDAGOGY, (pédagogie) s. instruction; mastership; discipline.

PEDAL, a. [pes, Lat.] belonging to a foot.

PEDALS, s. [pedales, from pes, Lat.] the large pipes of an organ, so called, because played on by the foot.

PEDANEUS, a. [pes, Lat.] going on foot.

PEDANT, s. [Fr.] a schoolmaster; a vain and ostentatious smatterer of learning.

PEDANTIC, PEDANTICAL, a. [pedantesque, Fr.] vainly ostentatious of learning.

PEDANTICALLY, ad. with awkward and vain ostentation of learning.

PEDANTRY, s. [pedanterie, Fr.] vain and awkward ostentation of learning.

To PEDDLE, v. n. (commonly written piddle), to be busy about trifles.

PEDDLING, a. trifling; unimportant.

PEDERERO, s. [pedrero, Span. from pedra] anciently, a small cannon mounted on a swivel. It is frequently written patrero.

PEDestal, s. [piestal, Fr.] the lower member of a pillar or column; basis of a statue.

PEDESTRIOUS, a. [pedestus, from pes, Lat.] not winged; going on foot.

PEDICLE, s. [pedicula, Fr. from pes, Lat.] the footstalk; that by which a leaf or fruit is fixed to a tree.

PEDICULAR, a. [pediculus, Lat.] having the phthiriasis.

PEDIGREE, s. [pire and dégré, Fr.] a table of genealogy or lineage; account of descent.

PELILUVIUM, s. [pes and lavo, Lat.] a bath for the feet.

PE'DIMENT, s. [pedimentum, from pes, Lat.] in Architecture, an ornament used to crown an ordonnance, finish a frontispiece, and placed over porticoes, gates, doors, windows, &c., sometimes triangular, and sometimes circular.

PE'DLAR, s. a petty dealer; one who travels the country with small commodities for sale.

PE'DLARY, s. wares sold by pedlars.

PE'DOBAPTISM, s. [pais and baptizo, Gr.] in Polemics, infant baptism. It is properly said pedo-baptism.

PE'DOBAPTIST, s. one that holds or practises infant baptism.

PE'DOMETER, s. [pes, Lat. and metron, Gr.] a small instrument, formed like a Geneva watch, to be carried in the waist-coat pocket, by means of which the wearer knows, with tolerable accuracy, the length of a walk or ride. The construction is very simple, and the wheels are moved by a weight which oscillates with the movement of the body.

PEE'BLES, capital of the county of its own name, Scotland. It lies on the N. side of the river Tweed, over which it has a fine bridge. The ruins of a cathedral are also to be seen here. It is 22 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1898.

PEE'BLESSHIRE, or TWEEDDALE, a county of Scotland, bounded by Edinburghshire, Selkirkshire, Dumfriesshire, and Lanarkshire. It is 28 miles long, and above 18 broad. In this county there is not much arable land. Its hills (among which are the rugged and heathy mountains of Tweedsuir, in the S. of the county) abound with salubrious springs, and feed numbers of sheep and cattle. The principal rivers are the Tweed, Lyne, and Yarrow. It yields some valuable kinds of slate and building-stone. Pop. 10,499. It sends 1 representative to the imperial parliament.

TO PEEL, v. a. [pellis, Lat.] to take off the peel or skin from fruit; to flay.—[piller, Fr.] to rob or plunder. In this sense it should be wrote pill.

PEEL, s. [pellis, Lat.] the skin or thin rind.—[paelle, Fr.] an instrument used by bakers to draw their bread, or put it into the oven.

PEELE, GEORGE, an English dramatist and poet of the time of Elizabeth. He studied at Oxford, and joined with Shakspeare, Jonson, and others, in writing for the stage. His writings show him to have been somewhat lacking in that vision and faculty divine which makes the poet, and the lack of which is not to be compensated by smoothness of language and faultlessness of rhythm and rhyme. He died about the end of the 16th century.

TO PEEP, v. n. to make the first appearance; to look through a crevice or hole slyly, so as not to be perceived; to look closely and curiously.

PEEP, s. the first appearance; a sly look.

PEE'PHOLE, PEE'PINGHOLE, s. a hole through which a person may see without being seen.

PEER, s. [pair, Fr.] an equal; a companion; a fellow; a nobleman.

TO PEER, v. n. [contracted from appear] to come just in sight; to look narrowly into.

PEE'RAGE, s. [pairie, Fr.] the dignity of a nobleman or peer; the body of peers.

PEE'RESS, s. the wife of a peer, or a woman who has a peerage in her own right.

PEE'RLESS, a. without an equal.

PEE'RLESSNESS, s. matchlessness.

PEE'VISH, a. easily offended, or apt to be made angry; offended at trifles.

PEE'VISHLY, ad. in such a manner as to be easily made angry.

PEE'VISHNESS, s. the quality of being easily made angry or uneasy.

PEG, s. [pegge, Teut.] a piece of wood driven into a hole instead of a nail; the pins of a musical instrument by which its strings are strained. To take a peg lower, to depress or sink.

TO PEG, v. a. to fasten with a pointed piece of wood.

PEGASUS, in Astronomy, the name of a constellation in the northern hemisphere, figured in the form of a flying horse.

PE'GU, a once considerable kingdom of Asia, lying to the S. E. of Bengal. It is now included in the Burmese Empire. There is a town of the same name, 70 miles inland, above 20 miles in circumference, but at present not one-twentieth part is inhabited; but the temples and the Buddhist convents yet remain. It stands on a tributary of the Irawadi, and has some ingenious textile manufactures. Lat. 17. 34. N. Long. 96. 28. E.

PE'KIN, or PE'KING, the capital city of the empire of China, where the emperor generally resides. It is an exact square, surrounded by lofty and broad walls, 20 miles in length, and is divided into two parts; namely, that which contains the emperor's palace, which is in the New City, or Tatar City, so called because it is inhabited by Tatars, ever since they conquered the empire. The other, called the Old City, is inhabited by the Chinese. The gates of this city are high and well arched, and are 16 in number; before each is an open space, which serves for a parade. The streets are as straight as a line, most of them three miles in length, and about 120 feet wide, with shops on both sides; but the houses are poorly built, and have only a ground floor. The emperor's palace is of vast extent, and surrounded by a brick wall, with pavilions at each corner, encompassed by galleries supported by columns. The walls of the emperor's palace, including that and the gardens, are about two miles in length; and the buildings are covered with tiles of a shining beautiful yellow. The temples and the towers of this city are very numerous. The suburbs are also very extensive. The country about it is sandy, and not very fruitful; yet provisions of all kinds are exceedingly plentiful, they being, as well as the merchandise, brought from other parts by means of canals cut from the rivers, and always crowded with vessels. The trade of this city is very great; and order is maintained very rigidly by the soldiers. Pop. about 2,000,000. Lat. 39. 50. N. Long. 116. 28. E.

PELAGIANS, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect which adopted the opinions of Pelagius.

PELAGIUS, (whose true name was Morgan,) a famous theologian, of British origin, in the 5th century. He, with Celestius, (an Irishman,) whilst living at Rome as a monk, and highly esteemed for monkish virtue and piety, began to teach strange opinions respecting the natural state of man, and the connected subject of grace. He left Rome on the Gothic invasion, and went to Sicily, Africa, Egypt, and the East. There he found some patronage. But he was soon summoned to a council, which acquitted him; and then to others, which condemned him; and his after-history is wholly unknown. His great and untiring opponent was the famous Augustine of Hippo. The opinions of Pelagius were such as must be formed by one who acutely feels his responsibility to God, and who has logical skill sufficient to develop that conviction. The opinions of Augustine, in like manner, were based on the opposed truth, the sovereignty of God. This controversy, then first clearly begun, has continued to the present day with unabated fire, and without a gleam of hope that it may be concluded. For in truth it is one that must be carried on by every inquirer after truth, for himself; and they are few who are able to steer safely between the Scylla of free will, and the Charybdis of free grace. The most fall to one or the other side of the question; and between these the dispute must needs go on. Pelagius had not only hearty followers in his own time, but some who are styled, oddly enough, Semi-Pelagians. The Remonstrants of Holland, and the Arminians, are also reckoned amongst his theological or logical offspring. See these names and the heads of the controversy. Pelagius flourished in the early part of the 5th century.

PELAGI, the most ancient people of S. E. Europe, the progenitors of the Grecian and Latin races; whose remains are chiefly those vast and massive buildings, which have deservedly obtained the name of Cyclopean Architecture.

PE'LEW, or PA'LOO, ISLANDS, a chain of small islands in the N. Pacific Ocean; lying W. of the Philippine Islands, and N. of New Guinea. They are, like the other islands of the Pacific, girt with a coral reef; and they have valuable timber and fruits, but no native quadrupeds. The natives are of a deep copper colour, and wear no kind of clothing; but they appear to be of simple manners and gentle disposition.

PELF, s. money or riches.

PE'LIAN, s. [Fr.] in Ornithology, a marine bird, of which there are many species, but the commonest is a large white, long-winged bird, furnished with a remarkable pouch in its lower mandible, capable of being greatly distended.

PELL, DR. JOHN, an eminent mathematician of the 17th century, who studied at Cambridge, and was afterwards professor at several colleges in Holland. He next appears as a diplomatist, being sent by the Lord Protector, Oliver, to Protestant Switzerland. After his return, at the Restoration, he entered the Church of England as a clergyman, and received some preferment, but he was so intent on the higher mathematics, that he forgot the simpler and more profitable applications of his science, and was in such want as to be imprisoned more than once for debt. He died in 1685, aged 75 years. His scientific works or papers are numerous, but not much known or needed now, and he seems rather to have exploded ancient errors, than to have advanced new truths. The Pell Papers of the British Museum are the records of his embassy in Switzerland.

PELLET, s. [pelote, Fr.] a little ball; a bullet or ball.

PELLETED, a. consisting of balls or bullets.

PELLICLE, s. [pellicula, Lat.] a thin skin. A film which gathers upon some liquors during evaporation.

PELLITORY OF THE WALL, s. an herb found on old walls, and among rubbish. The bastard pelitory is a kind of yarrow. PELL-MELL, ad. [pelle-melle, Fr.] confusedly; in a tumultuous manner.

PELLS, CLERK OF THE, [pells, Lat.] an officer of the Exchequer, who enters every teller's bill into a parchment roll, called pells acceptorum, the roll of receipts; and also makes another roll, called pells exitum, a roll of the disbursements.

PELLUCID, a. [pellucidus, from per and lucidus, Lat.] clear; transparent.

PELLUCIDITY, PELLUCIDNESS, s. the quality of a body which renders it transparent.

PELOPIDAS, a Theban general during the brief and splendid struggle made by Thebes for the supremacy of Greece. He fought at the battle of Leuctra, having already by a defensive war, most admirably conducted, secured all Boeotia, and Athens also, to the Theban cause. His next service was in Thessaly, where he headed the attempt to overthrow the tyranny of Alexander of Phæra. He was soon after treacherously imprisoned in Macedonia, but delivered by his friend Epaminondas (who shared or even outshone his glory); he effected an alliance with Persia; and he fell in a second attempt to give freedom to Thessaly, in 364 B. C. See EPAMINONDAS.

PELOPONNESUS, in Ancient Geography, the name of the peninsula which forms the S. part of Greece, now commonly called the Morea.

PELOPONNESIAN, a. belonging to the Peloponnesus. The Peloponnesian War was the long and destructive war carried on between Athens and Lacedæmon; arising out of a very trifling circumstance, but originating truly from the opposite spirit of the two states. In this war we have the contest of the ancient democracy with the ancient oligarchy; and the result was the victory of the latter; doubtless, in no small degree, because of the inconsistency and incompleteness of the character of the former. There is no truth to inspire the defender of democracy which allows any one of its members to be a slave; and Athens abounded with slaves. This war began in 431 B. C., and ended in 404 B. C. The most splendid names of Greece are connected with it; and the noblest historian of Greece, Thucydides, has recorded it.

PELT, s. [pellis, Lat.] a skin or hide; the quarry of a hawk torn. To PELT, v. a. [perhaps from pollern, Teut.] to strike by throwing; to throw at.

PELTOMONGER, s. one who deals in raw hides.

PELVIS, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the bones forming the base for the vertebral column, and to which the thigh-bones are articulated.

PEMBERTON, DR. HENRY, a distinguished English medical man of the last century. He studied in part under the famous Boerhaave; and was Gresham Professor of Physic. He published several medical and chemical treatises; but his principal works were mathematical and astronomical, and evince no mean proficiency in those branches of science. He edited Newton's Principia also, and wrote a popular treatise of his Philosophy. He died in 1771, aged 77 years.

PEMBROKE, Pembrokeshire, S. Wales. It is commodiously seated on the innermost creek of Milford Haven, over which there are two handsome bridges. It has a strong castle, seated on a rock. It is a corporate town, with well-built houses, and two churches. It is 256 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 8126.

PEMBROKE COLLEGE, the name of two colleges, at Cambridge and Oxford. That at Cambridge was originally a Hall, merely, and was founded in the 14th century, by a Countess of Pembroke. Its chapel was planned by Sir Christopher Wren. That at Oxford was founded in the 17th century, in the place of an earlier foundation, called Broadgate Hall, which was at first a Law-school. Its buildings are of comparatively recent date.

PEMBROKESHIRE, the most western county of S. Wales, 30 miles in length, 18 in its mean breadth, and surrounded on all sides by the sea, except where it is bounded by Cardiganshire and Caermarthenshire. It is divided into 7 hundreds, which contain 7 market towns, and 145 parishes. The principal rivers are the E. and W. Cleddue. A great part of the country is plain, and tolerably fertile, consisting of rich meadows and arable land. One part alone is mountainous, extending from the coast near Fishguard to the borders of Caermarthenshire. This, however, yields coal, building and lime stone, slate, &c., beside good pasture for sheep, horned cattle, and goats; with which the country in general abounds; as also with wild fowls of various kinds, some of which are seldom seen in any other part of Britain. The air is mild, but damp, as it lies so near the sea. The county town is Pembroke. Pop. 88,044. It sends 3 members to parliament.

PEN, s. [penna, Lat.] an instrument used in writing, made from a quill, or of some metallic substance; a quill or feather.

—[pennan, Sax.] a small enclosure or coop.

To PEN, v. a. to coop or shut up in a small enclosure. To write.

PENAL, a. [Fr. from pæna, Lat.] denouncing or exacting punishment.

PENALTY, PENA'LITY, s. [pénalité, old Fr.] punishment; a forfeiture.

PENANCE, s. [Fr.] in Ecclesiastical Affairs, a censure or punishment inflicted by a spiritual authority, for any transgression of its rules, &c.

PENANG, an island in the Straits of Malacca, about 15 miles long, and 10 broad. It is very rocky, and some of the points of the hills surpass 2000 feet in height. Near the sea are plains of fertile land, or swamp. There is plenty of timber on the mountains, and the plains produce rice, nutmegs, cloves, pepper, cocoa-nuts, sugar, &c. &c. George Town is its capital. Pop. about 50,000. This island is in the possession of England, and is commonly called Pulo-pennang. Lat. 5. 25. N. Long. 100. 23. E.

PENATES, in Roman Mythology, the name of the household or family gods, which each family worshipped with peculiar reverence. The esteem for them much resembled what is manifested towards patron saints amongst Romanists; except that these last are most usually the patrons of individuals, and not of families.

PENCE, pl. of penny, formed by contraction from pennies.

PENCIL, s. [penicillum, Lat.] a small brush of hairs used by painters; a long, thin strip of black lead, enclosed in cedar or some soft wood, which is cut away as the lead is used up, or else fitted in a tube, through which it is pushed by a screw, as the point wears away; any instrument used in writing without ink. In Optics, a number of rays of light converging to, or diverging from, the same point.

To PENCIL, v. a. to paint; to write with a pencil.

PENDANT, s. [pendant, Fr. from pendeo, Lat.] a jewel hanging loose from the ear; any thing suspended by way of ornament.

PENDENCE, s. slopiness; suspension.

PENDENCY, s. a state of suspense, or delay in a suit.

PENDENT, a. hanging; jutting over.

PENDING, a. depending; undecided.

PENDULOSITY, PENDULOUSNESS, s. the state of hanging; suspension.

PENDULOUS, a. [pendulus, Lat.] hanging; not supported below.

PENDULUM, s. in Horology, a weight suspended on a light bar, or wire, so as to be kept in a state of oscillation by the motion of the wheels of the clock, which it serves to keep regular and even. Some pendulums are made so as to preserve the same length in all temperatures, by various compensating contrivances.

PENETRABILITY, s. the quality of being capable to be pierced, applied to the body; the quality of being affected by motives or arguments, applied to the mind.

PENETRABLE, a. [penetro, Lat.] such as may be pierced; or may admit of, or be affected by, motives or arguments.

PENETRALIA, s. [Lat.] the interior parts of a building.

PENETRANT, s. [Fr.] having the power to pierce.

To PENETRATE, v. a. [penetro, Lat.] to pierce or enter beyond the surface; to affect the mind; to reach the meaning—v. n. to make way; to make way by the mind.

PENETRATION, s. [Fr.] the act of piercing or entering into a body. Entrance or comprehension of any difficulty, applied to the understanding; acuteness or sagacity.

PENETRATIVE, a. piercing, sharp, subtle, acute, or discerning; having the power to impress the mind.

PENGUIN, s. [Brit.] in Ornithology, a genus of birds frequenting the rocky shores and islands of S. America; which are remarkable for being fitted almost solely for living on the water. On land they walk with their bodies erect, and their small and useless wings hanging beside them. The excrement of these birds is the guano of Commerce and Agriculture.

PENINSULA, s. [penes and insula, Lat.] in Geography, a piece of land surrounded by water, excepting in one part, by which it is joined to the continent.

PENINSULAR, PENINSULATED, a. almost surrounded with water. The Peninsular War was that carried on by the French, under Buonaparte, to take and keep possession of the Spanish peninsula, against the Spanish, Portuguese, and British, who were their allies. The modern European state-system gained the victory; but the subsequent condition of Spain and Portugal to this hour does not indicate any great advantages resulting to those nations from it.

PENITENCE, s. [penitet, Lat.] repentance; sorrow for sin, attended with amendment of life, resulting from change of the affections.

PENITENT, a. truly contrite, and resolved to amend.

PENITENT, s. one who is penitent.

PENITENTIAL, (penitential) a. expressing penitence. In certain churches, enjoined as penance.

PENITENTIARY, (penitentiary) s. in certain churches, one who prescribes the rules and measures of penance; one who does penance; the place where penance is enjoined. Also, a house of refuge for reclaimed prostitutes.

PENITENTLY, ad. with penitence; with contrition.

PENKNIFE, (penknife) s. a knife for making pens.

PENKRIDGE, Staffordshire. It was formerly large and handsome, but is now greatly reduced. It is 129 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. A fair on September 2, and a great horse fair on October 10. Pop. 3129.

PENMAN, s. one who professes the art of writing; an author or writer.

PENMAEN MAWR, a mountain of Caernarvonshire, overhanging the sea. It is 1545 feet in height.

PENN, SIR WILLIAM, a British admiral of the 17th century. He fought under the Protectorate against the Dutch and Spaniards, and for taking the island of Jamaica, without orders, was sent with Venables (his partner in the victory) to the Tower, by Oliver Cromwell. At the Restoration he served the winning cause, fought against the Dutch, under the command of (that is, as head and hand to) the Duke of York; was knighted; and died in 1670, aged 49 years.

PENN, WILLIAM, son of the admiral, and founder of Pennsylvania, United States, was educated at Oxford, and became a Quaker in principle; was expelled, studied in France, and on his return studied law, and afterwards managed his father's affairs in Ireland, where he openly professed Quakerism. For many years his life was chequered with prosecutions, persecutions, imprisonments, &c., on account of his firm adherence to all the customs of the Friends; and gleams of relenting in his disappointed father, and, as the fruits of his influence at court, the mitigation of some of his sufferings. On his father's death, Penn received a handsome property, but it did not change his course, and another imprisonment soon showed it. He had become a minister and an author and disputant in behalf of his Friends; he journeyed with the other two most eminent of that body, Fox the founder, and Robert Barclay the apologist, in Germany; and at length having obtained the payment of a long-standing debt to his father by the crown, by the grant of the territory still named, as he styled it, Pennsylvania, which he also purchased from the Indian tribes who held it, and colonized and gave a constitution and laws to, which have made it conspicuous amongst the States of the Union. He returned to England after some years, and found new trials at the Revolution of 1688; but he eventually overcame them, and returned to his new country. A new attempt on his rights recalled him to England, and he once more triumphed. At length he died, in 1718, aged 74 years. The later trials of his life were all political or pecuniary; yet it does not appear that he was changed from what he had been when it was distinctly his earnest and strongly-marked religious profession which occasioned his difficulties. His mode of obtaining and of keeping his American State sufficiently attests the steadfastness of his mind. His works are numerous, and of them one, entitled No Cross, no Crown, is more widely known than the others.

PENNACHED, a. [panaché, Fr.] in Floriculture, applied to flowers, when the ground of the natural colour of their leaves is radiated, and diversified without any confusion.

PENNANT, s. [pennon, Fr.] an ensign, colours, or small flag; a rope for hoisting things on board.

PENNANT, THOMAS, an English naturalist and antiquary of the last century. During his travels on the continent, he seems to have become acquainted with most of the eminent men of science and letters of the day, being already widely known by his work on British Zoology. He afterwards published Arctic Zoology, and projected others, some of which were partly accomplished. His other works are, The Tour in Scotland, View of Hindustan, Journey from Chester to London, &c. He died in 1798, aged 72 years.

PENNATED, a. [penna, Lat.] winged. In Botany, applied to those leaves which grow exactly opposite to each other on the same stalk, as those of the ash, &c.

PENNER, s. a writer. With the Scotch, a pence.

PENNILESS, a. without money.

PENNON, s. [Fr.] a kind of standard with a long tail, anciently borne by gentlemen. It is opposed to the banner, which was square.

PENNSYLVANIA, one of the United States, N. America. It stretches from Lake Erie to the Delaware, and is bounded by New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and Ohio. It is 300 miles long, and 160 broad, and is divided into 55 counties. The Alleghenies cross the centre of this State, but the surface is only moderately hilly on each side of this range. The Delaware, the Susquehanna, the Schuylkill, the Allegheny, &c. are its chief rivers. Iron and coal are most especially abundant; limestone and marble are also plentiful. Wheat, Indian corn, and other grain, fruits, cattle, horses, &c. &c., are also produced in great plenty. Nor are its manufactures less valuable and extensive: they include almost every production of associated industry. Trade also is very flourishing, and there are 49 banks. Philadelphia is its capital, and, with Pittsburgh, engrosses the greater part of the trade of the State. Pop. 1,724,933.

PENNY, s. plural pence, [penig, Sax.] a small coin, in value four farthings. Proverbially, a small sum; money in general.

PENNYCRESS, s. in Botany, a kind of mithridate.

PENNYROYAL, s. in Botany, an herb of a fragrant smell, used by old herbalists for medicine.

PENNYWEIGHT, s. a weight containing 24 grains Troy weight.

PENNYWISE, a. saving small sums at the hazard of greater.

PENNYWORT, s. in Botany, an umbelliferous plant, called by some white-root.

PENNYWORTH, s. as much as can be bought for a penny; a purchase; something bought for less than it is worth; a small quantity.

PENOBSCOT, a large river of Maine, United States. It is about 270 miles long, and is navigable for large vessels for 50 miles.

PENRITH, or PE'RTTH, Cumberland. It has some noted tanworks, and some manufactures of check and cotton. It has a spacious market-place, and is seated under a hill, near the Peterel and the conflux of the Eismot and Lowther. It is a large and well-built trading town, 220 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Fair, on Whit-Tuesday. Pop. 6420.

PENRYN, Cornwall. It is situated on a creek of Falmouth Haven, and is a corporate town. It is 260 miles from London, Markets, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Pop. 3337.

PENSANCE, or PENZA'NCE, Cornwall. It is seated on a creek of Mountsbay. It carries on a considerable traffic in shipping, and is one of the tin coinage towns. It is 282 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 8578.

PENSFORD, Somersetshire. It is noted for its hats and bread; it has also a manufactory of cloth. It is seated on the river Chew, 117 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Population, 780.

PENSILE, a. [pensilis, from pendeo, Lat.] hanging; suspended or supported above ground.

PENSILENESS, s. the state of hanging.

PENSION, (pénshon) s. [Fr.] an allowance given to a person without an equivalent being demanded from him; one of the means of consuming the public revenue.

To PENSION, (pénshon) v. a. to support by an arbitrary allowance.

PENSIONARY, (pénshonary) a. [pensionnaire, Fr.] maintained by pensions or a stated allowance. Formerly the title given to the first minister of the regency of each city in the province of Holland. Grand Pensionary, the title of the president of the council of the states of Holland, formerly.

PENSIONER, (pénshoner) s. one supported by voluntary allowance from another.

PENSIVE, a. [pénis, Fr.] sorrowfully thoughtful; mournfully serious.

PENSIVELY, ad. in a mournful and thoughtful manner.

PENSIVENESS, s. the quality of being mournfully thoughtful.

PENT, part. pass. of To PEN; cooped up.

PENTACAPSULAR, a. [pente, Gr. and capsula, Lat.] having five cells or cavities.

PENTACHORD, (péntakord) s. [pente and chorde, Gr.] an instrument having five strings.

PENTAE/DROUS, a. [pente and hedra, Gr.] having five sides.

PENTAGON, s. [pente and gonia, Gr.] a mathematical figure having five angles.

PENTAGONAL, a. having five angles.

PENTAGRAPH, s. See PENTAGRAM.

PENTAMETER, a. [pente and metreo, Gr.] a Latin verse consisting of five feet.

PENTANGULAR, a. [pente, Gr. and angulus, Lat.] five-cornered.

PENTAPETALOUS, a. [pente and petalon, Gr.] in Botany, having five flower-leaves.

PENTASPAST, s. [pente and speo, Gr.] an engine of five pulleys.

PENTASTIC, s. [pente and stichos, Gr.] a composition consisting of five verses.

PENTASTYLE, s. [pente and stylos, Gr.] in Architecture, a work in which are five rows or columns.

PENTATEUCH, (péntateuk) s. [pente and teuchos, Gr.] the five books of Moses; namely, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy.

PENTECOST, s. [pentekeostos, Gr.] amongst the Jews, a feast so called from its being celebrated the fiftieth day after the sixteenth of Nisan. It is called by the Hebrews the feast of weeks, because kept seven weeks after the Passover. The Jewish and Anglican Whitsuntide are observed at the same season.

PENTECOSTAL, a. belonging to Pentecost or Whitsuntide.

PENTHOUSE, s. [pente, Fr. and house, a.] a shed hanging out aslope from the main wall.

PENTICE, s. [pentice, Ital.] a sloping roof; a shed.

PENTILE, s. a tile made for covering the sloping part of the roof.

PENTLAND FRITH, the narrow strait that separates the Orkney Islands from Scotland.

PENULTIMA, s. [Lat.] the last syllable of a word but one.

PENUMBRA, s. [pene and umbra, Lat.] an imperfect shadow. In a solar eclipse, the penumbra is that faint shadow that falls upon those parts of the earth where the sun is only partially eclipsed. In an eclipse of the moon, it is that faint shadow on her disk which appears before and after she is eclipsed, owing to those parts having the sun only partially eclipsed at that time, as seen from the moon.

PENURIOS, a. [penuria, Lat.] sparing in expense; parsimonious; scanty.

PENURIOSLY, ad. in a niggardly or sparing manner.

PENURIOSNESS, s. the quality of being sparing in expenses; parsimony.

PENURY, s. want; poverty; indigence.

PENZENSKE, a government of Russia; bounded by the governments of Simbirsk, Saratov, Tamboff, and Novgorod. Its capital, Penza, is seated on the river Sura, where it receives the rivulet Penza. Lat. 53. 14. N. Long. 45. 2. E.

PEONY, s. [peonia, Lat.] in Floriculture, a well-known red flower.

PEOPLE, (péuple) s. [peuple, Fr. populus, Lat.] a nation or community; the commonality. It is also used as if it were synonymous with a person; but this is manifestly incorrect.

To PEOPLE, (péuple) v. a. [peupler, Fr.] to fill with inhabitants.

PEPA/STICS, s. [pepaino, Gr.] in Medicine, medicines which are good to help digestion.

PEPIN, the name of two distinguished men in early French history. The first, named Heristal, was Maire of the Palace and Duke of Austrasia, and had such power, that when one king, Thierry, desired to rid himself of him, he rebelled, and obliged the monarch to reinstate him to the post of actual sovereignty, by force of arms. He died in 714. His son, Charles Martel, made the office yet more honourable. And his son, the second Pepin, named the Short, after holding this de facto sovereignty for some years, dethroned the puppet king, cut off his royal locks, and sent him to a convent for the rest of his days; and was crowned, with the pope's consent, in his room. The new monarch soon overthrew his brother Carloman, humbled the great nobles of the realm, and signalized himself in wars against the Lombards in behalf of the pope. He died in 768, having reigned 16 years, and was succeeded by his yet more illustrious son, Charlemagne.

PEPPER, s. [pipper, Lat.] in Botany, &c., a well-known and very warm spice, of which there are several species. See CUBEBS.

PIMENTO, &c.

To PEPPER, v. a. to sprinkle with pepper. Figuratively, to beat or mangle, either with blows or shot.

PEPPERBOX, s. a box for holding pepper.

PEPPERCORN, s. any thing of inconsiderable value.

PEPPERMINT, s. in Botany, a kind of mint common in marshy spots, having a very warm and aromatic flavour, and yielding an oil, of which an agreeable cordial is made, and which is much used in medicine.

PEPPERWORT, s. in Botany, a kind of dittander.

PEPPERGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of fern; called also peppermoss and pillwort.

PEPSIS, s. [pepairo, Gr.] in Physiology, the process of digestion.

PEPTIC, a. [peptikos, Gr.] what assists in digestion.

PEPUSCH, DR. JOHN CHRISTOPHER, a German musician, who gained his great fame in England. He composed for the stage, but he was particularly eminent in his knowledge of ancient music, and inquired deeply into that of the classic ages. He wrote a Treatise on Harmony, which is of great value, and several lesser essays. He was also organist of the Charter House, and died in 1752, aged 85 years.

PEPYS, SAMUEL, a state officer under the last Stuart kings, who has made his name famous by his Diary, which abounds in most valuable matter for the historian, and is of lively interest to general readers from its unsophisticated style, and from the faithful picture it gives of the writer and his times. He was son of a city tradesman, but was educated at Cambridge, and brought into notice by the Earl of Sandwich, who introduced him to Charles II. on his restoration. He was secretary to the Admiralty, and was well fitted for his office. On the Revolution of 1688, he resigned, or was deposed; and he died in 1703, aged 71 years. He was of sufficient standing amongst men of science to be elected president of the Royal Society, and he published several works, on the Navy, &c. His Diary has been published quite lately.

PERACUTE, a. [peracutus, Lat.] very sharp.

PERADVENTURE, ad. [par aventure, Fr.] perhaps; by chance; maybe.

To PERA/GRATE, v. a. [peragro, from per and ager, Lat.] to travel or wander over.

PERAGRATION, s. the act of passing through any state or space.

To PERA/MBULATE, v. a. [per and ambulo, Lat.] to walk through; to survey by passing through.

PERAMBULATION, s. the act of passing through or wandering over; a travelling survey.

PERAMBULATOR, s. an instrument by which long distances on roads, &c. are measured. It consists of a wheel of a particular length in its circumference, which communicates with some simple clock-work, which, again, by a small dial-face shows the number of miles, &c. the wheel has traversed.

PERCEANT, a. [perçant, Fr.] piercing; penetrating.

PERCEIVABLE, (perceivable) a. being properly an object of the sense or understanding.

PERCEIVABLY, (perceivably) ad. in such a manner as to be discovered by the senses or understanding.

To PERCEIVE, (percevoir) v. a. [percevoir, Fr. from percipio, Lat.] to discover by means of the senses or understanding; to know or observe.

PERCEPTIBILITY, s. the state of being discovered by the mind or senses; the power of perceiving.

PERCEPTIBLE, a. [Fr.] such as may be perceived.

PERCEPTIBLY, ad. in such a manner as may be perceived.

PERCEPTION, s. in Mental Philosophy, the power of receiving impressions from external objects through the senses; an impression from an external object, referred by the mind to the object, and not to itself.

PERCEPTIVE, a. having the power of perceiving.

PERCH, s. [perche, Fr.] in Ichthyology, a common river-fish of prey. A measure containing five yards and a half. A stick on which domestic fowls support themselves when they roost.

To PERCH, v. n. [percher, Fr.] to sit like a bird at roost.—v. a. to place on a perch.

PERCHANCE, ad. perhaps; peradventure.

PERCHERS, s. Paris candles, used in England in ancient times; also the larger sort of wax candles, which were usually set upon the altar.

PERCIPIENT, a. [percipiens, Lat.] capable of perceiving.

PERCIPIENT, s. one that has the power of perceiving.

To PERCOLATE, v. a. [percolo, Lat.] to strain through.

PERCOLATION, s. the act of purifying by straining.

To PERCUSS, v. a. [percutio, Lat.] to strike.

PERCUSSION, s. [percussio, Lat.] the act of striking; a stroke; the effect of sound in the ear. In Medicine, the striking of the thorax, or other part of the body, for the purpose of ascertaining the state of the organs contained in it, by the character of the sound occasioned by the stroke. Percussion Cap, see CAP.

PERCUTIENT, (perkušient) a. [percutiens, from percutio, Lat.] striking; having the power to strike.

PERCY, DR. THOMAS, an English prelate, who studied at Oxford, was made a royal chaplain, and finally bishop of Dro-more in Ireland. He died in 1811, aged 83 years. He wrote the Hermit of Warwick, a well-known ballad. His Reliques of Ancient English Poetry was a valuable contribution to English literature. He published some translations, of which that of Mallev's Northern Antiquities is highly esteemed. He also wrote a little work called the Key to the New Testament.

PERDICAS, one of Alexander the Great's generals, who acted as executor to the conqueror's will; allotting to the various commanders their shares of the empire; and acting as regent to Arrhidæus, who had been made nominal king of Macedonia. He had Statira put to death; married Antipater's daughter, and repudiated her, in the hope of marrying Cleopatra, and so becoming king, but was prevented by the army; he next attempted to overthrow Antigonus and Ptolemy, by accusing them before the army; and finally was assassinated in an insurrection of his troops in Egypt, in 320 B. C.

PERDITION, s. [perditio, from perdo, Lat.] destruction; death; loss or ruin.

PERDU, ad. [Fr.] close; in ambush.

PERDULOUS, a. [perdo, Lat.] lost; thrown away.

PERDURABLE, s. [Fr. from perdure, Lat.] lasting; long continued. Not in use.

PERDURABLY, ad. in a lasting manner.

PERDURATION, s. long continuance.

To PEREGRINATE, v. n. [peregrino, from peregrinus, Lat.] to travel; to live in foreign countries.

PEREGRINATION, s. [peregrinatio, Lat.] travel or abode in foreign countries.

PEREGRINE, a. [peregrinus, Lat.] foreign; not native; not domestic.

To PEREMPT, v. a. [perimo, Lat.] in Law, to crush or kill. PEREMPTORILY, ad. absolutely; so as to cut off further debate.

PEREMPTORINESS, s. positiveness that will not admit of dispute or contradiction.

PEREMPTORY, a. [peremptorius, low Lat.] positive, so as to admit of no dispute or contradiction.

PERENNIAL, a. [per and annus, Lat.] lasting through the year; perpetual; unceasing.

PERENNITY, s. the quality of lasting the year round; perpetuity.

PERFECT, a. [perfectus, from perficio, Lat.] free from defect with respect to parts, composition, skill, or abilities; safe. Synon. Perfection regards properly the beauty which rises from the design and construction of the work; finishing, from the hand and workmanship of the workman; completion depends on the want of nothing, but on the work's having every thing it should have.

To PERFECT, v. a. [perficio, Lat.] to complete or finish any thing; to supply defects; to instruct completely.

PERFECTER, s. one that makes perfect.

PERFECTIBILITY, s. in some kinds of Theology, the possibility of man's arriving at moral and spiritual perfection in this world.

PERFECTION, s. the state of being free from redundancy or defect; supreme excellence.

To PERFECTIONATE, v. a. [perfectio, Fr.] to perfect.

PERFECTIVE, a. conducing to complete, or to remove all defects, used with of.

PERFECTIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to remove all defects.

PERFECTLY, ad. in a manner free from defects; totally, completely; exactly, accurately.

PERFECTNESS, s. completeness; goodness; virtue; skill.

PERFIDIOUS, a. [per and fides, Lat.] treacherous; false; guilty of violated trust.

PERFIDIOUSLY, ad. in a manner inconsistent with the confidence placed in one.

PERFIDIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being perfidious.

PERFIDY, s. [per and fides, Lat.] breach of faith; the act of betraying.

To PERFILATE, v. a. [per and fio, Lat.] to blow through. PERFLATION, s. the act of blowing through.

To PERFORATE, v. a. [perforo, Lat.] to pierce or bore a hole with a tool.

PERFORATION, s. the act of piercing or boring; a hole made by boring.

PERFORATOR, s. the instrument of boring.

PERFORCE, ad. by violence; violently.

To PERFORM, v. a. [performare, Ital.] to execute, act, or do; to accomplish a design or undertaking.—v. n. to succeed in an attempt.

PERFORMABLE, a. practicable; such as may be done.

PERFORMANCE, s. the execution of a design; the completion of a promise; a work or composition; an action, or something done.

PERFORMER, s. one that performs any thing; generally applied to an artist who gives a specimen of his skill in public.

To PERFRIATE, v. n. [per and frio, Lat.] to rub over.

PERFUMATORY, a. that perfumes.

PERFUME, s. [parfume, Fr.] an agreeable odour composed by art, and used to give other things a fragrant scent; fragrance.

To PERFUME, v. a. to make a thing smell agreeably; to scent.

PERFUMER, s. one who makes and sells artificial odours.

PERFUNCTORILY, ad. [perfunctorie, Lat.] in a careless or negligent manner.

PERFUNCTORY, a. [perfunctorius, Lat.] careless; slight; negligent.

To PERFUSE, (perfuse) v. a. [per and fundo, Lat.] to overspread; to tincture.

PERGAMUS, a city of Mysia, in Asia Minor, of great fame in early history, and still a place of some note. It stood on a small river, and had a noted temple of Esculapius. Its kings, and especially Attalus I., played a considerable part in the events of their times. Parchment was very early made here, and is named after it. In the Apocalypse a letter is addressed to the Christian church here, which was one of the seven churches of Asia.

PERGOLESI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA, a distinguished musician of Italy, in the last century. He wrote some operas, but his sacred music is reckoned to be amongst the finest of that kind of composition. He died in 1737, aged 33 years.

PERHAPS, ad. peradventure; it may be.

PERIAPT, s. [peri and apto, Gr.] a charm, worn to prevent or expel diseases; an amulet.

PERICARDIUM, s. [peri and kardia, Gr.] in Anatomy, a thin membrane resembling a purse, and containing the heart in its cavity.

PERICARP, s. [peri and karpas, Gr.] in Botany, the covering of the seeds of whatever kind; whether like the apple, the nut, or the plum.

PERICLES, one of the noblest statesmen of Ancient Greece, and the leader under whom Athens reached its highest noon of splendour. In politics he espoused the popular side, and obtained almost unlimited power in the city of Pallas by the banishment of the only opponent who could cope with him. He then devoted himself to the defence and adornment of his native place; and the arts all flourished beneath his cultivated and refined encouragement. During the first two years of the famed and unhappy Peloponnesian war, he guided the public affairs; and it may be reasonably conjectured that, had he lived, the fortunate general in so many previous campaigns would not have led this war to the termination which awaited it after his death. It was his lot to prove by experience more than once the fickleness of the Athenian people. He was heavily fined; his friends were persecuted judicially; Phidias was imprisoned and poisoned; and at last Aspasia was summoned before the tribunal on a theological charge. He never deserted the popular side, and he triumphed in the end. He died in 429 B. C. The curious in historical study may find an instructive parallel to Pericles in Lorenzo the Magnificent of Florence. See ASPASIA.

PERICLITATION, s. [periclitari, Lat.] danger; hazard; trial; experiment.

PERICRANIUM, s. [peri and kranion, Gr.] in Anatomy, a thin membrane, of great sensibility, which covers the cranium or skull, and envelopes all the bones in the body, except the teeth; for which reason it is also called pericraneum.

PERICULOUS, a. [periculum, Lat.] dangerous; hazardous.

PERIERGY, s. [peri and ergon, Gr.] needless caution or diligence in an operation.

PERIGEE, s. [peri and ge, Gr.] in Astronomy, a point wherein a planet is at its nearest possible distance from the earth.

PERIHELION, s. [peri and helios, Gr.] in Astronomy, that point of a planet's orbit wherein it is nearest to the sun.

PERIL, s. [Fr.] a state wherein a person is exposed to loss, disease, or death; a danger threatened.

PERILOUS, s. [périlleux, Fr.] dangerous, hazardous; smart, witty.

PERILOUSLY, ad. in a dangerous manner.

PERILOUSNESS, s. dangerousness.

PERIMETER, s. [périmètre, Fr. from peri and metreo, Gr.] the compass or sum of all the lines that bound any figure.

PERIOD, s. [peri and odos, Gr.] in Astronomy, the space of time in which the revolution of a planet is performed. A stated number of years, days, or hours, in which things are performed and repeated; the end or conclusion; the state at which any thing terminates; duration. In Grammar and Rhetoric, a sentence, or system of sentences, so constructed that the signification is, as it were, suspended, till the utterance of the last word or clause. In Printing, a pause or mark, denoting a complete sentence, &c.

PERIODIC, PERIODICAL, a. [périodique, Fr.] making a circuit or revolution; happening or returning at a stated time; relating to periods or revolutions.

PERIODICALLY, ad. at stated times.

PERIOECI, s. [peri and oikos, Gr.] in Geography, are such inhabitants as have the same latitude, but opposite longitudes. These have the same annual phenomena, as of seasons, &c., but opposite diurnal phenomena, it being noon with one when it is midnight with the other.

PERIOSTEUM, s. [peri and osteon, Gr.] See PERICRANIUM.

PERIPATETICS, s. [peri and pateo, Gr.] in Philosophy, a name given to the school of Aristotle, because of the custom of that teacher to discourse in the Lyceum at Athens; and continued till the overthrow of all philosophy with the Roman empire, as the designation of those who held his opinions, or followed his method.

PERIPHERY, (periphery) s. [peri and phero, Gr.] the circumference of a circle.

To PERIPHRASE, (péripfrase) v. a. [péripfraser, Fr.] to express by circumlocution or many words.

PERIPHRAISIS, (periphrasis) s. [peri and phrazo, Gr.] circumlocution.

PERIPNEUMONY, PERIPNEUMONIA, s. [peri and pneumon, Gr.] in Medicine, an inflammation of the lungs.

PERISCI, s. [peri and skia, Gr.] in Geography, the inhabitants of the frigid zones, whose shadows, in their summer, in the same day turn to all the points of the horizon.

To PERISH, v. n. [pereo, Lat.] to die; to be destroyed.—v. a. to destroy, decay, or impair.

PERISHABLE, a. liable to perish or decay; subject to short duration.

PERISHABLENESS, s. liability to decay or destruction.

PERISTALTIC, a. [péristaltique, Fr. from peri and stello, Gr.] in Physiology, applied to the vermiform motion of the intestines, during the passage of the digested food through them.

PERISTYLE, s. [peri and stylon, Gr.] in Architecture, a range of pillars, or columns, like a piazza, or portico, carried the whole way round a building.

PERISYSTOLE, s. [peri and sustole, Gr.] in Physiology, the pause or interval between the two motions of the heart or pulse; namely, that of the systole, or contraction of the heart, and that of the diastole, or dilatation.

PERITONEUM, s. [periteino, Gr.] in Anatomy, a thin soft membrane, which encloses all the bowels.

PERITONITIS, s. in Medicine, the inflammation of the peritoneum.

PERITROCHUM, (peritrochium) s. [peri and trochos, Gr.] in Mechanics, denotes a wheel, or circle, concentric with the base of a cylinder, and movable together with it about an axis.

To PERJURE, v. a. [perjuro, Lat.] to swear falsely; to forswear.

PERJURER, s. one who swears falsely.

PERJURY, s. [perjuria, Lat.] the act of swearing falsely; a false oath.

PERIRWIG, s. [perrique, Fr.] hair woven on thread, sewed on a cawl, and worn by a person instead of his own hair.

To PERIRWIG, v. a. to dress in false hair.

PERIRWINKLE, s. in Natural History, a small shell-fish, a kind of sea-snail. In Botany, a plant with handsome pale blue flowers, of which there are two common species, the greater and the less, in England.

To PERK, v. n. [from perch,] to hold up the head with an affected bristleness.—v. a. to dress; to prank.

PERM, a government of Russia. It lies on the borders of Asiatic Russia, and is bounded by the governments of Vologda and Yvatka. It is mountainous, and yields gold, silver, platinum, iron, &c. &c. In agriculture it is not conspicuous, but horses and other useful animals are reared here. The capital is of the same name; and is seated on the river Kama, where it receives the Zegochekha. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 58. S. N. Long. 55. 12. E. Pop. of government, about 1,500,000.

PERMAGY, s. a little Turkish boat.

PERMANENCE, PERMANENCY, s. duration; consistency; lastingness; continuance in the same state.

PERMANENT, a. [per and maneo, Gr.] durable; continuing; lasting; unchanged.

PERMANENTLY, ad. in a durable manner.

PERMEABLE, a. [perneo, Lat.] such as may be passed through.

PERMEANT, a. [permeans, from perneo, Lat.] passing through.

To PERMEATE, v. a. to pass through.

PERMEATION, s. the act of passing through.

PERMISCIBLE, a. [per and misceo, Lat.] such as may be mixed.

PERMISSIBLE, a. [permitto, Lat.] what may be permitted.

PERMISSION, s. [Fr.] allowance. Leave to do any thing.

PERMISSIVE, a. granting or giving leave; not hindering, though not approving.

PERMISSIVELY, ad. by bare allowance, without hinderance or approbation.

TO PERMIT, v. a. to allow, grant, or suffer, without commanding, authorizing, or approving; to resign.

PERMIT, s. a written warrant for sending excisable goods from one place to another.

PERMITTANCE, s. allowance; forbearance of opposition.

PERMIXTION, s. [per and misce, Lat.] the act of mingling; the state of being mingled.

PERMUTATION, s. [per and muto, Lat.] the exchange of one thing for another. Permutations, in Arithmetic, are formulae for discovering the numbers of different ways in which any given number of things may be arranged.

TO PERMUTE, v. a. to exchange.

PERNAMBUCO, a seaport town of Brazil, S. America. It is divided into two parts, which are above 2 miles from each other. Its harbour is shoaly, but there is a considerable trade carried on here. Pop. of Olinda, about 10,000; of Recife, about 70,000. Lat. 8. 2. S. Long. 35. 5. W.

PERNICIOUS, a. [perniciosus, Lat.] mischievous in the highest degree; destructive.—[pernix, Lat.] quick; in haste.

PERNICIOUSLY, (perniciously) ad. in such a manner as to destroy or ruin; mischievously.

PERNICIOUSNESS, (perniciousness) s. the quality of being destructive.

PERNICITY, s. [pernix, Lat.] swiftness.

PERORATION, s. [per and oro, Lat.] the conclusion of an oration.

TO PERPEND, v. a. [perpendo, Lat.] to ponder on, or consider attentively.

PERPENDER, s. [perpigne, Fr.] a coping stone.

PERPENDICULAR, a. [perpendo, Lat.] crossing any thing at right angles; straight or upright.

PERPENDICULAR, s. a line crossing the horizon at right angles.

PERPENDICULARITY, s. the state of being perpendicular.

PERPENDICULARLY, ad. in such a manner as to cut another line at right angles; in the direction of a straight line up and down.

PERPENSION, s. consideration.

TO PERPETRATE, v. a. [perpetro, Lat.] to commit; to act. It always has a bad sense.

PERPETRATION, s. the act of committing any crime. Figuratively, a crime.

PERPETUAL, a. [Fr.] never ceasing; continual; everlasting. Perpetual Motion, one of the desiderata of mankind, which, unfortunately, cannot be supplied in a world where nothing is, save what is temporary; and if professedly invented or discovered, could not be demonstrated.

PERPETUALLY, ad. without intermission or ceasing.

TO PERPETUATE, v. a. [perpetuo, Lat.] to make perpetual; to eternalize; to continue without cessation or intermission.

PERPETUATION, s. the act of making perpetual; incessant continuance.

PERPETUITY, s. [perpetuus, Lat.] duration without cessation; something which has no end.

TO PERPLEX, v. a. [per and plecto, Lat.] to disturb with doubts, ambiguities, or difficulties.

PERPLEX, a. difficult; ambiguous; intricate.

PERPLEXEDLY, ad. intricately; with involution.

PERPLEXEDNESS, s. the quality which renders the judgment unable to determine; intricacy; anxiety of mind.

PERPLEXITY, s. anxiety; entanglement; intricacy.

PERQUISITE, s. [perquiso, Lat.] something above settled wages.

PERQUISITED, a. supplied with perquisites.

PERQUISITION, s. an accurate inquiry; a strict and thorough search.

PERRY, s. [poire, Fr.] cider made of pears.

TO PERSECUTE, v. a. [persequor, Lat.] to subject to pains, losses, or imprisonments, on account of opinions; to pursue with malice; to trouble with importunity.

PERSECUTION, s. the act of inflicting penalties, or subjecting to punishments for opinions; the state of being persecuted.

PERSECUTOR, s. [persecuteur, Fr.] one who inflicts pains, penalties, or losses, on account of opinions; one who harasses another with malice.

PERSEPOLIS, anciently the capital or royal city of Persia. It is thought to be the same as what is now called Kilmanar, of which there are magnificent ruins now remaining. There are inscriptions in characters and in a language unlike any now in use, and which show that this place must be extremely ancient: almost all parts of the ruins are full of sculptures, representing men and beasts. Lat. 30. 10. N. Long. 56. 20. E.

PERSEVERANCE, s. [perseverantia, Lat.] steadiness or continuance in any purpose, design, or opinion.

PERSEVERANT, a. [perseverans, Lat.] constant; persisting.

TO PERSEVERE, v. n. [persevere, Lat.] to persist in an attempt; to continue firm and resolute.

PERSEVERINGLY, ad. with perseverance.

PERSEUS, in Astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

PERSEUS, king of Macedonia in the 2nd century B.C. He declared war against Rome; was defeated at Pydna, in 172 B.C.; when the Macedonian empire fell before the succeeding great empire. Perseus died in 168 B.C.

PERSHORE, Worcestershire. It is seated on the N. side of the Avon, near its junction with the river Bow, and has a manufacture of stockings. It is 102 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. of the two parishes, 4805.

PERSIA, a large kingdom of Asia, lying on the Indian Ocean, and bounded by Beloochistan, Afghanistan, the Caspian Sea, Russia in Asia, and Turkey in Asia. It is about 1200 miles in length, and 900 in breadth. No country in the world bears a more different character than this; for in the N. and E. parts it is mountainous and cold; in the middle and S. E. parts sandy and desert; in the S. and W. level and extremely fertile, though for several months very hot. The soil produces all sorts of pulse and corn, except oats and rye. They have cotton in great abundance, and, among other domestic animals, camels and buffaloes, and their horses are very numerous. In several places naphtha, a sort of bitumen, rises out of the ground; and they have mines of gold, silver, iron, &c., but the two first of these are not worked, on account of the scarcity of wood. Cotton cloth, silken goods, and very fine carpets are made here. All sorts of fruits, excellent wine, and a great number of mulberry-trees, with silk-worms, dates, pistachio-nuts, and trees which produce manna, are grown here. There are also large flocks of sheep and goats; the tails of the former are of a monstrous size. It is divided into 12 provinces. Ispahan is the capital town. Pop. about 10,000,000.

PERSIAN GULF, a very large gulf between Persia and Arabia Felix, in Asia. Its entrance is about 30 miles over, but within it is near 180 in breadth, and about 420 miles in length.

PERSIC, or PERSIAN LANGUAGE, THE, is the offspring of a branch of the Indo-European family of tongues, but is much corrupted by mixtures derived from Arabia. The Arabic letters are also used. The literature of Persia is very remarkable; the poems and fables are especially fine. There is an old version of part of the Scriptures in this language.

TO PERSIST, v. n. [persisto, Lat.] to continue firm and resolute in an undertaking or opinion.

PERSISTANCE, PERSISTENCY, s. steadiness; constancy; obstinacy; obduracy.

PERSISTIVE, a. steady; persevering.

PERSIUS, AULUS FLACCUS, a Roman satiric poet, of whom we know but little beyond his birthplace, his adherence to the Stoics, and his death, in 62 A. D., aged 28 years. His Six Satires remain; and it is said that the character of his own life was a keener rebuke to the profligate Romans than the sharpest line he ever wrote.

PERSON, s. [persona, Lat. personne, Fr.] a thinking, intelligent being; a being that has reason, and so is self-conscious, and is responsible to God; an individual, or particular, man or woman; a human being; external appearance; character. In person, oneself, opposed to a deputy or representative. In Grammar, the mode of expressing the relation of an action to the speaker, as speaking of himself, or another, or to another. Verbs and pronouns are capable of this.

PERSONABLE, a. handsome, or of good appearance. In Law, one who may maintain any plea in a court of justice.

PERSONAGE, s. [Fr.] a man or woman of some rank or eminence; air, stature, external appearance; a character assumed or represented.

PERSONAL, a. [personal, Fr. from persona, Lat.] belonging to men or women, opposed to things; peculiar; proper to; relating to one's private character or actions. Present, opposed to representative. Personal estate. In Law, something movable, or appendant to the person. In Grammar, applied to verbs and to pronouns which can express the personal relations.

PERSONALITY, s. the existence or individuality of any one. PERSONALLY, ad. in one's own person; particularly; with regard to individuality.

To PERSONATE, v. a. to represent by a fictitious or assumed character, so as to pass for another; to act or represent on the stage; to counterfeit; to resemble.

PERSONATION, s. counterfeiting of another person.

PERSONIFICATION, s. in Rhetoric, prosopoeia; the change of things to persons; as, Confusion heard his voice.

To PERSONIFY, v. a. to represent things as if they were persons.

PERSPECTIVE, s. [per and spicio, Lat.] in Mathematics, the principles and rules for drawing landscapes and all objects in their proper proportions. A view or vista.

PERSPECTIVE, a. relating to the art of correct drawing.

PERSPICACIOUS, (perspikashious) a. [per and spicio, Lat.] quick-sighted; sharp-witted; quick of apprehension.

PERSPICACIOUSNESS, (perspikashiousness) s. the quality of perceiving or discovering quickly.

PERSPICACITY, s. [perspicacit, Fr.] quickness of sight or apprehension; sagacity.

PERSPICIENCE, (perspihience) s. the act of looking sharply; perfect knowledge.

PERSPICUITY, s. [perspicuité, Fr.] the quality of being transparent; applied to the mind, easiness to be understood or comprehended.

PERSPICUOUS, a. [per and spicio, Lat.] clear; transparent; such as may be seen through; easy to be understood.

PERSPICUOUSLY, ad. clearly; not obscurely.

PERSPICUOUSNESS, s. the quality of being easily understood or seen through.

PERSPIRABLE, a. such as may be emitted through the pores of the skin.

PERSPIRATION, s. [per and spiro, Lat.] in Physiology, the act of emitting moisture through the skin.

PERSPIRATIVE, a. performing the act of perspiration.

To PERSPIRE, v. n. to emit through the pores of the skin. To be excreted by the skin.

To PERSTRINGE, v. a. [per and stringo, Lat.] to graze upon, or touch slightly; to glance upon.

PERSUADABLE, a. such as may be persuaded.

PERSUADE, (the v in this and the following words is pronounced like v) v. a. [per and suadeo, Lat.] to arouse to action after conviction, by appeal to the feelings, &c. &c. It sometimes means, to convince.

PERSUADE, s. one who persuades.

PERSUASIBLE, (persuadable) a. to be influenced by persuasion.

PERSUASIBLENESS, s. the quality of being persuadable.

PERSUASION, (persuasion) s. the act of influencing the will with a view to action, by means of appeals to the passions, feelings, or affections, or by appeal to duty; the state of being persuaded; opinion.

PERSUASIVE, (persuázive) a. [persuasiv, Fr.] having the power to persuade.

PERSUASIVELY, (persuázively) ad. in such a manner as to persuade.

PERSUASIVENESS, (persuáziveness) s. the quality of influencing the passions.

PERSUASORY, (persuázory) a. having the power to persuade.

PERT, a. [per, Brit. and Belg. appert, Fr.] lively and brisk; saucy; bold; petulant.

To PERTAIN, v. a. [pertineo, from teneo, Lat.] to belong or relate to. Used with to.

PERTEREBRATION, s. [per and terebro, Lat.] the act of boring through.

PERTERREFACTION, s. [per, terreo, and facio, Lat.] the act of affrighting greatly; a great fright.

PERTH, Perthshire, Scotland. It consists, chiefly, of one wide street, well paved, but ill built; from which two others branch off, at right angles, on each side. It carries on considerable manufactures of linen and cotton, and exports large quantities of salmon. Perth is a very handsome town, with a beautiful approach to it, and is agreeably seated on the western bank of the Tay, which is here crossed by an elegant stone bridge of 10 arches, to which the tide comes up, the river being navigable for small vessels. It is 39 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 19,293. PERTHSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded by the shires of Inverness, Aberdeen, Angus, Fife, Kinross, Clackmannan, Stirling, Dumbarton, and Argyle. It extends about 60 miles in length, and upwards of 50 in breadth. The northern district, called Athol, is uncommonly wild and mountainous; some heights being nearly 4000 feet above the sea; the five others, viz. Braedalbane, Gourie, Monteith, Stormont, and Strathern, are more champagne, and fertile in corn and pasture. It is watered by the Tay and its tributaries; and part of its border lies on the Frith of Tay. Coal, iron, and slate are its chief mineral products. It yields plenty of timber. Corn and cattle are much attended to, with considerable profit. There are good freshwater fisheries, and some manufactures, but chiefly domestic. Perth is its capital. Pop. 137,390. It sends 2 members and a moiety to parliament.

PERTINACIOUS, (pertindshious) a. [pertineo, Lat.] obstinate; stubborn; not to be convinced; constant; resolute.

PERTINACIOUSLY, (pertindshiously) ad. obstinately; stubbornly.

PERTINACIOUSNESS, (pertindshiousness) s. PERTINACITY, s. obstinacy; stubbornness; resolution; constancy.

PERTINACIOUS, s. obstinacy; steadiness, or persistency.

PERTINAX, P. HELVIVS, a Roman emperor, who was prefect of Rome when Commodus was assassinated, and was raised to the throne by the murderers. The reform in the finances, which was imperatively needful, and which he commenced at once, made him so odious to the soldiers and the courtiers, that he was put to death by the guards, in 193 A. D., after having reigned not quite three months. This was the commencement of the tyranny of the Prætorian guard, which is the principal feature of the declining or falling period of the Roman empire.

PERTINENCE, PERTINENCY, s. justness of relation to the matter in hand; propriety or suitability to the purpose.

PERTINENT, a. [pertinens, Lat.] opposite; suitable to the purpose; relating; regarding; concerning. Used with to.

PERTINENTLY, ad. to the purpose; appositely.

PERTINENTNESS, s. the quality of suiting, or being apposite to what it is applied to.

PERTINGENT, a. [pertingens, from tango, Lat.] reaching to; touching.

PERTILY, ad. in a brisk, lively, saucy, or petulant manner. PERTNESS, s. brisk folly; sauciness; petulance; smartness; audacity; petty liveliness; sprightliness without dignity or solidity.

PERTRAINSIENT, a. [pertransiens, Lat.] passing over.

To PERTURB, PERTURBATE, v. a. [per and turbo, Lat.] to disquiet, disorder, or put into confusion; to disturb.

PERTURBATION, s. any thing which destroys the tranquillity, or violently excites the passions; disorder; confusion; commotion; disturbance. In Astronomy, the general name for any irregularity in the revolution or rotation of any of the planetary bodies, occasioned by the attraction of the other bodies of the system. The chief perturbations are described under their several names.

PERTURBATOR, s. [Lat.] one that raises commotions.

PERTUSED, (pertúzed) a. [per and tundo, Lat.] bored; punched; pierced with holes.

PERTUSION, (pertúzhon) s. the act of piercing or punching; a hole made by piercing.

To PERVADE, v. a. [per and radio, Lat.] to pass through; to permeate; to pass, through the whole extension.

PERVAISION, (pervázhon) s. the act of passing through.

PERVERSE, a. [per and verto, Lat.] distorted from the right; obstinate in the wrong; untractable; petulant; vexatious; peevish.

PERVERSELY, ad. with intent to vex; spitefully; crossly; with petty malignity.

PERVERSENESS, s. spiteful crossness; petulance; peevishness.

PERVERSION, s. [Fr.] the act of changing or perverting to something worse.

PERVERSITY, s. crossness; perverseness; frowardness; peevishness; petulance.

TO PERVERT, v. a. to misapp or distort wilfully from the true end, meaning, or purpose; to turn from right to wrong; to corrupt.

PERVERTER, s. one that changes any thing from good to bad, or wilfully distorts any thing from the right purpose; a corrupter.

PERVERTIBLE, a. that may be easily perverted.

PERVESTIGATION, s. [pervestigo, Lat.] diligent search or inquiry.

PERVACIOUS, (pervickshious) a. [pervacius, Lat.] spitefully or peevishly obstinate; headstrong; stubborn.

PERVACIOUSLY, (pervickshiously) ad. with spiteful obstinacy.

PERVACITY, PERVACIOUSNESS, PERVACACY, s. spiteful obstinacy.

PERVIOUS, a. [per and via, Lat.] capable of being passed through; permeable.

PERVIOUSNESS, s. the quality of permitting passage through.

PERU, a republic of S. America, lying on the Pacific, and bounded by Bolivia, Brazil, and Ecuador. It is traversed by the prodigious mountain ridge called the Cordilleras-de-los-Andes, and is about 1500 miles in length, and 400 in mean breadth. Many of the mountains are active volcanoes, and some of the points are more than 20,000 feet high. The country between the mountains and the ocean is tolerably level, but it is generally inclined towards the sea; that on the E. of them is part of the great Pampas of S. America, already described. (See PAMPAS.) There are not any rivers of note on the W. side of the Andes, and those on the E. side all belong to the vast system of the river Amazon. The coast is in general rocky and high, but there are some good harbours. Gold, silver, quicksilver, iron, copper, lead, and other metals, are found here in abundance. The forests are full of valuable trees, which are used for building, cabinet-making, and as dyes and drugs also. The llama is a native of this country; horses and other kinds of domestic beasts and cattle are reared. And turtles and alligators, the puma and the jaguar, condors, &c. &c. abound. The manufactures are inconsiderable, and the commerce chiefly consists of its natural productions. Some of the aborigines yet remain, but most of the inhabitants are of European origin, or of mixed descent from European and African or Indian parents. It is divided into 8 departments, and its capital is Lima. Pop. about 2,000,000.

PERUGIA, a town of the Papal States, Italy. It stands on the Tiber, and is a finely-built and stately old place. It has some noble public edifices, as churches, &c. Its university is of some importance, and has a valuable library, with museums, &c. &c. There are other institutions of some excellence here. It is the capital of a province. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 43. 7. N. Long. 12. 25. E.

PERUGINO, PETRO VANUCCI, a celebrated painter of Italy, the founder of the Roman school, and the teacher of Raphael. His figures are elegant, but the drawing is often incorrect. Some that remain are greatly admired. He died in 1524, aged 78 years.

PERUKE, s. [pérruque, Fr.] a periwig, or false hair worn as an ornament, or to conceal baldness.

TO PERUKE, v. a. to dress with additious hair.

PERUKE-MAKER, s. a maker of perukes; a wig-maker.

PERUSAL, (perázal) s. the act of reading.

TO PERUSE, (perúze) v. a. [per and utor, Lat.] to read. Figuratively, to observe or examine.

PERUSIA, (perúze) s. one that reads or examines.

PERUSIAN BANK. See BANK, CINCUSA, &c.

PESA'DE, s. [Fr.] in Horsemanship, a motion made by a horse in raising and lifting up his fore quarters, and keeping his hind legs upon the ground without stirring.

PESARO, a town of the Papal States, Italy. It stands on the coast of the Gulf of Venice, near the mouth of the river Foglia, and has a small harbour. It is not lacking in fine buildings, and some good manufactures are carried on. It is a place of some considerable trade. Here, also, is a good library, and some old-established educational institutions. It gives, partly, a name to one of the provinces. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 43. 53. N. Long. 12. 55. E.

PESSARY, s. [pessaire, Fr.] a medicine of an oblong form to thrust up the uterus, &c.

PEST, s. [pestis, Lat.] a plague; any thing mischievous or destructive.

PESTALOZZI, HENRY, a celebrated Swiss teacher, and the introducer of the method of early instruction that is usually called by his name. He chose the laborious and, generally, thankless office of schoolmaster to the children of the poor, in preference to the prospects which his studies in law and divinity opened to him; and, first in his own house, and afterwards in schools for making the first parts of the path of learning agreeable to children, and yet more direct than the old pedantic schemes had laid it out. He wrote several works developing and explaining his method, which are of great use to teachers; and died in 1827, aged 82 years. His plan may be briefly characterized as the substitution of the knowledge of things for the knowledge of words, or names of things; and as the exercise of observation, and reflection, as well as of memory, which alone is tasked in the old and too prevalent system.

TO PESTER, v. a. [pester, Fr.] to disturb, perplex, harass, vex, turmoil, encumber.

PESTERER, s. one that pesters or disturbs.

PESTEROUS, a. encumbering; cumbersome.

PESTH, a very important place of trade in Hungary, Austria. It stands on the Danube, across which is a bridge of boats to Ofen, which stands on the other bank. It abounds in noble edifices, churches, government-buildings, colleges, &c. The university has a well-deserved name, and is supplied with an excellent library, an observatory, museums, &c. There are several other great schools. There are some valuable manufactures carried on here; but commerce is its great source of wealth, and its trade is carried on both by means of the river and by land, for it is finely situated, as a true emporium, between Turkey and Germany, &c. Pop. about 70,000. Lat. 47. 28. N. Long. 19. 4. E.

PESTHOUSE, s. an hospital for persons infected with the plague; a lazaretto.

PESTIFEROUS, a. [pestis and fero, Lat.] infectious like the plague; destructive; mischievous; pestilential; malignant; contagious; belonging to the plague.

PESTILENCE, s. [Fr. pestilencie, Lat.] a contagious distemper; plague; pest.

PESTILENT, a. [Fr. pestilens, Lat.] producing plagues; mischievous; destructive. In ludicrous language, used to exaggerate the meaning of another word.

PESTILENTIAL, (pestil'enshal) a. [pestilential, Fr.] partaking of the nature of, or producing, the plague; contagious; destructive; pernicious.

PESTILENTLY, ad. mischievously; destructively.

PESTILATION, s. [pestillan, Lat.] the act of breaking or pounding in a mortar.

PESTLE, s. [pinso, Lat.] an instrument used to pound with in a mortar. Pestle of pork, a gammon of bacon.

PET, s. [petit, Fr.] a slight fit of anger or resentment. Figuratively, a favourite.

PETAL, s. [petalum, Lat.] in Botany, the coloured leaves which compose the flowers of plants.

PETALOUS, a. having flower-leaves.

PETARD, s. [Fr.] a short kind of mortar, used formerly to blow open the gates of fortresses, cities, &c. in a siege, by being fixed against them by means of rings or handles on its rim.

PETAVIUS, or PETAU, DIONYSIUS, a very learned French Jesuit of the earlier half of the 17th century. He was at different times a rhetorical and a theological professor at different colleges, and he wrote on the theology, &c., and edited some works of the Fathers. But his fame is founded on his works on chronology, which are a chronological digest of universal history. The abridged work, Rationarium Temporum, which means Chronological Tables, is yet of value as a book of reference. He had a great and well-earned name in his day, and died in 1652, aged 49 years.

PETECHIAL, (petekial) a. [petechie, Lat.] marked with pestilential spots.

PETER, or CEPHAS, originally named Simon, but so surnamed by our Lord at his first introduction to him, one of the most eminent of the 12 apostles of Christ, was, before his summons to the training for the work afterwards laid on him, a fisherman of Capernaum of Galilee, with his brother and the two sons of Zebedee, James and John. He was distinguished for his ardent love for Jesus, for his rash and headlong temper, and for his lack of moral courage. He was specially favoured by his Master in various ways, and he denied that he knew any thing of him, when he had followed him into the high priest's hall in his earnest desire to be near him on his trial. After the ascension of Jesus had dissipated all his mistaken notions of the promised kingdom, he was, as had been foreshown in that surname, a man of rock; and, till the more cultivated and calm earnestness of Paul attracted the historian's notice, Peter stands foremost in every scene. Tradition says that he was crucified at Rome, with his head downwards, in 63 or 66 A. D. As this apostle is claimed by Romanists as the foundation of their arrogant claims to be regarded as the only church, &c., it is as well to notice, that it is by no means established that Peter ever held any relation to the church at Rome at all,—that the apostles' office was not to minister to particular churches, as bishops or elders, but to minister to the world; so that if he had, it would not have been the office of bishop over it,—that he was not the rock on which Christ would build his church, but that he had confessed Jesus to be the Christ, the Son of the living God, which was the rock, whilst he was the man of the rock,—that whatever favours Jesus showed him, were shared by James and John,—and that the charge given particularly to him after the resurrection, far from being the committing of the keys to him, was partly as heart-touching reproof for his cowardly denial, and partly an assurance that his penitence was accepted. The two Epistles of Peter were written to some he had preached to, and are fine and earnest writings, although lacking the profound argumentation of Paul, and the lofty spiritualism of John. They both show that amongst the earliest converts prodigious and practical errors were found; and they contain exhortations never out of season amongst men.

PETER, the name of several kings of Spain, and of two in particular of infamous notoriety. The third of that name who ruled over Aragon, having married the daughter of the king of Sicily, to gain possession of the island arranged and effected the massacre of all the French on it, one Easter-day. This horrible murder was perpetrated at the vesper hour, and is named in history the Sicilian Vespers. He died in 1285. The first of that name who reigned over Castile, was called the Cruel; and his reign was one series of treacherous and cold-blooded deceptions and murders. His subjects at last revolted; and Peter obtained the help of the Black Prince, son of Edward III. of England, to regain his throne. This royal English mercenary was properly rewarded by Peter's refusal to pay him for his soldiers' blood, misspent in such a cause. Peter was, not long afterwards, murdered by his natural brother, who had been chosen by the people instead of him. He fell in 1369.

PETER I. of Russia, called, worthily, Peter the Great, on succeeding to the imperial throne, with his half-brother Ivan, had first a conspiracy, concocted by Ivan's sister against him, to suppress; and next, after his marriage, another far more formidable, headed by Galitzin and the same turbulent lady; after which he removed them out of public life, and so became the Czar of Russia. He was yet but in earliest manhood, when he directed his attention to the condition of his empire, and began that course of practical reform, which has made his name so illustrious. Amongst other proceedings with this view, the most remarkable and characteristic was that of visiting Holland, England, and other countries of W. Europe, where he wrought with his own hand at ship-building, &c. and became acquainted with many arts that Russia was totally unacquainted with. Recalled after an absence of almost a year and a half by another attempt on his throne, he soon suppressed it, and most savagely punished the leaders of it. War with Sweden; the building of a new capital, named after himself, Petersburg; a second marriage with the famed Catherine Alexiowna; war with Turkey; more European travels, but not to learn trades; domestic troubles; and well-planned efforts to civilize his rude nobles, to benefit the country at large; filled up the rest of his reign; and he died in 1725, aged 53 years, having been sole Czar for 36 years. Peter was not at all acquainted with the political theories which the Independence of America and the French Revolution have made popular in our days. Russia was his estate, and all the people of Russia, from prince to serf, were his property, and must needs do his will. It was his will to improve his estate, and he did it; but he did no more. Peter often displayed the most revolting ferocity and sensuality; yet there was in him an impulse of genuine humanity, which at fitting moments would shine out. He was as unfavourably situated as any man ever was for deserving a good name; and yet he did obtain one honestly and truly; and—he lost his life in consequence of his efforts to save from drowning a boatful of his common soldiers.

PETER THE HERMIT, a French soldier, who, having gone on pilgrimage to Jerusalem, was deeply affected by the circumstance that the Holy City, with the sepulchre, &c., was in the hands of infidels; and came back, and, helped by the pope, preached the first crusade. Peter led the first bands of enthusiasts, most of whom fell on the plains of Nice; but he survived the slaughter of his followers, fought at the taking of Jerusalem, and lived to gain additional odour of sanctity by founding an abbey in his native country. He died in 1115, and, by a strange oversight on the part of the Roman pontiff, has never been canonized.

PETERBOROUGH, (Peterbôro) Northamptonshire. It is not a large place, for it has but one parish church besides the cathedral, which was formerly a monastery, and is a majestic structure. It is 78 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 6107.

PETER-HOUSE, a college of Cambridge, founded in the 13th century, and endowed shortly afterwards. The buildings are spacious, but not remarkable.

PETER-PENCE, an ancient levy or tax of a penny on each house throughout England, paid to the pope.

PETERS, HUGH, one of the eminent preachers of the time of the Puritan Revolution. He was an earnest opponent of church and civil tyranny; and could smite with the sword,—and did, as well as pray and preach against it. His faithfulness may be judged by the confidence put in him by those who knew him best; by his being amongst the regicide martyrs at the Restoration; and by his being chosen as a special mark for the falsehoods and inventions of the wittingly, who three times slew the slain of the second Charles. He fell in 1660, aged 61 years.

PETERSBURG, ST., a government of Russia, lying on the Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Finland; and bounded by the governments of Esthonia, Pskov, and Novogorod. It is level and marshy, and abounds yet in forests. Agriculture can be but little attended to, and the trade of the metropolis is the chief resource of the district. Pop. about 900,000.

PETERSBURG, ST., the capital city of Russia. It stands on the Neva, over which are five bridges of boats, and is of prodigious extent. There are built here many palaces, a college, a military school, and an exchange. Trade flourishes greatly here, because it is the seat of the emperors, and because foreigners have the same privileges as the natives of the place. There are woollen and linen manufactures here, paper-mills, powder-mills, places for preparing salt-petre, brimstone, and laboratories for fireworks. Here are also yards for making ropes, cables, and tackling for ships; a foundry, where cannon and mortars are cast; as also a printing-house. Some streets of this city are regular and well built; and the private houses are of wood or stone; whilst most of the public structures are massively built of granite. The churches are numerous, and some are very fine. The palaces and government buildings are particularly noble edifices. There are also theatres, schools, columns, and the splendid equestrian statue of the founder of the city, Peter the Great, which is placed on a vast mass of solid granite. Pop. about 900,000. Lat. 56. N. Long. 30. 19. E.

PETERWARDEIN, a famous fortress on the Danube, belonging to Hungary, Austrian. It consists of an upper and a lower fort; both made as strong as art can make a position of great natural strength. A small town has arisen near it and a bridge of boats crosses the river to a town called Neusatz. Pop. about 6500. Lat. 45. 16. N. Long. 19. 59. E.

PETERWOIT, a. in Botany, a plant.

PETIT, (petty) a. [Fr.] small, little, trivial; inconsiderable.

PETITION, (petishon) s. [peto, Lat.] request; entreaty; supplication; prayer; or a single article of a prayer. Petition of right, in Law, is the first step to be taken to obtain redress from the sovereign, on the part of a subject.

To PETITION, (petishon) v. a. to request, solicit, supplicate.

PETITIONARILY, ad. by way of begging the question.
 PETITIONARY, (petishonary) a. supplicatory; containing petitions or requests.

PETITIONER, (petishoner) s. one who petitions.

PETITORY, a. petitioning; claiming the property of any thing.

PETITOT, JOHN, a famous painter in enamel, who was a native of Geneva, but acquired his fame in England and France, under the patronage of Charles I. and Louis XIV., and afterwards returned to his native country, and died there in 1691, aged 84 years. Bordier, his brother-in-law, executed the drapery and subsidiary parts of all his portraits.

PETRA, the name of a ruined city of Arabia, situated in a valley, accessible only by a narrow gorge, called Wadi Mousa, communicating with the long hollow extending from the Dead Sea to the E. arm of the Red Sea. Its chief features are the tombs, which are cut into the solid rock that bounds the valley, and are, in many cases, elaborately adorned externally. There are also the ruins of houses, temples, arches, and columns; and the remains of a theatre. It has only recently been visited again by travellers, after centuries of utter desolation. The superstitions of the Arabs prevented them from approaching it. Lat. 30. 25. N. Long. 35. 38. E.

PETRARCH, or PETRARCA, FRANCESCO, one of the most celebrated poets of Italy, who lived in the 14th century, and was one of the earliest labourers in the revival of learning in Europe. His family removed from Italy, and Petrarch studied law, but afterwards assumed the clerical habit, and frequented the papal court at Avignon. It was at Avignon he saw the lady, whose name he has made immortal as his own, Laura, the wife of Hugues de Sade, who inspired him with so ardent an affection, that not even the change produced by age in her beauty, nor her death many years afterwards, all chilled. The conduct of this celebrated woman to her impassioned admirer was marked by the purest regard; and he, after endeavouring by travelling over France, Germany, Italy, and Spain, and by pretending an attachment to another, to escape from this enchantment, at length was not reconciled alone to her seeming coldness, but derived from it some of its chastening and sanctifying power. During his travels, he became intimate with all the learned men and writers of Europe, studied with them, sought for every relic of ancient literature, and fired all he knew with his own ardour, and united them into a true republic of letters. He was, himself, the centre of this world that he had so strangely formed; but he entered largely into the business of the daily world, he was the friend and adviser of princes, and few men of his vocation have ever borne the charge of so many weighty embassies. At Rome he was solemnly crowned in the capitol as poet laureate; and this was, perhaps, the noblest triumph of his whole life. He died in 1374, aged 70 years. His Laura died in 1348, aged 40 years. Petrarch's fame is built on his Italian poems, which were the occupation of his leisure, and the mere alleviation of the hopeless passion which he cherished. He also wrote some poems in Latin, which are quite forgotten; and several philosophical treatises, in the same language, on which he fondly hoped to rear a name, which are as much unknown as the poems. His Latin letters are numerous, and valuable in relation to the history of his age. His poems, which have, so unexpectedly as to himself, given him his world-wide renown, are all either sonnets, or compositions framed after the model of the canzoni of the Troubadours. They are all more or less immediately connected with his love for Laura, and they are surpassingly beautiful both in thought and expression, and less marred by mere conceits than so forced a kind of verse may be supposed capable of. To add one other word to this account of Petrarch;—to him, with Dante and Boccaccio, the Italian language is indebted for its glorious literature, for these writers made it what it is—so noble an instrument as can be devised for the utterance of all that is best and greatest in man's mind and heart.

PETRE, (pièter) s. petra, Lat.] nitre or saltpetre.

PETREL, s. in Ornithology, a large class of sea-birds, of which the one called the stormy petrel is most known, from the singularity of its habits, and the nautical superstitions connected with it.

PETRESCENT, a. growing or turning into stone.

PETREFACTION, s. [petra and facio, Lat.] the act of changing into stone; something made of stone.

PETRIEFACTIVE, PETRA'FIC, a. having the power to change into stone.

To PETRIFY, v. a. to change to stone.—v. n. to become stone.

PETROL, PETRO'LEUM, s. [pétrole, Fr.] in Mineralogy and Chemistry, a kind of half-fluid bitumen, resulting from the spontaneous decomposition of coal under the surface of the earth. The most celebrated places where it is found are Persia, the Birman Empire, Barbadoes, and Amiano, in Italy.

PETRONEL, s. [petrinal, Fr.] a pistol; a small gun used by horsemen.

PETRONIUS, TITUS, a Latin writer of the reign of Nero, who was made the leader and director of the imperial voluptuary's debaucheries and revels, whence he was surnamed Arbiter. He was at last condemned by his master, and put himself to death, in 66 A. D. The fragments of his book are full of unimaginable obscenity.

PETTICOAT, (pèttikòt) s. [petty and coat,] a small coat; an under-dress of females, which is tied round and hangs down from the waist.

PETTIFOGGER, s. [corrupted from pettivoguer, of petit and voguer, Fr.] a petty small-rate dabbler in law, who deals only in trifling, vexatious, or knavish causes.

PETTIGREE, s. in Botany, a shrub, called by some kneebolly, and butcher's broom.

PETTINESS, s. smallness; inconsiderableness.

PETTISH, a. easily provoked to slight anger; fretful; peevish.

PETTISHNESS, s. the quality of being pettish.

PETTITOEES, s. the feet of a sucking pig.

PETTO, s. [Ital.] the breast. Figuratively, privacy.

PETTY, a. [petit, Fr.] inconsiderable; inferior; little.

PETTY, SIR WILLIAM, the founder of the Landsdowne family, was a physician of such note during the Puritan Revolution, that he attended the army under Cromwell, in Ireland, and was retained in the service of Henry Cromwell. Having been employed to survey the forfeited estates, some charges were brought against him, and he was dismissed. He received the honour of Knighthood at the Restoration, and died in 1687, aged 64 years. He was an active promoter of the Royal Society, and presented to its notice a variety of singular and ingenious inventions. He wrote on political economy, &c. &c.

PETTYMUGUET, s. in Botany, the yellow goose-grass.

PETULANCE, PETULANCY, s. [petulantia, Lat.] sauciness; peevishness; wantonness.

PETULANT, a. [petulans, Lat.] perverse; saucy; wanton.

PETULANTLY, ad. with petulance; with saucy pertness.

PETUNSE, PETUNSE, s. one of the earths of which the porcelain ware of China is made. The other is termed Kaolin.

PEW, s. [puy, Belg.] a seat enclosed in a church. Amongst the characteristic tenets of revived High Churchism, as propounded by the divines of Oxford and their followers, is one respecting pews (as they spell the word), which enclosures they regard as obstructions to devotion. See PUSEYISM.

PEWET, s. [from its cry,] in Ornithology, the popular name of the lapwing.

PEWTER, s. [peauter, Belg.] an artificial metal, made of brass, lead, and tin; dishes and plates made of pewter.—a. made of pewter.

PEWTERER, s. one that deals in things made of pewter; a smith who works in pewter.

PHÉDRUS, LUCIUS, a Latin poet of the age of Augustus. He was that emperor's freedman, but felt the displeasure of Sejanus, the tyrannical minister of Tiberius, his successor. He wrote Fables, derived from various sources, and original; which, being used in schools, are not so much admired as they deserve.

PHENOMENON, (ph) has the sound of f in this and all the following words; s. [phainomai, Gr.] an appearance in the works of nature or the heavens; any fact or circumstance, considered as the subject matter of observation and reflection; any thing that strikes by its novelty or marvellousness.

PHAGEDE'NA, s. [phago and edo, Gr.] an ulcer that eats away the flesh.

PHAGEDE'NIC, PHAGEDE'NOUS, a. [phagédénique, Fr.] eating; corroding.

PHALANGER, s. in Zoology, an animal of the opossum kind, which inhabits the East India islands.

PHALANX, s. [Gr.] in Ancient Military Tactics, a large square battalion of foot-soldiers set close to each other, with their shields joined, and pikes turned cross-ways. In Anatomy, the three rows of small bones in the fingers.

PHALAKRIS, a native of Crete, who obtained the chief power in Agriguntum of Sicily, contrary to the constitution, and so was named a tyrant. His cruelty in the exercise of his power is one of the grounds for the modern use of this word. He had devised for him a brazen bull, in which he enclosed his victims, and then burned them to death; and he proved the excellence of this invention on Perillus, the luckless artist, first. He was at last exposed and killed, in his own bull, it is said, in 563 B. C. The Eupides ascribed to him are forgeries. Bentley's Dissertation of them should be studied by all who desire to call themselves classical students.

PHANTASM, (fântazm) PHANTASMA, (fântasma) s. [phainomai, Gr.] something appearing only to the imagination; a spectre, or vision.

PHANTASTIC, PHANTASTICAL, a. See FANTASTICAL.

PHANTOM, s. [phantome, Fr.] a spectre or apparition; a fancied vision.

PHARISATICAL, a. like a Pharisee; hypocritical; having an external appearance of religion, but inwardly vicious.

PHARISEES, [pharash, Heb.] a famous sect of the Jews, who distinguished themselves by their zeal for the traditions of the elders, and for their neglect of God's actual commands. They pretended that those traditions were delivered to Moses on Mount Sinai, and were preserved orally, till the lawyers and doctors wrote them down. From their rigorous observance of these traditions, they held themselves to be more holy than other men; and separated those who did not observe them, as sinners and profane persons, from themselves, so as not even to eat or drink with them. The name means the separate, but their conduct made it signify separators.

PHARMACEUTIC, PHARMACEUTICAL, a. [pharmakon, Gr.] relating to the knowledge or art of pharmacy or preparation of medicines.

PHARMACOLOGIST, s. [pharmakon and logos, Gr.] one who writes upon drugs.

PHARMACOLOGY, a. a scientific discourse of drugs and medicines.

PHARMACOPŒIA, s. [pharmakon and poieo, Gr.] a book containing rules for the composition of medicines.

PHARMACOPOLIST, s. [pharmakon and poleo, Gr.] an apothecary; one who sells medicines.

PHARMACY, s. [pharmakon, Gr.] the art of choosing, preparing, and mixing medicines.

PHAROS, PHARE, s. [Gr.] is a light-house or a pile raised near a port, where a fire is kept burning in the night to guide and direct vessels near at hand. The Pharos of Alexandria was long celebrated as one of the wonders of the world.

PHARYNGOTOMY, s. [pharynx and temno, Gr.] in Surgery, the act of making an incision into the larynx, to remove a tumour from the throat, which hinders respiration.

PHARYNX, s. [Gr.] in Anatomy, the upper part of the œsophagus, in which the food is received from the mouth.

PHASELS, s. [phaselis, Lat.] in Horticulture, French beans.

PHASIS, s. plural phases, [phainomai, Gr.] in Astronomy, the various appearances of the planets, according to the extent to which they are illuminated by the sun, as seen from the earth.

PHASM, (fasm) s. appearance; phantom.

PHEASANT, (fëzant) s. [phasianus, Lat. from Phasis,] in Ornithology, a very handsome bird, native to Asia Minor, largely preserved by English landlords, rigidly protected by English game laws, and highly injurious to English corn and to the English poor. Gold and silver pheasants are natives of China, and are common in collections of birds, living and dead, in this land. The gold pheasant is an exceedingly beautiful bird. There are some other kinds, equally remarkable for the beauty of their plumage.

PHEASANT-EYE, s. in Botany, a plant with scarlet blossoms; called also Adonis flower, red-maithes, and red-morocco; found in corn-fields, and flowering in June and July.

To PHEESE, (fëeze) v. a. [perhaps it should be written fëesse,] to curry or comb.

PHENICOPTER, s. [phoinix and pteron, Gr.] in Natural History, a kind of bird.

PHENOMENON, s. See PHENOMENON.

PHIAL, s. [phiala, Lat. phiele, Fr.] a small bottle of a cylindrical form. Leyden Phial. See ELECTRICAL JAR.

PHIDIAS, or PHEDIAS, the great Athenian sculptor, who flourished in the age of Pericles. It is generally believed that he was poisoned in prison, by those who had contrived his impeachment, out of malignity against Pericles, in 432 B. C. His greatest works were the chryselephantine colossal statues of Athena for the Parthenon of Athens, and of Zeus Olympius for the temple at Elis, but these have perished. The sculptures with which he and his pupils adorned the Parthenon of Athens, yet remain in part, and may be seen in the Elgin saloon of the British Museum.

PHIGALIA, a small town of Arcadia in Ancient Greece, from which the sculptures were brought which are now in the British Museum, and are called the Phigalian Marbles.

PHILADELPHIA, a celebrated city of Lydia, in Asia Minor. It was built by Attalus Philadelphus, a king of Pergamus, on the river Cogamus, near the foot of Mount Tmolus. It was one of the 7 churches of Asia, addressed in the Apocalypse, and is a place of some extent, but of no importance.

PHILADELPHIA, the capital of Pennsylvania, United States. It is situated on a neck of land at the confluence of the rivers Delaware and Schuylkill. It is built in a very regular manner, and the streets are very broad and handsome. It has a great many public squares, and many very fine buildings, amongst which may be mentioned the state-house, the late United States' bank, the bank of Pennsylvania, the mint, the exchange, &c. &c. It abounds in institutions of a philanthropic character; and Girard college, for the education of orphans, is a noble building, and of great value. Pennsylvania university and the medical college are also well sustained. Most of the houses have a small garden and orchard; and from the river are cut small canals, equally agreeable and beneficial. The wharfs are also fine and spacious, the warehouses large, numerous, and commodious, and the docks for ship-building well adapted to their purposes. It is a place of great importance both for trade and manufactures, and communicates by steamboats, railways, and canals with most of the other great places in the States. It is 138 miles from Washington. Pop. 220,423. There are 5 other places in the Union so named.

PHILANDER, s. in Zoology, an animal of the opossum kind, about the size of a rat, which is found in S. America.

PHILANTHROPY, s. [phileo and anthropos, Gr.] good nature; the love of mankind; general benevolence.

PHILEMON, a private Christian of Colosse, to whom the apostle Paul addressed a letter respecting a runaway slave, named Onesimus, which is a model for dignity and affection, and shows us more of Paul's private character than, perhaps, any other of his writings.

PHILIDOR, ANDREW, the great chess-player of the last century. He was professionally a musician and composer, and had some name for his skill, but he gradually relinquished the practice of his art, to devote himself entirely to his favourite game. It was with him no play, but a profound strategic study, and he acquired such ability in it, that a short while before his death, he beat two good players at once, he being blindfolded. He wrote a book on chess, which has only lately been superseded by later publications. He died in 1795, aged 69 years.

PHILIP, the name of several Macedonian kings, the most famous of whom are, first, Philip the father of Alexander the Great, who first raised that country to a position of eminence in Greece. He was a great general, but his statesmanship and diplomatic skill were greater than even his military ability. He conquered all the other states of Greece at the great battle of Chæronea, and was at length assassinated by one Pausanias, in 336 B. C., aged 47 years, and having reigned 24 years, leaving his projected war on Persia to be prosecuted by his son. The other Philip was the king when Rome was first beginning to threaten the states beyond the borders of Italy, and he attempted to join the great Carthaginian, Hannibal, in checking or breaking his power. But in the end he was conquered by the Romans, and died in 179 B. C., only just in time to avoid witnessing and sharing in the subjugation of the whole of Greece by the new and rising empire.

PHILIP, the name of five kings of Spain of whom the most celebrated is Philip the Second, the son of Charles V., the emperor of Germany, who is as complete a model of a Romanist prince as history can furnish. He was wedded to the English Queen Mary I., and he desired to espouse her sister and successor, Elizabeth. His attempts on England, and especially that by means of the Spanish Armada, are well known. His wars in the Netherlands, conducted by the barbarous and bigoted Duke of Alva, and afterwards by Don John of Austria, gained him, deservedly, a most evil name. In his own kingdom, he was more zealous than any other sovereign in supporting the Inquisition, and even used to be present at the burning of those condemned by the Holy Office. He did more to sow the seeds of the subsequent and present condition of that unhappy land, than all the other kings of Spain. The only thing else recorded of him, deserving notice, is that he built the Eseorial. He has this, however, to be set off against the evil he did, he did all this from his conscience, and not as the effects of state-policy. He died in 1598, aged 72 years.

PHILIP, or PHILIPPE, the name of 6 French kings, of whom the first was engaged in various contests with our English kings, William I. and II., who were also dukes of Normandy, in which he gained no better name than he did from his private vices. He died in 1108. The second was surnamed Augustus, and joined in the crusade which Richard of England led. His jealousy of the superior military prowess of the Lion-hearted king, was one of the causes of the failure of that expedition. He also took up the cause of Prince Arthur against his usurping uncle John, and subsequently invaded England at the request of the insurgent barons. He also made war on the Christians of the Alpine valleys. In his wars with the English kings, he gained some of their continental territories. He was, with his kingdom, laid under a papal interdict, when he professedly submitted to the pope, and was restored to favour. He died in 1223, aged 57 years, and having reigned 43. The fourth, surnamed the Fab, was a rapacious and ambitious prince, who gained many advantages through his unscrupulous conduct, and his cunning, both against the barons of his own kingdom, and against Edward I. of England, and others. He was the first who convoked the states-general, or representatives of the 3 estates of the kingdom; and thus to him may be attributed the first step towards republicanism in France. He also suppressed the order of Knights Templars; and died in 1311, having reigned 9 years. The sixth, or de Valois, was first regent, after the death of Charles IV., and then king. It was against him that Edward III. began his French wars, and gained the battle of Cressy. He died in 1350, after a reign of 22 years.

PHILIPPIANS, PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE, one of the letters written by the apostle during his first imprisonment at Rome. He had himself introduced Christianity there, with much opposition and danger; and the Christians had sent him presents by one of their teachers. This letter is a beautiful outpouring of the affection with which he regarded them; and contains much that exhibits the heart and character of the apostle, as well as some most beautiful and affecting views of the truth he lived and suffered for.

PHILIPPICS, s. a name given to the orations of Demosthenes against king Philip of Macedon; being esteemed the masterpieces of that great orator. The same term is also applied to the fourteen orations of Cicero against Mark Antony. Any invective declamation.

PHILIPPINE or MANILLA ISLANDS, a very large group of islands in the East Indian Ocean, lying between China and the Moluccas. They are generally mountainous; and there are several active volcanoes amongst them. The air is very hot and moist, and the soil fertile in rice, and many other useful vegetables and fruits. The trees are always green, and there are ripe fruits all the year. There are a great many wild beasts and birds, quite peculiar to them. The inhabitants are not all of one race, some being Malays, and some resembling the Negro variety. The principal of these islands are Manilla, or Lugon, and Mindanao, whose capital towns have the same names. They produce rice, sugar, tobacco, indigo, coffee, spices, &c. &c. And they manufacture cereots, and various useful articles. They belong to Spain, in great part; and there are considerable numbers of settlers from that country scattered about them. Pop. about 3,000,000. Manilla is the capital of the whole group.

PHILIPPINES, NEW. See CAROLINE ISLANDS.

PHILIPPUS, M. JULIUS, called also Philip the Arabian, an emperor of Rome, after Gordianus, whom he dethroned, and caused to be assassinated. His reign was interrupted by several insurrections; and at last Decius, whom he had sent to put down a rebellion, was proclaimed emperor by the soldiers; and Philip fell in battle with him, in 249, after a reign of 5 years. In this reign the secular games were celebrated, 1000 years after the foundation of the city.

PHILIPS, JOHN, an English poet, educated at Oxford, author of the Splendid Shilling, and a poem in praise of Cider, after the pattern of the Georgics of Virgil. He wrote other pieces also. But he never rose out of the ranks of the minor poets, and is also lost sight of amongst them. He died in 1708, aged 32 years.

PHILIPS, AMBROSE, a poet and dramatist of the beginning of the last century. He studied at Cambridge; and during his sojourn in London was acquainted with Addison, Steele, and all the wits and writers of the day. He was not such a writer as to live with his friends; he is partly indebted to Pope's merciless satire for an immortality in the company of Sir Richard Blackmore. He was made an officer in the Irish Prerogative court at last; and died in 1749, aged 54 years.

PHILISTINES, the name of one of the aboriginal tribes of Canaan, who were not expelled when the Israelites took possession of the land, and who remained there as a source of the greatest annoyance to them for many centuries; till at last their name gradually died out and their deeds were forgotten.

PHILO, JUDÆUS, a learned writer of Alexandria, of whose life nothing is known beyond his having gone twice as an ambassador to the emperor at Rome from the Jews of that city. He flourished in the very beginning of the Christian era. His writings are all based on the Platonic Philosophy, and being contemporary with the writings of the New Testament, and written in Greek, are of considerable value, both as helping to the discovery of the Hellenistic usage of words, and also as expounding the opinions of the thinkers and philosophers amongst the Jews.

PHILOLOGER, PHILOLOGIST, s. [philos and logos, Gr.] one who makes languages his chief study; a grammarian; a critic.

PHILOLOGICAL, a. belonging to philology.

PHILOLOGY, s. the science of words, or language. But in popular use it has a wider meaning, and includes all kinds of literature and criticism.

PHILOMEL, PHILOMELA, s. [Gr. and Lat.] in Poetry, the nightingale.

PHILOMOT, a. [corrupted from feuille morte, Fr.] of the colour of a dead leaf.

PHILOMENE, the last great military commander of the ancient Greeks. He was chosen to head the Achaean league, and he overthrew the city and the constitution of Sparta. He was at length captured by the Messenians, and poisoned in 183 B. C., aged about 70 years.

PHILOSOPHEME, s. [philos and sophia, Gr.] principle of reasoning; theorem.

PHILOSOPHER, s. [philosophos, Lat.] a person who studies philosophy. Popularly, one who is somewhat of a stoic in seasons of excitement. Philosopher's stone, a stone supposed by alchemists to turn every thing it touched into gold.

PHILOSOPHIC, PHILOSOPHICAL, a. [philosophique, Fr.] belonging to a philosopher; formed by philosophy; skilled in philosophy.

PHILOSOPHICALLY, ad. in a philosophical manner; rationally; wisely.

To PHILOSOPHIZE, v. a. to moralize; to reason like a philosopher; to inquire into the causes of phenomena.

PHILOSOPHY, s. [philosophia, Lat.] in strict usage it is the scientia primo of Lord Bacon, the clear statement of those great principles on which all science must be prosecuted, and without which there can be no science; but it is commonly employed to signify the scientific study of metaphysics, or ontology; and when it is used in relation to other sciences, it is defined as Mental Philosophy, Natural Philosophy, Political Philosophy, Moral Philosophy, &c. Positive Philosophy, in recent writers, means a scheme of knowledge based solely on experience, and rigidly built up by means of experience in every branch; or else, and more correctly, a general system of metaphysics, constructed on principles rigidly investigated and proved, and by means of an organon, or method applicable to the subject, in opposition to the mere refutation of false systems, or the mere investigation and determination of the principles and the method. Generally, an hypothesis or system for explaining any phenomena; reasoning.

PHILOSTORGY, s. [phileo and storge, Gr.] natural affection; the love of parents towards their children.

PHILOTIMY, s. [phileo and time, Gr.] love of honour; ambition.

PHILOXENY, s. [phileo and zenos, Gr.] hospitality; kindness to strangers.

PHILTER, s. [Gr.] amongst the ignorant and the wicked, a drink to cause love.

To PHILTER, v. a. to charm to love.

PHIZ, Phyz, s. [from physiognomy, Gr.] the face, visage, or countenance; used ludicrously.

PHLEBOTOMIST, s. [phleps and temno, Gr.] one that opens a vein; a blood-letting.

To PHLEBOTOMIZE, v. a. to open a vein, or let blood.

PHLEBOTOMY, s. the act of opening a vein, or letting blood.

PHLEGM, (flēm) s. [phlegma, Gr. phlegme, Fr.] in Physiology, the viscid secretion of the mucous membrane lining the larynx, bronchie, &c.

PHLEGMAGOGUE, (phlegmagōgē) s. [phlegma and ago, Gr.] in old Medicine, a purgative which affected the phlegm, or serum of the blood, alone.

PHLEGMATIC, a. [phlegmatique, Fr.] abounding in phlegm; dull; cold.

PHLEGMON, s. [phlego, Gr.] in Medicine, an inflammation; an inflamed tumour.

PHLEGMONOUS, a. inflammatory; burning.

PHLEME, s. [from phlebotomy, sometimes written phleam,] in Veterinary Art, a pointed instrument placed on the vein of a horse, and driven into it with a blow, in bleeding.

PHLOGISTIC, a. in the old Chemistry, belonging to phlogiston.

PHLOGISTICATED, a. in the old Chemistry, impregnated with phlogiston.

PHLOGISTON, s. [Gr.] in the old Chemistry, an imaginary substance, supposed to be a constituent part of all inflammable bodies, and of many other substances, being that which rendered them combustible.

PHOCAS, one of the Eastern emperors, who was at first a common soldier, but was proclaimed emperor during a revolt of the army, and recognised by the patriarch of Constantinople and the pope of Rome. But he was a cruel sovereign, and the Persian emperor opposed him, and in the end, in spite of the favour of the church, he was dethroned and put to death, in 610, after a reign of 8 years.

PHOCION, one of the true Grecian heroes: he was a military commander of Athens, during its last period of independence and greatness, but he was more noted for his political wisdom, and he often stood in opposition to Demosthenes, whose voice was still for war, though he did not fight so well as he spoke. He fell at last in one of those revolutions, so frequent in such states, being put to death in prison, in 317 a. c. He was a disciple of Plato, but his manners and recorded sayings savour more of the porch than of the academy; yet his character, as it is embalmed by Plutarch, who followed universal tradition, was one to command the reverent esteem of all the wise and good.

PHOCIS, in Ancient Geography, a small state of Greece, extending from the Corinthian Gulf to the Gulf of Opuntius, and bounded by Locris, Doris, and Boeotia. Its chief mountain was Parnassus; its chief river, Cephissus. Delphi, with its famous oracle, and Crissa, were its principal cities.

PHŒNICIA, a small but most celebrated state of antiquity. It lay on the E. shore of the Mediterranean Sea, and was bounded inland by Mount Lebanon. Canaan and Mount Carmel defined it at one extremity, and a small river, named Eleutherus, at the other. It was watered only by mountain streams, and had little space for profitable or extensive agriculture. But by manufactures and commerce it rose to the very summit of renown. It had valuable mines, and wide forests; and its people found out the art of glass-making, and of purple-dyeing. But its trade with foreign countries, by means of its fleets and its colonies, was the great source of its wealth. It possessed, at a very early period, most of the islands of the Archipelago; they had settlements in Spain, Tartessus, Gades, Carteia; on the N. coast of Africa, Utica, Carthage, (which in time rivalled the parent state,) and Adrumetum; on Sicily, Panormus, and Lilybæum; and perhaps in S. Asia, beyond the Persian Gulf. In their voyages they most probably coasted round Africa, and they certainly maintained a regular intercourse with Britain, the tin-island. But it is impossible to do more than thus barely indicate the extent and the character of their trade. Its influence on the W. world is sufficiently seen in their grateful ascription of the invention of letters to this state, and in the share assigned to it, in Grecian legends, in forming the states of that land, which afterwards so completely outshone this. The quiet, peaceful, selfish-seeming labours of commerce, although their influence on human advancement is so great, are rarely chronicled by the historian, and, indeed, hardly admit of it; but the splendid efforts of military genius and statesmanship, whether in an individual or a nation, and the sudden effects realized by foreign conquest, or domestic legislation, although so insecure, and so interrupted, strike the eye, and furnish just the subjects to fill the historian's canvass. After-ages write histories of literature, and, with yet more toilsome labour, histories of commerce. Tyre, Sidon, and Berytus, were the great cities of Phœnicia. See TYRE, SIDON, &c.

PHŒNIX, s. in fabulous Natural History, a wondrous bird, of which but one ever lived at a time, in the deepest deserts, to an immense age, when it built a pile of spices, was consumed in it, and a young one rose out of its ashes. In Astronomy, one of the S. constellations.

PHONIC, a. according to sound.

PHONICS, s. [phone, Gr.] the doctrine of sounds.

PHONOCAMPTIC, a. [phone and kampto, Gr.] having the power to infect or turn the sound, and by that means to alter it.

PHONOGRAPHY, s. [phone and grapho, Gr.] a scheme of writing, in which each separate sound, and each modification of it, in speaking, is professedly represented by invariable symbols; and which is proposed, by those who have adopted it, for universal adoption, to the final and utter extinction of all the multifarious alphabets, &c. at present in use in the world; but which, being unfortunately based on our English erroneous vowel scale, and not at all including many sounds which occur in other languages on the continent, and in Asia, the nasale of France, the gutturals of Germany, the cerebrals of India, &c., (not to mention the click of the Caffre and Hottentot tongues,) seems to be somewhat ill adapted to aid in bringing on the millennium, in the way of removing the impediment to intercourse between different nations, arising from variety of language, although it is the basis of a very good system of short-hand.

PHOSPHATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with phosphoric acid.

PHOSPHITES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with phosphorous acid.

PHOSPHOR, Phosphorus, s. [Lat. from phos and phero, Gr.] the morning star, Venus, when she rises before the sun. In Chemistry, an elementary substance, transparent and almost colourless, (when pure,) easily cut with a knife, and exceedingly inflammable. It enters largely, in various combinations, into both animal and vegetable structures, and is found in some rocks and earths also.

PHOSPHORESCENCE, s. a pale, faint, bluish light, like that emitted by phosphorus.

PHOSPHORESCENT, a. in Chemistry, emitting light like phosphorus.

PHOSPHORIC, Phosphoric, a. in Chemistry, belonging to phosphorus. Phosphoric acid is a compound of oxygen and phosphorus. Phosphorous acid has a smaller proportion of oxygen than phosphoric acid.

PHOSPHURETS, s. in Chemistry, substances formed by a union with phosphorous acid.

PHOSPHURETTED, part. in Chemistry, combined with a phosphuret.

PHOTIUS, a patriarch of Constantinople, in the 9th century. He was of noble parentage, well educated, and perhaps the greatest genius of his age. While in civil life, he cultivated all learning, sacred and profane. He was commander of the imperial body-guards, first senator of Constantinople, chief private secretary to the emperor, and employed in many embassies. When the emperor Michael III. deposed Ignatius from the patriarchate, Photius was appointed in his stead, and his passage through the various grades of ecclesiastical promotion, was effected in four days. The advocates of Ignatius and the Roman bishops would not acknowledge him; and he was, on occasion of offences given to the emperor, twice deposed himself. The second time he was also banished to Armenia, where he died in about 890, at a very advanced age. He was once excommunicated by the Roman bishop, and he replied by a similar decree of excommunication against the bishop. He was no mean adversary, and the charges he brought against the Roman observances were well calculated to serve his purpose. He wrote many books and letters, but his most remarkable work is entitled Myriobiblon, which gives a critical account of 280 authors, whose works he had read, with summaries of their contents, and extracts of considerable length, from which we derive all the knowledge we possess of many books no longer extant.

PHOTOGENIC, a. [phôs and gignomai, Gr.] produced by the action of light, applied to views, portraits, copies of drawings, &c., effected on prepared surfaces by means of the chemical action of light.

PHOTOGRAPHY, s. [phôs and grapho, Gr.] the art of producing portraits, views, copies of pictures, &c., by the action of light on surfaces prepared for the purpose. They are usually taken by means of a camera obscura, and the plate on which the image is thrown is commonly of silver, or of copper silvered, the preparation being, by a simple process, to coat the plate with ioduret of silver, which is highly susceptible of the chemical influence of light. A few minutes are sufficient to produce the effect required, and the plate, by being exposed to the fumes of mercury, or coated with some transparent metallic solution, may be exposed to the light without any change in the photogenic impression. Sometimes the portraits are coloured by hand afterwards, which adds considerably to the effect of them. This process is called, after the first inventor, Daguerriotype. In another process, called Kalotype, or Talbotype, the impression is taken on paper prepared in a peculiar manner, and fixed by a subsequent process. There are other varieties of this art, but it is yet evidently in its infancy alone. The researches of philosophers are beginning to be directed to it, and Actinology, [from aktin and logos, Gr.] as it has been named, promises to be one of the most wonderful and valuable branches of physical science. See LIGHT.

PHOTOMETER, s. [phôs and metreo, Gr.] in Optics, an instrument to measure the intensity of light.

PHRASE (frase) s. [phrazo, Gr.] a mode of speech peculiar to a language; an expression; style.

To PHRASE, (frase) v. a. to style, call, name, or express.

PHRASEOLOGY, (fraseology) s. [phrasis and lego, Gr.] style; diction; a phrase-book.

PHRENETIC, PHRENTIC, a. [phrenitis, Gr.] frantic; delirious; inflamed in the brain.

PHRENTIS, s. [Gr.] madness.

PHRENOLOGY, s. [phrên and logos, Gr.] in Anthropology, that branch which treats of the relation between the intellectual faculties, the passions, and the mind of man generally in its relation to the present state, and the structure and conformation of the brain. That the brain is the medium of communication with the material world, for the immaterial being, that is properly man,—none can doubt. Nor can any, who have at all observed the men they have known, doubt that there is a correspondence between certain mental peculiarities and capabilities, and certain configurations of the skull (which, in general, faithfully represents the form and proportions of the brain). Some particular cerebral developments are, by innumerable examples, established as indications of certain mental peculiarities. But a better psychology is perhaps required, and a more scientific and careful mode of observing the physical facts, before Phrenology will be able to rank as a distinct science. It is greatly to be regretted that ignorance, impudent pretence, and most thinly-veiled irreligion, should have interfered in this inquiry to the extent that they have, to the prejudice of true science and of truth, and to the unspeakable hurt of those who have been led away by them.

PHRENOMAGNETISM, s. [phrên and magnês, Gr.] in Mesmerism, the general name for certain phenomena, induced by mesmeric influence, in which particular mental peculiarities, &c. in the patient, are called into most lively action, by the operator.

PHRENSY, (frénzy) s. [phrénêsia, Fr.] madness. Often written frénzy.

PHRYGIA, in Ancient Geography, a country of the centre of Asia Minor, bounded by Bithynia, Galatia, Cappadocia, Cilicia, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Lycia, Caria, Maonia, Lydia, and Mysia. The range of the Taurus crossed its S. part, and most of the great rivers flowing into the Mediterranean and Euxine Seas sprang within its borders. There were also several large lakes here. It was almost wholly agricultural and pastoral. Laodicea, Colosse, and Iconium were its chief cities.

PHRYNICHUS, an Athenian tragedian, of whose plays no fragment remains. He first brought female parts into the drama, and seems to have been more of a lyric than strictly dramatic poet. He flourished in 500 B. C.

PHTHARTICKS, (thárticks) s. [phthairo, Gr.] corrupting medicines.

PHTHISICAL, (ftizikal) a. [phthisique, Fr. from phthisis, Gr.] coughing; consumptive.

PHTHISIC, PHTHISIS, (ftizik, ftizis) s. consumption; the disease in which the lungs are destroyed by the formation of tubercles within them; and for which at present no remedy is known.

PHYLACTERY, s. [phulatto, Gr.] amongst the Jews, a bandage on which was written some sentence from the Old Testament, worn on the wrists and foreheads.

PHYSIC, (fyzic) s. [phusis, Gr.] the science or art of healing; medicine. In common language, a purge. Physics, the whole circle of natural philosophy.

To PHYSIC, (fyzik) v. a. to apply medicines.

PHYSICAL, (fyzikal) a. [physique, Fr.] relating to natural philosophy; belonging to medicine, or the science of healing; medicinal, or assisting health; natural, opposed to spiritual.

PHYSICALLY, (fyzikally) ad. according to nature; according to the principles of natural philosophy; according to the science or rules of medicine; naturally, or sensually, opposed to spiritually.

PHYSICIAN, (fyzishian) s. [physicien, Fr.] one who prescribes remedies for any disease.

PHYSICOTHEOLOGY, (fyzikothelogy) s. [phusis and theologia, Gr.] the arguments supporting the belief in the being and attributes of God, drawn from the consideration of the works of nature.

PHYSIOGNOMER, PHYSIOGNOMIST, (fyzionomist) s. [physionomiste, Fr. from phusis and gnomon, Gr.] one who judges of the disposition, &c. by the features of the face.

PHYSIOGNOMIC, PHYSIOGNOMICAL, a. drawn from the contemplation of the features of the face; conversant in physiognomy.

PHYSIOGNOMY, (fyzionomy) s. [physionomie, Fr.] the art of discovering the disposition, capabilities, &c. from the features of the face; the face; the cast of the countenance.

PHYSIOLOGICAL, (fyziological) a. [phusis and logos, Gr.] relating to physiology.

PHYSIOLOGIST, (fyzilogist) s. one versed in physiology.

PHYSIOLOGY, (fyziology) s. the science which treats of the various functions of the life of organized bodies, both plants and animals.

PHYTIVOROUS, a. [phuton, Gr. and voro, Lat.] that eats grass or any vegetables.

PHYTOGRAPHY, (fytography) s. [phuton and grapho, Gr.] a description of plants.

PHYTOLOGY, s. [phuton and logos, Gr.] the science of plants; botany.

PIACULAR, PIACULOUS, a. [piaculum, Lat.] expiatory; having the power to atone; such as requires expiation; criminal; atrociously bad.

PIA-MATER, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, a thin and delicate membrane, which lies under the dura-mater, and immediately covers the substance of the brain.

PIA-NET, s. in Ornithology, the lesser woodpecker; the magpie.

PIA-NO, s. in Music, an Italian word for soft or slow.

PIA-NO FORTE, s. [Ital.] a well-known musical instrument, the tones of which are produced by wires, struck by hammers, by means of keys. It is an instrument of considerable compass and power for chamber music, and is well suited to the domestic habits of the English. There are several varieties, named from their form, &c., Grand, Square, Cottage, Piccolo, &c.

PIA-STER, s. [piastra, Ital.] an Italian coin valued at about 5s. sterling; a piece of eight.

PIAZZA, s. [Ital.] a walk under a roof supported by pillars.
PIAZZA, JOSEPH, a famous astronomer of Italy, in the last and present centuries. He was of the religious order of Theatines, and held professorships at Genoa, Malta, Ravenna, and Palermo, in philosophy and mathematics, and narrowly escaped trouble on account of some aberrations (real or imaginary) from the authorized faith. In an observatory he commenced at Palermo, and in one at Naples, he laboured for many years with great diligence, and discovered one of the asteroids, which he named Ceres. He travelled in France and England for some time, and formed intimacies with the great astronomers of those countries. He died in 1826, aged 80 years. His treatises are numerous, and of them all, his Catalogue of the fixed Stars is the most valuable.

PIBROCH, s. [Scot.] a military tune, or the tune of a war-song played on the bagpipes, amongst the Highlanders of Scotland.

PICA, s. the name of a particular form of printing types, of which there are two sizes, usually called Pica and Small Pica.

PICARD, JEAN, a noted French astronomer of the 17th century. He was prior of Rille in Anjou, and became professor of astronomy at Paris. He was a most diligent observer, and not meanly acquainted with the higher mathematics. He first applied the telescope to the quadrant, and invented the natural quadrant. He was also engaged in measuring a degree of the meridian, and in this, with all his disadvantages, he was surprisingly successful. His name is connected with other discoveries, and his works are numerous. He died in 1682, aged 62 years.

PICARON, s. [picare, Ital.] a robber, plunderer, marauder, pirate.

PICCAGE, s. [picagium, low Lat.] money paid at fairs for breaking ground for booths.

PICCONI, NICHOLAS, a celebrated musical composer of the last century, born in Italy, but chiefly resident in France. The greatest passage of his life was his famous controversy with Gluck, respecting the superiority of the musical schools of their respective countries, wherever all Paris rang. In the height of the French Revolution he fled to Naples, but was glad to return. He died in 1800, aged 72 years. His operas, oratorios, &c. &c., are exceedingly numerous.

PICHEGRU, CHARLES, a celebrated French general under the Republic. He was born in humble life, and studied at Brienne. He first fought in America. At the Revolution he rose rapidly, and succeeded to the post of Dumouriez, when he restored the discipline of the army and conquered Holland. He suppressed an insurrection in Paris; and afterwards, at the head of the army on the Rhine, entered into negotiations for the restoration of the Bourbons. Being recalled, he lived for a time privately; but afterwards was chosen on the council of 500, and was arrested with several others for being concerned in a royalist conspiracy. He escaped deportation and fled to England; but becoming acquainted with the Chouan chief, Georges Cadoudal, returned privately to Paris, was detected, arrested, and strangled in prison, in 1804, aged 43 years.

PICK, v. [picken, Belg.] to cull; to choose; to gather industriously; to separate from any thing that is useless or filthy; to clean by gathering off gradually.—[pick, Fr.] to pierce or strike with a beak or sharp instrument. To pick a hole in one's coat, is used proverbially for seeking occasion of exposing or finding fault with another. To pick a pocket, to steal from the pocket, privately.—v. n. to eat slowly, and by small morsels; to do any thing leisurely.

PICK, s. [pique, Fr.] a sharp-pointed instrument.
PICKAPACK, ad. (formed, by reduplication, from pick.) upon one's back, or after the manner of a pack.

PICKAXE, s. an axe with a sharp point; an axe not made to cut, but to pierce.

PICKBACK, a. [corrupted from pickapack] on the back.

PICKED, a. [piqué, Fr.] sharp.

PICKET, v. a. [piccare, Ital.] to pirate; to rob; to make a flying skirmish.

PICKER, s. one who picks; a sharp-pointed instrument.

PICKEREL, s. [from pique] in Ichthyology, a small pike.

PICKERING, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is seated on a small brook; and is a pretty good town, with an old castle. It is 223 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 3901.

PICKLE, s. [pekel, Belg.] any kind of salt or sour liquor in which things are preserved; a thing kept in sour liquor. A condition or state; used in contempt. Pickle, or pickled, is a small parcel of land enclosed with a hedge, which in some countries is called a piegle.

PICKLE, v. a. to preserve in salt or sour liquor; to season; to imbue with any thing bad.

PICKLEHERRING, s. a merry-andrew; an arch rogue; a buffoon; a zany.

PICKLOCK, s. an instrument by which locks may be opened without the key; a person who opens locks without a key.

PICKPOCKET, [PICKPURSE], s. one who steals any thing privately out of a person's pocket or purse.

PICKTHANK, s. a person who is officious to curry favour with another by base means.

PICKTOOTH, s. an instrument used to clean teeth.

PICO, GIOVANNI, COUNT OF MIRANDOLA AND CONCORDIA, one of the distinguished Platonists of Florence in the palmy days of the Medici. He received the best education the times could afford; and much after the fashion of the admirable Crichton, in his travels in France and Italy, engaged in public discussions with the members of the different universities he visited, challenging them publicly to dispute respecting certain theses; for which amusement he narrowly escaped a practical acquaintance with the Inquisition at Rome. He was one of the friends of Lorenzo the Magnificent; and aided in the philosophical and literary revolution, which he headed, and which had so important a bearing on the Reformation under Luther. His works have long ago been forgotten, though his name never may. He died in 1494, aged 31 years.

PICTORIAL, a. [picture, Lat.] produced by a painter; adorned with pictures or engravings.

PICTS, s. [picctus, from pingo, Lat.] the name given by the Romans to one of the tribes inhabiting modern Scotland, from the way in which they adorned their bodies, much resembling the customs of the natives of N. America.

PICTS WALL, a name of the vallum built by the emperor Adrian from Solway Frith, in Cumberland, to Newcastle and Tynemouth.

PICTURE, s. [pictura, Lat.] a resemblance of persons or things painted or engraved, &c. Figuratively, any resemblance or representation.

TO PICTURE, v. a. to represent by painting. Figuratively, to represent in the mind.

PICTURESQUE, (picturés) a. fine; beautiful; like a picture.

TO PIDDLE, v. n. [from peddle] to pick at table; to eat squeamishly; to trifle, and attend to small parts rather than the main.

PIDDLER, s. one that picks a bit here and there at table; one that eats squeamishly, or acts triflingly.

PIE, s. in Cookery, a dish of meat, fruit, &c., baked with a crust of pastry over it.—[pie, Fr. pica, Lat.] in Ornithology, a magpie, or parti-coloured bird. The old popish service-book.

PIEBALD, a. of various colours; diversified in colour.

PIECE, (pece) s. [piece, Fr.] a patch; a fragment, or part of a whole; a picture; a composition or performance of some artist; a single great gun, or hand gun; a coin. Applied to portions, and ending a sentence, it signifies each. More of a piece with, implies resemblance of the same kind or sort. In Commerce, sometimes the whole, or part of a whole.

TO PIECE, (pece) v. a. to enlarge by the addition of something; to join or unite. To increase or supply some defect by addition, followed by out—v. n. to join; to be compacted.

PIE/CELESS, (peceless) a. whole; compact; not made of separate parts or pieces.

PIE/CER, (pecer) s. one who pieces.

PIE/CEMEAL, (pecemeal) a. [pie and meal, Sax.] in pieces; by piece and piece.

PIED, (pi-ed) a. [from pie] variegated, or composed of different colours.

PIEDMONT, (Pedmont) a common and ancient name for a large district of the continental part of the kingdom of Sardinia. It is included between the Alps, which lie in a semicircle, and the Austrian dominions and Parma; is watered by the Po and its tributaries; and abounds in all kinds of corn, cattle, &c. It is divided into Turin, Susa, Ivrea, Pignerol, and Biella. Pop. about 3,000,000.

PIEDNESS, s. variegation; diversity of colours.
PIELED, a. [perhaps from peeled or piled] having short hair; bald.

PIEPOWDER COURT, s. [piéd and poudre, Fr.] a court held in fairs for redress of all disorders committed therein.

PIER, (peer) s. [pierre, Fr.] the columns which support the arch of a bridge; the masonry between the windows and doors of houses.

To PIERCE, (peerce) v. a. [percer, Fr.] to penetrate or enter; to affect or touch the passions.—v. n. to make way by force into or through any thing; to affect severely; to enter or dive. Synon. Piercing seems to be executed by a rapid stroke; penetrating, by making way gradually.

PIERCER, (peercer) s. an instrument used in boring holes.
PIERCINGLY, (peercingly) ad. in a sharp and affecting manner.

PIERCINGNESS, (peercingness) s. the power of piercing.

PIETISTS, a denomination of certain Protestants, who lived in Germany in the latter part of the 17th century, and were distinguished for their exemplary piety, and for the fervour with which they cultivated it. They were not a sect or separate communion.

PIETY, s. [pietas, Lat. piété, Fr.] the reverential discharge of duty, whether to God, parents, or country.

PIG, s. [Porcus, Belg.] in Natural History, the young of swine; sometimes used generally for swine. Pig iron, pig lead, &c. are those metals in short thick bars, purified sufficiently to be used in castings, &c. The name originated in a pun of the workmen; the long furrows into which the metal is run from the furnace, are called (provincially) soughs, (sows), and thence the shorter side-furrows were named pigs.

To PIG, v. a. to farrow, or bring forth young, applied to a sow.

PIGEON, s. [Fr.] in Ornithology, the name for a very large family of birds, of which the stock-dove, ring-dove, and turtle-dove are native species; whilst the domesticated varieties are almost numberless.

PIGEONLIVERED, a. soft; mild; void of spleen or resentment.

PIGIN, s. a little pig; a small vessel. A provincial word in both senses.

PIGHT, (pit) old preter. and past part. of pitch; pitched; determined; fixed.

PIGMENT, s. [pigmentum, from pingo, Lat.] colour to be laid on any body; paint.

PIGMY, s. [pigmaios, Gr.] a person of low stature; any thing inconsiderable.

PIGNORATION, s. [pignus, Lat.] the act of pledging.

PIGNOTTI LAURENCE, an Italian writer of the last century. He was first a physician, and held a professorship at Pisa afterwards. He then wrote a History of Tuscany; but his Fables are his most famous work, which if not original as to its subjects, is wholly so in the way he has treated them, and in the gracefulness of the poetry. He died in 1812, aged 73 years.

PIGNUT, s. in Botany, the earth nut.

PIGRITUDE, s. [piger, Lat.] laziness; slothfulness; weariness.

PIGSNEY, s. [piga, Sax.] a word of fondness to a girl.

PIKE, s. [picque, Fr.] in Ichthyology, a large and voracious kind of fresh-water fish. It sometimes grows to a great size, and is esteemed delicate eating. A long lance used by foot soldiers before the invention of bayonets, and very much used by the French in the revolutionary war, before they were provided with muskets for the many thousands that joined their armies. A fork used in husbandry. Among turners, two iron spikes or spurs between which any thing is fastened.

PIKED, a. [piqué, Fr.] sharp; ending in a point.

PIKEMAN, s. a soldier armed with a pike.

PIKESTAFF, s. the wooden staff or the frame of a pike.

PILASTRE, s. [pilastre, Fr. pilastro, Ital.] in Architecture, a square pillar, sometimes insulated, or set within a wall, and only showing a fourth or fifth part of its thickness.

PILAT, MONT, the name of one of the loftiest mountains of the Cevennes, so called from the clouds which commonly envelope its summit, as if it were pilate, or capped by them, not from any connexion with Pontius Pilate. It is 3500 feet high.

PILATE, PONTIUS, the procurator of Judaea, by whom, at 674

the instigation of the high priest and leaders of the Jewish people, against his own better judgment, our Lord was crucified. His question, "What is truth?" which is usually ascribed to his levity, was (as Luther said) a proof of his worldly common sense, and his desire to save Jesus; the "truth" could not, but some lawyer's plea might have been of avail. He was, soon after the transactions recorded in the New Testament, banished to Vienne in Gaul, where he killed himself, in 38 A. D.

PILCHARD, s. in Ichthyology, a fish like a herring, but smaller.

PILCHER, PILCH, s. [pellis, Lat.] any coat or garment made of skin or lined with fur; a furred gown.

PILE, s. [Fr. pyle, Belg.] a strong piece of wood, or stake, driven into the ground to make a foundation firm; a heap; any thing heaped together to be burned; an edifice or building.—[pilus, Lat.] a hair; the nap of cloth or velvet.—[pila, Ital.] one side of a coin; the reverse of a cross.—[pilum, Lat.] the head of an arrow. In the plural, in Surgery, the hemorrhoids.

To PILE, v. a. to heap; to fill with something heaped.

PILEATED, a. [pilatus, Lat.] in the form of a cover or hat.

PILER, s. one who accumulates.

To PILFER, v. a. [piller, Fr. or from pelf] to steal.—v. n. to practise petty theft.

PILFERER, s. one who steals petty things.

PILFERINGLY, ad. with petty larceny; filchingly.

PILFERY, s. petty theft.

PILGRIM, (pélerin, Fr.) one who travels on a religious account; a wanderer.

To PILGRIM, v. n. to wander; to ramble.

PILGRIMAGE, s. [pélerinage, Fr.] a journey on a religious account.

PILL, s. [pillula, Lat. pillule, Fr.] a medicine made into a round mass like a pea.

To PILL, v. a. [piller, Fr.] to rob or plunder. To strip off the bark, used for peel.—v. n. to be stript away; to come off in flakes or scorie, more properly peel.

PILLAGE, s. [Fr.] plunder; the act of plundering.

To PILLAGE, v. a. to plunder; to spoil.

PILLAGER, s. a plunderer; a spoiler.

PILLAR, s. [pilar, Brit. pilar, Span. pilar, Brit. and Armor.,] a column; a supporter. In Botany, the cylindrical stalk of a fungus, as in the common mushroom; also the little shaft upon which the feather of downy seeds is placed, as in the dandelion.

PILLARED, a. supported by columns; resembling a column.

PILLION, s. [from pillow,] a soft saddle used by women in riding behind a horseman; a low saddle; a pannel; a pad.

PILLORY, s. [pillori, Fr.] a frame erected on a pillar, having three holes through which the head and hands of a criminal are put, when he is exposed to the public.

To PILLORY, v. a. to expose in a pillory.

PILLOW, (pillô) s. [puleve, Belg.] a bag of down or feathers laid under the head when a person sleeps.

To PILLOW, (pillô) v. a. to rest or support any thing on a pillow.

PILLOWBEER, PILLOWCASE, s. the cover of a pillow.

PILLWORT, s. in Botany, the globular peppergrass; a kind of fern.

PILOSITY, s. [pilus, Lat.] hairiness.

PILOT, s. [pilote, Fr.] one who steers a ship.

To PILOT, v. a. to steer or conduct a ship.

PILOTAGE, s. [pilotage, Fr.] a pilot's skill; knowledge of coasts; a pilot's hire.

PILPAY, called also BIDPAI, the alleged author of a very ancient collection of fables in the Sanscrit language. Most of them have existed from the very earliest days in many Oriental languages, and in Latin, German, Spanish, Italian, &c.

PILSER, s. in Entomology, a small kind of moth.

PIMENTO, (piment, Fr.) in Botany, &c., a kind of spice, of a round figure, called Jamaica pepper.

PIMP, (pinge, Fr.) one who provides gratifications for the lusts of another; a procurer; a pander.

To PIMP, v. a. to provide gratifications for the lust of another; to pander; to procure.

PIMPERNEL, s. in Botany, a common English plant, with pretty, small, scarlet flowers. A species still prettier grows in bogs. Both of them shut their blossoms before rain. This name is commonly given to some other English plants.

PIMPING, a. [pimpenesch, Belg.] little; petty; worthless; mean.

PIMPLE, s. [pompette, Fr.] in Medicine, a small red pustule. PIMPLED, a. having red pustules.

PIN, s. [epingle, Fr.] a short piece of pointed tinned wire, with a head, used abundantly in female dress, &c. The making of this useful article is a very important part of English manufactures; is one of the most remarkable instances of the general advantage from what economists call division of labour. Every separate operation, preparing, cutting into lengths, pointing, head making and fixing, tinning and polishing, sorting and fixing in papers, is performed by a different person; so that each pin passes through 10 or 12 different hands, the lighter parts of the work being done by women and children. They are also made by machines. Any thing to hold things together; a peg, a bolt; that which locks the wheel to the axle, called a finch-pin; an iron instrument used in fastening bars and window shutters; the peg of a musical instrument; the centre. In Surgery, a horny induration, or inflammation of the coats of the eye. Rolling pin, a cylindrical piece of wood used in making pastry.

To PIN, v. a. [pinare, Sax.] to fasten with pins; to join; to confine as in a pinfold; to fasten; to make fast.

PINCASE, s. a pincushion.

PINCERS, s. [pincette, Fr.] an instrument consisting of two legs moving on a rivet, with which nails are drawn, or any thing held fast; the claws of a crab, &c.

To PINCH, v. a. [pincer, Fr.] to squeeze between the fingers or teeth; to hold hard with an instrument; to squeeze till the flesh is pained or livid; to press between hard bodies; to distress; to pain; to gripe; to straiten; to drive to difficulties; to try thoroughly; to squeeze out what is contained.—v. n. to spare, or be frugal.

PINCH, s. [pinçon, Fr.] a painful squeeze with the fingers, or between hard bodies; a gripe; oppression; difficulty or distress; as much as can be taken between the tips of the fingers.

PINCHBECK, s. in Metallurgy, a compound metal, formed of five or six parts of copper and one of zinc.

PINCUSHION, (pincushon) s. a small cushion in which pins are stuck.

PINDAR, the greatest lyric poet of the Greeks. He was a Theban, and originally a flute-player, till he acquired a name throughout Greece and its colonies and allied states, by his grand odes. He not only received great honours from the different cities of Greece, but also from the kings and tyrants of many other states; and especially from Hiero of Syracuse, at whose court he spent the latter part of his life. He died in about 440 b. c., aged about 80 years. The writings of this poet, which are yet extant, are the odes he composed in honour of various conquerors at the Olympic, Nemean, and other games. They abound in historic, personal, and mythological allusions; and excel in graphic sketches. The great conciseness of his style makes him occasionally obscure; but the sustained grandeur of the figures and the language, and the glowing enthusiasm that especially marks them, the abrupt transitions, and the flashes of jovial mirth, give them a life-likeness that few ancient poems possess.

PINDARIC, a. in Poetry, applied to an ode written after the manner of Pindar.

PINDUST, s. small particles of metal made by cutting pins.

PINE, s. [pinus, Lat.] in Botany, a kind of tree, called also the fir; which grows most plentifully in cold regions. Its trunk is perfectly straight, and gently tapering, and the branches grow directly out of it, on all sides. It bears scaly cones containing winged seeds; and it supplies valuable timber for masts, flooring, &c. &c. The sea-pine is a kind of oarweed.

To PINE, v. a. [pinian, Sax.] to languish or wear away with any kind of misery; to languish with desire.—v. n. to waste with grief; to grieve for, or bemoan, in silence.

PINE-APPLE, s. in Botany, a juicy fruit of a delicious flavour, brought from the W. Indies; so called from its resembling the cone of a pine-tree. It is cultivated in this country in hot-houses.

PINEAL, a. [pinéale, Fr.] in Anatomy, one of the smaller parts of the brain, which the old physiologists supposed was the seat of the soul in man.

PINEL, PHILIPPE, an eminent French physician, whose chief celebrity arises from the success of his methods of treating the insane. He commenced his efforts in this direction during the French Revolution; and proved that kindness and reason were more powerful than the senseless brutality formerly practised. It is a remarkable fact, that in some asylums in England the old and cruel plan is yet retained. He lectured and wrote on medical subjects generally; and died in 1826, aged 84 years.

PINE/ATHERED, a. having feathers resembling pins; unfledged.

PINFOLD, s. [pinan, Sax. and fold,] a place in which beasts are confined.

PINGLE, s. a small close; an enclosure.

PINGUID, a. [pinguis, Lat.] fat; unctuous. Obsolete.

PINHOLE, s. a small hole made by a pin.

PINION, s. [pinion, Fr.] the joint at the extremity of a wing; a wing; a feather or quill; the tooth of a smaller wheel, answering to that of a larger; fetters or bonds for the hands.

To PINION, v. a. to bind the wings or the elbows close to the sides; to shackle; to bind to.

PINK, s. [pink, Belg.] in Botany and Floriculture, a handsome genus of plants, extensively cultivated, five of which are British species. An eye, generally applied to a small one; any thing supremely excellent; a reddish colour, resembling that of a pink; a ship, with a round stern and bulging sides; a fish, called likewise minnow.

To PINK, v. a. to pierce with small holes like eyelet-holes.—v. n. [pinken, Belg.] to wink with the eyes.

PINKERTON, JOHN, an English writer and antiquary of the last generation. He was of Scottish birth, and was at first a writer of the signet. In the latter part of his life he resided at Paris, and died there in 1826, aged 68 years. His works are very numerous; the most known are the Essay on Medals, Modern Geography, (a huge work in 3 quarto volumes,) Walpoliana, works relating to Scottish History, &c.

PINMAKER, s. one who makes pins.

PINMONEY, s. money allowed a wife for her private expenses.

PINNACE, s. [pinna, Fr. pinna, Ital. pinaca, Span.] a boat belonging to a ship of war.

PINNACLE, s. [Fr.] a turret, or elevation above the rest of the building; a high spring point.

PINNER, s. [pinna, Lat.] the lappet of a head-dress, which hangs down loose; a pin-maker.

PINNOCK, s. in Ornithology, a name of the tom-tit.

PINT, (pin) s. [Sax. pinte, Fr.] in liquid measure, half a quart. In Medicine, a pound, or 12 ounces.

PINTO, MENDEZ, a traveller of the 16th century, who has deservedly obtained a reputation which may be placed on a par with that of the fictitious Baron Munchausen. He was a Portuguese, and travelled in most of the countries of S. Asia; and, after genuine adventures surpassing those by the relation of which Otello won fair Desdemona's heart, and pretended ones with which only the German baron's may be compared, got back to Portugal, and died in about 1560, aged about 50 years. It is needless to remark further on his publications; his name is a proverb.

PINULES, s. in Astronomy, the signs of a quadrant.

PIOBBO, SEBASTIAN DEL, a famous Italian painter, who was particularly noted for his skill as a colourist. At Rome, he worked in conjunction with the great Michael Angelo, who supplied him with designs for his most celebrated paintings; one of which, thus jointly produced, is the picture of the Raising of Lazarus, in our National Gallery. He painted many portraits, and was highly esteemed by several of the popes. He died in 1547, aged 62 years.

PIONIER, s. [pioir, Fr.] a soldier employed in levelling roads, throwing up works, or sinking mines.

PIONING, s. works of pioneers.

PIONY, s. in Botany and Gardening, a large red flower, expanded in the form of a rose, spelt likewise peony.

PIOUS, a. [pius, Lat.] attentive to one's duties, both as to God and man; religious.

PIOUSLY, ad. with piety.

PIOZZI, MRS. who was first Mrs. Thrale. She was a particular friend of Dr. Johnson, till her second marriage. She resided for some time in Italy, with Mr. Piozzi, and died after her return to England, in 1821, aged 82 years. She wrote several works; her Anecdotes of Dr. Johnson, her tale called The Three Warnings, and her love-letters, lately published, written when she was advanced in years, are, perhaps, the best known.

PIP, s. [pippe, Belg.] a defluxion, or horny pellicle, which grows on the tip of the tongue of birds and fowls, and is cured by pulling it off, and rubbing the part with salt. A spot on cards.

To PIP, v. n. [pipio, Lat.] to chirp or cry like a bird.

PIPE, s. [Sax. pib, Brit.] any long hollow body or tube; a tube of clay used in smoking tobacco; an instrument of hand music; the organs of voice and respiration, as the wind-pipe; the key of the voice; an office in the exchequer, in which the account of the royal revenues, &c. was kept, lately abolished.—[Fr.] a liquid measure containing 2 hogsheds.

To PIPE, v. n. to play on the pipe; to have a shrill sound.

PIPER, s. one who plays on the pipe.

PETREE, s. in Botany, a name of the lilac.

PPERIDGE-BUSH, s. in Botany, a shrub; the same with the common barberry.

PIPEWORT, s. in Botany, the name of a genus of English marsh plants.

PIPING, a. weak, feeble, sickly. Hot or boiling, applied to water.

PPKIN, s. [diminutive of pipe,] a small earthen boiler.

PPPIN, s. in Horticulture, the name of a fine-flavoured juicy kind of apple.

PIQUANCY, (peikancy) s. sharpness; tartness.

PIQUANT, (peikant) a. [Fr.] pricking; stimulating; sharp; tart; pungent; severe.

PIQUANTLY, ad. sharply; tartly.

PIQUE, (peek) s. [Fr.] an offence taken; ill-will; point or punctilio.

To PIQUE, (peek) v. a. [piquer, Fr.] to affect with envy or malice; to put into a fret; to offend; to irritate. Used with the reciprocal pronouns, and followed by in or upon, to value or fix reputation upon.

PIQUEERER, (piqueer) s. a robber; a plunderer.

PIQUET, (peeket) s. [piequet, Fr.] a game at cards, played by two persons with only 32 cards; all the deuces, threes, fours, fives, and sixes, being laid aside. In Fortification, a piece of wood, sharp at one end, usually shod with iron, used in laying out ground, and measuring its angles; or driven into the ground near the tents to tie the horses to, and likewise used to fasten the cords of tents; whence to plant the piquet, implies to encamp; also, an outpost to an encampment. In this last sense it is pronounced peket.

PIRACY, (peiracy) s. [peirates, from peira, Gr.] the act of robbing or committing violence on the high seas.

PIRETS, the name of the port of ancient Athens, which was united to the city by means of three long walls.

PIRANESE, the name of two eminent Italian architects. The father, Giovanni Battista, published numerous works containing engravings of ancient and modern buildings, &c. &c., executed by himself, aided by his children. He died in 1778, aged about 60 years. The son, Frances, was the most famous of his children; he completed some of his father's works, and added other works of a similar character, to the long list that has given celebrity to their name. His sister aided in the production of his engravings. He died in 1810, aged 62 years.

PIRATE, s. [Fr.] one who robs at sea; a person who steals, or clandestinely prints, the copies of an author or bookseller.

To PIRATE, v. a. to publish a spurious edition, in opposition to the proprietor of a book.—v. n. to rob at sea.

PIRATICAL, a. robbing on sea; like a pirate.

PISA, an ancient, large, and handsome city of Tuscany in Italy, with a university. It stands on the Arno, at a small distance from the sea, in a very fertile plain. Over the river are three bridges, of which that in the middle is constructed with marble. The quays and streets are fine, but the city is greatly fallen away. The cathedral is a magnificent structure, and on the right side of the choir is the leaning tower so much talked of. The grand duke's palace, and the exchange, are magnificent buildings, worth notice. Pisa is 42 miles from Florence. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 43. 43. N. Long. 10. 17. E.

PISCARY, s. a privilege of fishing.

PISCATORY, (pisce) s. [pisces, Lat.] the art or practice of fishing.

PISCATION, s. relating to fishes.

PISCES, s. in Astronomy, the Fishes, one of the constellations of the zodiac.

PISCIS AUSTRALIS, s. in Astronomy, the S. Fish, a constellation situated near Aquarius, in the southern hemisphere.

PISCIS VOLANS, s. in Astronomy, the Flying Fish, a small constellation in the southern hemisphere.

PISCIVOROUS, a. [pisces and vor, Lat.] eating fish; devouring fish.

PISH, interj. a word used to express contempt.

To PISH, v. n. to express contempt by a hissing or inarticulate sound.

PISIDIA, a country of Asia Minor, surrounded by Phrygia and Pamphylia. It lay amidst the chains of mountains called the Taurus, and had several lakes and small streams. Antiochia was its principal town. Selge and Sagalassus were also of importance. It was in the time of the Romans incorporated with Pamphylia.

PISISTRATUS, or PEISISTRATUS, a celebrated political leader of Athens. During the first age of the city after Solon's legislation, he obtained by artifice the tyranny, or unconstitutional supremacy of Athens; but he was afterwards expelled. Making a second attempt, he obtained the seat of power again, and held it till his death, in 527 B.C. The Peisistratidae were his two sons, Hippias and Hipparchus, to whom he bequeathed his unlawful power. See their names.

PISMIRE, s. [pismiere, Belg.] in Entomology, an ant; an emmet.

PISTA/CHIO, s. [pistacchi, Ital. pistache, Fr.] in Botany, a dry fruit, of an oblong figure, pointed at each end, with a double shell, containing a kernel of a green colour.

PISTIL, POI/NAL, s. in Botany, the stile, or column, in the centre of the flower, by which the seeds are fertilized from the pollen discharged from the anthers.

PISTILLATION, s. [pistillum, Lat.] the act of pounding in a mortar.

PISTOJA, a town of Tuscany, in Italy. It stands near the Apennines, on a small stream connected with the Arno. The cathedral, the churches, the palaces, and the academies and schools, are good buildings, and uphold the falling dignity of the place. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 43. 50. N. Long. 10. 57. E.

PISTOL, s. [piatole, or pistole, Fr.] a small hand-gun.

To PISTOL, v. a. [pistoler, Fr.] to shoot with a pistol.

PISTOLE, s. [piatole, Fr.] a gold coin struck in Spain and Italy, generally valued at about 15s. 6d. sterling.

PISTOLET, s. [diminutive of pistol,] a little pistol.

PISTON, s. [Fr.] that part of a pump or syringe on which the sucker is fixed; an embolus; a sucker.

PIT, s. [pit, Sax.] a hole in the ground; the grave; the ground on which cocks fight; the middle and lower part of a theatre, fronting the stage; any hollow of the body, as the armpit; a dent made by the finger, or caused by the small-pox.

To PIT, v. a. to sink in hollows; to mark with small hollows, as by the small-pox.

PITAPAT, s. [pas a pas, or passe patte, Fr.] a fluttering motion or palpitation, applied to the heart. A light quick step.

PITCAIRN'S ISLAND lies to the E. of the great Polynesian group, between Crescent and Ducie's islands, in the S. Pacific Ocean. It is about 3 miles long, by 2½ broad, and is rocky and mountainous, with many indications of volcanic origin, but has, notwithstanding, a rich soil. It was peopled by the mutineers of the Bounty, and the people who accompanied them from Tahiti. (See BLIGH.)

PITCH, s. [pis, Sax.] in the useful Arts, &c., a black viscid juice, extracted by means of fire from the pine-tree. Mineral pitch is petroleum hardened by an exposure to the air.—[piets, Fr.] any degree of height; the highest rise; degree; rate; size.

To PITCH, v. a. [appiccicare, Ital.] to fix upon; to order regularly; to throw headlong; to smear with pitch; to darken; to pave.—v. n. to light or drop from a high place; to fall headlong; to fix a choice, or a tent.

PITCHER, s. [pitcher, Fr.] an earthen vessel or water-pot; an instrument to pierce the ground, in which any thing is to be fixed.

PITCHFORK, s. a fork by which corn or hay is moved.

PITCHINESS, s. the quality of resembling pitch; blackness; darkness.

PITCHY, a. smeared with pitch; having the qualities of pitch; black; dark; dismal.

PITCOAL, s. coal dug out of pits.

PITEOUS, a. sorrowful; exciting pity; tender; compassionate; wretched; paltry.

PITEOUSLY, ad. in a pitiful manner.

PITEOUSNESS, s. sorrowfulness; tenderness.

PITFALL, s. a pit dug and covered, into which a person falls unexpectedly; a trap.

PITH, s. [pitte, Belg.] the soft part in the midst of wood; marrow; strength; force; energy; weight; moment; the quintessence or chief part.

PITHILY, ad. with force and energy.

PITHINESS, s. force or energy.

PITHLESS, a. without pith, force, or energy.

PITHY, a. consisting of pith, applied to wood; strong or energetic, applied to style.

PITIABLE, a. [pitoyable, Fr.] deserving pity.

PITIABLENESS, s. state of deserving pity.

PITIFUL, a. moving compassion; compassionate; palty; contemptible. The last sense is most in use.

PITIFULLY, ad. in a mournful, compassionate, or contemptible manner.

PITIFULNESS, s. mercy, or compassion; despicableness; contemptibleness.

PITILESSLY, ad. without pity or mercy.

PITILESSNESS, s. want of compassion.

PITILESS, a. wanting pity or compassion.

PITMAN, s. one that works in a pit.

PITSAW, s. a saw used by two men, of whom one is in the pit.

PITT, WILLIAM, EARL OF CHATHAM, a great parliamentary orator and political leader of the last century. He was descended from the Pitt who was governor of Fort St. George, in Hindustan, and sold the famous diamond that bears his name to the French king. He studied at Oxford, and entered the army; but being returned to parliament, he soon set out on a career which led him more rapidly and surely to fame. He sided with the Prince of Wales, and was, under various administrations, now for and now against the advisers of the crown. At length, under the Earl of Bath, he obtained office, and did not act any longer in connexion with the Prince, though he retained the legacy of the Duchess of Marlborough, which had been left him for his aid to the rebellious son. After several changes, he was made secretary of state, which (with one interval arising from the king's recollection of the part Pitt had taken against him) he continued till the end of the reign. His administration was marked by great vigour and enterprise, and it was so successful, that the people, dazzled with the military glories of the English arms, and forgetting (as usual) the cost even of victories, looked on him with unexampled favour. On the accession of George III. he resigned his post, and receiving many marks of honour, maintained a species of opposition to the different ministers that succeeded each other, which harassed them, but did not commit himself too deeply. He refused several offers of secondary stations, and at last, when American affairs drove the king to his last shift, he was made head of the government, and a peer. But the ministers he had collected together were of too miscellaneous and inconsistent a kind, and he soon laid down his office again. He appeared in his place as usual, and spoke in favour of Wilkes and the Dissenters, against the American war, till he closed his career with a scene rendered immortal by the pencil of Copley. Sinking exhausted with his efforts to put a stop to the American war, he was removed to his house, and died soon afterwards, in 1778, aged 70 years. He did not live in an age of heroes, and so he obtained a cheap immortality; but also one which is not an immortality of heroic labours, to establish profound principles, and restore to truth its rightful dominion in the daily affairs of men and nations, but rather an immortality of mere name, as a skillful word-fencer, and defender of constitutional pedantries.

PITT, WILLIAM, second son of the foregoing, an orator and party-leader of even greater renown, known, not always in jest, as "the heaven-born minister." He was educated at Cambridge, and studied for the bar, which profession he afterwards relinquished (as his father had the military profession) for the sake of politics. He was at first in the opposition, and played his part with Fox and Burke, and some others; he also harped much on the necessity of reform. He was for a short time in office under Lord Shelburne, but was soon in opposition again, till his next step was to the head of a ministry, which, after a few preliminary difficulties safely overcome, found itself in the very midst of the storm that sprang up throughout Europe on the outbreak of the French Revolution. Till 1801 he conducted the affairs of the nation with a reckless disregard of his old professions, with an equally reckless disregard of the weight of the burdens he was laying on the ages that should follow, in order that he might have money to carry on his war against France and her allies; and by one means and another, he certainly raised the whole country to a state of anti-Gallican frenzy, saved the aristocracy, swamped the people, and buttressed up too well the absolute princes of all Europe. His greatest measure was, perhaps, his financial one of restricting cash payments at the bank of England. Ireland owes to him the (so-called) Union with England. Mr. Addington succeeded him when he resigned because the king would not emancipate the Roman Catholics; but after a year or two, he returned to office. The unbroken career of Napoleon's successes, the failure of his health, and other troubles, soon, however, released him from his cares here, and he died in 1806, aged 47 years. His oratory was entirely of the gladiatorial sort, he fought for the applause of his party; and yet he deserves all praise for his too prompt or too frequent submission to the king's prejudices he taken into the account. But he did not live in an age when principles were deemed of value by statesmen. Party measures, or tricks of expediency, were the rule amongst politicians; only here and there was the existence of any principles even suspected.

PITTACUS, a Lesbian, who obtained a place amongst the seven Grecian sages. He took the lead in overthrowing the tyranny of Melanhras, in Mytilene, and was chosen to the chief office in the state himself. His government was so wise as to conciliate all parties. He died in 570 B.C. Fragments of poems and pithy proverbs are yet extant, which are ascribed to him.

PITTANCE, s. [pitance, Fr.] an allowance of meat in a monastery; a small portion.

PITTSBURGH, a city of Pennsylvania, United States. It stands at the head of the Ohio, at the confluence of the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers. It is compactly built, and is a handsome place; having several very fine public buildings, as the court house, the W. university, the Roman Catholic cathedral, &c. There are 3 bridges over the Alleghany, and 2 over the Monongahela. It has a considerable trade, from its situation; and several valuable and important branches of manufacture are carried on here. It is 226 miles from Washington. Pop. 21,115. Four other places bear the same name in the States.

PITUITE, s. [Fr. pituite, Lat.] in Physiology, phlegm.

PITUITOUS, a. consisting of, or full of, phlegm; phlegmatic.

PITY, s. [pitie, Fr.] the quality of feeling or compassionating the pains of another; a ground or object of pity. In the last sense alone it has a plural.

To PITY, v. a. [pitoyer, Fr.] to sympathize, or feel the misfortunes of another.—v. n. to be compassionate.

P'VOT, s. [pivot, Fr.] a pin on which any thing turns.

PIVUS, the name borne by nine Roman pontiffs; the last of whom is now living. The most famous amongst the former are, the second, commonly known as Aeneas Sylvius, who had attained to considerable eminence by his learning, his writings, and the part he had taken at the council of Basle, and in various embassies and negotiations arising out of the perplexed state of the Roman Church; and was chosen as successor to Calixtus III. His chief efforts during his short pontificate were directed against the Turks; but he did not forget to promote learning by his patronage, as he had formerly done by his own diligent cultivation of it. His works are numerous, and are on various subjects; one relates to the Bohemian Reformation. He died in 1464, aged 59 years, having been pope for 6. The fourth convened the last assemblies of the often-interrupted council of Trent; and by the diplomatic skill of his agents, the authority of the Roman see, and many of the old and often deplored evils, were unmolested. The Roman Church owes to him, also, the creed which ever since his days has embodied the dogmas it holds. He died in 1563, after a reign of about 5 years. The sixth and seventh have had their names brought forward very prominently, by their implication in the convulsions of Europe arising out of the French Revolution. The former of these was brought to France by the Directory; and Rome was declared a republic: the latter was one of Buona-part's appointments, and crowned him at Paris when he became emperor. He did not leave France till the abdication of Napoleon in 1814. Pius VI. died in 1799, having been pope for 24 years; Pius VII. in 1823, after a pontificate of 23 years.

PIX, s. [pixis, Lat.] amongst Romanists, a chest in which the consecrated wafer, or host, is kept. A chest wherein pieces of every coin are deposited for trial by assay-masters.

PIZARRO, FRANCISCO, the Spanish adventurer, who, when the great geographical discoveries had unfolded a new world to Europe, and hunger for an Eldorado had seized on all who had heard any thing of this new world, led over a company of adventurers like himself, and with them penetrated to Peru, and conquered that kingdom. He was of very low origin, and served in the wars in Mexico. After a preliminary and exploratory expedition, he set out against Peru, and having by cruel treachery seized the person of Atahualpa, or Atabalipa, the reigning luza of the country, and caused him to be put to death, he claimed the country in the name of Spain, and made good his claim by arms. He governed it with so much cruelty, and gave such dissatisfaction to his companions and officers, that at last a conspiracy was formed against him; and he was assassinated in 1541, aged about 60 years.

PLACABILITY, PLACABLENESS, s. the quality of being willing or easy to be appeased.

PLACABLE, a. [placo, Lat.] willing or possible to be appeased.

PLACARD, PLACART, s. [Fr.] a declaration or manifesto; a licence for unlawful games, &c.

To PLACATE, v. a. [placo, Lat.] to appease; to reconcile.

PLACE, s. [Fr.] that part of space which any body occupies; the relation of distance between any thing, and any two or more points, considered as keeping the same distance one with another; a seat or residence; a passage in a book; existence; rank; precedence; an office, or public employment; room; ground; a kind of area surrounded with houses, sometimes called a court.

To PLACE, v. a. [placeo, Fr.] to put in any place, rank, or condition; to fix or establish. To put out at interest, applied to money.

PLACER, s. one that places.

PLACID, a. [placidus, from placeo, Lat.] gentle, quiet; kind, mild.

PLACIDITY, s. [placiditas, Lat.] quietness; mildness.

PLACIDLY, ad. in a gentle, kind, or mild manner.

PLACIT, s. [placitum, from placeo, Lat.] degree.

PLACKET, PLAQUET, s. a petticoat.

PLAGIARISM, s. theft, or the act of stealing the thoughts or the words of an author, without owning it.

PLAGIARY, s. [plagiarius, Lat.] one who makes use of the thoughts of an author without acknowledgment.

PLAGUE, (plig) s. [plague, Belg. from plago, Gr.] a contagious disease; a state of misery; any thing troublesome.

To PLAGUE, (plig) v. a. to infect with pestilence; to vex, torment, or tease.

PLAGUITY, (pligity) ad. in such a manner as to torment over much.

PLAGUY, (pliggy, g pron. hard.) a. vexations or troublesome. These two words are not authorized by good usage.

PLAICE, s. [plate, Belg.] in Ichthyology, a kind of flat fish.

PLAID, s. [Scot.] a striped or variegated cloth; an outer loose garment or shawl, worn by men and women in Scotland.

PLAIN, a. [planus, Lat.] smooth; level; free from ruggedness; void of ornament; artless; unlearned; open; sincere; mere; bare. Evident, clear, applied to truths. Not varied by art, applied to music.

PLAIN, ad. easily discovered. Distinctly, articulately, applied to pronunciation. In a simple, open, rough, but sincere manner.

PLAIN, s. [plane, Fr.] level ground. See DESERT, PAMPAS, PRAIRIES, STEPPES, &c.

To PLAIN, v. n. [plaindre, Fr.] to lament; to wail. An old word.

PLAINDEALING, a. acting without artifice.

PLAINDEALING, s. conduct free from artifice.

PLAINLY, ad. levelly; flatly; without ornament, gloss, or artifice; evidently; clearly.

PLAINNESS, s. the quality of being smooth or level; or of being free from ornament, deceit, or obscurity.

PLAINSONG, in Music, a name of the Gregorian chant. PLAINT, s. [plainte, Fr.] an expression of grief; a complaint, lamentation.

PLAINTEFUL, a. complaining; audibly sorrowful.

PLAINTEIFF, s. [plaintif, Fr.] in Law, one that commences a suit against another.

PLAINTIVE, a. [plaintif, Fr.] expressive of sorrow; complaining, lamenting.

PLAINWORK, s. needlework without any embroidery.

PLAIT, s. [corrupted from plight, or plygh, from ply] a fold or double.

To PLAIT, v. a. to fold or double; to weave or braid; to entangle; to involve.

PLAITER, s. he that plaits.

PLAN, s. [Fr.] a scheme, form, or model; a plot of any building, or form of any thing, laid down on paper.

To PLAN, v. a. to scheme; to form in design.

PLANARY, a. belonging to a plane.

PLANACHE, a. [planche, Fr.] made of boards.

PLANCHER, s. [plancher, Fr.] a board or plank.

PLANCHING, s. the laying the floors in a building.

PLANE, s. [planus, Lat.] a level surface.—[Fr.] an instrument used in smoothing or levelling the surface of boards. In Botany, a lofty and elegant genus of trees, allied to our sycamore and maple, one species of which in America attains to great size and age.

PLANE, a. in Geometry, level, plain. Plane-sailing. See SAILING, NAVIGATION, &c.

To PLANE, v. a. [planer, Fr.] to make level; to smooth with a plane.

PLANET, s. [planeta, Lat. from planus, Gr.] in Astronomy, the name by which the principal bodies revolving round the sun are called, to distinguish them from the fixed stars, and from comets and satellites. See SOLAR SYSTEM.

PLANETARIUM, s. in Astronomy, an instrument for exhibiting, approximately, the phenomena of the motions of the planets, commonly called an Orrery.

PLANETARY, a. [planetaire, Fr.] of the nature of a planet; belonging to, or under the dominion of, a planet; produced by the planets; erratic; wandering.

PLANETICAL, a. pertaining to planets.

PLANETSTRUCK, a. blasted.

PLANIFOLIOUS, a. [planus and folium, Lat.] in Botany, having plain leaves, set together in circular rows round a centre.

PLAINLOQUY, s. [planus and loquor, Lat.] plain speech.

PLANIMETRICAL, a. [planus, Lat. and metreo, Gr.] pertaining to the mensuration of plain surfaces.

PLANIMETRY, a. the mensuration of plain surfaces.

PLANIPETALOUS, a. [planus, Lat. and petalon, Gr.] in Botany, flat-leaved, as when the small flowers are only hollow at the bottom, but flat upwards, as in dandelion and succory.

To PLANISH, v. a. to beat, polish, or smooth by a hammer.

PLANISPHERE, (plinsifere) s. [planus, Lat. and sphaera, Gr.] a sphere projected on a plane; a map of one or both hemispheres; a map of the stars visible in our latitude, with a movable disc so attached to it, that the stars above the horizon at any hour of any day are exhibited as they appear in the heavens.

PLANITY, a. evenness; plainness.

PLANK, s. [planche, Fr.] a thick, long, and stout board.

To PLANK, v. a. to cover with planks.

PLANOCONICAL, a. [planus and conus, Lat.] level on one side and conical on the other.

PLANOCONVEX, a. [planus and convexus, Lat.] flat on one side and convex on the other.

PLANT, s. [planta, Lat. plante, Fr.] a sapling.

To PLANT, v. a. [planto, Lat.] to set in the earth in order to grow; to procreate or generate; to place or fix; to settle a country; to fill or adorn with something planted. To direct properly, applied to cannon.—v. n. to perform the act of planting.

PLANTAGE, s. [plantago, Lat.] in Botany, a very common herb.

PLANTAGENET, s. the name of a royal house, which occupied the English throne after the house of Normandy, and was divided into the houses of York and Lancaster, by the usurpation of Henry IV.

PLAINTAIN, [planta, Fr.] in Botany, the name of several common English plants, the best known of which are those which injure pastures by their broad spreading leaves.

PLANTATION, s. the act or practice of planting; a place planted; a colony; introduction or establishment.

PLANTER, s. [planteur, Fr.] one that plants or cultivates any vegetable; one who disseminates or introduces.

PLASH, s. [onomatopoeic] a puddle, or small piece of standing water; a branch partly cut off, and bound to other branches.

To PLASH, v. a. [plessier, Fr.] to interweave branches; to wet by dashing water.

PLASHY, a. watery; filled with puddles.

PLASM, (plazm) s. [plasso, Gr.] a matrix in which any thing is cast; a mould.

PLASTER, PLASTER, s. [plastre, Fr.] a substance made of lime and water, &c. with which walls are covered. Plaster of Paris, in the Fine and Useful Arts, is a kind of gypsum, calcined and ground to a fine powder: when mixed to the consistency of oil, with water, and poured into a mould, it soon dries, and hardens sufficiently to make it exceedingly useful for copying works of art, busts, statues, &c. &c., in stereotyping, &c.—[en-plastrum, Lat.] an adhesive unguent, spread on leather or paper, and applied to any part of the body. Court Plaster, is black silk with a solution of gum benzoïn spread on one side, and sometimes a solution of caoutchouc also, applied to slight wounds by being moistened and pressed on the part gently.

To PLASTER, v. a. [plastrer, Fr.] to cover with plaster; to cover with plasters.

PLASTERER, s. [plastrier, Fr.] one who plasters.

PLASTIC, a. [plasso, Gr.] having the power of giving form. Plastic Clay, in Geology, the name formerly given to the clays, sands, beds of pebbles, &c., which occur in the lower part of the formation called the London Clay. These beds in England may be studied to the greatest advantage in the Isle of Wight and on the coast of Hampshire.

PLASTOGRAPHY, (plastograph) s. [plasso and grapho, Gr.] a counterfeit or false writing.

PLASTRON, s. [Fr.] a piece of leather stuffed, used by persons to receive the thrusts made in learning to fence.

To PLAT, v. a. to weave; to make by texture.

PLAT, s. properly plot; [plot, Sax.] a small piece of ground.

PLATA, LA, REPUBLIC of, in S. America, called more frequently the Argentine Republic; lies on the Atlantic, and is bounded by the republics of Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia, and Chili, and by Patagonia. It is 1300 miles in length, and above 600 in breadth. The Andes are its W. boundary line; and many of its heights range from 12,000 to 15,000 feet in elevation. The La Plata, with its tributaries, and the Rio-Negro, its S. border-line, are its great streams. It is chiefly a vast series of plains, called Pampas, which furnish the richest pastures for innumerable herds of cattle; and would break up into very fine arable land for most profitable agriculture. Rice and various kinds of corn, cotton, indigo, tobacco, fruits, drugs, and drying vegetables are grown here. Cochineal is also an article of commerce. Most of the wild animals of S. America are found here abundantly. The people are aborigines of the country, Spanish settlers, and a mixed race. The political condition of this country is hardly fixed yet. Buenos Ayres is its chief city. Pop. about 750,000.

PLATA. See LA PLATA.

PLATANE, s. [Fr. platanus, Lat.] in Botany, the plane-tree.

PLATE, s. [Belg.] a piece of metal beat out into breadth.—[plata, Span.] gold or silver, wrought into articles for household ornament or use, as spoons, tankards, goblets, candlesticks, &c. &c.—[plat, Fr.] a small shallow vessel on which meat is eaten.

To PLATE, v. a. to cover with plates; to beat into thin pieces; to coat with gold or silver, by any process.

PLATEN, s. among printers, the flat part of the press where-by the impression is made.

PLATFORM, s. [plat, Fr. and form] the sketch of any thing delineated on a plain surface; a place laid out after a model; the level place before a fortification; a temporary elevation in a room or hall, like a stage, for public speakers, &c.; a scheme or plan.

PLATINA, PLATINUM, s. in Chemistry, &c., the heaviest of all metals. It is nearly as white as silver, and is with difficulty fusible; but is remarkably malleable, so as to be wrought into utensils like other metals. It is found in grains in a metallic state in St. Domingo, S. America, and Russia.

PLATO, the greatest Grecian philosopher. He was trained after the custom of the day, in all accomplishments common amongst the youths of the higher classes of Athens; and seems to have turned his attention in early life to the philosophies which were taught in that city. He was, at that time, not indifferent to the Muses, and some fragments of his poetry have been preserved. During the last 10 years of the life of Socrates, Plato was his most affectionate and diligent disciple; and he sought to avert from his master the cruel sentence, which the fickle Athenians were persuaded to pass on him. On the death of Socrates he travelled, first to Megara to visit the philosopher Euclid, and afterwards to Cyrene and Egypt; and when he returned to Athens he opened his famous school in the plane-grove of Academus. There he taught for the remainder of his life, with the exception of the time spent in three visits to Syracuse, on matters of state; and from which he experienced some difficulty in returning, being, on the first occasion, actually sold as a slave, but set at liberty by the man who purchased him. It was during this time also that he wrote the magnificent dialogues, in which he embodied as much of his philosophy as he deemed such a means fit for recording. He died in 347 B. C., aged 83 years. Amongst his dialogues, several are included which appear not to be genuine works of the philosopher. But those which are undoubtedly his are sufficiently numerous. They are of various merit as regards matter, structure, and style; but they are all characterized by hard and severe logic; and are the very reverse of the dreamy, sentimental rhodomontade, that they are usually thought to be. Their dramatic power and eloquence are most wonderful. Plato seems to have adopted his great master's method; and to have intended his works rather as exercises in the practice of philosophizing, and as refutations of false notions, than as dogmatic expositions of his own opinions. Yet they do afford sufficient insight into his views to enable us to discern the outline of his philosophy. The most remarkable of his doctrines appears to be that relating to ideas; a term which his disciple Aristotle, and his followers, never seem to have apprehended. He uses it in almost exactly the same sense as our Lord Bacon does; and as he also uses the term laws, a word as much misunderstood as the former. Ideas were spiritual truths, with Plato; capable of being apprehended by man; and the ground or basis of real things, and of opinions. He held that they were innate in man; or rather, that man retained them, as reminiscences of a former state, in which he had to do with ideas alone. The spirituality and immortality of man's soul he confidently asserted; and the tendency to evil (which divines have named original sin). He also stated that God alone, or a god alone, can raise men to the condition they ought to be in. His morals are too lofty for common humanity; and no one so bitterly upbraids the general greediness for pleasure and happiness. He made truth the great object of man's life; and, certainly, he was a living example of his own doctrines. Some of his doctrines were, of course, widely different from any thing that would be endured in these days; and some which he appears to have held in earlier works, he renounces and opposes in later writings. He has exercised on the race an influence more deep, though less apparent, and assuredly more spiritual, than Aristotle did; and in the development of Christian theology, his philosophy has been no mean aid. In these days the power of his opinions seems to be again reviving; and a good omen it is for the coming age, that advocates of a shallow logic, and metaphysics based on experience, find but scanty audience, and fewer disciples, even in England.

PLATONIC, a. something that relates to Plato, his school, philosophy, opinions, or the like. Platonic love denotes a pure spiritual affection subsisting between the different sexes, abstracted from all carnal appetites; or, a sincere and disinterested friendship between persons of the same sex, abstracted from all selfish views. Platonic philosophy, a name given generally to any systems of metaphysics, based on the doctrine of innate or connate ideas; to spiritual philosophies, in opposition to sensuous or sensual systems; to transcendental, in opposition to Scotch metaphysical systems; and not implying a philosophy taught by Plato, alone.

PLATTOON, s. [peloton, Fr.] a small square body of forty or fifty musketeers, drawn out of a battalion of foot, when they form the hollow square.

PLATTER, s. a large dish made of wood or earth.

PLATYPUS, s. in Zoology, a very remarkable amphibious animal, found in New Zealand, &c. Its mouth resembles the bill of a duck, and its feet are webbed like those of that bird. See ORNITHORHYNCHUS.

PLAUDIT, s. [plaudite, Lat.] applause; a shout.

PLAUSIBILITY, (plausibility) s. [plausibilitas, Fr.] superficial appearance of right.

PLAUSIBLE, (plausible) a. [plaudo, Lat.] such as gains approbation from appearing true or right; specious.

PLAUSIBLENESS, (plausibleness) s. the quality of appearing true or right.

PLAUSIBLY, (plausibly) ad. in such a manner as to appear right.

PLAUSIVE, (plausive) a. applaudible; plausible.

PLAUTUS, M. ACCIUS, an early Roman comic writer, of whom the chief fact known is, that he worked in the service of a baker for some part of his literary career. He flourished in the second century B. C., but the dates of his birth and death are very uncertain. We have 20 of his plays handed down to us, but some of them are very much corrupted.

TO PLAY, v. n. [plegan, Sax.] to exercise in sports, pleasures, or pastimes; to toy; to be dissimulated from work; to deceive by an assumed character, used with upon; to gamble; to move wantonly; to act a part in a drama; to act or assume a character; to touch a musical instrument; to operate.—v. a. to put in action or motion; to exhibit dramatically; to perform.

PLAY, s. dismission from work; amusement; a dramatic performance; gambling; action; the act of performing upon a musical instrument; a state of agitation or motion; liberty of acting; swing; room for motion.

PLAYBOOK, s. a book containing dramatic compositions.

PLAYDAY, s. a day in which work is abstained from.

PLAYER, s. one who performs on the stage; one engaged in gaming; an idler; a mimic; one who performs upon a musical instrument.

PLAYFAIR, JOHN, an eminent Scottish mathematician and natural philosopher. He became professor of mathematics at Edinburgh; and, in the latter part of his life, he travelled in France, and amongst the Alps, for the purpose of geological observation. He died in 1819, aged 70 years. He published an edition of Euclid's Geometry, wrote on Dr. Hutton's geological opinions, on natural philosophy, geography, &c. &c., and contributed to the Edinburgh Review many valuable essays on these and kindred subjects.

PLAYFELLOW, s. a companion in any sport or play.

PLAYFUL, a. fond of sport or diversion.

PLAYGAME, s. play of children.

PLAYHOUSE, s. a house where dramatic performances are represented.

PLAYSOME, a. wanton; full of levity.

PLAYSOMENESS, s. wantonness; levity.

PLAYTHING, s. a toy, or thing to play with.

PLAYWRIGHT, s. a writer of plays who does not exhibit dramatic genius.

PLEA, (pler) s. [plaid, old Fr.] the act or form of pleading; any thing urged in defence, excuse, or vindication.

TO PLEACH, (pleech) v. a. [plesser, Fr.] to bend or interweave. Obsolete.

TO PLEAD, (pleed) v. n. [plaidier, Fr.] to argue before a court of justice; to speak for or against.—v. a. to defend; to allege in favour or argument; to offer as an excuse.

PLEADABLE, (pleadable) a. capable to be alleged in plea.

PLEADER, (pleider) s. [plaidier, Fr.] one who argues in a court of justice; one who speaks for or against.

PLEADING, (pleeding) s. act or form of pleading.

PLEASANCE, (plezance) s. [plaisance, Fr.] gaiety or merriment.

PLEASANT, (pléasant) a. [placeo, Lat.] giving a delight; grateful to the senses; good-humoured; gay; or lively; trifling, or more apt to make a person smile than to produce conviction.

PLEASANTLY, (pleasantly) ad. in such a manner as to give delight; in good humour; lightly, or ludicrously.

PLEASANTNESS, (pleasantness) s. the quality which excites delight, gaiety, or pleasure.

PLE/ASANTRY, (plézantry) s. [plaisanterie, Fr.] gaiety; a sprightly expression; lively talk.

TO PLEASE, (pleeze) v. a. [placeo, Lat.] to delight, gratify, humour, satisfy, or content. To be pleased, is used to imply to like, or to content; to gain approbation.—v. n. to give pleasure; to gain approbation; to like; to choose. Synon. It is the air and behaviour that renders pleasing; good sense and good humour, that renders agreeable.

PLEASER, s. one that pleases.

PLE/ASEMAN, (pléaseman) s. a pickthank; an officious fellow.

PLE/ASINGLY, (pleézingly) ad. in such a manner as to give satisfaction or delight.

PLEASINGNESS, s. the quality of giving delight.

PLE/ASURABLE, (pléshurable) a. affording delight.

PLE/ASURE, (pléshure) s. [plaisir, Fr.] the delight which arises in the mind from contemplation or enjoyment of something agreeable; gratification of the passions or senses; approbation; the dictates of the will; choice.

To PLEASE, (pléshure) v. a. to please or gratify.

PLEBE/TAN, s. [plebs, Lat.] one of the common or lower order.

PLEBE/TAN, a. consisting of mean people; popular; vulgar; low.

PLEDGE, s. [pleige, Fr.] any thing given by way of security; a pawn; gage; a surety; bail; hostage.

TO PLEDGE, v. a. [pleiger, Fr.] to give as a security; to invite to drink, by accepting the cup or health after another.

PLEDGET, s. [plagge, Belg.] in Surgery, a small mass of lint used for wounds.

PLE/ADS, or PLE/ADES, s. [Gr.] in Astronomy, an assemblage of seven stars in the neck of the northern constellation Taurus.

PLE/NARILY, ad. in a full or complete manner.

PLE/NARY, a. [plenus, Lat.] full or complete.

PLE/NILUNARY, a. [plenus and luna, Lat.] pertaining to the full moon.

PLE/NIPOTENCE, s. [plenus and potens, Lat.] fulness of power.

PLE/NIPOTENT, a. invested with full power.

PLE/NIPOTENTIARY, (plenipotentiary) s. one invested with discretionary or full power.

PLE/NIST, s. in ancient speculative Physics, one that denies a vacuum, or holds that all space is occupied by matter.

PLE/NITUDE, s. fulness, opposed to emptiness. Repletion; abundance, or excess; completeness.

PLE/NTEOUS, a. abounding; copious; in large quantities; fruitful.

PLE/NTEOUSLY, ad. copiously; abundantly; exuberantly; plentifully.

PLE/NTEOUSNESS, s. fruitfulness; the quality of abounding.

PLE/NTIFUL, a. copious; abounding; in large quantities; fruitful.

PLE/NTIFULLY, ad. in a copious or abundant manner.

PLE/NTIFULNESS, s. the state of being plentiful; abundance; fertility.

PLE/NTY, s. [plenus, Lat.] a state in which every want is supplied; fruitfulness. Synon. By plenty is understood enough, and some little to spare; by abundance, more than enough.

PLE/ONASM, (pleonasm, Gr.) in Rhetoric, a figure in which more words are used than are necessary; as,

"Let conversation, with extensive view,

Survey mankind from China to Peru."

PLE/ROTICS, s. [pleroo, Gr.] in Medicine, a kind of remedies that are healing, or that fill up the flesh; otherwise called incarnatives, and sarotics.

PLE/SIOSAURUS, (plésion and saurus, Gr.) in Palæontology, a reptile allied to the crocodile, having paddles like a turtle instead of feet, a short tail, and a very long snake-like neck, with a small head. It was covered with a hard or tough skin, and appears to have swum near the surface of the water, with its long neck protruded. Much knowledge of the habits of this singular animal has been obtained from the examination of the coprolites, which have been found with it. There are several distinct species of it.

PLE/THORA, PLE/THORY, s. [pletho, Gr.] in Medicine, the state in which the vessels are fuller of blood and fluids than is agreeable to a natural state of health.

PLETHORE/TIC, PLETH/OIC, a. having a full habit.

PLEVIN, s. [plevine, Fr.] in Law, a warrant or assurance; a pledge.

PLEURA, s. [pleura, Gr.] in Anatomy, a smooth, strong, and tense membrane, adhering to the ribs, and to the intercostal muscles, whose structure resembles two sacks, one of which surrounds one side of the thorax, and the other the other side, and each of them contains one of the two lobes of the lungs.

PLEURISY, s. [pleurisie, Fr. from pleura, Gr.] in Medicine, a violent pain in the side, attended with fever, a cough, and difficulty of breathing, arising from inflammation of the pleura.

PLEURITIC, PLEURITICUS, a. diseased with a pleurisy.

PLEYEL, IGNATIUS, a distinguished German composer. He studied under Haydn, and his first appointment was at Strasburg. He visited London for a short time, and then returned to the continent, where he lived at Strasburg and Paris, to his death, in 1831, aged 74 years. His works are of all kinds, and some of his melodies are well known in England. But he never rose to the highest rank in his art, and wisely devoted himself to trade, with a view to a competence, rather than to music, not first-rate, for the sake of fame.

PLIABLE, a. [Fr.] easy to be bent or prevailed upon.

PLIABLENESS, s. easiness to be bent.

PLIANCY, s. the quality of being easily bent.

PLIANT, a. [Fr.] bending; easy to take a form; compliant, or easily persuaded.

PLIANTNESS, s. flexibility; toughness.

PLICATURE, PLICATION, s. [plico, Lat.] fold; double.

PLIERS, s. an instrument by which any thing is held in order to bend it.

To PLIGHT, (plūt) v. a. [plichten, Belg.] to pledge, or give as surety.—[plico, Lat.] to braid or weave.

PLIGHT, (plūt) a. [plihē, Sax.] condition or state; good case; a pledge; a fold, double, plait.

PLINIUS, the name of two eminent Roman writers. C. Plinius Secundus, commonly called Pliny the Elder, was of noble birth, and pursued the usual course of those to whom the honours of the state were open. But we have little information respecting his political career; his devotion to science and literature having given him a standing and a name independent of, and superior to, the mere honours of a noble romain. He occupied himself by collecting and recording, under the title of a Natural History, every fact relating to geography, natural history (properly so called), astronomy and physical science, the fine arts, &c. &c., that came within his knowledge in any way. And though the method is most rude, and he did not very scrupulously examine the credibility or worth of what he noted down, it is yet a most valuable bequest from the long silent ages. His death happened most characteristically. He was attracted by the remarkable cloud that hung over Vesuvius, at that first recorded eruption, which was so fatal to the neighbouring towns, Pompeii and Herculaneum; and he set out by sea to examine it, and to attempt the rescue of the unfortunate inhabitants who flocked to the shore. Having landed at Stabiae, he went to a friend's house there, and stayed till imminent destruction drove them all to seek the ship again. On their way he lay down, and was suffocated by the sulphureous vapours which most plentifully attended the eruption. He died thus in 79 A. D., aged 56 years. C. Plinius Caecilius Secundus, or Pliny the Younger, was nephew to this ardent observer of nature; and having been well educated, and being a good rhetorician, he practised as a pleader; and afterwards went through the usual course of Romans of his station in society. He was acquainted with the literary men of his age; and was favoured by the emperor Trajan. The part of his career which has made his name most generally known, is his persecutions of the Christians of Bithynia, where he acted as proconsul. He has recorded with great simplicity what is a noble eulogium on the men whose constancy and purity he rewarded with death; and takes some credit to himself for the plan he adopted, which was certainly somewhat milder than what was every where pursued. His Letters contain much that is interesting even to general readers. He died in about 115, aged about 55 years.

PLINTH, s. [plinthos, Gr.] in Architecture, the square member which serves as a foundation to a base of a pillar.

PLOCE, (plōke) s. [Gr.] a figure in Rhetoric, in which a word, by way of emphasis, is so repeated as to express not only the thing signified, but also the quality of it; as, my horse is a horse indeed.

To PLOD, v. a. [ploeghen, Belg.] to labour; to toil, or labour hard; to study closely and in a dull manner.

PLODDER, s. a dull, heavy, and laborious man or student.

PLOT, s. [Sax.] a small extent of ground; a plantation laid out; a form or plan.—[complot, Fr.] a conspiracy or secret design formed against another; the intrigue of a play; a stratagem; contrivance.

To PLOT, r. n. to form schemes against another; to contrive.

PLOT, DR. ROBERT, an English naturalist of the 17th century. He was an officer of the Herald's College, and historiographer to James II. His book, which has made his name so well known, is his Natural History of Oxfordshire and Staffordshire. He died in 1696, aged 56 years.

PLOTTINUS, the great Neo-Platonic teacher of Alexandria. He accompanied the emperor Gordian on his Parthian expedition, that he might gain a better knowledge of Oriental philosophy; and afterwards resided at Rome. He once attempted to establish a city on strictly philosophical principles; but, like all such schemes, down to New Lanark and Nauvoo, it did not answer. He died in 270, aged 67 years. His works are contained in six Enneads, and treat of many profound and interesting subjects of philosophical speculation and inquiry. Some of the Fathers of the church, and divines ancient and modern, have not hesitated to avail themselves of his writings, in the statement and exposition of their theology.

PLOTTER, s. a conspirator; contriver.

FLOWER, s. [pluvier, Fr.] in Ornithology, a large genus of English birds, the commonest of which is the lapwing.

PLOUGH, (plou) s. [ploug, Sax. and Dan.] an instrument used in husbandry, to cut furrows in the ground to receive the seed. There are many different sorts of ploughs; and lately some have been constructed so perfectly fitted for their work, as to require only to be drawn by the horses, and to be turned at the end of each furrow. Also a kind of plough. In Astronomy, a name sometimes given to the seven bright stars in the constellation of the Great Bear, on account of the great resemblance to the agricultural instrument so called.

To PLOUGH, Plow, v. a. to turn up the ground in furrows by a plough. To cut or divide, applied to navigation. To tear in furrows.

PLOUGHBOY, s. a boy that follows the plough; a coarse, ignorant boy.

PLOUGHER, (plouder) s. one who ploughs or cultivates ground.

PLOUGHMAN, (plouman) s. one that attends or uses the plough; a gross, ignorant rustic; a strong, laborious man.

PLOUGHSHARE, (ploushare) s. that piece of iron which immediately follows the coulter.

PLOWDEN, EDMUND, the great lawyer of the latter part of the 16th century, whose Commentaries are in high esteem in the legal profession. He died in 1584, aged 67 years. The common proverb, "The case is altered, quoth Plowden," has preserved the knowledge of his name amongst others than the learned in law.

PLOWMONDAY, (plowmonday) s. the Monday after Twelfth-day, when our northern ploughmen draw a plough from door to door, and beg money to drink.

To PLUCK, v. a. [pluccian, Sax.] to pull with nimbleness and force. To strip off feathers, applied to fowls. To pluck up a heart or spirit, signifies to assume courage.

PLUCK, s. a quick and forcible pull.—[plughh, Erse.] the heart, liver, and lungs of an animal.

PLUCKER, s. one that plucks.

PLUG, s. [plugg, Swed. plugghe, Belg.] a stopple, or any thing driven by force into another.

To PLUG, v. a. to stop with a plug.

PLUM, (plum, Sax.) in Horticulture, a roundish fruit, whose skin is covered with a fine dust or bloom, and includes a stone; the species are very numerous. A raisin or grape dried. In city cant, the sum of £100,000.

PLUMAGE, s. [pluma, Lat.] feathers.

PLUMB, (plūm) s. [plumbum, Lat. plomb, Fr.] a plummet, or piece of lead let down at the end of a line.

PLUMB, (plūm) ad. straight down; perpendicular to the horizon.

To PLUMB, (plūm) v. a. to sound or search by a line with a weight at its end; to regulate or measure any work by a line.

PLUMBAGO, s. in Chemistry, carburet of iron, or the black-lead of commerce.

PLUMBER, (plūmēr) s. [plombier, Fr.] one who manufactures or works in lead.

PLUMCAKE, s. a cake with raisins in it.

PLUME, s. [Fr. pluma, Lat.] the feather of a bird; a set of feathers worn as an ornament. Figuratively, pride; a token of honour, or prize.

To PLUME, v. a. to pick, cleanse, and adjust the feathers; to strip of feathers. Figuratively, to strip or plunder; to place as a plume; to adorn with a plume; to pride oneself in any thing.

PLUMMEALUM, s. [alumen plumosum, Lat.] in Mineralogy, a kind of asbestos.

PLUMIGEROUS, a. [pluma and gero, Lat.] having feathers; feathered.

PLUMIPEDE, s. [pluma and pes, Lat.] a fowl that has feathers on its feet.

PLUMMET, s. [from plumb], a weight of lead on a string, by which depths are measured, and straightness and perpendicularity is determined; any weight.

PLUMOSITY, s. the state of having feathers.

PLUMOUS, a. [pluma, Lat.] feathery; resembling feathers.

PLUMP, a. sleek; full of flesh, somewhat fat.

PLUMP, s. a cluster; several joined in one mass.

PLUMP, ad. with a sudden fall.

To PLUMP, v. a. to fatten, swell, or make large.—v. n. to fall like lead or a stone into water.

PLUMPER, s. something held in the mouth to swell out the cheeks.

PLUMPNES, s. the state of being fleshy, fat, or in good case.

PLUMPUDDING, s. a pudding made with plums.

PLUMMY, a. covered with feathers.

To PLUNDER, v. a. [plunderen, Belg.] to deprive a person of his property, either as an enemy in war, or as a thief.

PLUNDER, s. pillage; spoils gotten from an enemy in war.

PLUNDERER, s. one who takes away the property of another, as an enemy in war, or as a thief.

To PLUNGE, v. a. [plonger, Fr.] to force suddenly under water or in any liquor; to put suddenly into a different state.—v. n. to sink suddenly into water; to fall or rush into any hazard or distress.

PLUNGE, s. the act of putting or sinking under water; difficulty; distress.

PLUNGER, s. one that plunges; a diver.

PLUNKET, s. a kind of blue colour.

PLURAL, a. [pluralis, from plus, Lat.] implying more than one. In Grammar, that variation in the form of a noun, verb, &c. by which more than one person or thing is referred to.

PLURALIST, s. [pluraliste, Fr.] in the Church of England, and other state churches, one that takes the revenues of more than one ecclesiastical benefice, whilst he cannot do the work for which the pay is given.

PLURALITY, s. [pluralité, Fr.] the state of being or having a greater number; a number more than one; more than one church living; a majority.

PLURALLY, ad. in a sense implying more than one.

PLURIES, s. a writ issued out after two former writs that had no effect.

PLUS, s. [Lat.] in Algebra, is a character marked thus +, used for the sign of addition.

PLUSH, s. [peluche, Fr.] a kind of shaggy cloth or silk.

PLUTARCH, a celebrated Greek writer of the latter part of the first century A. D. He was born in Boeotia, and went to Rome, where he received great attention from the emperor Trajan, and lectured with considerable applause. He spent the latter part of his life in his native city, and died there at an advanced age, in 120 A. D., according to some chronologists. His writings are his Biographies, which are highly instructive and interesting, although some of the facts are more than doubtful; and his Moral Essays, in which he has displayed his knowledge of genuine principle, combined with practical good sense.

PLUTO, s. in Mythology, the god of the shades, or the regions of the dead.

PLUTONIAN, PLUTONIC, a. in Geology, an epithet given to that theory of the earth which supposes that the present appearances of the globe are to be ascribed to the agency of fire.
682

PLUVIAL, PLUVIOUS, a. [pluvia, Lat.] belonging to rain.

PLUVIAL, s. a priest's cope.

To PLY, v. a. [plien, old Belg.] to work at any thing with diligence and assiduity; to employ with diligence; to practise diligently; to solicit importunately.—v. n. to work or offer service; to go in haste; to busy oneself.—[plier, Fr.] to bend.

PLY, s. a bent, turn, form, cast, or bias; a plait or fold.

PLYMOUTH, Devonshire. It is a large sea-port, seated between the mouths of the rivers Plym and Tamar, and one of the chief naval magazines in the kingdom, owing to its excellent port or harbour, which is capable of safely containing 1000 sail. There are, properly speaking, however, three harbours, viz. Catwater, Sutton Pool, and Hamoaze. The first is the mouth of the Plym, and affords a safe and commodious harbour for merchant ships, but is seldom entered by ships of war. The second is frequented by merchant ships only, and is almost surrounded by the houses of the town. The third inlet, which is the mouth of the Tamar, is the harbour for the reception of the British navy. It is defended by a fort on St. Nicholas Island, and other forts, and particularly by a citadel, called the Haw, which overlooks the town, and is a good land-mark for mariners. A floating bridge plies across the Hamoaze. What is called The Dock, is a separate town, situated about two miles up the Hamoaze, and is now nearly as large as Plymouth itself. Here are some spacious docks, solidly built. It has a good herring fishery, and a considerable trade beside its manufactures, which are of all kinds of goods required in shipping; and the great business arising from the dockyard. It is 210 miles from London. Markets, Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday. Pop. 37,058.

PLYMOUTH, a seaport town of Massachusetts, United States. It is pleasantly situated, and well built, but chiefly of wood. The harbour is spacious, but shallow. There are some neat public buildings. It has some manufactures and fisheries. Here the Pilgrim Fathers landed from the Mayflower, in Dec., 1620, when they fled from the persecution of the Stuart kings of England. The rock on which they first set foot has been removed into the centre of the town. It is 447 miles from Washington. Pop. 5281. There are in the Union 14 other places of this name.

PNEUMATIC, PNEUMATICAL, a. [pneuma, Gr.] moved by the wind; belonging to the wind.

PNEUMATICS, s. in Natural Philosophy, the science which treats of the laws of equilibrium and motion in elastic fluids, such as the atmosphere, and gases. See AIR-PUMP, &c. In the Schools, the doctrine of spirits.

PNEUMATOCELE, s. [pneuma and cele, Gr.] in Surgery, a peculiar kind of hernia in the scrotum.

PNEUMATOLOGY, s. [pneuma and logos, Gr.] the doctrine of spiritual existence.

PNEUMATOSIS, s. in the old Pathology, the generation of animal spirits, which was represented as being performed in the cortical substance of the brain.

PO, anciently Eridanus, a large river of Italy, which rises at Mount Viso, in the Alps, and runs through a very extensive territory; receiving the waters of many smaller rivers, which descend from the Alps and Apennines; and at last discharges itself into the Gulf of Venice by four different mouths. Its length exceeds 400 miles. Its level is considerably higher, in some parts of its course, than the meadows on each side of it, and it is held aloft by strong embankments, for many miles together; and it too often breaks over them and does great damage.

To POACH, (pōch) v. a. [pocher, Fr.] to boil an egg slightly out of the shell; to stab, kill, or pierce.—v. n. [poche, Fr.] in Law, to catch or kill certain wild animals, without a certificate, or at the season when it is forbidden.

POACHER, (pōcher) s. one who poaches.

POACHINESS, (pōchiness) s. marshiness; dampness.

POACHY, (pōchy) a. damp; marshy.

POCK, s. [pocca, Sax.] in Medicine, a pustule raised by the small-pox.

POCKET, s. [pocca, Sax.] a small bag sewed to, or worn on, the inside of clothes.

To POCKET, v. a. [pocheter, Fr.] to put in the pocket. To pocket up, is to connive at; to do any thing clandestinely.

POCKETBOOK, s. a book carried in the pocket, and used in taking minutes or memorandums.

POCKETGLASS, s. a portable telescope, or mirror.

POCKHOLE, s. a pit or scar made by the small-pox.

POCKINESS, s. the quality of being affected with the pox.

POCKY, a. affected with the pox.

POCOCK, DR. EDWARD, an English divine, of great name for his vast Oriental learning, and no mean scholar in general. He studied at Oxford, twice travelled in the countries round the Levant, collecting MSS., coins, &c., and was Hebrew professor at Oxford. He died in 1691, aged 86 years. His works are numerous, and all of very great learning, most of them being solely of interest or benefit to scholars of the Hebrew, Syriac, Arabic, &c. But he also wrote Commentaries on some of the Minor Prophets, and aided in the editing of Walton's Polyglott Bible. Pocock's preaching did not give great satisfaction in the days of Puritan supremacy. One hearer complained that he "was no Latiner," because he did not (as was usual) insert scraps of learned tongues in discourses addressed to such as hardly knew English. And he was nearly cashiered for unfitness to teach, by the Triers, or some other authority, in the days of the Protectorate.

POCOCKE, RICHARD, a learned prelate of the Irish church, and a traveller in the East. He studied at Oxford, and after returning from his travels, came in time to be bishop of Meath. He died in 1765, aged 61 years. His travels are full of interesting and curious descriptions.

POCULENT, a. [ poculum, Lat.] fit for drink.

POD, s. [Teut.] the capsule or case of seeds.

PODA'GRA, s. [Lat. from pous and agra, Gr.] in Medicine, the gout in the feet.

PODA'GRICAL, a. afflicted with the gout; gouty; relating to the gout.

PODGE, s. a puddle; a plash.

PODO'LIA, a government of Russia, bounded by Volhinia, Kiev, Cherson, and Bessarabia, lying on the borders of Austria. The river Dniester runs along the southern borders, and the Bog crosses it almost entirely from N. W. to S. E. It has few hills, and none of any great elevation. It is a very fertile country, and abounds with a fine breed of horses and horned cattle. Kaminiak is its capital. Pop. about 1,500,000.

POEM, s. [poema, Lat. from poio, Gr.] a work or composition by a poet.

POESY, s. [poesis, Gr.] in Aesthetics, art, or the power of humanizing nature, of infusing the thoughts and passions of man into every thing he contemplates; colour, form, motion, sound, &c., being only the elements it employs in its combinations.

POET, s. [poeta, Lat.] a writer of poems.

POETASTER, s. [Lat.] an ignorant pretender to poetry.

POETESS, s. a female poet.

POETIC, POETICAL, a. [poëtique, Fr. poëticus, Lat. poietilis, Gr.] expressed in poetry; having all the qualities of poetry.

POETICALLY, adv. with all the qualities of poetry.

To POETIZE, v. n. [poëtiser, Fr.] to write like a poet.

POETRY, s. in Aesthetics, rhythmical compositions, the language of which is simple, sensuous, and impassioned; poetry working with words. It is commonly used to designate verse, or metrical compositions of all kinds, and of any kind; and sometimes it is restricted to rhymed verse. But, on the other hand, it is often extended so as to include every composition, not absolutely prosy, or mere matter of fact. Its primary object is to impart pleasure, but it is the necessity of genuine poetic pleasure, that it should teach the affections and cultivate loftiest principles, whilst it warms and animates the intellect also. The word is frequently used in an abstract sense, respecting any realization of the Beautiful or Good. It is poems, not poetry, that can be classified as epic, dramatic, lyrical, &c.; and poetry, when used with such distinctive epithets, means a poem, or some particular poetic composition.

POU'TIERS, or PORTIERS, an ancient town of Vienne, France. It stands on the Clain, and has four bridges, a cathedral, and a university famous for law. It has some little trade in agricultural produce. It is 200 miles from Paris. Population, 25,000. Lat. 46. 35. N. Long. 0. 25. E.

POIGNANCY, (poignancy) s. sharpness; the power of raising a biting sensation in the palate; asperity, or the power of irritating, applied to writings; excessively severe, applied to the feelings.

POIGNANT, (poignant) a. [Fr.] sharp, applied to taste; severe. Satirical; keen, applied to writings.

POINT, s. [Fr. punctum, from pungo, Lat.] the sharp end of any instrument; a string with a tag at the end; a headland or promontory; the sting of an epigram. In Mathematics, that which has neither breadth, thickness, nor extension; the exact termination of lines, &c. without occupying any part of them. A moment, applied to time; a part required of time or space; a critical moment. One of the degrees into which the horizon or mariner's compass is divided; a particular place to which any thing is directed; respect or regard; degree or state; an aim, or the act of aiming or striking; the object of a person's wish or action; a particular instance or example; a single position or assertion; a note or tune. Point blank, directly; alluding to an arrow's being shot to the point blank, or white mark. A mark used to distinguish the divisions of a discourse, thus (.) A punctilio or nicety.

To POINT, v. a. to forge or grind to a sharp end or point; to direct towards an object; to direct the eye or notice; to show by directing the finger towards an object; to direct towards a place; to distinguish words or sentences by marks or stops.—v. n. to note with the finger; to indicate, as dogs do to sportsmen; to show distinctly.

POINTAL, s. See PISTIL.

POINTED, part. sharp at the end; epigrammatical, or abounding in wit.

POINTEDLY, adv. in a pointed manner.

POINTEDNESS, s. sharpness; pickiness with asperity; epigrammatical smartness.

POINTEL, s. any thing on a point.

POINTIER, s. any thing used to show or direct with; a dog that discovers game to sportsmen. In the plural, applied to those two bright stars in the Great Bear, a line drawn through which points to the polar star.

POINTLESS, a. blunt; dull.

POISE, s. [poids, Fr.] weight, force, or tendency towards the centre; balance, or the state of a balance, in which both scales continue even; a regulating power.

To POISE, v. a. [poser, Fr.] to balance or hold in equilibrio; to counter-balance. To oppress with weight, followed by down.

POISON, (poizon) s. [Fr.] in Medicine, an animal, vegetable, or mineral body, which destroys life, though it enters the system only in small quantities, whether it acts through the circulating or alimentary system.

To POISON, (poizoner) v. a. to kill with any mineral, animal, or vegetable substance; to corrupt or taint.

POISONER, (poizoner) s. one who poisons; a corrupter.

POISONOUS, (poizonous) a. destructive; pernicious.

POISONOUSLY, (poizonously) adv. venomously.

POISONOUSNESS, (poizonousness) s. the quality of being poisonous; venomousness.

POITREL, s. [poitrel, Fr. pettorale, Ital.] armour for the breast; a graving tool.

POKE, s. [see POCKET] a pocket or small bag.

To POKE, v. a. [poka, Swed.] to feel in the dark; to search for any thing with a long instrument.

POKER, s. an iron bar to stir fires with.

POLACRE, s. a ship with three masts, usually navigated in the Levant, and other parts of the Mediterranean.

POLAND, formerly a large kingdom of Europe, lying on the Baltic Sea, and bounded by Austria, Prussia, and Russia; but by two successive acts of partition seized upon and incorporated with those powers with their other domains, the last relic, called the republic of Cracow, set up by the congress of Vienna, was lately seized by Austria. As much sympathy has been expressed for the Poles, and excessive indignation entertained against the imperial and royal spoilers of this ancient kingdom, it is as well that it should be known, that the condition of the population of Poland generally was not made worse, but if any thing rather better, by the change; whilst those who were really injured were the classes that, like the conquerors, lived on the people, and whose exploit tale, being too unhesitatingly received, led to tears for Poland's hapless fate, which had better been spared.

POLAR, a. [polus, Lat.] found near the pole; lying near the pole; relating to the pole.

POLAR BEAR, s. in Natural History, a name of the great white bear, that lives in the N. frigid zone.

POLARITY, s. tendency towards the pole. In Natural Philosophy, a tendency observable in some particles of matter, and in some bodies, to a particular arrangement or position, in which the opposite extremities, or points, (like the poles of a magnetic needle,) are characterized by contrary qualities, and exhibit opposite phenomena. In Optics, a property imparted to a ray of light, by refraction through certain bodies, as crystals of carbonate of lime; and by reflection at a particular angle; by which it is so altered and modified, as to be capable of displaying phenomena which in its common or normal state it cannot. The coloured rings, bands, &c. exhibited by means of this polarized light by various crystals, &c. are exceedingly beautiful, and there are many practical purposes to which it is also applied. In Metaphysics, it is sometimes applied to that law which prevails respecting the representation by language, &c. of ideas, or the truths of reason, necessitating a double and seemingly contradictory statement, as when the apostle says respecting the spiritual life of Christians, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God."

POLARIZATION, s. [Fr.] In Optics, the state of a ray or pencil of light, to which polarity has been imparted.

To POLARIZE, v. [polariser, Fr.] In Optics, to impart polarity to a ray of light.

POLE, s. [Fr.] the extremity of the axis of the earth; either of the points on which the world or any of the planets turn.—[pales, Lat.] a long staff; a tall piece of timber driven into the ground; a measure containing five yards and a half; an instrument of measuring.

To POLE, v. a. to furnish with poles.

POLE, REGINALD, an English cardinal of the 16th century. He was trained at Oxford, and being related to the royal family, had preferments showered upon him in quite early life. But he was not a man to desire worldly honours for worldly ends; and when Henry's lust began to suggest heresy and schism, Pole sided against him and fled the kingdom. At Rome he was received with the honour his character deserved; and he stood high in the esteem of the college of cardinals, amongst whom he was soon enrolled. On the accession of Mary, he returned to England, and to him may be ascribed the return to Romanism, then effected. He was made by her Archbishop of Canterbury; and he died in 1558, aged 58 years. He was one of those dignitaries of the Roman Church, who may be looked upon as amongst the fairest specimens of their class, or as approaching most nearly to the ideal of the church; yet he falls far behind St. Charles Borromeo.

POLEAXE, s. an axe fixed to a long pole.

POLECAT, or POLISH CAT, s. in Natural History, an animal of the weasel tribe. It is larger than the ferret, of a deep chocolate colour, and is very destructive to game.

POLEDNAVY, s. a sort of coarse cloth.

POLEMIC, POLEMICAL, s. [polemos, Gr.] in Theology, controversial; relating to dispute.

POLEMIC, s. a disputant.

POLEMOSCOPE, s. [polemos and skopos, Gr.] in Optics, is a kind of oblique telescope, contrived for seeing objects that do not lie directly before the eye.

POLESTAR, s. in Astronomy, a star of the third magnitude, situated at the extremity of the tail of the Little Bear, very near the north pole of the heavens; whence its name. Figuratively, any guide or director.

POLL, GIUSEPPE SAVERIO, an eminent Italian naturalist of the last century. He became director of the military academy of Naples, and died in 1825. He wrote several works, amongst which one on the shells of the Mediterranean near Naples and Sicily, is of considerable value to the conchologist.

POLICE, (policee) s. [Fr.] generally, applied to the regulations by which the order and peace of the inhabitants of a city or country are secured, and infringements of them punished;—particularly, applied to the organized constabulary force, by which crime and disorder are prevented and repressed, or detected and punished.

POLICED, (policeed) a. furnished with police force; under police regulations.

POLICY, s. [politica, from polis, Gr.] the art of government as it respects foreign powers; prudence in the management of affairs; a stratagem.—[polica, Span.] a warrant for money in the public funds; an instrument or paper signed by any single person or company to indemnify from losses by sea or fire.

To POLISH, v. a. [polir, Lat. polir, Fr.] to smooth by rubbing. To make elegant or well-behaved, applied to manners; to make perfect, complete, or elegant.—v. n. to answer to the act of polishing; to receive a gloss.

POLISH, s. a gloss made by rubbing. Elegance, applied to manners.

POLISHABLE, a. capable of being polished.

POLISHER, s. the person or instrument that makes smooth or gives a gloss.

POLITE, a. [politus, from polio, Lat.] glossy; smooth; also neat, well-behaved, genteel.

POLITELY, ad. in an elegant or well-bred manner.

POLITENESS, s. the quality of behaving with elegant compliance.

POLITIANO, ANGELO, one of the distinguished scholars of Italy, during the brilliant period that preceded the age of Leo X. He was tutor to that pope, and enjoyed the favour of Lorenzo the Magnificent; by whom he was made professor of Greek and Latin at Florence, a canon of the cathedral there, &c. &c. He was an elegant classic; and several of his works yet remain, which evince his scholarship as well as his taste. His disputes with some rival scholars, however, were conducted with most cordial hatred, to the utter neglect and defiance of taste and sense too. He died in 1494, aged 40 years.

POLITIC, a. [polis, Gr.] relating to civil affairs; in this sense political is generally used, excepting when we say the body politic. Prudent; artful; cunning.

POLITICAL, a. relating to the public administration of affairs; cunning.

POLITICAL ECONOMY, s. the scientific investigation of all matters relating to the well-being of states; such as population, commerce, taxation, currency, employment, rent, wages, &c. &c.; but excluding questions relating to the being of states, such as forms of government, rights and privileges of subjects and citizens, legislation, &c. &c. Hitherto little better than tentative researches on particular subjects have been made; no comprehensive scheme has been laid down. Hitherto, also, attention has been paid so much to wealth in these essays, that it has been forgotten that there is a wide difference between the wealth of individuals and the wealth of nations. See the particular subjects, and SMITH, MALTHUS, &c.

POLITICALLY, ad. with relation to public administration; artfully; politically.

POLITICASTER, s. an ignorant pretender to politics.

POLITICIAN, (politishian) s. [politicien, Fr.] one skilled in government, or in the interests of the various states of the world one of artifice or deep contrivance.

POLITICS, s. [politique, Fr.] the art of governing and well-regulating states.

POLITURE, s. [Fr.] the gloss given by polishing.

POLITY, s. a form of government; a civil institution.

POLL, (poll) s. [polle or pol, Belg.] the head; the back part of the head; a list of persons or heads. In Ichthyology, a fish, generally called a chub or chevin.

To POLL, (poll) v. a. to lop the tops of trees; to pull off hair from the head; to clip short; to mow or crop; to plunder; to take a list or register of persons; to enter one's name in a list or register at an election as a voter.

POLLARD, s. a tree whose top has been lopped off; a clipped coin.

POLLEN, s. in Botany, the powder or meal on the tips of the stamina of flowers. A kind of fine bran.

POLLER, (poller) s. a plunderer; one that enters his name as a voter at an election.

POLLEVL, s. in Farriery, a large swelling, inflammation, or imposthume, on the horse's poll, or nape of the neck, just between the ears towards the mane.

POLLLOCK, s. in Natural History, a kind of fish.

POLLOCK, ROBERT, a Scottish preacher and poet, who had scarcely entered on his work, after his studies at Edinburgh, before he was recommended to travel in S. Europe for the restoration of his impaired health. He died before quitting England, in 1827, aged but 28 years. His Course of Time is his chief work; it displays the amiable character of its author, and, with some fine passages, is generally rather heavy. His Tales of the Covenanters are written with the spirit of one who delighted to tread in the steps of the martyrs of Scotland.

To POLLUTE, v. a. [polluo, Lat.] to render unclean, in a religious sense; to defile; to taint with guilt; to corrupt by some bad mixture.

POLLUTEDNESS, s. defilement; the state of being polluted.

POLLUTER, s. one that pollutes.

POLLUTION, s. [pollutio, from polluo, Lat.] the act of profaning any thing or place by some indecency; the state of being defiled.

POLLUX, JULIUS, a rhetorical teacher and grammarian of Athens, who was tutor to the Roman emperor Commodus, an honour of somewhat questionable character. He wrote a Greek vocabulary for his imperial pupil's use, called Onomasticon, which is yet extant, and died in 238 A. D.

POLLO, MARCO, the famous Venetian traveller of the 13th century. His father was a merchant, and he had in the course of his journeyings reached the court of the celebrated Kublai Khan, in Tatar. Having received a commission or ambassadorship from the Khan to Rome, he returned to Europe; and on going again to Tatar, took his son with him. In this country Marco stayed for many years, and visited occasionally other parts of Asia, and in particular, China. At last he returned to Europe, and, having engaged in the war against Genoa, was taken prisoner, when he wrote his Travels. The date of his death is unknown. It has been Polo's fate to pass through the same storm of ridicule and disbelief that the old Grecian traveller, Herodotus, passed; and, like him, to be better honoured as a trustworthy writer, after the proof, from recent travellers' observations, of the correctness of his narrative, in many of the very things that were the ground of the objections made to its truth.

POLTROON, s. a person who is afraid of danger; a dastardly coward.

POLY, s. [polium, Lat.] in Botany, an herb.

POLY, s. [Gr.] a prefix often found in compound words; signifying many.

POLYACOUS, s. [polus and akouo, Gr.] that multiplies or magnifies sounds.

POLYANTHOS, s. [polus and anthos, Gr.] in Botany, a plant like the oxlip, cultivated in gardens.

POLYBIUS, a Greek historian of the 2nd century B. C., who was educated in public and military service by the great Achaean general, Philopomen. He was one of the hostages, or victims, sent to Rome, after the overthrow of Perses of Macedonia, where he obtained the friendship of the younger Scipio, and other distinguished Roman leaders. He even served under Scipio in the last war against Carthage. On the final subjugation of Greece, he was intrusted with some high office in reference to the different Grecian states, by the Romans, and his conduct was worthy of a patriot, and one who could appreciate the greatness of the fast-growing empire of Rome. He died in about 125 A. C., aged about 80 years. His History has unfortunately shared the fate of many other literary treasures of antiquity, and is, in good part, lost; yet what remains is of considerable value, and shows how careful the writer was in the composition of his work. Yet his story of Rome is nothing more than the old lays of the mythic ages, recast in the historic form; — Clio repeating the ballads of Calliope.

POLYCARP, one of the earliest fathers of the Christian church, called Apostolic Fathers. He was personally acquainted with the apostle John, and was principal minister or bishop to the church at Smyrna. During one of the persecutions he was burnt, but authorities are considerably divided as to the year; it happened after the middle of the 2nd century. One of his genuine writings remains, an Epistle to the Philippians. There is also an account of his martyrdom, written apparently by some one connected with the church he had presided over.

POLYCHROMATIC, a. [polus and chroma, Gr.] in Architecture, a mode of ornamenting buildings practised in ancient times, and also in the middle ages, and amongst the Arabians, by painting them of various and brilliant colours. The ornaments of the Moorish palaces in Spain, of this kind, are particularly splendid.

POLYEDRICAL, POLYEDROUS, a. [polus and hedra, Gr.] having many sides.

POLYGAMIST, s. [polus and gameo, Gr.] one who has more than one wife at once.

POLYGAMY, s. the state of having more wives than one at once.

POLYGLOTT, a. [polus and glotta, Gr.] having many languages. This name is principally applied to Bibles which are printed in many languages, of which the most noted are the Complutensian Bible, published by Cardinal Ximenes, in 1515; the London Polyglott, published by Dr. Walton, in 1657; and Bagster's Polyglott Bible, published in 1831.

POLYGON, s. [polus and gonia, Gr.] a figure of many angles.

POLYGONAL, a. having many angles.

POLYGRAM, s. [polus and gramma, Gr.] a figure consisting of a great number of lines.

POLYGRAPHY, (polygraphy) s. [polus and grapho, Gr.] the art of writing in several unusual manners or ciphers.

POLYLOGY, s. [polus and logo, Gr.] talkativeness.

POLYMATHY, s. [polus and mathema, Gr.] the knowledge of many arts and sciences; also an acquaintance with many different subjects.

POLYNEISIA, s. [polus and nēsoi, Gr.] in Geography, the name by which, amongst English geographers, the numerous groups and detached islands of the Pacific Ocean are designated. The chief groups included under this name are, the Marquesas, the Dangerous Archipelago, the Society Islands, the Friendly Islands, the New Hebrides, Solomon's Archipelago, the Admiralty Islands, the Caroline Islands, the Ladrone Islands, the Ralik and Radack Chains, and the Sandwich Islands, with Papua or New Guinea, New Britain, New Ireland, New Caledonia, and several other small islands dispersed amongst and around these groups. See these names separately, and OCEANIA.

POLYPE, POLYPE, s. [polus and pous, Gr.] in Natural History, the name of the animals usually classed together as Zoophytes, and of others resembling them. They consist of a sac, capable of considerable distension, at the extremity of which is an opening, surrounded by arms or tentacles, by means of which they provide themselves with food. Some of them are capable of motion, but others are fixed; all have the power of contracting themselves so as to appear a simple gelatinous mass. They produce their young in a very remarkable way; a small swelling appears on some part of the body of the polyp, which increases continually and puts out arms, feeding in the same manner as the parent does, till at last it is quite detached. They are extremely tenacious of life, and if cut into pieces each piece becomes soon a perfect animal. Several small species are found in our ponds and ditches. See CORALLINE, CORAL, ZOOPHYTE, &c. &c.

POLYPE' TALOUS, a. [polus and petalon, Gr.] having many petals or flower-leaves.

POLYPHONISM, (polyfoniism) s. [polus and phone, Gr.] multiplicity of sounds.

POLYPODY, s. [polus and pous, Gr.] in Botany, a genus of ferns; there are several British species.

POLYPOUS, a. of the nature of a polypus; having many feet or roots.

POLYPUS, a. any thing with many roots or feet. In Medicine, a swelling occurring in the nostril, the throat, &c., having a stalk, and sometimes of a very dangerous character. They are of various kinds, according to their internal structure.

POLYSCOPE, s. [polus and skopeo, Gr.] a multiplying glass.

POLYSPAST, s. [polyspaste, Fr.] a machine consisting of many pulleys.

POLYSPERMIOUS, a. [polus and sperma, Gr.] in Botany, applied to plants which have more than four seeds succeeding each flower, and thus without any certain order or number.

POLYSYLLABIC, POLYSYLLABICAL, a. [polus and syllabe, Gr.] having many syllables.

POLYSYLLABLE, s. a word consisting of many syllables.

POLYSYNDETON, s. [polus and sundeo, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure by which a copulative is often repeated.

POLYTECHNIC, a. [polus and techné, Gr.] comprising many arts and sciences. There is a celebrated school in Paris called by this name; and an Institution in London, where all kinds of scientific experiments, and processes in arts and manufactures, are exhibited, and very interesting and instructive lectures delivered.

POLYTHEISM, (by some accented on the penultima) s. [polus and theos, Gr.] the belief and worship of many gods.

POMACE, s. [pomum, Lat.] the dross of cider pressings.

POMACEOUS, a. consisting of apples.

PO/MADE, s. [Fr. pomado, Ital.] a fragrant ointment.

PO/MANDER, s. [pomme d'ambre, Fr.] a sweet ball; a perfumed ball or powder.

POMATUM, s. [Lat.] a kind of perfumed ointment.

To POME, v. n. [pommer, Fr.] to grow to a round head like an apple.

POMECITRON, s. in Botany, a citron apple.

POMEGRANATE, s. [pomum and granum, Lat.] in Botany, a fruit so called from the grains or seeds with which it abounds.

POMERANIA, a province of Prussia. It lies on the Baltic Sea, and is bounded by W. Prussia, Brandenburg, and Mecklenburg. It is about 250 miles long, by 75 broad. The air is pretty cold, but compensated by the fertility of the soil, which abounds in pastures and corn, of which a great deal is transported into foreign countries. It is a flat country, containing many lakes, woods, and forests, and has several good harbours, particularly Stettin and Stralsund. The Oder is its chief river. It yields iron in small quantities. Turf is dug in abundance. On the coast they find amber. The fisheries are valuable. Trade is flourishing. Pop. about 1,000,000.

POMITEROUS, a. [pomum and fero, Lat.] in Botany, applied to plants that bear a large fruit, covered with a thick hard rind.

PO/MEL, s. [pomeau, Fr. pomo, Ital.] a round ball or knob; the knob that balances the blade of a sword; the protuberant part of a saddle before.

To PO/MEL, v. a. [pommeler, Fr.] to variegate; to beat with any thing thick and bulky; to beat black and blue; to punch.

POMP, s. [pompa, Lat.] splendour attending persons in high life; grandeur; a splendid and ostentatious procession.

POMPEII, a town of Campania, in Ancient Italy, which was destroyed in the first recorded eruption of Mount Vesuvius, which also destroyed Herculaneum, and in which the elder Pliny perished. It was buried beneath showers of ashes. Considerable portions of the ruins have been uncovered, and many very interesting relics of antiquity brought to light. The forum, the baths, the theatres, the amphitheatre, various temples, the tombs in the road leading to the principal gate, the walls, the shops, the suburban villas, and the town-houses of the patricians, though ruined, have yet been so far preserved as to cast great light on the study of classical antiquities. The paintings, statues, articles of furniture, goods in shops, skeletons, &c. &c. have been chiefly removed to the museum of Naples. See HERCULANEUM.

POMPEIUS, CNEIUS, called Pompey the Great, a famous Roman statesman and general, of the last days of the Republic. He did not inherit any good name, and his first appearance was in the midst of all the commotions of social war. He was a partisan of Sylla, who used him for his own arts. His good fortune first appeared in his victory over the king of Numidia, in Africa, for which he enjoyed a triumph. He next appears in Spain, where he obtained the credit of having subdued Sertorius. He laid claim to the honour of having suppressed the slaves who revolted under Spartacus, after his return; and he came to be exceedingly popular in Rome, and obtained another triumph, and the consulship. His next exploits were, the clearing the Mediterranean of pirates, the defeat of Mithridates, and the conquest of Syria.

A third triumph followed; and then, with Julius Caesar and Crassus, two other aspirants for the chief place in the state, he formed the first triumvirate. Intrigues and infamy to outwit the others followed; and soon the closing scenes. Caesar, who had been gaining fame and training to victory a large army in Gaul, marched on Rome, and the Pompeian party fled. In Greece, the question was settled by battle, and the victory of Pharsalia was the end of Pompey's public career. He fled to Egypt, and was there assassinated in 48 B. C., aged 58 years. The chief feature of Pompey's character was his vanity, which Cicero has most amusingly and unsparingly exhibited in his letters. He was not worse than other leaders of his times, nor was he much better. He was at first more fortunate, and afterwards overconfident. His sons, Cneius Magnus Pompeius, and Sextus Magnus Pompeius, attempted to acquire by rebellion the dignity their father had sought for by intrigue; they were also aggrieved by the use made by the opposite party to their prejudice, and fresh wars arose. Sextus was once resorted to by the Roman senate, as a protection against the second triumvirate, but usually he lived either like a leader of mercenaries, or like a buccaneer, and he was at last overcome and killed, in 35 B. C.

PO/MPION, s. [pompion, Fr.] in Gardening, a pumpkin.

PO/MPIRE, s. [pomum and pyrum, Lat.] in Horticulture, a sort of pearmain.

POMPON, POMPON, s. [Fr.] an ornament worn by ladies in the fore-part of their hair.

PO/MPOUS, a. [pompeux, Fr.] grand; showy; splendid.

PO/MPOUSLY, ad. magnificently; splendidly.

PO/MPOUSNESS, s. magnificence; splendour; showiness; ostentatiousness.

POND, s. a small collection of standing water.

POND, JOHN, an English Astronomer Royal, whose great skill lay in observation, and was especially diligent in observations of the fixed stars. His knowledge of the use, &c. of astronomical instruments was very accurate and minute; and he thus was able to do service to this grand science in a department, which others of profounder mathematical knowledge were far less fitted to work in. He died in 1836, aged 69 years.

To POND, v. a. [pondis, Lat.] to weigh in the mind; to consider; to think or muse.—v. n. to think or muse upon, followed by on.

PONDERABLE, a. capable to be weighed; measurable by scales.

PONDERATION, s. the act of weighing.

PONDERER, s. one who ponders.

PONDEROSITY, s. weight; the quality of being heavy.

PONDEROUS, a. heavy; weighing much; of importance or moment; forcible or vehement.

PONDEROUSLY, ad. with great weight.

PONDEROUSNESS, s. the quality of weighing much.

PONDICHERRY, a town of the Carnatic, Hindustan. It is situated on the coast; and the part inhabited by Europeans is very regularly laid out, and substantially built, with many handsome public edifices; that inhabited by the natives is not of this character. It has not a harbour, and is unfortified at present. It has a fair trade; and is about 90 miles from Madras. Pop. about 45,000. Lat. 11. 55. N. Long. 79. 49. E.

PO/NENT, a. [poenent, Ital.] western.

PO/NIARD, s. [poignard, Fr.] a dagger, or short sword.

To PO/NIARD, v. a. [poignardier, Fr.] to stab with a poniard.

PONIATOWSKI, JOSEPH, a Polish prince and general, who served first under Joseph II. of Austria; afterwards under Kosciusko against Russia. When the duchy of Warsaw was created, he was one of the ministers; and fought against Austria, when it tried to seize upon the country. He accompanied Napoleon's grand army on its disastrous Russian campaign; and was made by him a Marshal of France. After the defeat at Leipsic, he was drowned in attempting to pass a river, in 1814, aged 51 years.

PONK, s. (etymology unknown,) a nocturnal spirit; a hag.

PO/NTAGE, s. [pons, Lat.] duty paid for the repairing of bridges.

PONTEFRACT, or PO/MFRET, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is situated in a rich soil, noted for its nursery grounds, and large plantations of liquorice and skirworts. Its castle, now in ruins, has been the scene of various tragical events in the English history. It is 177 miles from London. A great show of horses begins on Feb. 5. Market, Saturday. Pop. 9851.

PONTIFF, s. [pons and ficio, Lat.] a high priest or pope.

PONTIFICAL, a. [pontifex, Lat.] belonging to the high priest; belonging to the pope. Figuratively, splendid; magnificent.

PONTIFICAL, s. a book of pontifical rites and ceremonies.

PONTIFICALLY, ad. in a pontifical manner.

PONTIFICATE, s. the office and dignity of a pope.

PONTIFICE, s. bridge work; edifice of a bridge.

PONTIPOOL, or PO/NTYPOOL, Monmouthshire. It is seated between two hills, on the river Avon, which turns several mills for the working of iron plates, that are used there in a manufactory of japanned ware. It is 146 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2865.

PONTLEVIS, s. in Horsemanship, a disorderly resisting action of a horse in disobedience to his rider, in which he rears up several times running, and rises up so upon his hind legs that he is in danger of coming over.

PO/NTON, PONTON, s. [Fr.] a floating bridge, made of two boats, placed at a distance from each other, planked over, to gether with the interval between them, with rails on their sides, and used in passing both horses and cannon, &c. over a river. The boats used in making a floating bridge.

PONTUS, a country of ancient Asia Minor, lying on the Euxine, and bounded by Paphlagonia, Galatia, Cappadocia, and Armenia. It was mountainous, and its chief rivers were the Lycus and the Iris. Corn, wine, fruit, and wild animals fit for food abounded. Metals were dug out of the mountains, certainly iron, perhaps also silver. The people seem to have been of a very mixed character, some nomads, some practical, and some agrimultural, and were named Chalybes, because of being engaged in mining. Mithridates the Great, the last king, raised this country to its greatest splendour. Amasus, Trapezus, Neocesarea, Amasia, &c., were its chief cities.

PONY, s. [perhaps from punny.] a small horse.

POOL, s. [Pool, Sax. pool, Belg.] a lake, or large collection of deep and standing water; a reservoir of water supplied by springs, and discharging the surplus by sluices.

POOL, in Montgomeryshire. See WELSH POOL.

POOLE, Dorsetshire. It is situated upon a peninsula projecting into a capacious bay, branching into many creeks, and forming several islands. The harbour admits vessels of moderate size only; but for them it is very secure. Its trade is rapidly increasing, and the principal branch of business is the Newfoundland fishery. It has also a fine coasting trade, particularly in corn and coal. Near the mouth of the harbour is an oyster bank, from which vast quantities are carried to be fattened in the creeks of Essex and the Thames. It is 105 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 6093.

POOLE, MATTHEW, one of the most learned of the Nonconformist ministers, was educated at Cambridge, and held a living in London, whence he was ejected on the notorious St. Bartholomew's day, 1662. He was one whom Titus Oates included in the list of the intended victims of his pretended popish plot. He died at Amsterdam, in 1679, aged 55 years. His great work is a Synopsis of Critical Notes on the whole Scriptures. He also wrote a shorter work, Annotations on the Bible, which is very valuable.

POOP, s. [puppis, Lat. pooppe, Fr.] the highest or uppermost part of a ship's hull or stern.

POOR, a. [paupere, Span. paupere, Fr.] in want of money, or the necessities of life. Applied to value, of small worth, unfit for any purpose, trifling. Mean, low, abject, contemptible, unimportant, applied to opinion. A word of tenderness, implying a person or thing to be an object of pity and affection. The poor, used collectively for the lowest order of a community, who have neither riches, interest, nor power. Barren or dry, applied to soil. Lean, starved, applied to animals. Without spirit or strength, applied to liquor.

POOR LAWS, s. in Law, the statutes regulating the conditions and kinds of relief to be given to the poor, and the mode of administering it.

POORLY, ad. without money, interest, power, or the necessities of life; with little success; meanly; out of health.

POORNESS, s. want of money, power, interest, dignity, or the necessities of life. Want of fruitfulness, applied to soil.

POORSPIRITED, a. mean; cowardly.

POORSPIRITEDNESS, s. meanness; cowardice.

POP, [poppyssma, Lat.] a small, smart, and quick sound.

TO POP, v. n. to make a small and quick sound; to move or enter with a quick, sudden, and unexpected motion.—v. a. to put or in or slily or unexpectedly; to shift.

POPE, s. [papa, Lat.] in the Roman Church, the title borne by the bishop of Rome, signifying that he is the father or head of all other bishops. For all the claims of this pontiff, the reader must consult the canons and decrees of the Council of Trent; we can only point out some of the most appalling. He is held to be infallible, not only in matters of doctrine, but also in matters of fact. He is the vicar of God, and has all the authority of God, or of our Lord, over God's church. All guilt of separation from his jurisdiction are infallibly lost. He has supreme authority over all kings and princes, in their kingdoms and principalities, and may depose them at his pleasure. But as many who have maintained these dogmas, have also acted in opposition to them when it has suited their purpose, there is no pressing necessity for pointing out the falsehood, and impiety, and shameless arrogance that marks them. With very few exceptions, in spite of all theories to the contrary, for some generations now, the pope has been no more than the elected sovereign of the Papal States. Matters are now in such a position that more than this authority cannot be claimed safely. In Ichthyology, a fish, likewise called a ruff, resembling a perch in shape, but never grows bigger than a gudgeon.

POPE, ALEXANDER, a classic English poet, who began writing at a very early age, and whose life was diversified by no incidents, save his coming to reside in London, his quarrels with other writers and with booksellers, and the publication of his works. He died in 1744, aged 56 years. His works are very numerous, and amongst them his Messiah, his Rape of the Lock, and Essay on Man, his Pastorals and Moral Epistles, are the most considerable. The Dunciad is a very severe satire on several prominent characters in the literary world. He wrote a great number of smaller pieces. His translations of the Iliad and Odyssey, and of some parts of Horace, and his modernization of some of Chaucer's poems, are of still greater extent. He wrote, beside these poems, several satirical works and essays, as Bathos; and some in conjunction with Swift and Atterbury. Perhaps these are the most genuine of his writings; they certainly are far more agreeable to the readers of this generation than the formal, unnatural, tinselled, and often gross, style of his poetry. His translations are especially characterized by the vice of the imitator of Dryden, and Homer would never recognise his immortal epic in the dress it has been adorned with by his most popular translator. He was the leader of the fashions in literature; and happily for truth and human nature, his reign has long ago passed away.

POPEDOM, s. [pope and dom, Sax.] the office or dignity of a pope.

POPERY, s. in Ecclesiastical History and Theology, the communion and the doctrines of Romanism.

POPESEYE, s. in Cookery, the delicate fat in the middle of the thickest part of a leg of mutton.

POPGUN, s. a gun made of a piece of wood bored through, which is charged with pellets of hemp or brown paper, and played with by children.

POPINJAY, s. [papegay, Belg. papagayo, Span.] in old books of Natural History, a parrot; a woodpecker. Also, a mark for shooters; a trifling top.

POPISH, a. belonging to popery.

POPISHLY, ad. with a tendency to popery; in a popish manner.

POPULAR, s. [populus, Lat.] in Botany, a tree, of which there are many species, the best known being the tall and very straight tree, which usually bears this name exclusively. See ASPEN, &c.

POPPY, s. [popis, Sax.] in Botany, a plant, with a scarlet flower, which grows in the fields among corn. There are many garden kinds.

POPULACE, POPULACY, s. [Fr.] the lowest rank of people.

POPULAR, a. [populus, Lat.] vulgar, or of the lowest order, applied to rank. Suited to the capacity of the people in general; beloved by, or pleasing to, the people; studious of the favour of the people; prevailing or raging among the populace.

POPULARITY, s. the quality of being pleasing to people in general.

POPULARLY, ad. in a popular manner; according to vulgar conception.

TO POPULATE, v. n. to people a country, or increase it in people.

POPULATION, s. the number of inhabitants in a country. See MALTHUS.

POPULOSITY, s. the state of abounding with people.

POPULOUS, a. abounding in people; numerously inhabited.

POPULOUSLY, ad. with much people.

POPULOUSNESS, s. the state of abounding with people.

PORCELAIN, s. [porcelaine, Fr.] china, or china ware; a very compact, quite white, and semi-transparent kind of ware. The last quality distinguishes it from earthenware, which is always opaque.

PORCH, s. [porticus, Lat.] a roof supported by pillars before a door; a portico or covered walk.

PORCUPINE, s. [porcupino, Ital.] in Zoology, an animal which is furnished with sharp quills, in the place of hair.

PORE, s. [poros, Gr.] in Physiology, a passage or aperture in the cuticle of plants and animals. Any exceedingly minute aperture.

To PORE, v. n. to look at with great intensesness.
 POREBLIND, Pu'rlind, a. near-sighted; short-sighted.
 PORINESS, s. the quality of abounding in pores.
 PORISTIC METHOD, s. [porizo, Gr.] in Mathematics, is that which determines when, by what means, and how many different ways, a problem may be solved.

PORK, (pörk) s. [porcus, Lat.] swine's flesh.
 PORCKER, s. a full-grown hog; a pig.
 PORKET, PO'RKING, s. a young hog.
 POROSITY, s. the quality of having pores.
 POROUS, a. [porus, Fr.] having small apertures or interstices.

POROUSNESS, s. the quality of having pores.
 PORPHYRE, PO'PHYRY, (pörfyry) s. [porphyros, Gr.] in Mineralogy, a kind of marble of a brown or red colour, frequently interspersed with white spots. It is of volcanic origin.

PORPHYRY, a philosopher of the 3rd century A. D. He first studied under Longinus and Origen; and afterwards under Plotinus, the Neo-Platonist. He is chiefly known as an opponent of Christianity. Some of his numerous writings remain to us, and of these, his Life of Pythagoras, though sufficiently legendary in its character, is the most valuable. He died in 304, aged 71 years.

PORPOISE, PO'RPUS, s. [poro poison, Fr.] in Natural History, a sea animal of the dolphin tribe, which frequents the European seas, and is remarkable for its fatness. It is between six and seven feet long, thick in the fore-parts, and gradually tapering towards the tail.

PORRACEOUS, a. [porraceus, Lat.] greenish.
 PORRECTION, s. [porrigo, Lat.] the act of reaching forth.
 PORRET, s. the same with the scallion.
 PORRIDGE, s. [porrata, low Lat. from porrum, Lat.] broth or liquor made by boiling meat in water, with leeks and other herbs.

PORRINGER, s. a vessel in which broth is eaten.
 PORSON, RICHARD, an eminent classic and critic of the latter part of the last century. He studied at Eton and Cambridge, through the kindness of some persons who were struck with his ability, for his parents were in humble circumstances. He was made Greek professor at Cambridge, but he never entered the church. During the latter part of his life he was librarian of the London Institution. He died in 1808, aged 49 years. His editions of various Greek plays, and his posthumous Essays and criticisms, are of great value to the Greek student; but the ability which Porson possessed alone justifies his style of criticism. It is not for every learner to attempt to correct even evident corruptions of the text of the ancient writers; and the plan of solving every difficulty, and of bringing our author to say what we think he ought to say, by conjectural emendations, is of all things most utterly to be eschewed and condemned. Bentley's criticisms on Paradise Lost, in this style, are the best warning that was ever given against this unscholarlike and conceited fashion, which he was one of the most zealous to introduce.

PORT, s. [portus, Lat.] a harbour or safe station for ships.— [porta, Lat.] a gate; an aperture in a ship, through which the guns are put out.— [portier, Fr.] carriage or behaviour. A kind of wine, so called from Oporto, the place where it is most usually shipped for England.

To PORT, v. a. [porto, Lat. porter, Fr.] to carry in form.
 PORT ROYAL, the name of two French nunneries, one called Port Royal in the Fields, and the other, Port Royal in Paris, which, during the time that Angelica Arnauld was abbess, were the objects of bitterest hatred on the part of the Jesuits, partly because of the undoubted sincerity and sanctity of the sisterhood, but still more because of their connexion with the Jansenist party. Port Royal in the Fields was the abode of the learned and pious recluses who made so fearful an attack on the Jesuits in the 17th century. See ARNAULD, PASCAL, JANSENISTS, &c. &c.

PORTA, GIOVANNI BATTISTA DELLA, a natural philosopher of Italy, in the latter part of the 16th century. He devoted himself most assiduously to the cultivation of science, and travelled in various countries of Europe, for the sake of increasing his own knowledge. Whilst at Naples, he sought by the establishment of academies to spread the knowledge he had acquired. He also wrote several works, which, amongst much that is characterized by the ignorance and superstition of the age, contains very singular records of the observations he had made, and the speculations he had indulged in. He invented the camera obscura. Some plays were also written by him, near the close of his life. He died in 1615, aged about 70 years.

PORTABLE, a. that may be carried; such as may be endured.

PORTABLENESS, s. the quality of being portable.
 PORTAGE, s. [Fr.] the price of carriage; a port-hole.
 PORTAL, s. [portail, Fr. portella, Ital.] a gate; the arch under which a gate opens.

PORTANCE, s. [porter, Fr.] mien; port; demeanour.
 PORTATIVE, a. [portativ, Fr.] that may be carried from place to place.

PORTCULLIS, PORTCUL'SE, s. [portecoulisse, Fr.] a strong lattice work, with spikes at the bottom, running in grooves like the sash of a window, used in ancient fortifications as an additional security to the gate of a city or castle.

To PORTCULLIS, v. a. to bar or shut up.
 PORTED, a. [porté, Fr.] borne in a certain regular or solemn manner.

To PORTE'ND, v. a. [portendo, Lat.] to foreshow or foretoken.

PORTENSION, s. the act of foretokening.
 PORTE'NT, s. [portentum, from portendo, Lat.] an omen or prodigy foreshowing something ill.

PORTE'NTOUS, a. betokening something ill; monstrous.
 PORTER, s. [portier, Fr. from porta, Lat.] one that has the charge of a gate.— [porto, Lat.] one who carries burdens. Also, a kind of malt liquor, made chiefly in London and Dublin; of a darker colour than ale, from the kind of malt used, and very heavy and heady.

PORTER, SIR ROBERT KEIR, a painter and traveller of some celebrity. His pictures are chiefly battle scenes; and he was nominated by the Emperor Alexander of Russia, his historical painter. This led to his residence at St. Petersburg, and to his marriage into one of the noble families of that country. His most interesting travels were those which he made in Persia and ancient Assyria; and his narrative of them, and the accompanying plates, are valuable to the student of biblical and classical antiquities. After a very laborious life, in which he had travelled in, and resided in, both hemispheres, and received at home and abroad much honour, he died in 1842, aged 61 years.

PORTRERAGE, s. money paid or due to a porter for carrying.
 PORTEUS, DR. BEILBY, an eminent English prelate, who studied at Cambridge, and rose to be Bishop of London. He was held in considerable esteem by George III.; and is regarded as one of the evangelical school, who have esteemed him as one of their brightest luminaries. His works show both learning and literary skill; and consist of Sermons and Essays, a Poem, and the Life of Archbishop Seeker. He died in 1808, aged 77 years.

PORT-FIRE, s. a paper tube about ten inches long, filled with meal powder, rammed moderately hard, and used to fire guns and mortars with, instead of a match.

PORTGLAVE, s. [porter, Fr. and glave, Erse.] a sword-bearing.

PORTHOLE, s. a wicket in a ship's side, through which a gun is discharged.

PORTICO, s. [porticus, Lat.] a covered walk, whose roof is supported by pillars.

PORTION, (pörähön) s. [portio, Lat.] a part; a part assigned a person; a dividend; a fortune given to a child, or paid at, before, or after marriage.

To PORTION, v. a. to divide among several; to endow with a fortune.

PORTIONER, s. one that divides.
 PORTLAND, a peninsula in Dorsetshire, near Weymouth, nearly 7 miles round, and exceedingly strong both by nature and art. It is surrounded by inaccessible rocks, except at the landing-place, where there is a strong castle. The whole peninsula is one continuous mass of oolitic rock. The town is small. But the liberty includes several small hamlets. It is 132 miles from London. Pop. 2852.

PORTLAND, a city of Maine, United States. It stands on a peninsula, at the W. extremity of Casco bay; and is beautifully situated, rising like an ancient theatre between two hills. It is regularly built, and contains some fine public edifices and institutions. The harbour is easy of access, spacious, and safe; and

PORTSMOUTH

Scale of Miles.

Railway Stations, New

is fortified, and supplied with a lighthouse. It is a fine place for trade, both from its harbour, and from its ready communication by railway, &c. with the interior. It is 545 miles from Washington. Pop. 15,218. Ten other towns of the States bear this name.

PORTLAND OOLITE, in Geology, the name of the rock which is so finely developed in the isle of Portland. The most remarkable feature of this formation, is a stratum on its upper surface, called by the quarrymen, the Dirthead; which consists of vegetable mould, and has in it the remains of some very remarkable plants, allied to the modern Zamia, and Cycas, which remain in the very position in which they grew, though completely silicified, and surrounded by the strata of the superincumbent bed. The Portland stone is a good building stone, and is used pretty extensively, though it is not so easy to work as the Bath oolite. It has fossils in it, which evidence its marine origin.

PORTLAND VASE, the name of a very beautiful antique in the British Museum. It is a singularly, but exquisitely formed vase, with two handles, made of deep blue glass, and having on it, in white glass, some exceedingly beautiful figures. It was found in the tomb of the Roman emperor Alexander Severus.

PORTLINESS, s. dignity of mien or air; bulk of personage.

PORTLY, a. of noble mien or air; bulky, swelling.

PORTMAN, an inhabitant or Burgess, as those of the Cinque Ports.

PORTMANTEAU, (portmanto) s. [portemanteau, Fr.] a chest or kind of bag, in which clothes are carried.

PORTO BELLO, a sea-port town on the isthmus of Panama, in N. America. It is a very unhealthy place, and is chiefly inhabited by Mulattoes. Porto Bello is 65 miles N. of Panama. Lat. 10. 27. N. Long. 79. 26. W.

PORTOISE, s. in sea language, a ship is said to ride a portoise, when she rides with her yards struck down to the deck.

PORTRAIT, s. [portrait, Fr.] a picture drawn from the life; applied almost exclusively to pictures of the human face and person.

PORTRAITURE, s. [portraiture, Fr.] a picture or resemblance drawn from the life.

To PORTRAY, v. a. [pourtraire, Fr.] to paint; to adorn with pictures. Figuratively, to describe graphically.

PORTRESS, s. a female guardian of a gate.

PORT ROYAL, a sea-port town of Jamaica, W. Indies, built on a small neck of land which jets out several miles into the sea, and guarded by a very strong fort, with a harbour, in which 1000 ships may ride safely. It is 20 miles from Kingston. Lat. 17. 50. N. Long. 77. 0. W.

PORTSMOUTH, Hampshire. It is situated on the island of Portsea, and is very strongly fortified. The royal docks and yards resemble distinct towns, &c. under a government separate from the garrison. Here is also a fine arsenal for lying up the cannon. The harbour is one of the finest in the world, as there is water sufficient for the largest ships; and it is so very capacious, that the whole English navy could ride here in safety. Across the harbour's mouth, a floating steam-bridge piers continually between this town and Gosport. Opposite the town is the spacious road of Spithead. The town is extensive, and has some fine streets and public walks. The churches and chapels are fine buildings. It is 72 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 9354, and of Portsea, 43,678.

PORTSMOUTH, a city of New Hampshire, United States. It stands 3 miles from the ocean, on the Piscataqua river, and is a well-built place. The harbour is fine and deep, and is well fortified. On Great Island, with which it is connected by a bridge, is a lighthouse. Two fine bridges connect it with Kittery. Some of the public buildings are handsome structures; and there are several flourishing institutions, connected with education, &c. On Navy Island is one of the ship-building yards belonging to the United States. Trade, manufactures, (especially of the naval order,) and fisheries, are in a very thriving and prosperous state. It is 493 miles from Washington. Pop. 7887.

There are in the United States 4 other places similarly named.

PORTUGAL, the most western country of Europe. It lies on the Atlantic Ocean, and is bounded by Spain. It is about 310 miles long, and 120 broad. There are several chains of barren mountains, and some wide and fertile plains. The principal rivers are, the Tagus, the Quero or Douro, the Guadiana, the Minho, and the Munda or Mondego. The climate is more temperate than that of Spain. Fruits and wine are its chief products, but it also yields some corn; cattle are fed in some parts in considerable numbers. It has some valuable metals, but the manufactures are few, and of no great extent. It is divided into 6 provinces, for political and government purposes. Romanism is its exclusive religion. Lisbon is the capital. Pop. about 3,500,000.

PORWIGLE, s. in Natural History, a tadpole or young frog.

PORY, a. [poroux, Fr.] full of pores.

To POSE, (poze) v. a. to perplex, or confound with a difficulty.

POSEIDON, in Heathen Mythology, the Greek divinity who presided over the sea. He is usually confounded with the Latin deity, Neptune.

POSEN, a town of Prussia, in the part formerly belonging to Poland. It stands near Varta, and is pretty well built, with many public edifices, and some valuable charitable and educational institutions. It has some manufactures, and is strongly fortified. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 52. 22. N. Long. 16. 52. E.

POSER, (pozer) s. one that puzzles with difficulties.

POSITED, (piated) a. [pono, Lat.] placed.

POSITION, (posishun) s. [positio, Lat.] the state of being placed; situation; a principle laid down; advancement of any principle.

POSITIONAL, (posishunal) a. respecting position.

POSITIVE, (the s) in this word and its following derivatives is pron. like z: as positively, positively, &c. a. [positivus, Lat.] capable of being affirmed; real; absolute; dogmatical; stubborn in opinion; settled by arbitrary appointment; certain; assured. Positive Philosophy. See PHILOSOPHY.

POSITIVELY, ad. absolutely; certainly; peremptorily.

POSITIVENESS, POSITIVITY, s. actualness; confidence; stubborn confidence in opinion. The second word is used ludicrously.

POSITURE, s. [positura, from pono, Lat.] the manner in which any thing is placed.

POSNET, s. [bassinet, Fr.] a little basin or portinger.

POSSE, s. [used instead of posse comitatus, Lat.] an armed civil force at an election, or other similar assemblage.

POSSE COMITATUS, s. in Law, signifies the power of the county, or the aid and assistance of all the knights, gentlemen, yeomen, labourers, servants, apprentices, &c., and all others within the county that are above the age of 15, except women, ecclesiastical persons, and such as are decrepit and infirm. This is to be done when some riot is committed, a possession kept upon a forcible entry, or any force of rescue used contrary to the king's writ, or in opposition to the execution of justice.

To POSSESS, (the first s) in this word and its following derivatives has the sound of z: as posses, possession, &c.) v. a. [possideo, Lat.] to have as an owner; to enjoy or occupy actually; to seize or obtain; to give possession or command of any thing, with or without the thing possessed; to fill with something fixed; to have power over; to be affected by intense power.

POSSESSION, (posishun) s. [fr. possessio, Lat.] the state of having in one's hands or power; the thing enjoyed by a person.

POSSESSIVE, a. having possession. In Grammar, applied to pronouns which signify the possession of something; as, my book, his house; and to that case of nouns, &c. which is more correctly named the genitive: which see.

POSSESSOR, s. [Lat.] an owner or proprietor; one that has any thing in his hands.

POSSET, s. [posca, Lat.] milk curdled with treacle, wine, or any acid.

POSSIBILITY, s. [possibilité, Fr.] the quality of being to be done by the exertion of power.

POSSIBLE, a. [possibilis, from possum, Lat.] having the power to be, or to be done; not inconsistent with the nature of things.

POSSIBLY, ad. to be done by any power existing; perhaps.

POST, (piest) s. [poste, Fr.] a hasty messenger; one employed in carrying letters; a quick and expeditious manner of travelling.—[positus, Lat.] a situation, or seat; a military station; place or office.—[postis, Lat.] a piece of timber set up erect.

To POST, (piest) v. n. [poster, Fr.] to travel with speed.—v. a. to fix on a post in disgrace.—[poster, Fr.] to place, or fix. In Commerce, to enter the articles on their proper sides in a ledger.

POST OBIT, s. [post and obitum, Lat.] a bond given in security for money lent, in which payment is promised on the death of some party specified in it.

POSTAGE, s. money paid for the carriage of letters, or any thing conveyed by a post.

POSTBOY, s. one that carries letters.

TO POSTDATE, v. a. [post, Lat. and date,] to date later, or after the real time.

POSTDILUVIAN, a. [post and diluvium, Lat.] after the flood.

POSTELTHWAYTE, MALACHI, a London merchant, and writer on commerce. His Dictionary of Trade and Commerce, Great Britain's True System, and other works on the principles and practice of trade, are the writings that have given his name its authority in the mercantile world. He died in 1767, aged about 60 years.

POSTER, (pöster) s. a courier; or one sent in haste.

POSTERIOR, a. [Lat.] happening or placed after; following; backward.

POSTERIORIS, s. the hinder parts.

POSTERIORITY, [posteriorité, Fr.] the state of being after, in the order of time.

POSTERITY, s. [posteritas, Lat.] those that are born or live after; descendants.

POSTERN, s. [postern, Fr.] a small or narrow gate or door, in the rear of a castle, &c.

POSTEXISTENCE, s. [post and existo, Lat.] future existence.

POSTHACKNEY, s. a hired posthorse.

POSTHASTE, s. hurry, or the haste of a postboy.

POSTHORSE, s. a horse stationed for the use of couriers.

POSTHOUSE, s. an office where posting-horses, &c. are always kept.

POSTHUMOUS, a. [post and humo, Lat.] after one's death.

POSTIC, a. [posticus, Lat.] backward.

POSTILL, s. [postilla, low Lat.] gloss; marginal notes.

TO POSTILL, v. a. to gloss; to illustrate with marginal notes.

POSTILLER, s. one who glosses, or illustrates with marginal notes.

POSTILLION, s. [postillon, Fr.] one who drives a coach, chaise, &c., by riding on one of the horses.

POSTLIMINIOUS, a. [post and limen, Lat.] done or contrived afterwards.

POSTMASTER, s. one who has charge of public conveyance of letters.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL, s. the officer of state, who receives a salary as president of the General Post-Office.

POSTMERIDIAN, a. [post and meridies, Lat.] being in the afternoon.

POSTOFFICE, s. [post and office,] an office where letters are delivered to the post. General Post-Office, the government establishment for the conveyance of letters, &c.

TO POSTPONE, v. a. [post and pono, Lat.] to put off or delay.

POSTPRIDIAN, a. [postpridie, Lat.] done the next day after.

POSTSCRIPT, s. [post and scribo, Lat.] a part added to, or written after, the letter.

TO POSTULATE, v. a. [postulo, Lat.] to beg or assume as true, without proof.

POSTULATE, s. a position assumed without proof. In Geometry, a proposition which is used in the proof of other propositions, not because self-evident, nor yet because it has been or can be proved, but because of a tacit understanding that it may be so employed. Those in the first book of Euclid, are no more, in effect, than permission to use a ruler and pair of compasses in the constructions required.

POSTULATION, s. the art of assuming as true without proof.

POSTULATORY, a. assuming without proof.

POSTURE, s. [Fr.] place, or situation; the manner in which the parts of the human body are placed. Figuratively, state or disposition.

POSTULATUM, s. [Lat.] a position assumed without proof.

POSTUREMASTER, s. one who teaches uncommon attitudes or contortions of the body.

POSY, (pözy) s. [contracted from poesy,] the motto of a ring; a bunch of flowers.

POT, s. [Fr.] a vessel in which meat is boiled; a vessel, &c. to hold drink, or infuse tea in; any culinary or household vessel. To go to pot, implies to be destroyed or devoured.

TO POT, v. a. to preserve in pots; to enclose in pots.

POTABLE, (pötable) a. [poto, Lat.] fit for drink; such as may be drunk.

POTAGER, s. a porringer.

POTARGO, s. a hot kind of West-Indian pickle.

POTASH, Potassa, s. [potasse, Fr.] in Chemistry, the protoxide of potassium, formed by exposing that metal to the action of water, dry air, or oxygen gas. It is called by the Germans, kali. In Commerce, an impure, fixed, alkaline salt, made by burning vegetables.

POTASSIUM, s. in Chemistry, a metal resembling mercury in colour and lustre, of crystalline texture, and yielding with great rapidity to the action of heat. If thrown upon water, it burns with a purple flame, and swims on the surface.

POTATION, s. [poto, Lat.] draught; drinking-bout.

POTATO, s. [batata, Ind.] in Botany, &c., a plant closely allied to the deadly nightshade, and of poisonous qualities; but having a tuberos root, which, when boiled or baked, loses its noxious properties, and becomes a very nutritious and useful article of food. It is a native of America, and was introduced from that country in the beginning of the 16th century. Many varieties are cultivated in this country with great success. It has been for many years almost the sole support of the poorest classes in Ireland, and the result has been, that when the crop has failed extensively, through any blight or unfavourable season, the people have perished with famine. It is subject to some very remarkable diseases, which have of late attracted the notice of scientific persons, but without any very satisfactory results. It is most usually propagated by cuttings of the tubers.

POTBELLED, a. having a belly swelling out like a pot.

POTBELLY, s. a swelling belly.

TO POTCH, v. a. [pocher, Fr.] to thrust; to push; to poach; to boil slightly.

POTENCY, s. [potentia, from possum, Lat.] power; efficacy; strength.

POTENT, a. [potens, Lat.] powerful; strong; having great authority.

POTENTATE, s. [potentat, Fr.] a prince, or one enjoying sovereign power.

POTENTIAL, (potential) a. [potentialis, Lat.] existing only in possibility, not in act; efficacious, powerful. In Grammar, applied to that mood of verbs which denotes the possibility of doing a thing, &c.; as I may read.

POTENTIALITY, POTENTIALNESS, (potentiality, potentialness) s. possibility.

POTENTIALITY, (potentiality) ad. in power or possibility, opposed to actually or positively. In efficacy, opposed to actualness.

POTENTLY, ad. powerfully; forcibly.

POTGUN, s. [corrupted from popgun,] a gun which makes a small smart noise.

POTHANGER, s. a hook or branch on which a pot is hung over the fire.

POTHER, s. a bustle, tumult, or hurry.

TO POTHER, v. n. to make a bustling and ineffectual attempt. — v. a. to turmoil; to puzzle.

POTHERB, s. an herb fit for the pot.

POTHIER, ROBERT JOSEPH, an eminent French jurist, who was made professor of law at Orleans, and was a man of very extensive legal knowledge. His most considerable work is a Digest of the Pandects of Justinian, but he wrote very many others, and died in 1772, aged 73 years.

POTHOOK, s. hooks to fasten pots or kettles with. Also, ill-formed or scrawling letters or characters.

POTION, (pöshön) s. [potio, Lat.] a draught of physic.

POTOMAC, a great river of the United States, which rises in the Alleghanies, flows between Virginia and Maryland, and enters Chesapeake Bay, after a course of 550 miles. Georgetown, Washington, and Alexandria, are the chief places standing on its banks.

POTOSI, a very rich town of Bolivia, in S. America. It is not very well built, but it has some fine public edifices. Near it is a conical mountain, about 16,000 feet high, almost wholly composed of ores of silver. It is from this rich mine that the town derives its importance, but it has greatly declined of late. Pop. above 10,000. Lat. 19. 47. S. Long. 67. 22. W.

POTSDAM, a town of Prussia, seated on an island, of about 10 miles in circumference, formed by two rivers. It is a very handsome place, and is splendidly adorned. Its prosperity arose from its being the site of the favourite palace of Frederic the Great. It ranks next in importance to Berlin. There are many manufactures carried on here. It is 12 miles from Berlin. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 52. 52. N. Long. 13. 46. E.

POTSHERD, s. a fragment of a broken pot.

POTTAGE, s. [potage, Fr.] broth, or any thing boiled for food.

POTTER, s. [potier, Fr.] a maker of earthenware.

POTTER, PAUL, a celebrated Dutch painter, whose pictures are composed of most exquisitely truthful drawings of cattle, sheep, &c., with such landscapes as Holland can afford. His brilliant colouring is particularly admired, and by unideal England, his fidelity to even the coarse realities of nature is specially approved. He died in 1654, aged 29 years.

POTTER, DR. JOHN, an English prelate, who studied at Oxford, and was finally appointed archbishop of Canterbury. He published many sermons, edited the works of Clement of Alexandria, and wrote a treatise on Grecian Antiquities, that was the text book on that subject, till late years, when more extensive and accurate study has rendered it almost useless. He died in 1747, aged 73 years.

POTTIER-ORE, s. an earth used for glazing coarse vessels.

POTTERY, s. the place where earthenware is manufactured; the general name for all kinds of earthenware.

POTTING, s. drinking.

POTTLE, s. [from bottle,] a liquid measure containing four pints.

POTTO, s. in Zoology, an animal of the lemur tribe, which inhabits Guinea, and has the manners of the sloth.

POTVA/LIANT, a. made daring by excessive drinking.

POUCH, s. [poch, Fr.] a small bag or pocket. Figuratively, the belly. In Botany, a sort of seed-vessel resembling a purse, as in honesty and shepherd's purse.

TO POUCH, v. a. to put in the pocket; to swallow; to pout, or hang down the lip.

POVERTY, s. [pauvreté, Fr.] want of money or necessities. Meanness, or want of ornament, applied to style. SYNON. Poverty is that situation of fortune, opposed to riches, in which we are deprived of the conveniences of life. Indigence is a degree lower, where we want the necessities; and is opposed to superfluity. Want seems rather to arrive by accident, implies a scarcity of provision, rather than a lack of money; and is opposed to abundance. Need and necessity relate less to the situation of life, than the other three words, but more to the relief we expect, or the remedy we seek; with this difference between the two, that need seems less pressing than necessity.

POULDAVIS, s. a sort of sailcloth.

POULT, s. [poulet, Fr.] a young chicken or turkey.

POUNTERER, s. one who sells fowls for the table.

POULTICE, POU/TIVE, s. [pulte, Fr. pultis, Lat.] in Surgery, a form of medicine applied to assuage a swelling or inflammation.

POULTON, Lancashire. It is commodiously situated for trade, near the mouth of the river Wyre, just by the Skippon, which runs into it, and communicates by a canal with the inland navigations. It is 231 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 7973.

POULTRY, s. [poulet, Fr.] domestic fowls.

POUNCE, s. [pounce, Ital.] the claws or talons of a bird of prey; a sudden and forcible seizure; a powder made from the bone of the cuttle-fish, or gum sandarach, used to prevent ink spreading on paper.

TO POUNCE, v. a. [pangonare, Ital.] to pierce or make holes; to pour or sprinkle through small interstices; to seize with the talons.

POUNCED, a. furnished with claws or talons.

POUND, s. [pound, or pund, Sax. from pundus, Lat.] a weight consisting of twelve ounces in troy, and sixteen ounces in avoirdupois weight. A sum consisting of twenty shillings sterling. [psindan, Sax.] an enclosure or prison in which strayed beasts are confined.

TO POUND, v. a. [punian, Sax.] to beat to pieces with a pestle; to shut up or confine strayed cattle.

POUNDAGE, s. a certain sum deducted from every pound sterling; a payment or tax rated according to the weight of the commodity.

POUNDER, s. [pundre, Sax.] the name of a heavy large pear; any person or other thing denominated from a certain number of pounds, hence a ten pounder; a pestle.

POUPICKS, s. in Cookery, a mess of victuals made of veal steaks and slices of bacon.

TO POUR, v. a. to let liquor out of a vessel; to let out or give vent to.—v. n. to flow in streams; to rush tumultuously.

POURIR, s. one that pours.

POUSSIN, the name of two famous painters of the French school, who resided however chiefly at Rome. Nicholas Poussin, the more illustrious, was especially great in composition and design. He was engaged for some time at Paris, in the service of Louis XIII. He died in 1665, aged 71 years. Gaspard Poussin, his brother-in-law, whose true name was Dughette, was particularly renowned as a landscape painter. He was often assisted by the other. He died in 1675, aged 62 years.

POUT, s. in Natural History, a kind of cod-fish. Also a kind of bird.

TO POUT, v. n. [bouter, Fr.] to look sullen, or express discontent by thrusting out the lips; to gape or hang prominent.

POWDER, s. [poudre, Fr.] dust; any thing beat into small particles; gunpowder; a scented dust used for the hair.

TO POWDER, v. a. to reduce to dust, or pound small; to sprinkle the hair with scented dust; to salt, or sprinkle with salt.—v. n. to come or attack in a violent and tumultuous manner, used with upon.

POWDERBOX, s. a box in which powder for the hair is kept.

POWDERHORN, s. a case in which gunpowder is kept for immediate use.

POWDERMILL, s. the mill in which gunpowder is made.

POWDER-ROOM, s. that part of a ship in which the gunpowder is kept.

POWDERING-TUB, s. a tub in which meat is salted.

POWDERWORT, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, distinguished by the fibres being simple, uniform, and like soft wool or dust. There are 15 British species.

POWDERY, a. [poudreux, Fr.] dusty; friable.

POWER, s. [puvoir, Fr.] command; influence, or dominion; ability; force; strength; the moving force of an engine; natural strength; a faculty of the mind; government, or the right of governing; a sovereign, or one invested with command or dominion; a divine or spiritual being; an army, or military force. In low language, a great number, or large quantity. In Arithmetic and Algebra, the product of the multiplication of a quantity by itself, is said to be a power of that number, which is called the root: thus, 9 is the 2nd power of 3; and 27, the 3rd power. This process is called Involution. SYNON. Power includes a particular relation to the subordinate execution of superior orders. In the word authority we find a sufficient energy to make us perceive a right, either of civil or political administration. Dominion carries with it an idea of empire. Power of Attorney, a stamped document, by which any person legally empowers another to act in his behalf, in any business; as in the sale or transfer of stock, or in receiving the dividends accruing from it.

POWERFUL, a. invested with command or authority; efficacious; forcible.

POWERFULLY, ad. in a forcible, efficacious, or mighty manner.

POWERFULNESS, s. the quality of being possessed with force, efficacy, or might.

POWERLESS, a. weak, or unable to produce an effect.

POX, s. in Medicine, the name of several different diseases; as small-pox, cow-pox, chicken-pox, &c.

PRACTIC, a. relating to action; not merely theoretical; sly; artful.

PRACTICABLE, a. [Fr.] capable of being practised, performed, or assailed.

PRACTICABLENESS, s. possibility to be performed.

PRACTICABLY, ad. in such a manner as may be performed.

PRACTICAL, a. [praktikos, from prasso, Gr.] relating to action, opposed to speculative.

PRACTICALLY, ad. in a manner relating to action; by practice.

PRACTICALNESS, s. the quality of being the subject of action.

PRACTICE, s. the habit of doing any thing; use or custom; dexterity acquired by frequent action; actual performance, distinguished from theory; the exercise of any profession, especially that of medicine. In Arithmetic, a set of rules, by which long and tedious operations of compound multiplication, required in trade, are very much abridged.

To PRACTISE, v. a. [præciperè, Fr.] to do frequently; to reduce to action, opposed to profess; to use in order to acquire habit or dexterity; to exercise any profession.—v. n. to transact or negotiate secretly; to try artifices; to use medical methods.

PRACTISER, s. one that practises.

PRACTITIONER, (practishöner) s. one engaged in the exercise of any art or profession; one that uses tricks or stratagems; one who does any thing habitually.

PRECOGNITA, s. [Lat.] things known before in order to understand something else; thus the structure of the human body is one of the precognita of physic.

PRAGMATIC, PRAGMATICAL, a. [pragma, Gr.] meddling; impertinently busy; performing or doing without either being asked or welcome. Pragmatic Sanction, the name of a decree by which Charles VI. of Germany, in 1713, determined that, in default of male issue, his daughters should succeed, rather than the children of his brother Joseph I. It was confirmed in 1731, by the powers who contracted the Quadruple Alliance, for maintaining the treaty of Utrecht. Also of another decree issued by Charles VII. of France in 1439, regulating the election of bishops, and moderating the power of the pope, in France. These are the most celebrated of such decrees of absolute sovereigns.

PRAGMATICALLY, ad. meddling; impertinently.

PRAGMATICALNESS, s. the quality of being pragmatical.

PRAGUE, (Präg) the capital of Bohemia, Austria. It stands on the Moldau, and consists of three towns, viz. the Old, the New, and the Little Town; and is about 15 miles in circumference. There are a very great number of churches here, besides many public buildings and palaces. The bridge is very fine, being adorned with statuary; and the city is fortified after the ancient manner, and has 8 gates. Its university is frequented by a great number of students, and is well supplied with all academic and scientific apparatus. The libraries in this city are very extensive, and rich in MSS. There are many useful and valuable manufactures carried on here; and it is a place of very great trade. It is 144 miles from Vienna. Pop. about 125,000. Lat. 50. 53. N. Long. 14. 30. E.

PRAIRIE, s. [Fr.] the name given to the extensive and undulating plains in the W. part of the United States' territories; in which there are few trees, and which afford ample grazing ground for vast herds of buffaloes. Sometimes, in the fall, or autumn, when the tall grass is withered, a traveller's or hunter's fire kindles the dry herbage; and the fire spreads over immense tracts, destroying great quantities of wild animals, and sometimes the wigwags of the Indians, and hunters themselves; forming a most terrific spectacle, according to the account of those who have witnessed and been in jeopardy of it.

PRaise, (praise) s. [preiz, Teut. preis, Belg.] an acknowledgment made of the excellency or perfection of any person or action; fame, renown, glory; a tribute of gratitude; a ground or reason for recommendation.

To PRAISE, (praise) v. a. [prisen, Belg.] to commend, celebrate, applaud, or display the excellences or merit of any person or thing; to attribute honour and excellency reverentially.

SYNON. We extol a person, to procure him the esteem of others, or raise his reputation; we praise him, to testify the esteem we have for him, or to applaud him.

PRaisER, (praiser) s. one that applauds or commends.

PRaisEWORTHY, (præworthy) a. deserving commendation, honour, or praise; commendable.

PRAME, s. a flat-bottomed boat.

To PRANCE, v. n. [pronken, Belg.] to spring and bound in high mettle; to ride in an ostentatious manner; to move in a showy manner.

To PRANK, v. a. [pronken, Belg.] to dress ostentatiously, or in a showy manner.

PRANK, s. a mad action or frolic.

To PRATE, v. n. [praten, Belg.] to talk much, and to little purpose.

PRATE, s. excessive talking to little purpose.

PRATER, s. an idle talker; a chatterer.

PRATINCOLE, s. in Ornithology, a bird allied to the lapwing; one species of which, the Austrian Pratincole, is occasionally shot in England.

PRATINGLY, ad. with little tattle; with loquacity.

PRA'TIQUE, (prâteek) s. [Fr. pratica, Ital.] a licence for a master of a ship to traffic in the ports of Italy, upon a certificate that the place whence he came is not annoyed with any infectious disorder.

To PRATTLE, v. n. [diminutive of prate,] to talk much on trifling subjects.

PRATTLE, s. the act of speaking much on trifling subjects.

PRATTLER, a. a trifling talker; a chatterer. These three words are usually applied to children by way of endearment.

PRA'VITY, s. [pravus, Lat.] a state wherein a thing has lost its perfection.

PRAWN, s. in Natural History, a marine animal resembling a shrimp, but somewhat larger, and of a different colour.

PRA'XITELES, a famous Grecian sculptor, whose works have received the unanimous praise of all ancient writers who were familiar with them, but of which we have not one authentic specimen preserved. The Apollo Belvidere and the Medicean Venus are believed to be ancient copies of two of his most celebrated statues; and by some, the group of Niobe is attributed to him, but without sufficient evidence. He flourished in about 300 B. C.

To PRAY, v. n. [prier, Fr.] to make supplications to God; to entreat in a submissive and earnest manner. I pray, or beg, is sometimes used elliptically for I pray you, in a slightly ceremonious manner of introducing a question.—v. a. to ask as a supplicant; to entreat in a ceremonious manner.

PRA'YER, s. [priere, Fr.] spiritual address to God, especially consisting of supplications; an entreaty, or submissive and earnest request.

PRA'YERBOOK, s. a book of public or private devotions. Most usually applied to the Book of Common Prayer, of the Church of England.

PRÆ, (præ, Lat.) a particle which, when prefixed to words derived from the Latin, makes priority of time or rank.

To PREACH, (preach) v. n. [præ and dicō, Lat. prescher, Fr.] to pronounce a discourse on some sacred subject.—v. a. to deliver in a sacred speech; to inculcate with earnestness and solemnity.

PRE'ACHER, (precher) s. [prêcheur, Fr.] one who discourses publicly on religious subjects; one who inculcates any thing with earnestness or vehemence.

PRE'ACHMENT, (preachment) s. a discourse affectingly grave or devout.

PRE'AMBLE, s. [præambule, Fr.] something done by way of introduction; an overture on the drum.

PREAPPREHENSION, s. an opinion formed before examination.

PRE'BEND, s. [prebenda, Ital.] in the Churches of Rome and England, of the office and emoluments of the canons or prebendaries of cathedrals.

PRE'BENDARY, s. [præbendarius, Lat.] one who has a prebend.

PRECA'RIOUS, a. [precarius, Lat.] uncertain.

PRECA'RIOUSLY, ad. uncertainly by dependence; dependently; at the pleasure of others.

PRECA'RIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being uncertain, because depending on the will of another.

PRECAUTION, s. [Fr.] a measure or hint given to prevent something.

To PRECAUTION, v. a. [précautionner, Fr.] to give warning beforehand.

PRECE'DA'NEOUS, a. previous; beforehand.

To PRECE'DE, v. a. [præ and cedo, Lat.] to go before in order of time or place.

PRECE'DENCE, PRECE'DENCY, s. the act or state of going before in order of time, place, or dignity; superiority.

PRECE'DENT, a. former; going before.

PRECE'DENT, s. any thing that is an example or rule for future times; any thing of the same kind done before.

PRECE'DENTLY, ad. beforehand.

PRECE'NTOR, s. [præ and canto, Lat.] one who sings first, or leads a choir.

PRE'CEPT, s. [præcipio, Lat.] a rule given by a superior; a direction or command.

PRECEPTIVE, a. containing or giving rules or commands.
PRECEPTOR, s. [Lat.] one that instructs and has the care of youths.

PRECESSION, s. [præcessus, from præcedo, Lat.] the act or state of going before. In Astronomy, the precession of the equinoxes is a slow motion of the two points where the equator intersects the ecliptic, which are found to go backwards, or contrary to the order of the signs, about 50" in a year; causing the fixed stars to appear to move at the same rate toward the east, and the sidereal year to be 20m. 25s. longer than that which is measured by the sun's return to either equinox. Its cause is a slight oscillation of the axis of the earth, caused by the attraction of the moon. See MUTATION.

PRECINCT, s. [præ and cincto, Lat.] an outward limit or boundary; a ward.

PRECIOUSNESS, PRECIOUSITY, (prêshiousness, prêshiousity) s. value: any thing of high price.

PRECIOUS, (prêshious) a. [preciosus, Fr. pretiosus, from pretium, Lat.] valuable; of great worth; costly; of great price; worthless, in irony.

PRECIOUS STONE, s. a common name for such stones as are much valued for their lustre, durability, colour, rarity, &c.; such as diamonds, rubies, sapphires, topazes, emeralds, &c.

PRECIOUSLY, (prêshiously) ad. valuable; contemptibly.

PRECIPICE, s. [præceps, Lat.] a headlong steep; a steep place from which a person cannot descend without falling down headlong.

PRECIPIANCE, PRECIPIANCY, s. rash haste.

PRECIPIANT, a. falling or rushing headlong; rashly hurried; too hasty.

PRECIPIANTLY, ad. in a tumultuous manner; in headlong haste.

To PRECIPIRATE, v. a. to throw down headlong; to hasten unexpectedly, rashly, or blindly.—v. n. to fall headlong. In Chemistry, to cause to fall to the bottom of a vessel as a sediment.

PRECIPIRATE, a. falling as from a steep place; headlong; rashly hasty; hasty; violent.

PRECIPIRATE, s. in Chemistry, any matter which, having been dissolved in a fluid, falls to the bottom of the vessel on the addition of some other substance which by any means decomposes the solution. In Medicine, a corrosive substance, made by precipitating mercury.

PRECIPIRATELY, ad. headlong; in blind hurry.

PRECIPITATION, s. the act of throwing down headlong, or from a precipice; a violent motion downwards; a rash, tumultuous, and blind haste or hurry. In Chemistry, the act of making a thing subside as a sediment, opposed to sublimation.

PRECIPITOUS, a. [præ and caput, Lat.] headlong; steep; hasty; sudden; rash; heady.

PRECISE, a. [præcisus, Lat.] exact; strict; nice; having strict and determinate limitations; formal; finical.

PRECISELY, ad. exactly; nicely; accurately; with superstitious formality; with too much scrupulosity.

PRECISENESS, s. the quality of being very nice or exact.

PRECISIAN, (prêchian) s. one who limits or restrains; one nice or exact to excess.

PRECISION, (prêchion) s. [Fr.] an exact limitation.

PRECISIVE, a. exactly limiting so as to cut off all occasions for dispute.

To PRECLUDE, v. a. [præ and cludo, Lat.] to shut out, exclude, or hinder beforehand.

PRECOCIOUS, (prêchious) a. [præcox, from præ and coquo, Lat.] ripe before the time. Figuratively, mature in mental or bodily powers at an unusually early age.

PRECOCITY, s. ripeness before the time. Figuratively, mental or bodily maturity at an earlier age than usual.

To PRECOGITATE, v. a. [præ and cogito, Lat.] to consider or scheme beforehand.

PRECOGNITION, s. [præ and cognitio, Lat.] foreknowledge.

PRECONCEPT, s. an opinion previously formed.

To PRECONCEIVE, v. a. to form an opinion before due examination.

PRECONCEPTION, s. an opinion formed before examination.

PRECONTRACT, s. a contract made before another.

To PRECONTRACT, v. a. to contract or bargain beforehand.

PRECURSE, s. [præ and curro, Lat.] forerunning.

PRECURSOR, s. a harbinger; a forerunner.

PREDACEOUS, a. [præda, Lat.] living by prey.

PREDATORY, PREDAL, a. plundering; hungry; ravenous; preying.

PREDCESSOR, s. [prêdcesseur, Fr.] one that enjoys any place, or was in any state, before another. See ANCESTOR.

PREDDESTINARIAN, s. in Theology, one that holds the doctrine of predestination.

To PREDDESTINATE, v. a. [præ and destino, Lat.] to doom or appoint beforehand by an irreversible decree.

PREDESTINATION, s. in Theology, the decree of God respecting the eternal condition of each soul; and the state of each, resulting from that decree; whether the predestination be to life or to death. The maintenance of this tenet in its baldest and most terrible form, has arisen from the employment of mere logic in the construction of the system of theology, and from the taking of the idea of God's sovereignty as the sole starting point. The maintenance of the former part of it, to the exclusion of reprobation, does more credit to the kindheartedness, than to the consistency, of the parties who do so. The whole difficulty arises from the nature of the inquiry, which does not admit common logic as its Organon, or method; from the vain expectation that a consistent statement in words can be given of a spiritual, supersensual truth, which can be expressed only by one's life; and from the unavailing rejection of the fact of human responsibility, and consequent free will. See ARMINIUS, CALVIN, ELECTION, FREEDOM, GRACE, &c. &c.

PREDESTINATOR, s. one that holds predestination, or the prevalence of pre-established necessity.

To PREDESTIMATE, v. a. to decree beforehand.

PREDETERMINATION, s. [Fr.] the act of determining beforehand.

To PREDETERMINE, v. a. to doom or confine by previous decree.

PREDIAL, a. [prædial, Lat.] in Law, consisting of farms.

PREDICABLE, a. [predico, Lat.] such as may be affirmed of any thing.

PREDICABLE, s. in Logic, a general quality which may be affirmed of any thing.

PREDICAMENT, s. [predicamentum, Lat.] in Logic and Metaphysics, the pure forms of the understanding, by means of which conceptions are rendered possible out of the representations furnished by the senses; the most universal expressions for the various relations of things. See CATEGORY. A class or kind described by any definitive marks.

PREDICANT, s. [predicans, Lat.] one that affirms any thing; a preacher.

To PREDICATE, v. a. [predico, Lat.] to affirm any thing of another thing.

PREDICATE, s. that which is affirmed or denied of the subject. In Grammar, that part of a simple sentence which declares something affirmatively or negatively, of the subject.

PREDICATION, s. the act of affirming.

PREDICATIVE, s. in Grammar, applied to that combination of words by which a simple sentence is formed; the predicative part being that which, by any means, affirms or denies any thing respecting the subject.

To PREDICT, v. a. [præ and dico, Lat.] to tell or show beforehand.

PREDICTION, s. a declaration of something future; prophecy.

PREDICTOR, s. a foreteller.

PREDIGATION, s. digestion performed too soon.

PREDILECTION, s. [præ and diligere, Lat.] preference of choice or affection.

To PREDISPOSE, v. a. to adapt beforehand to any particular purpose.

PREDISPOSITION, (prêdispozishon) s. previous adaptation to any certain purpose.

PREDOMINANCE, PREDOMINANCY, s. [præ and domino, Lat.] prevalence; superior influence; ascendancy.

PREDOMINANT, a. [Fr.] prevalent, or having a superior influence.

To PREDOMINATE, v. a. to prevail; to have a superior influence; to be ascendant.

To PREDILECT, v. a. to choose beforehand.

PRED-EMINENCE, s. [Fr.] a superior state of excellence; priority of place, power, or influence.

PRE-EMINENT, a. [præ and emineo, Lat.] having excellence superior to others.

PRE-EMPTION, s. [præ and emio, Lat.] the right of purchasing before others.

To PREEN, v. a. [prænen, Belg.] to trim the feathers.

To PRE-ENGAGE, v. a. to engage before.

PRE-ENGAGEMENT, s. a prior or precedent obligation.

PREENING, s. in Natural History, is the action of birds dressing their feathers; for which purpose they have two glands on the rump, which secrete an unctuous matter, which the bird takes up with its bill.

To PRE-ESTABLISH, v. a. to establish or settle beforehand.

PRE-ESTABLISHMENT, s. settlement beforehand.

To PRE-EXIST, v. n. [præ and existo, Lat.] to exist before.

PRE-EXISTENCE, s. a previous state of being.

PRE-EXISTENT, a. existing before.

PRE/FACE, s. [prefatio, from præ and facio, Lat.] something used as preparatory, or introductory; a discourse prefixed to a book.

To PRE/FACE, v. n. to say something by way of introduction; — v. a. to introduce by something preial.

PRE/FATORY, a. introductory.

PRE/FECTION, s. [præ and facio, Lat.] a governor or commander; a superintendent.

PRE/FECTURE, s. [Fr.] command; office of government.

To PRE/FER, v. a. [præfero, from præ and fero, Lat.] to regard, esteem, or value more than another; used with above, before, or to, before the thing less esteemed. To exalt or raise in dignity; to offer solemnly, or propose publicly. In Law, to exhibit a bill or accusation.

PREFERABLE, a. [Fr.] to be chosen, esteemed, or valued more than something else.

PREFERABLENESS, s. the state of being preferable.

PREFERABLY, ad. in preference; in such a manner as to prefer one thing to another.

PREFERENCE, s. the act of esteeming more, or choosing before another; used with to, before, over, or above, before the thing less esteemed.

PREFERMENT, s. advancement to a higher post or station; a place of honour or profit; the act of esteeming or choosing one thing rather than another.

To PREFIGURATE, v. a. [præ and figuro, Lat.] to show by some precedent figure or representation.

PREFIGURATION, s. an antecedent representation.

To PREFIGURE, v. a. to show by some figure or token before.

To PREFINE, v. a. [præ and finio, Lat.] to limit beforehand.

To PREFIX, v. a. [præ and figo, Lat.] to appoint beforehand; to settle; to fix, place, or set before another thing.

PRE/FIX, s. a particle put at the beginning of a word to modify its signification.

PREFIXION, (præfixshon) s. [Fr.] the act of prefixing.

PRE/GNANCY, s. the state of being with young. Fruitfulness of invention, applied to the mind.

PRE/GNANT, a. [pregnans, Lat.] teeming; breeding; with young; fruitful, or causing fertility; full of consequence.

PREGUSTATION, s. [præ and gusto, Lat.] the act of tasting before another.

To PREJUDGE, v. a. [præ and judico, Lat.] to determine any question beforehand, or condemn before examination.

To PREJUDICATE, v. a. to determine beforehand to disadvantage.

PREJUDICATE, a. formed prejudicially before examination.

PREJUDICATION, s. the act of judging without examination.

PREJUDICE, s. [præjudicium, Lat.] a judgment or opinion formed before examination, either in favour of, or against, a person or thing; prepossession; a mischief, damage, or detriment.

To PREJUDICE, v. a. to prepossess a person with a good or bad opinion of a person or thing before he can see or examine; to be of disservice or hurt by means of preconceived opinions.

PREJUDICIAL, (præjudicial) a. [præjudicialis, Fr.] injuring or hurting by preconceived opinions; mischievous; injurious; opposite.

PRE/LACY, s. the dignity of the highest officers in an episcopal church; episcopacy; the order of bishops.

PRE/LATE, s. [prælatus, from præfero, Lat.] one of the highest order of episcopal clergy; a bishop.

PRELATION, s. preference; the setting one above the other.

PRE/LATURE, PRE/LATURESHIP, s. [prælatúra, Lat.] the state or dignity of a prelate.

PRE/LECTION, s. [præ and lego, Lat.] reading; lecture.

PRE/LIBATION, s. [præ and libo, Lat.] a taste beforehand.

PRE/LIMINARY, a. [præ and limen, Lat.] previous or introductory.

PRE/LIMINARY, s. something by way of introduction.

PRE/LUDE, s. [Fr.] a short piece of music before a full concert; something introductory, showing what is to follow.

To PRE/LUDE, v. n. to serve as an introduction; to be previous to.

PRE/LUSIVE, a. previous; introductory; premonial.

PRE/MATURE, a. [præ and maturus, Lat.] ripe too soon; with too hasty ripeness; too early; too soon said, believed, or done.

PRE/MATURELY, ad. too early; too soon; with too hasty ripeness.

PRE/MATURENESS, PRE/MATURITY, s. too great haste; unreasonable earliness.

To PRE/MEDITATE, v. a. [præ and meditor, Lat.] to contrive, form, or think of beforehand.

PRE/MEDITATION, s. the act of thinking on, or contriving, beforehand.

To PRE/MERIT, v. a. [præ and mereo, Lat.] to deserve before.

PRE/MICES, s. [Fr.] first fruits.

PRE/MIER, a. [Fr.] first chief.

To PRE/MISE, (premise) v. a. [præ and mitto, Lat.] to explain or lay down beforehand.

PRE/MISES, s. [præmissa, Lat.] in Logic, propositions supposed, laid down, or proved before, from which the conclusion is inferred in the syllogism. (See SYLLOGISM.) In Law, houses, lands, or places mentioned before.

PRE/MIUM, s. [præmium, Lat.] something given to invite a loan, make a bargain, or encourage skill and invention. In money matters, the excess above the nominal value, at which shares in incorporated companies, and funds, are purchased; the annual payment to a Fire Insurance, or Life Assurance Office; the money paid by parents or guardians to a master to whom a young person is apprenticed.

To PRE/MONISH, v. a. [præ and monéo, Lat.] to warn before.

PRE/MONITION, s. a notice or warning given beforehand.

PRE/MONITORY, a. previously advising.

To PRE/MONSTRATE, v. a. [præ and monstro, Lat.] to show beforehand.

PRE/MUNIRE, PRE/MUNIRE, (in common discourse accented on the first syllable,) s. [Lat.] in Law, a writ, whereby one who does any thing to the disparagement of the royal authority, especially in ecclesiastical matters, and in relation to the see of Rome, is summoned to trial for the offence. The penalties were absurdly severe, but they are mitigated now, and such writs are almost unknown in actual practice, though the statutes are unrepealed. A penalty incurred; a difficulty or distress.

PRE/MUNITION, s. [præmunio, Lat.] an anticipation of objection.

To PRE/MONINATE, v. a. [præ and nomino, Lat.] to forename.

PRE/MONINATION, s. the privilege of being named first.

PRE/NON, s. [Fr.] foreknowledge; prescience.

PRE/NTICE, s. [contracted from apprentice,] one bound to a master in order to learn a trade.

PRE/NUNCIATION, s. [prænuncio, Lat.] the act of telling before.

PRE/OCCUPANCY, s. the act of taking possession before another.

To PRE/OCCUPATE, PRE/OCCUPY, v. a. [præ and occupo, Lat.] to anticipate or prevent; to prepossess or prejudice.

PRE/OCCUPATION, s. anticipation; prepossession; anticipation of objection.

To PRE/OCCUPATE, v. a. [præ and ominor, Lat.] to prognosticate; to gather from omens any future event.

PRE/OPTION, s. [præ and optio, Lat.] opinion antecedently formed; prepossession.

To PRE/ORDAIN, v. a. to ordain or decree beforehand.

PRE/ORDINANCE, s. antecedent decree; first decree.

PRE/ORDINATION, s. the act of predecreeing.

PRE/PARATION, s. [præ and paro, Lat.] the act of making any thing fit for any purpose beforehand; measures taken beforehand; a ceremonious introduction. In Medicine, any thing made by gradual labour.

PREPARATIVE, s. that which fits beforehand, or is done as means for something else.

PREPARATIVE, a. [préparatif, Fr.] having the power of qualifying or fitting.

PREPARATIVELY, ad. previously.

PREPARATORY, a. [préparatoire, Fr.] necessary before; introductory to.

To PREPARE, v. a. to fit, qualify, or make ready beforehand, for any purpose. In Medicine, to make by a regular process.—v. n. to take previous measures; to put things in order; to make oneself ready.

PREPENSE, PREPENSED, a. [præ and pendo, Lat.] in Law, denotes forethought: thus, when a man is slain upon a sudden quarrel, if there was malice prepenso formerly between them, it makes it murder.

PREPONDERANCE, PREPONDERANCY, s. the state of being more heavy, or of greater excellence, influence, and importance. To PREPONDERATE, v. n. [præ and pondo, Lat.] to exceed in weight, influence, power, or importance.—v. a. to outweigh; to overpower by weight.

PREPONDERATION, s. the act or state of exceeding in weight, power, or influence.

To PREPOSE, (precept) v. a. [proposer, Fr.] to put before.

PREPOSITION, (preposition) s. [præ and pono, Lat.] in Grammar, a word used to express the relation of the attribute to the subject, instead of the genitive case, and also the objective relations of all kinds, cause, time, place, manner, &c., such as, by, with, for, &c.

PREPOSTOR, (prepostor) s. a scholar appointed by the master to overlook the rest.

To PREPOSSESS, (prepossession) v. a. to fill with an opinion before examination; to prejudice.

PREPOSSESSION, (prepossession) s. first possession; an opinion conceived before examination.

PREPOSTEROUS, a. [preposterus, Lat.] having that first which should be last; absurd, perverted, wrong.

PREPOSTEROUSLY, ad. in a wrong situation; absurdly.

PREPOSTEROUNESS, s. absurdity; wrong order or method.

POTENCY, s. [præ and potentia, Lat.] superior power; predominance.

PREPUCE, s. [præputium, Lat.] the skin which covers the glans.

To PREREQUIRE, v. a. to demand previously.

PREREQUISITE, a. previously necessary.

PREROGATIVE, s. [prerogativ, Fr.] an exclusive or peculiar privilege. Prerogative Court, a court belonging to the archbishops, wherein wills are proved, and administrations granted that belong to the archbishop by his prerogative, and within his province. SYNON. Prerogative relates to honour, and personal preference; whereas privilege implies some advantage from interest or office, proceeding from the grant of a prince, or the laws of a society.

PRESAGE, s. [Fr. presagium, Lat.] a token by which something future may be known; that state of the mind in which it has a foreknowledge of something future.

To PRESAGE, v. a. [presager, Fr.] to forebode, or foreknow; sometimes used with of. To foretoken, or show before.

PRESAGEMENT, s. foreboding; foretoken.

PRESBURG, or POSEN, a great city of Hungary, Austria. It is pleasantly seated on the Danube, at the foot of a mountain, and has a bridge of boats across the river. It has many public buildings, of which the cathedral, the palaces, &c. are the most remarkable. There are some academies and a good library here. Its trade is small. Near it is the famous hill on which the monarch swears to protect Hungary. It is 38 miles from Vienna. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 48. S. N. Long. 17. 16. E.

PRESBYTER, s. [Lat.] in Ecclesiastical matters, the chief minister of a church or congregation, called also a bishop. In the Churches of Rome and England, a minister of the second rank, being the chief of a congregation, but subordinate to the bishop. See the following article.

PRESBYTERIAN, a. applied to one who holds by Presbyterianism, or to any part, or the whole, of that system itself.

PRESBYTERIANISM, s. in Ecclesiastical History, the name of that form of church government, which is equally removed from Episcopacy and Independency. The authority resides in the presbytery, that is, in the ministers and elders of the congregations, assembled in synod. But the congregations have some voice in the management of their internal and minor affairs. The kirk of Scotland presents some modifications of this general outline, because of its alliance with the state. Modes of ordination, forms of prayer, confessions of faith, &c. have been, in Scotland, both in and out of the kirk, usually associated with Presbyterianism, but they have no necessary connexion with it as a form of ecclesiastical government, and are, in fact, adopted by other communions.

PRESBYTERY, s. a body of elders, whether ministers or not. The doctrine of the Presbyterians.

PRESCIENCE, s. [Fr.] the knowledge of things or events before they happen.

PRESIDENT, PRESIDENTS, a. [præ and scio, Lat.] prophetic; knowing events before they happen.

To PRESCIND, v. a. [præ and scindo, Lat.] to cut off; to abstract.

PRESCINDENT, a. abstracting.

PRESCOT, Lancashire. In this extensive parish are several large coal mines. The manufactures are of cotton, and small metallic goods, such as wheels for watches, earthenware of a common cheap kind, &c. It is 200 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 35,902.

To PRESCRIBE, v. a. [præ and scribo, Lat.] to set down authoritatively; to direct or command; to write a recipe for a person that is sick.

PRESCRIPT, a. directed or laid down by way of precept.

PRESCRIPT, s. a direction or motion laid down.

PRESCRIPTION, s. a recipe, in Medicine. In Law, it is a right or title acquired by use and time, introduced for assuring the property of effects, in favour of persons who have for a certain time had them in their possession. In Common Law, Prescription is usually understood of a possession from time immemorial, or beyond the memory of man; but in the Civil Law, and even in our Common Law, there are prescriptions of a much shorter date.

PRESSEANCE, s. [Fr.] priority of place in sitting.

PRESSECE, (presence) s. [præsentia, from presum, Lat.] the act or state of being in the same place with another, or in the view of a person; port, air, or mien; readiness on any emergency; the person of a superior.

PRESSECE-CHAMBER, PRESSECE-ROOM, s. the room in which a great person receives company.

PRESSECE, (presenation) s. [præ and sentio, Lat.] perception beforehand.

PRESENT, (præsent) a. [præsent, Lat.] in the same place; face to face; at the same time, or the time which is now; ready on occasion; attentive; unforgetten. The present is used elliptically for the present time, or the time now existing. At present, now; or the present time. In Grammar, it is the name of those forms of the verb, which express that something is now being done, &c., as I write, or am writing.

PRESENT, (præsent) s. [Fr.] a gift, or something given which a person could not claim. Presents is, in Law, used for a letter, certificate, or mandate.

To PRESENT, (præsent) v. a. [presenter, Fr.] to place in the presence of, or introduce to a superior; to offer or exhibit; to give in a ceremonious manner, used with to before the person, or with before the thing; to prefer to an ecclesiastical benefice in a state church; to lay before a court of judicature as something deserving their notice.

PRESENTANEOUS, a. [præ and sentio, Lat.] quick; ready; immediate.

PRESENTATION, (presenation) s. [Fr.] the act of giving; the act of conferring a church living in the English and other state churches.

PRESENTTEE, (presentee) s. [présenté, Fr.] one presented to a state-church living.

PRESENTER, s. one that presents.

PRESENTIAL, (præsential) a. supposing actual presence.

PRESENTIALITY, (præsentiality) s. state of being present.

To PRESENTIALTE, (præsentialte) v. a. to make present.

PRESENTLY, (præsently) ad. without delay; soon.

PRESENTMENT, (præsentment) s. the act of presenting; any thing exhibited. In Law, a declaration or report made by the jurors or other officers, of an offence or any other matter, subject to the jurisdiction of the court to which it is presented.

PRESERVATION, (preservashon) s. the act of keeping safe from injury.

PRESERVATIVE, (prézervatív) s. [préservatif, Fr.] that which has the power of keeping safe, or from destruction or danger.

PRESERVE, (prézerve) s. in Cookery, the pulp of fruit preserved in sugar.

To PRESERVE, (prézerve) v. a. [præservo, low Lat.] to keep from danger, corruption, or destruction.

PRESERVER, (prézerver) s. one who preserves; one who keeps from ruin or mischief; one who makes preserves of fruit.

To PRESIDE, v. n. [præ and sedeo, Lat.] to be set, or have authority over; used with over.

PRESIDENCY, s. [présidence, Fr.] superintendence.

PRESIDENT, s. [presides, Lat.] one having authority or command over others.

PRESIDENTSHIP, s. the state or condition of a person who has authority over others.

PRESIDIAL, a. [presidium, Lat.] belonging to a garrison.

To PRESS, v. a. [presser, Fr.] to squeeze or crush by weight or force; to constrain, or affect strongly; to make earnest; to force into military service, contracted from impress.—v. n. to act with force; to distress; to go forwards towards an object, notwithstanding obstacles; to urge with vehemence or importunity; to crowd. To press upon, to invade; to push against.

PRESS, s. [pressoir, Fr.] an instrument made to squeeze or press any thing very close; a crowd or throng; a wooden case for clothes; a commission for forcing men into military service. The printing press is a machine worked by hand, for all kinds of printing that require greater nicety than can be observed with the printing machine, and that are too small for it. There have been many improvements made in it, but chiefly in the means of causing the pressure that takes off the impression. In almost every variety of press, there is the upright part, with the platten, and the levers, &c. for bringing it down with even and gentle force over the surface of the letters; and the carriage, on which is laid the form or set up types to be used, and to which are attached the tympan, &c., to which the paper to be printed is fastened. The Columbian, the Stanhope, the Atlas, &c. are the most recently improved kinds of printing press. See COPPER-PLATE, LITHOGRAPHY, &c.

PRESSBED, s. a bed so contrived as to be shut up in a case.

PRESSGANG, s. a crew which forces men into naval service.

PRESSINGLY, ad. in a violent manner.

PRESSION, s. the act of some power, exerted with force on another body.

PRESSMAN, s. one who forces another into naval service; one who works a printing press.

PRESSMONEY, s. money given to a soldier when he is taken or forced into the service.

PRESSURE, s. the act of squeezing or operating upon by weight and force; the state of being pressed; gravitation, force, or weight acting upon any thing; violence, oppression, affliction or distress.

PREST, a. [prêt, Fr.] ready; neat; tight.

PREST, s. [Fr.] a loan.

PRESTEIGN, Radnorshire, in S. Wales. It is seated near the source of the Lug, in a rich valley; and is a large, handsome, well-built town, with paved regular streets; the assizes are held here, and the county gaol is kept. The market is remarkable for barley, of which they make a great deal of malt. It is 149 miles from London. Pop. 2228. This town is partly in Herefordshire.

PRESTIGATION, s. a juggling; a deceiving.

PRESTIGES, s. [prestigie, Lat.] impostures; juggling tricks; illusions.

PRESTIGIOUS, a. deceitful; insidious; juggling.

PRESTO, interj. [Ital.] quick; at once.

PRESTON, Lancashire. It is pleasantly situated on an eminence near the river Ribble, over which are two bridges, and which is navigable here for small vessels, and communicates with the inland navigations. It has a large market-place, the streets are open and well paved, and the houses in general well built. Here is an extensive prison, and here are held a court of chancery and the other offices of justice for the county-palatine of Lancaster. It is a corporate town, and the cotton business is here carried on to a very considerable extent. It is 217 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs on March 27th, August 27th, and November 7th, and the first Saturday after Jan. 6th. Every 20th year, a guild or jubilee is held here, which begins in the latter end of August, and continues about a month. Pop. 53,482.

To PRESUME, (prézûme) v. a. [præ and sumo, Lat.] to suppose, believe, or take for truth before examination; to venture without obtaining leave; to form confident and arrogant opinions; to make confident or arrogant attempts.

PRESUMER, s. one that presumes; an arrogant person.

PRESUMPTION, (prézûmshon) s. a supposition formed before examination; a strong, though not demonstrative, argument; a strong probability; arrogance; unreasonable confidence or arrogance.

PRESUMPTIVE, a. [présomptif, Fr.] formed upon previous suppositions; supposed, as, the presumptive heir, opposed to the heir apparent; too confident or arrogant.

PRESUMPTUOUS, [présomptueux, Fr.] arrogant; confident, insolent; irreverent with respect to Divine things.

PRESUMPTUOUSLY, ad. in an arrogant, confident, or too daring manner.

PRESUPPOSAL, (presupposál) s. a supposal previously formed.

To PRESUPPOSE, (presuppôze) v. a. [presupposer, Fr.] to suppose before.

PRESUPPOSITION, (presuppozishon) s. [Fr.] a supposition previously formed.

PRESURMISE, (presurmise) s. a surmise previously formed. PRESURMISE, (prétendo, Lat.) a false argument grounded on vain postulates; the act of showing or alleging what is not real; claim to notice; claim true or false; something held out to terrify.

To PRETEND, v. a. [præ and tendo, Lat.] to hold out or stretch forward; to make an appearance inconsistent with reality, merely to gain some end.—v. n. to put in a claim; to presume on ability; to profess presumptuously.

PRETENDER, s. one who lays claim to any thing. In English History, a name specially given to the son and grandson of James II., who, in 1715 and 1745 respectively, attempted, by raising a rebellion in Scotland, to regain for the Stuarts the English throne. The first attempt, weakened by two indecisive battles, failed through the energy and vigilance of the Duke of Argyle. The second, after a much more prosperous beginning, the prince, having marched into England as far as Derby, suddenly lost all heart, and was utterly defeated at Culloden. Only once afterwards did any descendant think the cause of Jacobitism in England hopeful, but no attempt followed. It was generally believed that the Old Pretender was only a supposititious son of James II. by Mary of Este.

PRETENDINGLY, ad. arrogantly; presumptuously.

PRETENSION, (préténshon) s. a claim; a fictitious show or appearance.

PRETER, [preter, Lat.] a particle which is often prefixed to words, and signifies beside.

PRETERIMPE/FECT, a. in Grammar, the name of the tense of verbs, which signifies that an action was not completed at some time past, as, I was hearing.

PRETERITE, a. [preterito, Lat.] past. In Grammar, the same as preterperfect; which see.

PRETERITION, s. the act of going past, or the state of being passed.

PRETERITNESS, s. the state of being past; not present; not futurity.

PRETERLAPSED, a. [præterlabôr, Lat.] past and gone.

PRETERLEGAL, a. not agreeable to law.

PRETERMISSION, (prætermishon) s. [prætermitto, Lat.] the act of omitting.

To PRETERMITT, v. a. to pass by.

PRETERNATURAL, a. not according to the common course, of nature; irregular.

PRETERNATURALLY, ad. in a manner different from the common order of nature.

PRETERNATURALNESS, s. manner different from the order of nature.

PRETERPERFECT, a. in Grammar, the name of the tense of verbs which denotes an action perfectly completed; it is sometimes formed in the English by prefixing the auxiliary verb have.

PRETERPLUPERFECT, a. [præter, plusquam, and perfectum, Lat.] the name of the tense of verbs which signifies that an action was passed before some other past time: it is expressed in English by the auxiliary verb had.

PRETEXT, s. [prætextus, from prætexo, Lat.] a false appearance or allegation; pretence.

PRETIOSITY, (preishiness) s. [pretium, Lat.] preciousness; high value. Not much used.

PRETOR, s. [prætor, Lat.] a Roman judge, used at present for a mayor.

PRETORIAN, a. belonging to the pretor; judicial.

PRETTILY, ad. in such a manner as to raise an idea of skill and neatness; neatly; elegantly.

PRETTINESS, s. the quality of exciting an idea of neatness and symmetry, but not of perfect beauty.

PRETTY, a. [prezzo, Ital.] neat; elegant; pleasing without occasioning surprise; beautiful without grandeur; not very small, nor great.

PRETTY, ad. in some degree.

To PREVAL, v. n. [præ and valeo, Lat.] to conquer any resistance; to have superior power or influence, used with on, upon, over, or against. To persuade or induce by entreaty, followed by with.

PREVAILING, a. predominant; having great power; prevalent; efficacious.

PREVALENCY, s. [Fr.] superiority of influence or power.

PREVALENT, a. victorious; gaining superiority; powerful. PREVALENTLY, ad. powerfully; forcibly.

To PREVARICATE, v. a. [prævarico, Lat.] to quibble, cavil, or shuffle.

PREVARICATION, s. the act of shuffling; quibbling, or cavilling.

PREVARICATOR, s. [Lat.] a caviller; a shuffler.

To PREVE, v. a. [præ and venio, Lat.] to hinder.

PREVENT, a. [præveniens, Lat.] preceding; preventive.

To PREVENT, v. a. to go before as a guide; to anticipate; to precept; to hinder, obviate, or obstruct.—v. n. to come before the usual time.

PREVENTER, s. one that hinders; one that goes before.

PREVENTION, (præcenshō) s. [Fr.] the act of going before, hindering, anticipating, or prepossessing.

PREVENTIONAL, a. tending to prevention.

PREVENTIVE, a. tending to hinder; preservative; hindering ill, with of before the thing prevented. That department of the civil service which is charged with the prevention and repression of smuggling. It has stations all round the coast of Great Britain, and the force are trained to the use of arms.

PREVENTIVE, s. a preservative; that which prevents; an antidote previously taken.

PREVIOUS, a. [præ and via, Lat.] going before; prior.

PREVIOUSLY, ad. beforehand; antecedently.

PREVIOUSNESS, s. antecedence.

PREY, (præda, Lat.) something seized by violence; something to be devoured; plunder.

To PREY, v. n. [prædor, Lat.] to feed by violence; to plunder; to rob; to corrode; to waste.

PREYER, s. a robber; devourer; plunderer.

PRIAPISM, s. [from Priapus, Lat.] a preternatural tension.

PRICE, (priz, Fr.) equivalent given for any thing; value; reward.

To PRICE, v. a. to pay for; to ask the value or price.

PRICE, DR. RICHARD, an English writer of the last century, who obtained some name from several of his works. He was educated for the ministry amongst Calvinistic Dissenters; but he became an Arian, and ministered to a congregation of that body of religionists. During the American war, he wrote in favour of the States, against the course adopted by the English government. His other writings consist of a few theological treatises and sermons; several valuable works on Probabilities, and their application to Annuities, and Life Insurance; on Population, and the Laws of Mortality; on the National Debt (respecting which he is said to have suggested the Sinking Fund); &c. &c. He was engaged in a controversy with Dr. Priestley on the everlasting problems of necessity and materialism; and his papers on these subjects are much esteemed by those who hold his views. He died in 1791, aged 68 years.

To PRICK, v. a. [priccan, Sax.] to pierce with any thing that has a sharp point; to nominate or name to any office by making a hole in paper; to spur, goad, or impel; to pain or pierce with remorse; to make acid, applied to liquors; to mark a tune.—v. n. to dress oneself for show; to come upon the spur.

PRICK, s. [pricca, Sax.] a sharp-pointed instrument; a puncture or hole made with a sharp-pointed instrument; a remorse of conscience; an uneasiness of the mind, occasioned by consciousness of guilt; a spot or mark for shooting; the print of a hare on the ground.

PRICKER, s. a sharp-pointed instrument.

PRICKET, s. a buck in his second year.

PRICKLE, s. a small sharp point, like the thorn of a brier.

PRICKLENET, s. in Botany, an umbelliferous plant. The marine pricklenet, or sea-parsnep, is the British species.

PRICKLINESS, s. fulness of sharp points.

PRICKLY, a. full of sharp points.

PRICKLYCAP, s. in Botany, a kind of fungus, with awl-shaped fibres on the under surface like the spines of a hedgehog.

PRICKMADAM, s. in Botany, the yellow stoncrop.

PRICKPUNCH, s. a piece of tempered steel, with a round point at one end, used to make a round mark in cold iron.

PRICKWOOD, s. in Botany, the dogberry-tree, or female cornel.

PRIDE, s. [prid or pryd, Sax.] too high an opinion of one's self, abilities, or professions; insolence; loftiness of air; ornament; splendour or show.

To PRIDE, v. a. to esteem too highly, used with the reciprocal pronoun, and followed by in.

PRIDEAUX, DR. HUMPHREY, a learned English clergyman, who was made dean of Norwich. He was an Oxford man; and though he acquiesced in the revolution of 1688, does not seem to have tried to make his fortune by the change. His books were of considerable value till late years, when they have been superseded as authorities. His Life of Mohammed, and Connexion of the Old and New Testament, are the principal; but he also wrote on Tithe, on the Orders of the English Church, &c. He died in 1724, aged 76 years.

PRIDE, s. [see Prv.] one who looks too curiously or narrowly into things.

PRIEST, (the ie in this word and its following compounds is pron. like ee; as, preest, preestly, &c.) [s. [preest, Sax.]] a member of the class claiming the monopoly of holy offices; one consecrated to offer sacrifices and oblations, as in the Jewish law; one who claims the office of standing between man and God, as intercessor in their behalf, and as the interpreter of his will to them, and the representative of his authority. In the Churches of Rome and England, a presbyter, or member of the second rank of the clergy.

PRIESTCRAFT, s. frauds practised by priests to keep the people in subjection and enrich themselves.

PRIESTESS, s. a female priest.

PRIESTHOOD, s. the office or dignity of a priest; the class of men set apart for or monopolizing holy offices.

PRIESTISM, s. the spirit of priestcraft.

PRIESTLEY, DR. JOSEPH, an eminent natural philosopher and writer of the last century. His friends were Calvinistic Dissenters, and he was educated for the ministry amongst them, and early acquired considerable scientific and general information. He soon renounced Calvinism, and after a few attempts at ministerial and scholastic engagements combined, he was appointed tutor to the Warrington academy, having published a work against the Doctrine of the Atonement. Whilst in this situation he commenced his scientific publications with a History of Electricity, and his political writings, with an Essay on Government; other works on theology, history, &c. he also sent forth now. After six years he removed to the charge of a congregation at Leeds, where he commenced his brilliant discoveries in chemistry, on which the whole of modern chemistry (before the electrical experiments of Davy and others) is founded. He was for some time in the service, or rather company, of Lord Shelburne, and travelled with him in France and Germany, during which time he published works advocating Materialism and Necessity, by which he was involved in a controversy with his friend Dr. Price, and which were perhaps the cause of his quitting this situation. He next undertook the ministry of a congregation at Birmingham.

ham, in which situation he carried on his philosophical experiments, his theological controversies, (getting at every step further from the point he set out from,) and his political agitation, writing in defence of the French Revolution, and in reward for it receiving the questionable compliment of being elected to the National Convention of France, which he declined, and the pillage of his house, library and laboratory, with danger to his own life, by a brutal church and king mob. (He was compensated for his loss, as far as money could do so.) After a short sojourn in London, where his opinions were regarded with so much horror, that his science and benevolence were forgotten, he went to America, and settled in Pennsylvania, where he died in 1804, aged 71 years. His works fill above 50 volumes, but they are forgotten before their fame is dead. Priestley meant rightly in all his strange theological changes, and was far more honest in them than many of those who were most bitterly opposed to him. If any thing is to be imputed to him in the way of blame, it must be that he displayed too great easiness in flinging off the formulas that did not represent his real faith, or rather perhaps that he supplied his inner man with such cold logic-fabulism, that it shrank death-smitten from his formulas, so that he had to change them for honesty's sake. But as to his politics, and his private character, and his spirit of scientific zeal, there are few but would desire such a man and many such in these present days.

PRIESTLINESS, s. the appearance or manner of a priest.

PRIESTLY, a. belonging to or becoming a priest.

PRIESTRIDDEN, a. made a tool of by priests.

PRIG, s. a conceited, saucy, pert, pragmatical person, or little fellow.

PRILL, s. in Natural History, a birt or turbot.

PRIM, a. [contracted from primitive.] precise; formal; affectedly nice.

To PRIM, v. a. to deck up precisely; to form to an affected nicety.

PRIMACY, s. [primatus, from primus, Lat.] in the Anglican Church, the highest post amongst the clergy.

PRIMAGE, s. a small duty in the harbour, or at the water-side, to the master and mariners of a ship, for the use of ropes, &c., and to the mariners for loading and unloading a vessel.

PRIMARILY, ad. originally; in the first intention. In the first place.

PRIMARINESS, s. the state of being first in act or intention.

PRIMARY, a. [primarius, Lat.] first; original; chief; principal.

PRIMATE, s. [primus, Lat.] in the Anglican Church, the highest among the clergy.

PRIMATESHIP, s. the dignity or office of a primate.

PRIME, s. [primus, Lat.] the first part of the day; the first or best part; youth, applied to human life; the first height of perfection; the first part of any state. In Fencing, the attitude immediately after first drawing the sword. In the Ecclesiastical Calendar, the golden number.

PRIME, a. early; blooming; principal; chief; first; excellent; best. Prime numbers, in Arithmetic, are those which cannot be divided by any other numbers, except themselves, without a remainder; as 1, 2, 7, 11, 19, &c.

To PRIME, v. a. to put in the first powder, or to put powder in the prime of a gun.—[primer, Fr.] in Painting, to lay the first colours.

PRIMELY, ad. originally; primarily; in the first place; excellently; supremely well.

PRIMENESS, s. the state of being first; excellence.

PRIMER, s. a small book, containing the alphabet, &c., in which children are first taught to read.

PRIMEIRO, s. [Span.] a game at cards.

PRIMEVAL, PRIMEVOUS, a. [primus and ævum, Lat.] original; such as was at first.

PRIMITIAL, (prinishia) a. [primitia, Lat.] being of the first production.

PRIMITIVE, a. [primitivus, Lat.] ancient; original; established from the beginning; also, formal; affectedly solemn. In Grammar, it is a root or original word in a language, in contradistinction to a derivative; thus, God is a primitive, godly a derivative, and godlike a compound.

PRIMITIVELY, ad. originally; at first; primarily; not derivatively; according to the original rule.

PRIMITIVENESS, s. the state of being original; antiquity; conformity to antiquity.

PRIMNESS, s. affected niceness, or formality.

PRIMOGENIAL, a. [primus and gigno, Lat.] first-born; original; constituent; primary; elemental.

PRIMOGENITURE, s. [Fr.] the state of being first-born; seniority; eldership. Right of Primogeniture, in Law, is the title by which, in case of intestacy, the whole of the real property, and hereditary titles, descend to the eldest son, or (generally) to the heir at law.

PRIMORDIAL, a. [Fr. from primordium, Lat.] original; existing from the beginning.

PRIMORDIAL, s. first principle; origin.

PRIMORDIAN, s. in Horticulture, a kind of plum.

PRIMORDIATE, a. original; existing from the beginning.

PRIMROSE, s. [from prine and rose,] in Botany, one of our commonest and most welcome flowers, because one of the earliest tokens of spring. It has a delicate scent, and flowers in thick clusters, which all spring from one very short footstalk. Pearl's primrose is a name of a kind of daffodil.

PRIMUM MOBILE, s. [Lat.] in Astronomy, an immense sphere, which, according to Ptolemy, was supposed to turn round the earth, as a centre, every twenty-four hours, and to carry with it the sun, moon, stars, and planets.

PRINCE, s. [Fr. princeps, Lat.] in Polity, is a person invested with the supreme command of a state, independent of any superior. It also denotes a person who is sovereign in his own territories, yet holds of some other as his superior; such are the princes of Germany. It also denotes the issue of princes, or those of the royal family. In France, they were called the princes of the blood. In England, the king's children are called sons and daughters of England; the eldest son is born Duke of Cornwall, and created Prince of Wales.

PRINCEDOM, s. the rank, estate, or power of a prince; sovereignty.

PRINCE EDWARD'S ISLAND, an island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, N. America. It is about 130 miles long, and 25 in average breadth. It has a generally level or gently undulating surface, and is well wooded. It abounds in lakes or pools, bays, rivers, and marshes, and has some few sand-hills covered with a long kind of grass. Where the clearings and farms are, its soil is fertile, and it produces corn, fruit, &c. in abundance. Cattle, sheep, &c. are reared in great numbers. It has also excellent fisheries. Charlotte Town is the chief place. Pop. about 60,000. It belongs to England.

PRINCELINESS, s. the state, manner, or dignity of a prince.

PRINCIPAL, s. having the appearance of a person of high birth; of the rank of a prince; becoming a prince; grand; august.

PRINCE'S FEATHER, s. in Botany, the herb amaranth.

PRINCE'S METAL, s. in Metallurgy, a mixed metal, compounded of copper, and a larger proportion of zinc than enters into the composition either of pinchbeck or brass.

PRINCESS, s. [princessa, Fr.] a lady having a sovereign command; a king's daughter; the wife of a prince.

PRINCE WILLIAM'S SOUND, a bay on the N. W. coast of N. America, in the Russian territory. It is in a most rude and uncultivated state. Lat. 60. 33. N. Long. 147. 0. W.

PRINCIPAL, a. [Fr.] chief; of the first rate; essential.

PRINCIPAL, s. a head; chief; one originally engaged, opposed to auxiliaries; a sum of money placed out at interest; a president or governor; the name of a stop in organs.

PRINCIPALITY, s. [principauté, Fr.] supreme power; a prince; the country which gives title to a prince. Figuratively, superiority or pre-eminence.

PRINCIPALLY, ad. above all others; chiefly.

PRINCIPATO, the name of two provinces of the kingdom of Naples, the Principato Ulteriore and the Principato Citeriore, that is, the Hither and Further Principato. The Hither Principato, called also Salerno, is about 60 miles in length, and 30 in breadth; the soil is fertile in wine, corn, oil, and saffron; and they have a great deal of silk, and several mineral springs. The capital is Salerno. (See SALERNO.) The Further Principato is about 37 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. The Apennine mountains render the air cold, and the soil is not very fertile, either in corn or wine, but it produces chestnuts and pastures in great plenty. Benevento is the capital. Pop. about 400,000.

PRINCIPATION, s. [principium, Lat.] analysis into constituent or elementary parts.

PRINCIPLE, s. the cause, source, or origin; that which denotes a thing to be what it is. In Physics, that which contributes to the essence of the body. In Chemistry, the first and simplest parts whereof substances are compounded, and into which they are capable of being resolved. In Philosophy, a fundamental truth, from which others are deduced. In Morals, the ground or motive of action; a tenet or position on which morality is founded.

To PRINCIPLE, v. a. to establish, fix, or inculcate any tenet or opinion, as a standard in a person's mind.

PRINGLE, SIR JOHN, an eminent physician of the last century. He studied at Edinburgh and St. Andrews, and subsequently at Leyden. But his first appointment was to the chair of metaphysics and ethics at Edinburgh. He afterwards attended the forces engaged in the war on the continent, as physician-general; and on his return commenced practising in London. With the exception of a short period, the remainder of his life was spent in that city; and he then devoted himself to those researches in natural philosophy, which introduced him to his very numerous and widely scattered circle of correspondents, and to the presidency of the Royal Society. From this last post of honour he was driven by one of those circumstances which show that the loveless spirit that persecuted Galileo not the birth of Romanism and of Italy alone. He could not persuade himself to say that the declaration of American Independence had cast any doubt on the correctness of the laws of electricity, discovered by one who stood foremost in the cause of science as well as in that of national liberty; and he laid down his dignity, alleging his health as a reason, which would not make the dishonour of his opponents known. He died in 1782, aged 75 years.

PRINGLE, THOMAS, a poet and general writer of the beginning of the present century. He was of no distinguished family, but studied at Edinburgh, and became known pretty early by his verses and essays, rising even to the editorship of one of the highest-standing periodicals of N. Britain. He afterwards emigrated to the Cape of Good Hope; but was compelled to return by a most un-English attack on the liberty of the press, of which he was the victim. He was connected with the Anti-Slavery Society, after his return; and wrote poems and miscellaneous essays, with an account of his residence in S. Africa; and died in 1834, aged 45 years.

To PRINK, v. n. [pronken, Belg.] to prank or deck in a gaudy manner.

To PRINT, v. a. to make a mark by pressing one thing on another; to impress so as to leave its form.

PRINT, s. a mark or form made by pressure; pictures taken by impression from wood or copper; the state of being published by the printer, applied to books; a formal method or manner.

PRINTER, s. a person who composes or takes impressions from types, or from engraved plates, by means of a press and ink; one that takes off impressions from plates or wood on linen.

PRINTING, s. the art of taking impressions from types, plates, &c. on paper, linen, silk, &c. There are three kinds of printing; the one from movable letters or stereotype plates, for books; the other from copper-plates, for pictures; and the last from blocks, in which the patterns are cut for calicoes, linens, &c.: the first called letter-press printing; the second, rolling-press printing; and the last, calico printing. See STEREOTYPE. Printing Machine is a very ingenious and complicated contrivance, by which the power of steam is applied to printing. The work is, necessarily, not so fine as that done by the hand presses, but the superior rapidity and cheapness with which it is accomplished, makes it a very valuable invention.

PRINTLESS, a. leaving no mark or impression.

PRIOR, a. [Lat.] before something in time or order.

PRIOR, s. [prieur, Fr.] in the Roman Church, the head of a convent, next in dignity to an abbot.

PRIOR, MATTHEW, one of the classical English poets. He was of humble origin, but had the advantage of an excellent education at Westminster and Cambridge, through the generosity of a relation, and of a nobleman to whom he became known by his classical attainments. The patronage of the same nobleman afterwards obtained for him appointments as secretary to the embassy at the Hague, at the treaty of Ryswick, &c., with others in the service of the court. He was thus well recommended for public life, and was a member of the ministry, and ambassador at Utrecht and Paris. For these last honours he had changed his party, and when the Whigs regained power by the entrance of the Hanoverian line, Prior was repaid by imprisonment. The remainder of his life was devoted to the Muses, and he died in 1721, aged 57 years. It is to be regretted that the indecency of too many of his poems (which betray the private character of the poet) prevents his works being generally read. Some of his pieces are however to be met with in all selections, but none show that he was a true poet, or indeed any thing beside or higher than a correct and polished writer of verses.

PRIORESS, s. in the Roman Church, a lady who is the superior of a convent of nuns.

PRIORITY, s. the state of being first in time or place.

PRIORSHIP, s. the state or dignity of a prior.

PRIORY, s. in Romanism, a convent next in dignity to an abbey.

PRIUSAGE, (prizage) s. [prise, Fr.] a custom, now called butlerage, whereby the king challenges two tuns of wine at his own price out of every bark loaded with less than forty tuns of the commodity. Also, that share which belongs to the king, or admiral, out of prizes taken at sea from an enemy.

PRIUSCIAN, a grammarian of Constantinople in the 6th century, whose living renown is preserved in all its freshness by his writings, and by a proverb, well known by those who have been reproved at the higher schools for their errors in Latin syntax; but of whom nothing more is known.

PRIUSCIAN, a man of birth, fortune, and eloquence, who became bishop of Avila in Spain, in the 4th century, and revived there the opinions of the Gnostics, obtaining many followers, who were called Priscillianists. Being intent on spreading his doctrines, or else having been banished from Spain, he went into Gaul, and there was tortured and put to death at Treves, in 385. The orthodox have been used to condemn him for worse than errors in opinion, on the ground of exclamations extorted from him by the rack. His followers remained in some numbers in Spain till the 6th century, and then gradually disappeared from ecclesiastical history.

PRISM, (prizm) s. [prisma, Gr.] in Geometry, a solid of any number of sides from three upwards, and having plane and parallel extremities; the common glass prisms used in optical experiments, will convey the best notion of the nature of these solids to those unused to geometrical technicalities. In Optics, a triangular rod of glass, used in analysing the solar light, and in other optical experiments. See SPECTRUM.

PRISMATIC, (prizmatik) a. [prismatique, Fr.] formed like a prism; tinted like the solar spectrum.

PRISMATICALLY, ad. in the form of a prism.

PRISMOID, (prizmoid) s. [prisma and eidos, Gr.] a body approximating to the form of a prism.

PRISON, (prizon) s. [Fr.] a place in which criminals, persons under accusation of crime, political offenders, debtors, &c. &c. are confined.

To PRISON, (prizon) v. a. to confine; to captivate.

PRISONER, (prizoner) s. a person confined in a gaol; one taken by an enemy; one under arrest.

PRISONHOUSE, s. a gaol; a hold in which one is confined.

PRISTINE, a. [pristinus, Lat.] first; original; ancient.

PRIETHEE, familiar corruption of pray thee or I pray thee.

PRIVACY, s. the state of being secret, concealed, or hid; a retirement; joint knowledge; great familiarity.

PRIVADO, s. [Span.] a secret friend.

PRIVATE, a. [privatus, Lat.] secret; without company; alone; in no public station; particular, opposed to public. In private, implies secretly.

PRIVATE, s. a secret message; a common soldier.

PRIVATEER, s. a ship fitted out by private persons against an enemy, under the sanction of the state.

To PRIVATEER, v. a. to fit out ships against enemies at the charge of private persons.

PRIVATELY, ad. secretly; not openly.

PRIVATENESS, s. the quality of being retired, or secret.

